Suez to cut water bills for New York customers

Thomas C. Zambito
Rockland/Westchester Journal News
USA TODAY NETWORK

Suez customers in New York will see their monthly water bills decrease over the coming year thanks to a federal tax cut passed in December, company officials announced Monday.

Savings for the average residential customer who uses 4,500 gallons of water every month would range between $16 and $35 per year, the company said.

Suez said it has plans to reduce customer bills in New York by some $8.6 million annually.

The monthly reductions will kick in this month. Suez serves about 300,000 people in Rockland County and another 200,000 in Westchester County.

The cuts were made possible by the state Public Service Commission's decision ordering utility companies to pass along savings from the Federal Tax Cuts and Jobs Act to ratepayers.

"These reduced taxes to our operations will benefit customers directly by lowering their water bills," said David Stanton, president of Utility Operations for Suez. "We are pleased to provide these savings, while making sure we continue to make smart investments in the local water infrastructure to maintain safe, reliable and affordable service."

The federal tax cut passed in December reduced the maximum corporate tax from 35 percent to 21 percent, Suez said. As a result, water rates will come down an average of 5.1 percent in New York.

Union officials and Westchester County legislators announced legislation that would mandate employers provide workers with at least five paid sick days annually during a news conference at the county office building in White Plains. The bill will affect an estimated 123,000 workers in the county.

bill back to legislation for potentially reshaping some aspects.

John Ravitz of the business 1,000-member Business Council of Westchester questioned the need for the law.

Ravitz said setting the threshold at five employees could adversely affect small businesses.

It could also dampen owners from hiring more employees, increasing wages and offering other compensation, he said.

"Passing the earned paid sick leave legislation, which is a mandate, and will have numerous unintended consequences to businesses daily, sends a message to employers that, in Westchester County, government will determine how they manage their workforce," Ravitz said. "Creating that type of environment will not help those of us who are serious about bringing more permanent jobs to Westchester."

If a business is found to have violated the law, it could be made to pay three times the amount it would have paid for the sick time, $500 for each instance of time denied, or other penalties.

The bill, called "Earned Sick Leave for Certain Employees" is the latest in a slew of progressive bills passed this year by the legislature.

Other measures include a ban on holding gun shows on county-owned property and increasing the age to buy tobacco or vaping products from 18 to 21.

Joint pain: top doctors agree, $2 pill works

1-year study produces 100% success rate; patients report no pain or stiffness, restful sleep and improved mobility

By Debra Hampton
Senior Health Writer

A non-addictive pill is gaining popularity among joint pain sufferers nationwide because of its ability to successfully reduce pain.

The pill, Xyndolor, brought to market earlier this year and already with close to half-a-million doses sold, is the culmination of over 40 years of clinical research. In hundreds of studies from around the world, the active ingredients in Xyndolor showed positive results for patients with even the most severe back, finger and knee pain.

Optimum Life Labs, the maker of Xyndolor, says patients have reported reduced pain, more restful sleep and none of the unpleasant side-effects normally associated with joint pain medications.

"It seems like every week we hear from a new patient who's finding pain relief for the first time ever," said Victor Urbina, CEO of Optimum Life Labs. "Patients tell us it's helping them with their hands, legs, feet and shoulders."

Urbina said his company pored over 137 published studies that have been known in the industry for decades to develop Xyndolor. Many doctors tell their patients that their only option is to take medications like opioids or learn to live in pain. Urbina said this is because big pharma is promoting them aggressively.

"Doctors believe joint pain is incurable, but the evidence shows it can be reversed," said Dr. Lloyd Hurley, an Albuquerque orthopedic surgeon.

HEALING FROM THE INSIDE

What makes Xyndolor different from all other pills on the market is it actually reverses joint pain. The patent-pending formulation stimulates healthy cells in your body that make new cartilage. At the same time, it counteracts harmful proteins that destroy cartilage. It also lubricates critical joints.

"It's like taking your old kitchen countertops and resurfacing them to remove all the cracks, bumps and imperfections," said Dr. Georgia Rodriguez, director of research at Optimum Life Labs. "Just like the countertop, your joints are smooth again and the pain goes away."

Patients report Xyndolor works without any of the side-effects from typical pain pills like...

- Heartburn
- High blood pressure
- Colon pain
- Esophagus & stomach ulcers
- Holes in the small intestine
- Crohn's disease
- And even death

"It's totally safe. It's nothing like NSAIDs and aspirin that destroy your stomach," said internist Dr. Georges M. Halpern in Portola Valley, CA.

PROVEN CLINICAL RESULTS

Xyndolor's main ingre-

SAFE JOINT PAIN RELIEF: Doctors are recommending Xyndolor a new joint pain relief pill to patients after it has safely reduced discomfort in patients with even the most severe cases of back, finger and knee pain.

dent, Perna Canaliculus, is backed by more than 40 years of clinical and academic research worldwide. In a clinical study over 20 years ago, Dr. Hurley proved its effectiveness.

The study of 121 patients found that their severe joint pain completely disappeared after just a few weeks of taking Perna. X-rays showed that cartilage damage didn't get worse. But, the biggest revelation was that some of his patients re-grew healthy cartilage. The findings proved something other doctors had told these patients was completely out of the question.

"Medicine tells us you can't heal or repair damaged cartilage, but I proved you can," Dr. Hurley said.

HOW IT WORKS

"Xyndolor works by doing three key things. First, within minutes it starts to reduce inflammation all over your body. This is important because inflammation is what destroys cartilage and causes joint pain. It stops your cells from attacking your own body," explained CEO Urbina.

Second, after taking care of the inflammation, it helps cells regrow cartilage. With more new cartilage, joints become smooth again."

Finally, it lubricates your joints. Like you would do with a squeaky door."

Patients from all over the country are encouraged by Xyndolor. Having experienced more lasting pain relief in just a few short weeks than they have in years.

"I've tried every pain pill a doctor has ever prescribed me and Xyndolor is the only pill that's made the pain permanently stop," said Astrid Hansen from Alberta, Canada.

WHAT DOCTORS ARE SAYING

"The search for the perfect pill to relieve chronic pain can be exhausting. Perna Canaliculus, the main active ingredient in Xyndolor, is not only an anti-inflammatory but seems to be able to optimize other medications. In other words, it makes them work better," says Dr. Jack Isler New Mexico Veteran's Affairs Chief of Anesthesiology/Critical Care/Pain. "Any chronic pain patient should use Perna. Many have been amazed at how it helped them, including myself. I now recommend it to my family as well as my patients."

"It's very important to me that the products I recommend to my patients, family, and friends are safe, beneficial, and effective," says Dr. Tara Michelle, a naturopath from Hawaii. "Xyndolor blends three naturally beneficial compounds into one exceptional formula. Proven both safe and effective, it's the 'Gold Standard' in joint health and I recommend it with great confidence."

"Clinical research proves we're ticking time bombs. Our own bodies often attack us from the inside out, crippling us. Like with joint pain and inflammation, everyone will suffer to some degree," said Dr. Rodriguez, "if you do nothing, it'll ruin your life and rob you of your independence. But, you don't just have to learn to live with joint pain. You deserve to do everything you can to stop it in its tracks."

Ex-wrestling coach sentenced for rape

Tyler Sick

A former Edgemont High School wrestling coach has been sentenced to 10 years probation for raping a teenage girl in 2016.

Tyler Sick was sentenced today by Westchester County Judge Susan Cacace, who also ordered him to surrender his teaching license and to register as a sex offender, the Westchester District Attorney's Office said in a statement.

Prosecutor Mary Clark-DiRusso said in court that the sentence was agreed to at the request of the victim's family, officials said. Sick previously admitted to raping the girl, who was younger than 17, in Greenburgh and Tarrytown.

A former Tarrytown resident and Bronx teacher, the 30-year-old asked the court to allow him to permanently move to North Carolina, where he moved after his arrest and where he has family. It will be up to that state to decide whether to accept his parole status, officials said.

Until that decision is made, Sick must stay in Westchester. He will have a hearing on Nov. 27 for his sex-offender registration.

In July, Sick pleaded guilty to two felony counts of third-degree rape.

The first rape occurred in Tarrytown on June 1, 2016, and the second in Greenburgh on Dec. 1, 2016, prosecutors said previously. Sick lived in Tarrytown at the time with his wife, who divorced him after his arrest on Nov. 27, 2017.

Sick was working as an assistant wrestling coach at Edgemont High School at the time. Police and school officials have not provided any details on the investigation.

Sick also worked as a physical education teacher at East Bronx Academy for the Future at the time. He was reassigned away from students and removed from the payroll after his arrest, a New York City Department of Education spokesman said at the time.

Westchester OKs $8.7M to update county trailway

USA TODAY NETWORK

Westchester County lawmakers will spend $8.7 million to improve the North County Trailway, a 20-mile trail between Eastview and Putnam County.

It'll be the first major construction project on the popular trail since it was built in sections in the 1980s.

The county Board of Legislators on Oct. 1 unanimously approved borrowing for the project, estimated to take 14 months once it begins.

Safety enhancements will include work to a 500-foot bridge over the Croton Reservoir in Yorktown, which lawmakers said has been used occasionally by thrill seekers to jump into the reservoir. Work will include curved fencing and spikes to discourage people from climbing around the fence.

New York state owns the trailway and Westchester has leased it since 1994, but the county legislature has asked the administration of County Executive George Latimer to try to strike up a deal to take ownership of the property. But lawmakers approved another 25-year extension lease at a $1 cost to Westchester while negotiations are sparked.

Although the state owns the property, the county is responsible for any injury, property damage or death claims. The county approved a $3.2 million settlement with the family of a bicyclist who died after crashing on a stretch of the trailway in Yorktown.

The property runs through the towns of Mount Pleasant, New Castle, Yorktown and Somers. It connects to the South County Trailway, which runs to Westchester's border with the Bronx. Lawmakers OKed this month another $300,000 for a study and design preparation to an area of the South County Trailway, particularly a stretch near Yonkers' border with Hastings-on-Hudson.

Westchester sick day law OK'd, but concerns remain

Mark Lungariello
Rockland/Westchester Journal
News
USA TODAY NETWORK

A Westchester County law that will require paid sick days for most employees is set to take effect in six months — but its passage came with lingering concerns about the specifics.

Once the law is in effect, businesses with five or more employees will have to provide an hour of paid sick time for every 30 hours worked. The Democratic caucus of the county board of legislators, which backed the bill, said as many as 36 percent of workers in Westchester aren't guaranteed sick time.

"By passing this legislation we say loudly and proudly to workers everywhere in Westchester County: Your health, your well-being, matters," Legislator Catherine Borgia, D-Ossining, the bill's primary sponsor, said in a statement.

Supporters said the law ensures that workers, particularly lower wage workers, are protected financially when a health need arises. Labor advocates unified behind the law, which had first been introduced three years ago, and said it also protected other workers from limiting the spread of illnesses at the work place.

"Having paid sick days is a fundamental benefit that everyone deserves," Lenore Friedlaender with the Service Employees International Union, said in a statement after its passage. "It helps workers make a speedy recovery, provides for the support of their families, and protects the health of fellow workers and the employers' clients."

Passage of the law at an Oct. 1 legislative meeting was met with applause by some union members and labor advocates in the audience. But the vote also came with concerns that the question of sick time needs a state, rather than county, answer.

Borgia countered that local governments often take the lead on such initiatives before the state takes action.

Legislator David Tumbiolo, R-Yonkers, said he tried to amend the bill for a larger minimum number of employees or a scale so as to minimize the burden on small businesses.

"I completely agree with the concept, I was just hoping for a little more compromise," Tumbiolo said.

Legislator Mike Kaplowitz, D-Somers, said the sponsors of the bill and legislature leadership weren't flexible on the particulars of the requirements. Although he voted in favor of it, he said the law was another effort he thought might add to over-regulation that could harm small businesses in the area.

"This board needs to be careful," he said. "We're going to kill the golden goose if we continue to assault small business in little and big ways."

Only Legislator Kitley Covill, D-Bedford, voted against the bill, saying she favored its premise but couldn't support it as written due to concerns of local business owners.

If a business is found to violate the law, it could be made to pay three times the amount it would have paid for the sick time, $500 for each instance of time denied, or other penalties.

Funds approved for the restoration of Miller House

Richard Liebson
Rockland/Westchester

USA TODAY NETWORK

NORTH WHITE PLAINS – After more than two decades of neglect, work has begun to restore the historic Miller House where George Washington fought (and slept) during the Revolutionary War's Battle of White Plains.

The Westchester County Board of Legislators on Tuesday approved spending $700,000 to rebuild the 140 Virginia Road house's roof, shore up the walls, chimneys and foundation, and make other improvements. Another $250,000 from a state grant obtained by Assemblyman David Buchwald, D-White Plains, will also be spent to create a separate classroom and visitors' center on the site. The county had approved another $1.3 million for the project in April.

"This long languished project will now enter into the next phase of the mediation work, which includes mold removal, restoration and construction of the visitors' center on the project," Westchester County Executive George Latimer said after the new spending was unanimously approved. "I look forward to the completion of this project so it can once again serve as an educational and historical hub for Westchester residents."

Built in 1739 by John Miller, the simple farmhouse is best known as the home of his son, Elijah Miller and his wife, Anne Fischer. Elijah and two of his sons, John and Elijah, all died in 1776 while serving in the Westchester County militia. Washington is believed to have spent time there during the final stage of the Battle of White Plains in October 1776, and then again in 1778 and 1781. Other Revolutionary War commanders also met there. An area behind the house, known as Miller Hill Park, is Westchester's only untouched Revolutionary War battlefield site.

Although the battle ended in a stalemate, with the British army returning to New York City after a series of strategic retreats by Washington's Continental Army, the Americans were successful in preventing the Redcoats from cutting off vital supply routes to New England.

The property was acquired by the Daughters of the American Revolution, who transferred it to Westchester County in 1917. For decades it served as a museum, educational facility and place for historic reenactments and commemorations. It fell into disrepair and was closed in the early 1990s, and has deteriorated ever since. Several years ago the county placed a large blue tarp on the roof to try and protect the house from further damage.

The Board of Legislators first approved a restoration project in 2010, but the plans were vetoed by then County Executive Rob Astorino, who argued that the work should be done with private funding.

Debra Palazzo, a co-founder of Daughters of Liberty's Legacy (DOLL), hailed the news, telling The Journal News/lohud on Tuesday that the group "is confident now that all the financing is in place that restoration of the Miller House will finally proceed... the house provides a unique opportunity to teach American history in the place that it happened. The story of General George Washington is a small but important part of the rich history of that home and family."

The DOLL organization seeks to preserve and promote local history through various programs and events. County Legislator Margaret Cunzio, C-Mount Pleasant, North Castle, said there is an obligation to maintain the Miller House "not just for current residents, but for future generations ... working together, we have saved a piece of history."

County officials said design work for the project is 80 percent finished and mold abatement and other clean-up has already begun at the house. The entire restoration is expected to be completed next fall. The house is listed on the National Register of Historic Places, the New York State Register of Historic Places, the county Inventory of Historic Places and is a Town of North Castle landmark.

Clearwater festival might not be held in 2019

John W. Barry
Rockland/Westchester Journal News
USA TODAY NETWORK

The future of the annual Clearwater festival is uncertain as the Beacon-based environmental organization reassesses programs amid financial difficulties.

Asked if Clearwater will hold its festival next year, Executive Director Greg Williams told said, "It's certainly our intention to do so, but a lot has changed, both inside and outside of Clearwater, since we started having a festival at Croton Point and that's why we're looking at multiple options for next year."

As the organization revises its financial approach, Williams said it is "a lot less willing" to take on the up-front cost associated with a large festival. So the group is soliciting ideas for events.

The uncertainty surrounding the festival comes as the organization also examines its environmental advocacy, sailing and education programs. Founded in 1966, Clearwater serves as an advocate for the Hudson River, its surrounding valley and those who live there.

Clearwater's Great Hudson River Revival has been held for decades and annually brings crowds to Croton Point Park, though financial difficulties played a role in its 2016 cancellation.

Williams in July became Clearwater's first full-time executive director since January 2016, when officials warned that financial difficulties threatened the organization's future.

Asked Tuesday if financial difficulties currently threaten Clearwater's future, Williams said, "That risk has steadily decreased since I arrived."

Clearwater next year will mark the 100th birthday of its late founder, Pete Seeger, and the 50th anniversary of the launch of the sloop Clearwater. Williams said the anniversaries will likely set the stage for celebrations and could help create a framework for a big festival or small festivals in 2019.

"We are still in the process of figuring it out," he said.

Paul Gallay, president of the Ossining-based Riverkeeper organization, applauded the attempts Clearwater made to adjust its approach.

"Good for Clearwater for taking a close look at its programs, given present realities," Gallay said. "Change and reinvention is hard and it takes time, but it's the most valuable thing an organization can do."

In a recent newsletter, Williams wrote that Clearwater was fielding suggestions "to help us decide what kind of festival or festivals to have in 2019." His message seeks those who "have an idea for how to have a great festival in 2019, and are willing to work to iron out the financial and operational details..."

Clearwater's last full-time executive director resigned in January 2016. That resignation followed an announcement that month that Clearwater had canceled the festival because of financial risk and so it could focus on an $850,000 Coast Guard-mandated restoration of its iconic sloop.

The festival has since returned and the sloop is back on the river.

Latimer signs sexual harassment executive order

Mark Lungariello
Rockland/Westchester Journal News
USA TODAY NETWORK

Westchester County Executive George Latimer has signed an executive order he says strengthens the county's sexual-harassment policy to emphasize zero tolerance.

The order broadens the definition of what constitutes harassment, emphasizes management responsibility to report claims it receives, and adds a section that lists remedies and legal options for employees outside of internal complaints.

"Our society has for too long been operating in a culture of keeping quiet and what these past two years have showed us is that the only way to combat a grave injustice is to shed a light on it," Latimer said in a statement. "We will not allow Westchester County to operate under a '1950s hush-hush' environment."

The new policy went into effect earlier this month and came after Gov. Andrew Cuomo signed into law a requirement that all municipalities create written anti-sexual-harassment policies based on a state model. Latimer's order supplements the latest policy enacted in 2009.

This summer, The Journal News/lohud reviewed more than five years' worth of internal harassment complaints and documents related to how Westchester investigated those claims. The review came amid the rise of the #metoo movement and as the state recalibrated its policies in reaction to several high-profile scandals.

The records showed six internal sexual-harassment and discrimination cases were investigated by the county Equal Employment Opportunity/Affirmative Action office dating back to 2012. Two of those complaints ended in findings that the county's sexual-harassment policy was violated, but none ended in recommendations of a firing, according to the records.

There were four additional complaints filed with the state and through a lawsuit in which a male correction officer claimed harassment by a superior officer. In one incident, the correction officer claimed his superior massaged his shoulders and made a vulgar reference to sodomy.

Allegations ranged from unwanted sexual attention — such as an intern who said she'd been asked out to ice cream — to claims of outright stalking, in the case of a Department of Public Works employee who allegedly drove the wrong way on a one-way street to speak to a female social services worker.

In that case, a mid-level administrator in the Social Services Department was found to be in dereliction of duty because she was told of the incidents by the victim and didn't make a record or formally file a complaint.

In another case, a social services supervisor was found to have violated the policy with a pattern of unwanted behavior that included referring to a woman as his work wife. He was found to have retaliated against his accuser, and a reprimand was recommended by the commission.

Man gets prison for sexual abuse

BALLSTON SPA — A man from Wilton has been sentenced to 6 years in state prison on a felony child sex abuse charge.

Mosher

Robert B. Mosher, 42, of Northern Pines Road, pleaded guilty to first-degree sexual abuse in August for sexual contact with a 12-year-old girl last year in Wilton.

He was charged with repeatedly molesting the child between early February 2017 and the end of April 2017. Mosher was arrested last December after an investigation by the Saratoga County Sheriff's Office, and police said he was acquainted with the girl.

Saratoga County Judge James Murphy imposed a 6-year prison term, to be followed by an unspecified term of parole when he is released.

Man charged for alleged drug sales

GLENS FALLS — A Hudson Falls man faces four felonies for allegedly selling cocaine in Glens Falls last year, police said.

Robert P. Infield, 26, faces two counts each of criminal sale of a controlled substance and criminal possession of a controlled substance after a multi-agency investigation in Glens Falls, according to police.

Infield

He is accused of selling cocaine on two occasions in June 2017.

Infield was arraigned and returned to Saratoga County Jail, where he was being held on unrelated charges.

Glens Falls Police Detective Sgt. Joe Boisclair made the arrest, assisted in the investigation by Hudson Falls Police, State Police and the Washington County Sheriff's Office.

Police: Woman damaged home

QUEENSBURY — A Schenectady woman who is in the country illegally from Mexico was arrested on two felony charges Monday related to thousands of dollars in vandalism done at a Queensbury home over the summer, police said.

Karen M. Hernandez-Ortiz, 25, was charged with two counts of criminal mischief that accuse her of damaging over $1,250 in property at a home on Fox Hollow Lane on Aug. 18, according to the Warren County Sheriff's Office.

Hernandez-Ortiz

Police said she was staying at the home, and during a dispute destroyed electronics, clothing and household items, but fled before sheriff's officers arrived.

A warrant was issued for her arrest, and she surrendered herself at Queensbury Town Court on Monday.

Sheriff's officers determined she is in the country illegally, and Hernandez-Ortiz was turned over to federal immigration officials after her arraignment Monday. Her custody status was not available as of Tuesday.

Sheriff's Patrol Officer Josh Fish and Investigator Jason Palmer handled the case.

Man sentenced for fatal DUI crash

RUTLAND, Vt. — A New Hampshire man who was intoxicated when he caused a crash in Vermont that killed his friend has been sentenced to up to 32 months in prison.

The Rutland Herald reports 27-year-old Stephen Driscoll, of Bedford, New Hampshire, was sentenced Monday in Rutland after pleading guilty to negligent driving that resulted in a death, driving under the influence of alcohol and reckless endangerment. Under a plea agreement, a felony charge was dismissed.

Authorities say Driscoll and a group of friends visited Killington in 2017. Police say Driscoll drove his truck with 30-year-old Alejandro Phoenix, of Rockland, Massachusetts, after drinking at bar.

Driscoll's truck struck a tree, fatally injuring Phoenix. Sullivan sustained minor injuries in the crash.

Driscoll apologized for his actions.

Killer will not face new charges

RUTLAND, Vt. — Prosecutors said they will not charge a Vermont man who was sentenced last week to life in prison with two additional killings in Rutland.

The Rutland Herald reports Rutland County State's Attorney Rose Kennedy said Monday it would be hard to create a case against 38-year-old Donald Fell using evidence from 18 years ago.

Authorities said Donald Fell and his friend, Robert Lee, stabbed Fell's 47-year-old mother, Debra Fell, and her friend, 44-year-old Charles Conway, in 2000.

The two men later abducted 53-year-old supermarket worker Terry King and killed her in New York.

Lee hanged himself in prison in 2001.

Donald Fell acknowledged his role in the deaths of his mother and Conway when he pleaded guilty to federal felony charges Friday in connection with King's death.

IN BRIEF

Heavy rains cause sewer overflows

GLENS FALLS — The heavy rains on Tuesday caused a combined sewer overflow in the city.

The incident happened at about 12:30 a.m. and lasted about 9-1/2 hours, according to the NY-Alert state notification system. About 16,000 gallons of sewage was discharged into the Hudson River.

Because of the city's older infrastructure, stormwater and sewer effluent flow through some of the same pipes. During heavy storms, the system can overflow. The bypassed flow is blended with treated effluent and discharged into the river.

Also on Tuesday at about 1 a.m., Ticonderoga had a discharge of about 2,194 gallons per minute of partially treated sewage without disinfection into the Lachute River. The discharge lasted about 12 hours.

Threat delays Salem school opening

dlehman@poststar.com

SALEM — The opening of Salem Central School was delayed for two hours Tuesday after a threat of violence was made toward the school Monday night through social media.

Police investigated the threat and found it was made by a teen from outside the region who had no apparent plans to come to Salem or follow through on the threat.

Salem School Superintendent David Glover said the district would have extra police presence on hand as a precaution, but other than the delay, the school day would go on as normal, with extracurricular activities and bus runs as planned.

"Other than that (delay), it will be back to normal as quickly as possible," he said.

The Washington County Sheriff's Office looked into the threat after the agency was contacted by the school district about it early Tuesday.

"It was determined that the threat was made over social media by an individual out of state and not in our region," the Sheriff's Office said in a news release. "Investigators were able to determine that the threat was not credible. At no time was any student or staff member in any danger."

Sheriff's Capt. Tony LeClaire said the threat was made over social media to a Salem student, with a person apparently saying they were going to bring a gun to the Salem school complex.

Sheriff's Investigators worked through the night and into Tuesday morning to determine who was responsible for the threat, and linked it to a "special-needs child in Kansas who has a history of making these kind of threats," LeClaire said.

Police reached out to authorities in Kansas to confirm the juvenile was responsible, and it was unclear whether any charges would be filed.

LeClaire said the school delay decision was made to ensure that police had time to figure out who was responsible and have police there make contact with the culprit.

"It wasn't until early this (Tuesday) morning that it was resolved, so out of an abundance of caution the school district delayed its opening until they were sure we had confirmed everything," LeClaire said.

Glover posted a notice on the district's website and Facebook page early Tuesday about the situation.

Road striping made moot by rainstorm

KATHLEEN MOORE
kmoore@poststar.com

A road striping job went awry Sunday night in Queensbury and Lake Luzerne, leading to a DEC response Monday morning.

The paint ran in the overnight rainstorm. By morning, there were puddles of yellow and white paint on portions of Luzerne Road in Queensbury and Glens Falls Mountain Road in Lake Luzerne.

Both towns had contracted out the work to Seneca Pavement Marking Inc.

That company had a job to do near Buffalo on Monday, but was delayed by bad weather in the Queensbury area and ended up working at night Sunday to get the job done.

"We were delayed by weather, and Queensbury is a high-traffic area so we were requested to do it at night," explained company owner Matt Cena. "We were on site in the area for close to two hours afterward, doing other roads, and they dried and cured just fine."

But the striping on Luzerne Road never hardened. Then it rained, and the paint ran down the mountain. The same thing happened on Glens Falls Mountain Road.

"I've never seen anything like it," Cena said.

His best guess is that the paint was too thick on those roads. His truck, which distributes the paint, had to go much slower than the normal 15 miles per hour on steep portions of both roads.

"It snakes, those switchbacks, and you can't go around those turns at 15 miles per hour," he said. "The only thing I can think of is the incline on that part of the road and the lack of speed — the application rate increased, which may have increased dry time."

Usually, the paint can be driven on "within minutes," and the underbody hardens within 45 minutes, he said. In this case, it was still wet many hours after it was applied.

"There's an underbody that locks up, and I think it was just too thick to cure," he said.

In the morning, DEC called both towns, asking officials what they planned to do about the environmental hazard. Town workers poured an absorbent material onto the puddles and shoveled them up, Queensbury Supervisor John Strough said.

They plan to charge the company for that cleanup work.

It won't be hard to get the money for it — the town hasn't yet paid for the paint job and can simply withhold the cost of the cleanup.

But Cena stressed that he promised the town to pay the full cost of the cleanup, and said he would come back to redo the work at no charge.

He also paid for an autobody shop to repaint a woman's car after she complained that she had inadvertently driven through one of the puddles of paint.

"She got in and got paint all over her vehicle," he said. "We've rectified it with an autobody shop. I apologize to the community for any inconvenience anyone has had to face."

DEC had him send over the safety data sheets for the type of paint he used. It is nontoxic, water-based paint. It used to have lead in it, but that was removed decades ago.

"They've cleaned up that product, and thank God they did, or my bank account would be spinning. Can you imagine all the fines DEC would give me?" he said. "No, it's water-dissolvable, which unfortunately you saw. It's just one of those really unfortunate events that you hope never happens."

DEC officials said they did not issue any environmental violations.

Two area locals sentenced for bail jumping

DON LEHMAN
dlehman@poststar.com

FORT EDWARD — Two Washington County residents who fled the state when free on bail to participate in drug court programs for felony convictions were sentenced to state prison on Friday.

Jill M. Bassett, 27, pleaded guilty to bail jumping, a felony, for her decision to remove a home monitoring electronic bracelet and flee the state.

Washington County Judge Kelly McKeighan sentenced her to 1-1/3 to 4 years in prison, to be served after the 2- to 6-year sentence she is serving for the burglary that landed her in trouble initially, Washington County District Attorney Tony Jordan said.

Stefano V. Delnevo, 36, of Cambridge, was sentenced to 1 to 3 years in prison after his plea to bail jumping, also to be served consecutively to his original charge.

Bassett took off from Washington County in February while on probation for a home burglary conviction that was motivated by a heroin habit.

She had been participating in the county's felony drug court program for months before she decided to cut off an electronic monitoring anklet and travel to the West Coast.

Court records show Bassett was staying at her sister's home in Freeland, Washington, and went there after her sister told her that authorities probably would not extradite her from the West Coast.

So she made no effort to hide where she was, even noting on her Facebook page that she had gotten a job at a local pizzeria and identifying the business by name. She chronicled her train trip across country on Facebook, calling it a "vacation."

State Police tracked her down, though, and she was arrested and brought back east in April.

Delnevo's case was a bit less involved.

He was in the drug court program because of a 2015 felony driving while intoxicated and aggravated unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle arrest in Cambridge. But he also became disenchanted with drug court and fled the region.

He was eventually located in May and sentenced to 1 to 3 years in the DWI case.

Phelps, 51, pleaded guilty to petit larceny, a misdemeanor, in connection with thefts of items from Lazy River Farms on Route 9. Phelps entered an “Alford Plea” in which she didn’t admit the underlying allegations. Shane M. Frasier, 44, allegedly attacked the woman Thursday night, resulting in her being taken to Albany Medical Center for treatment, according to the Warren County Sheriff’s Office. Frasier allegedly choked the woman, leading to felony counts of assault and aggravated family offense and misdemeanor criminal obstruction of breathing, police said in a news release. Former DOT admin faces new charges

dlehman@poststar.com

A former state Department of Transportation engineer who allegedly received kickbacks from a contractor who worked on a state construction project in Washington County has been indicted by a federal grand jury.

Jerome Laizon Laizon, 44, of Gansevoort, was charged with theft from a program receiving federal funds, a felony, in U.S. District Court in Albany for allegations he misappropriated funds that were to be used for a $10.5 million construction project in Washington County.

According to the indictment, the contractor for the project purchased goods and services for Laizon’s personal use, and Laizon unlawfully reimbursed the company for these purchases using project funds that were for work on Route 4 between 2012 and 2017.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Barnett said the charges are related to the case for which Laizon pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor count of official misconduct last year after an investigation by the state Inspector General’s Office, which found that he received goods and services that were billed to the state project he oversaw.

He would not say why federal charges were being pursued after a state prosecution, noting that federal prosecutors do not discuss pending cases “beyond what’s in the indictment and other publicly filed court papers.”

Laizon was accused in the state case of receiving a laptop computer, snowblower, lawnmower, car repair work, pressure washer and paint sprayer that were illegally paid for through the state construction contract. He resigned after his conviction.

Laizon was arraigned Tuesday before U.S. Magistrate Judge Christian Hummel and was released with conditions pending trial. If convicted, he faces up to 10 years in prison, a maximum $250,000 fine and up to 3 years of post-imprisonment supervised release.

His lawyer, Derrick Hogan, said Laizon pleaded not guilty, and a “vigorous” defense was planned. He said his firm was investigating the allegations and how they related to the prior case.

43rd Senate District candidates endorsed

Jordan endorsed by former senator; business group backs Gladd

Gladd Jordan

STAFF REPORT

Candidates running for the state Senate’s 43rd District seat received endorsements on Tuesday.

Republican Daphne Jordan and Democrat Aaron Gladd are campaigning for the seat.

Jordan was endorsed by the National Federation of Independent Business’ New York Political Action Committee, while Gladd received support from former Republican state Sen. Roy McDonald, who held the 43rd District seat before now-departing Sen. Kathy Marchione.

The National Federation of Independent Business endorsed Jordan because of her knowledge in running businesses. Jordan owned and operated two small businesses.

“Daphne Jordan’s record is clear on the issues that matter most: lower taxes, fewer mandates and common sense regulatory reform,” said NFIB’s New York Director, Greg Biryła, in a press release. “The best thing voters can do to support small business and their local economy is to support pro-small business candidates like Daphne.”

The endorsement from McDonald focused on the similarities he has with Gladd. Both grew up in Saranac Lake in low-income households, served in the military and have the motto of helping everyone, McDonald said.

McDonald began by acknowledging his silence in politics in recent years and added that he changed from the Republican Party to an independent.

McDonald emphasized Gladd’s “bipartisan spirit” and the leadership skills he honed while in the military.

“Aaron will always fight for what he believes is right for our district — it’s what he has done his whole life,” McDonald wrote in his endorsement letter. “In an age where ethics and honesty count, Aaron stands above the fray.”

Election Day is Nov. 6. The 43rd Senate District covers South Glens Falls to Saratoga Springs and travels south to Hudson. The district runs east of the cities of Albany and Troy.

For metered customers, the credit is calculated based on water usage. For public and private fire customers, the credit will be based on a percentage of the monthly billed amount.

The TCJA credit(s) will continue to appear on affected customers bills through March 31, 2021.

Please see below for how the credit(s) will be calculated. NOTE: the tax credit does not apply to unmetered residential accounts.

Stefanik

From A1

"I have always been very clear: I do not support repeal-only," Stefanik said. "Some of my colleagues do. I support repeal with comprehensive replacement."

However, in February 2015 — four weeks into her first term — she voted for a bill to repeal the ACA without directly replacing it.

H.R. 596, a budget reconciliation bill, would have repealed the ACA and provisions of the Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act of 2010, effective 180 days after the passing of the bill. The bill laid out guidelines for creating a replacement bill in broad terms, but provided no deadline for when this replacement should pass.

Shortly before voting for that bill, Stefanik told the Medical Society of the State of New York, in Lake Placid, that she thought a Republican replacement bill would be released later in 2015. As it turned out, no GOP replacement went public until 2017, after Republican President Donald Trump was in office.

H.R. 596 would have set 12 provisions for a replacement that included lowering health care premiums, providing people with pre-existing conditions access to affordable health coverage and increasing the number of insured Americans.

In a follow-up phone interview on Monday, Stefanik maintained that this bill adequately provided a replacement system for the ACA and said the vote was a minor one. "This is a budget reconciliation bill, which is a procedure in terms of the congressional rules," Stefanik said. "I voted to move forward the process, the budget reconciliation process."

However, in the Oct. 5 interview Stefanik said, "I am held to account for my record on procedural votes moving legislation forward," and said her Democratic opponent, Tedra Cobb, should "own her votes."

For the most part, Stefanik seems to stick by her claim that "I do not support repeal-only." Other than H.R. 596, the Enterprise could not find an instance in which she voted to repeal without a replacement.

Other health care votes she took included one to remove major aspects of the ACA, such as the individual mandate and medical device tax, while keeping coverage for pre-existing conditions and letting people stay on their parents' plans up to age 26.

CNN sourcing
 The Adirondack Daily Enterprise's previous article stated that the campaign's "Cuomo Clone" ad states that "Taxin' Tedra wants a trillion dollars in new taxes," citing a CNN source the Enterprise was unable to verify. On Monday, Lenny Alcivar, Stefanik's campaign director sent over a link to a CNN article published on the date the ad gives, titled "Sanders' last 'Medicare for all' plan cost nearly $1.4 trillion."

Although this article does not mention Cobb, it reports that Sen. Bernie Sanders' 'Medicare for all' plan, like one she might support, would cost nearly $1.4 trillion a year. To pay for this amount, Sanders proposed a new 2.2 percent income tax on all Americans, a 6.2 percent levy on employers and increased taxes on the wealthy. Cobb supports some version of Medicare for all, but has not singled out a particular plan.

Sanders said, despite this extra cost, individuals would save money because they would not be paying monthly premiums or deductibles to insurance companies, and that businesses would save more than $9,400 annually, per employee, because they would not be picking up a share of workers' premiums.

The Enterprise has found that Stefanik's claim about her health care voting record being maligned was misleading, as was the claim in the television ad.

Conviction

From A1

The two teens were schoolmates at Ticonderoga High School and friends for years, working on trucks and four-wheelers together and hanging out at the Route 2 home that is owned by Bowman's family.

Sawyer is being represented by lawyers Julie Garcia and Marc Zuckerman. Zuckerman said Tuesday he was in the process of filing standard pretrial motions and laying the groundwork for an extreme emotional disturbance defense.

Sawyer's counsel has not detailed what occurred beforehand that might have led to the extreme emotional disturbance.

For the defense to be successful, lawyers must prove the defendant "must have had an emotional disturbance so extreme as to result in and become manifest as a profound loss of self-control," and that the defendant was influenced by it at the time of the homicide.

"I think we will have a powerful argument for it," Zuckerman said.

Washington County District Attorney Tony Jordan said he understood an "extreme emotional disturbance" defense was possible, but his office was awaiting filings from Sawyer's defense counsel before determining how the case will proceed.

He said there have been no plea talks in the case.

Sawyer could face up to 50-years-to-life in prison if convicted of both charges and sentenced to consecutive prison terms.

Under state law that changed Oct. 1, those 16 and younger are no longer prosecuted as adults for most crimes. But those charged with murder and other violent felonies can be prosecuted as adults, and the law change pertains to any crimes that occurred after Oct. 1.

Sawyer is being held in Washington County Jail and is due back before Washington County Judge Kelly McKeighan.

Study: Organic food could reduce cancer risks

KAREN KAPLAN
Tribune News Service

To reduce your risk of cancer, you know you should quit smoking, exercise regularly, wear sunscreen, and take advantage of screening tests. New research suggests another item might be added to this list: Choose organic foods over conventional ones.

A study of nearly 70,000 French adults who were tracked for an average of 4.5 years found that those who ate the most organic foods were less likely to develop certain kinds of cancer than the people who ate the least.

Because of the way the study was conducted, it is impossible to say that the organic foods people ate were the reason why they had fewer cases of cancer.

But the results are significant enough to warrant follow-up studies, the researchers wrote.

The researchers have an idea about what factors those may be: pesticides. At least three of them — glyphosate, malathion and diazinon — probably cause cancer, and others may be carcinogenic as well, according to the International Agency for Research on Cancer.

"Organic products are less likely to contain pesticide residues than conventional foods," they wrote. That's because the rules farmers must follow in order to use the organic label generally prohibit the use of synthetic pesticides (although pesticides based on natural compounds like hydrogen peroxide and soaps are allowed).

Previous studies have found that pesticide residue is more prevalent on conventionally grown produce than on its organic counterparts. For instance, a report out this year from the European Food Safety Authority found residue from one or more pesticides on 44 percent of the conventionally produced food samples that were tested. Meanwhile, 6.5 percent of the organic food samples tested had detectable pesticide residues.

And there's evidence that those pesticides are metabolized in the body. The urine of people who eat few (if any) organic foods contains higher concentrations of chemicals derived from pesticides than the urine of people who eat organic food regularly.

In the U.S., more than nine out of 10 people have measurable amounts of pesticides in their urine or their blood, and these concentrations are known to fall when people switch from conventionally produced foods to organic ones.

The study authors ranked the volunteers according to how frequently they ate organic foods and divided them into four equally sized groups. This revealed that the people who ate organic food most often had higher incomes, more education and higher-status jobs. They were also more likely to exercise, to have quit smoking, and to eat higher amounts of healthful foods such as fruits and vegetables. All of these things are associated with a lower risk of cancer.

Friend gets too close for husband's comfort

DEAR ABBY: My wife, "Grace," and I have been happily married for 48 years. We're retired and enjoy an active sex life. Grace has a female friend, "Ricky," we have known more than 45 years. She's a close friend, and they often get together for lunch.

Ricky has been an out lesbian for many years and, in the past, had female companions. The problem is she repeatedly asks Grace to do things on Saturday evenings. She has also invited her to spend the night and tells her how much she loves her. My wife loves Ricky, too, but strictly as a friend and has not encouraged her in any way.

I'm not ordinarily the jealous type, but I'm convinced Ricky is in love with my wife. I have been tempted to tell her to quit making advances, but I don't want to cause the end of the friendship. I have told Grace how I feel, and she agrees. In fact, she has told me about some of the requests Ricky has made and she has rejected. I believe Ricky has crossed the line. What do you think?

CROSSED THE LINE

DEAR CROSSED THE LINE: Your wife is not responsible for the fact that her longtime friend may be in love with her. I agree that asking your wife to spend the night is inappropriate, but Ricky may want more of Grace's time because she's simply single and lonely. The person to set boundaries would be your wife, who needs to tell her friend that her Saturday nights belong to you, and as much as she loves Ricky, she's unavailable as a romantic partner.

HOROSCOPES

Being tired isn't always a function of having exerted oneself. It may be more a function of having not exerted oneself when the want was there, or perhaps forgetting something rather unforgettable. Suppression and repression take a considerable amount of energy. Alas, the full moon in Taurus will free all the floodgates open. Energy flows.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Oct. 24). This solar return sees you more ambitious, and with good cause.

You can definitely leverage what you have to create a better life. More highlights: a lucky guess that rains good fortune, a twisty, speedy, exhilarating professional stretch and companionship that is a delight and a comfort to you along the way. Aquarius and Pisces adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 6, 49, 33, 20 and 7.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). A little comedy will give a nice hum to an otherwise run-of-the-mill scenario. Your wry humor lands perfectly with the company you'll keep, and you could attract an admirer at that.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Everyone wants a piece of the pie today, and you'll take it one step further, preferring to call the flavor, too. You guessed it: You're going to have to do the baking now... more work, and more satisfaction.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Feeling special in the eyes of others is important to everyone. It's wonderful to be adored and loved. While praise from others is a highlight today, real and lasting validation comes from within.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). If life is, as the song suggests, a highway, then today represents that stretch of road dominated by a rumbling hunger. Look for signs that will tell you where you might drive up with my wife. I have been tempted to tell her to quit making advances, but I don't want to cause the end of the friendship. I have told Grace how I feel, and she agrees. In fact, she has told me about some of the requests Ricky has made and she has rejected. I believe Ricky has crossed the line. What do you think?

DEAR CROSSED THE LINE: Your wife is not responsible for the fact that her longtime friend may be in love with her. DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been together nearly four years. When we got together, he was in the process of gaining custody of his daughter because his ex abused drugs. We have raised "Arlette" ever since, and her mother is out of the picture.

Arlette calls me Mom, and we have a strong bond. Her father and I have a very strained marriage. We separated several times because he was abusive. I have been giving serious thought to leaving him, but because I have no legal rights to Arlette, I stay. I lost custody of my own daughter because of his abuse, and although my older children don't care for him, they, too, have a very strong bond with his daughter.

I'm unhappy and I do not feel this marriage can be saved. I am at a loss, though, thinking about leaving his daughter. She's only 4. How do I move on with my life knowing I won't have a relationship with this child I consider my own?

LIKE MY OWN DAUGHTER IN FLORIDA

DEAR LIKE MY OWN: Because of your husband's history of abuse, my first suggestion is to contact the National Domestic Violence Hotline at thehotline.org or by calling (800) 799-7233. Having lost custody of your own daughter because of his abuse, there is good reason to believe he would abuse Arlette if she is left alone with him. While you're at it, consider running this scenario past a social worker who is well versed in the ins and outs of the system.

it look easy, and then there are those who make it look easy because it is actually easy to them. The first category appreciates compliments; the second doesn't.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). As you concentrate on executing improvements that can be quantified (such as number of books read, number of calories consumed, number of people reached out to...), unquantifiable improvements will take hold.

HELP FOR HOMEOWNERS IN FORECLOSURE
 New York State Law requires that we send you this notice about the foreclosure process. Please read it carefully. Summons and Complaint You are in danger of losing your home. If you fail to respond to the summons and complaint in this foreclosure action, you may lose your home. Please read the summons and complaint carefully. You should immediately contact an attorney or your local legal aid office to obtain advice on how to protect yourself. Sources of information and assistance The State encourages you to become informed about your options in foreclosure. In addition to seeking assistance from an attorney or legal aid office, there are government agencies, and non-profit organizations that you may contact for information about possible options, including trying to work with your lender during this process. To locate an entity near you, you may call the toll-free helpline maintained by the New York State Department of Financial Services at 1-800-342-3736 or visit the Department's website at www.dfs.ny.gov. Rights and Obligations YOU ARE NOT REQUIRED TO LEAVE YOUR HOME AT THIS TIME. You have the right to stay in your home during the foreclosure process. You are not required to leave your home unless and until your property is sold at auction pursuant to a judgment of foreclosure and sale. Regardless of whether you choose to remain in your home, YOU ARE REQUIRED TO TAKE CARE OF YOUR PROPERTY and pay property taxes in accordance with state and local law. Foreclosure rescue scams Be careful of people who approach you with offers to "save" your home. There are individuals who watch for notices of foreclosure actions in order to unfairly profit from a homeowner's distress. You should be extremely careful about any such promises and any suggestions that you pay them a fee or sign over your deed. State law requires anyone offering such services for profit to enter into a contract which fully describes the services they will perform and fees they will charge, and which prohibits them from taking any money from you until they have completed all such promised services.

STATE

Council delays action on water contaminant limits

ALBANY — The deadline for a New York state council to report on recommended limits for several emerging contaminants in drinking water has passed without any regulations proposed.

Instead, Gov. Andrew Cuomo announced Tuesday the state Drinking Water Quality Council will meet on Oct. 17 to discuss a recent federal report recommending new minimum levels for polyfluoroalkyl chemicals such as PFOA and PFOS. The chemicals were widely used in nonstick coatings and firefighting foam. The City of Newburgh has not used its primary water source, Washington Lake, since May 2016 because of high levels of PFOS.

The 12-member council was created by Cuomo and the Legislature in September 2017 after green groups criticized the state's handling of PFOA contamination in Rensselaer County. Statute required the council to recommend contaminant limits within a year.

Cuomo on Tuesday said $200 million from a fund approved in 2017 is available to help communities address water contaminants.

Pets allowed on emergency evacuation transportation

ALBANY — New York state will now allow people to take pets on any kind of public transportation when evacuating during an emergency.

Officials say the new policy ensures residents don't have to choose between their companion animal and their personal safety during hurricanes or other disasters.

Previously, some public transit agencies allowed pets during evacuations while others, such as the Port Authority, did not.

Gov. Andrew Cuomo signed the change into law on Tuesday. Under the law, restrictions on taking animals on public transit will only be lifted during formal evacuations.

Group: Zoo elephant is being 'unlawfully imprisoned'

NEW YORK — An elephant named Happy who has lived mostly alone since her mate was fatally injured is being "unlawfully imprisoned" by a New York City zoo, according to a legal petition filed Tuesday by an activist group.

The Nonhuman Rights Project argued that Happy, who has lived at the Bronx Zoo since 1977, has rights like any human and should be relocated to a large sanctuary where she can socialize with other elephants and roam more freely.

The group filed its court petition in Orleans County, 280 miles away from the zoo in western New York, because judges elsewhere in the state have taken a dim view in past legal proceedings of the idea that animals have legal rights like people.

Zoo officials say Happy appears to be content, is cared for by loving handlers and might suffer from a transfer to an unfamiliar facility.

DA: Postal worker stole checks made out to people on route

NEW YORK — The Brooklyn district attorney says a postal worker stole checks made out to poor people on her route, including residents of a homeless shelter.

District Attorney Eric Gonzales says the 29-year-old woman teamed with three other defendants in the scheme — stealing more than $29,000 over a period of three months. The Daily News reported the stolen checks ranged in value from $100 to more than $1,000 and belonged to 66 different victims — including eight residents of a facility for homeless people in New York City.

The four suspects were arraigned Monday in Brooklyn Supreme Court on multiple charges that included grand larceny and identity theft.

Dunkin' fires workers who poured water on homeless man

SYRACUSE — Dunkin' Donuts has fired workers who poured water on a homeless man in Syracuse and posted the video online.

The company that owns the Dunkin' location says it was "disturbed" by the employees' behavior.

Jeremy Dufresne says he was at the Dunkin' in Syracuse Sunday night to charge his phone to call his mom when one of the workers dumped water on his head. The worker laughed, and a video of the interaction was posted to Facebook shortly afterward.

Prosecutors say they are considering filing harassment charges against the workers.

Taylor Swift, Cardi B set for American Music Awards

By Mesfin Fekadu
The Associated Press

Taylor Swift is having a big week: She first broke her long-standing refusal to discuss politics Sunday and now she's going to give her first awards show performance in three years at the American Music Awards.

The pop star will open Tuesday night's show at the Microsoft Theater in Los Angeles, which airs live on ABC at 8 p.m. Eastern. Other performers include Cardi B with Bad Bunny and J Balvin, Mariah Carey, Carrie Underwood, twenty one pilots and Jennifer Lopez. The show will also pay tribute to Aretha Franklin, who died in August.

Swift is nominated for the top prize — artist of the year — where she will compete with Ed Sheeran, Imagine Dragons, Post Malone and Drake, who ties with Cardi B for most nominations with eight.

Due to their success on the pop and rap charts, Drake and Cardi B earned nominations in both the pop/rock and rap/hip-hop categories. In the rap/hip-hop and pop/rock categories, Drake is up for favorite male artist, favorite album and favorite song with "God's Plan." He has the year's top-selling album with "Scorpion" and also scored three No. 1 hits on the Billboard Hot 100 chart.

Cardi B's collaboration with Bruno Mars, the remix of "Finesse," earned two nominations and she also earned nods for favorite social artist and favorite music video, among others. Her album, "Invasion of Privacy," was surprisingly shut of the favorite rap/hip-hop album category.

Rapper-singer XXXTentacion, a streaming juggernaut before his death in June and afterward, earned nominations for new artist of the year and favorite soul/R&B album for his 2017 debut,

"17." He won best new artist at the BET Hip-Hop Awards this month.

Sheeran and Malone, who will perform with Ty Dolla $ign, each earned six nominations. Other performers include Shawn Mendes with Zedd, Camila Cabello, Ciara with Missy Elliott, Ella Mai, Panic! at the Disco, Dua Lipa and Benny Blanco with Halsey and Khalid.

The Queen of Soul will be remembered with a performance by Gladys Knight, Ledisi, Mary Mary, Donnie McClurkin and CeCe Winans. The musicians will pay tribute to her gospel roots and her iconic album, "Amazing Grace."

Golden Globe-winning "black-ish" actress Tracee Ellis Ross will host the fan-voted show. Presenters include Tyra Banks, Chloe x Halle, Macaulay Culkin, Sara Gilbert, Heidi Klum, Lenny Kravitz, John Stamos, Amandla Stenberg, The Chainsmokers and Rami Malek.

Trump warns Honduras over migrant caravan

The Associated Press

ESQUIPULAS, Guatemala — U.S. President Donald Trump threatened Tuesday to cut aid to Honduras if it doesn't stop a caravan of some 2,000 migrants, even as they resumed their northward trek through Guatemala with hopes of reaching the U.S. border.

Despite having walked the entire previous day, with swollen, blistered and aching feet, the group was up shortly after sunrise after sleeping on the ground in their clothes.

Dozens attended Mass at the Basilica in the city of Esquipulas, just across the border from Honduras and about 90 miles east of Guatemala City, to receive a blessing, before continuing the journey escorted by Guatemalan police. The group's numbers have snowballed since some 160 migrants departed Friday from San Pedro Sula, Honduras, with many people joining spontaneously carrying just a few belongings.

A Guatemalan priest estimated that more than 2,000 had been fed at three shelters run by the Roman Catholic Church.

Three weeks before midterm elections in the United States, the caravan elicited a tough response from Trump.

"The United States has strongly informed the President of Honduras that if the large Caravan of people heading to the U.S. is not stopped and brought back to Honduras, no more money or aid will be given to Honduras, effective immediately," Trump tweeted.

However, the Central American nation's ability to do anything at this point appeared limited as the migrants had already crossed into Guatemala on Monday, twice pushing past outnumbered police sent to stop them — first at the border and then at a roadblock outside Esquipulas.

Trump did not follow through on a similar threat to the Central American nation in April over an earlier caravan, which eventually pertered out.

There was no immediate public response from the Honduran government.

In late September, in a speech at the U.N. General Assembly, President Juan Orlando Hernandez defended migrants, criticizing their treatment in detention centers and the separation of children from their families — without explicitly naming the United States.

"Migration is a human right," Hernandez said. "For centuries human beings have moved and emigrated and have contributed to the social and economic development of the nations that have taken them in, in search of better opportunities. We in Honduras and the Central American region are not an exception."

Meanwhile, Mexico's immigration authority sent out a fresh warning late Monday that only those who meet entry requirements would be allowed into the country and each migrant would have to satisfy Mexican migration agents.

Hondurans need visas to visit Mexico in most cases.

Science says: Sex and gender aren't the same

By Lauran Neergaard
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Anatomy at birth may prompt a check in the “male” or “female” box on the birth certificate — but to doctors and scientists, sex and gender aren't always the same thing.

The Trump administration purportedly is considering defining gender as determined by sex organs at birth, which if adopted could deny certain civil rights protections to an estimated 1.4 million transgender Americans.

But variation in gender identity is a normal part of human diversity, the American Academy of Pediatrics, or AAP, stresses in a new policy that outlines how to provide supportive medical care for transgender youth.

Here are some questions and answers about what can be sometimes blurry lines.

Q: Aren't sex and gender interchangeable terms?

A: Sex typically refers to anatomy while “gender goes beyond biology,” says Dr. Jason Rafferty, a pediatrician and child psychiatrist at Hasbro Children's Hospital in Rhode Island, and lead author of the AAP's transgender policy.

Gender identity is more an inner sense of being male, female or somewhere in between — regardless of physical anatomy, he explained.

It may be influenced by genetics and other factors, but it's more about the brain than the sex organs.

And transgender is a term accepted across science and medical groups to mean people whose gender identity doesn't match what Rafferty calls their “sex assigned at birth.”

Q: How early can people tell if they're transgender?

A: It's normal for children to explore in ways that ignore stereotypes of masculinity and femininity.

Rafferty says it's whether those feelings and actions remain consistent over time that tells. Sometimes that happens at a young age, while for others it may be adolescence or beyond.

Regardless, the pediatricians' policy calls for “gender-affirmative” care so that children have a safe, nonjudgmental and supportive avenue to explore their gender questions.

Human Rights Watch: Palestinians use torture

Security forces of the rival Palestinian governments routinely use torture and arbitrary arrests, among other tactics, to quash dissent by peaceful activists and political opponents, Human Rights Watch said Tuesday.

The charges came in a new report released by the New York-based watchdog, following a two-year investigation that included interviews with nearly 150 people, many of them ex-detainees.

It accused both the Western-backed Palestinian Authority in the West Bank and the Islamic militant Hamas in Gaza of using “machineries of repression” to stifle criticism.
