

STATE OF NEW YORK
PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION

CASE 14-M-0101 - In the Matter of Reforming the Energy Vision.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC STATEMENT HEARINGS

(Issued October 6, 2015)

In April 2014, the New York State Public Service Commission (Commission) instituted the Reforming the Energy Vision (REV) proceeding to align electric utility practices and the Commission's regulation with technological advances that have created alternate ways to meet electricity demand. REV envisions a new business model for energy service providers where distributed energy resources (DER) -- such as distributed generation, storage, energy efficiency and demand response -- become a primary tool in the planning and operation of the electric system. The Commission identified six policy objectives supporting this effort: to enhance customer knowledge and tools to enable customers to manage their energy bills; to animate the market and leverage ratepayer contributions; to promote system-wide efficiency; to increase fuel and resource diversity; to enhance system reliability and resiliency; and to reduce carbon emissions.

Following collaborative efforts, consideration of extensive written public comment and public statement hearings held at eight locations across the State, the first phase of this proceeding culminated in the Order Adopting Regulatory Policy Framework and Implementation Plan (Framework Order), issued by the Commission in February 2015. In the Framework Order, the Commission described a new approach to the electric system, where electric utilities act as Distributed System Platform (DSP) providers, coordinating DER so as to provide a market in which customers are able to optimize their priorities with respect to reliability, cost and sustainability. The Commission expressly reserved issues related to the regulatory changes and ratemaking issues that will be necessary to implement the REV vision to a second phase of this proceeding.

On July 28, 2015, Staff filed a "White Paper on Ratemaking and Utility Business Models" (Ratemaking White Paper). The Ratemaking White Paper set forth proposed reforms for the utility business model, the ratemaking process, and rate design. In addition, options for assessing the costs and benefits of renewable and other resources were proposed by Staff. Comments from parties and the public will be considered by the Commission as it considers these proposals and moves forward with the REV initiative.
