SKANEATELES HIGH SCHOOL

Atticus Savage, son of Brian Savage and Kelly Evans, of Skaneateles, was awarded the Skaneateles Police Chief George E. Davis Memorial Scholarship Award at the 2022 Skaneateles High School commencement ceremony. Atticus plans on attending the University of Albany in the fall, studying physics. He was a member of the Skaneateles High School varsity football team and worked part-time at Tops Friendly Markets and, most recently, started a summer job at TJ Ventures.

The Davis scholarship is awarded each year to a graduating senior who is the child or grandchild of a police officer and/or is pursuing a career in law enforcement or public service, while also demonstrating leadership and citizenship. Atticus' uncle Donald is a New York State Trooper, his grandfather Don worked for the DeWitt Police Department and Onondaga County Sheriff's Office, and he has uncles who have worked for the Skaneateles Police Department and the FBI. For the first time in the scholarship's history, Atticus' extended family were all friends with Chief Davis.

"The Davis family believes that by establishing this memorial scholarship fund, the memory and legacy of Chief Davis will remain in hearts and minds year after year," the family said in a news release. "They were very pleased to award this year's scholarship to Atticus. Atticus displays kindness and caring to others, many of those qualities such as Chief Davis showed his community all those years."

AUBURN — A second Quiznos location will get toasting this weekend on Grant Avenue, a corridor that's been heating up again with commercial development.

Co-owner Brett Davenport hopes to lure the lunch crowd from the many neighboring businesses with the sandwich chain's signature toasted subs. He and his wife, Joanne, opened their first store at Fingerlakes Crossing off Routes 5 & 20 in Aurelius in March.

"It's really serving two separate markets," city resident Davenport said Thursday. "Although the stores are only four miles apart, at lunch time that's too far to travel for a lot of people."

The Quiznos in Hunter Brook Plaza will open at 11 a.m. Saturday. A strong start at the Fingerlakes Crossing location has Davenport looking forward to similar success on Grant Avenue, he said.

Davenport Management employs nearly 30 people between the two stores. Quiznos will have up to three neighbors at the recently completed Hunter Brook Plaza, 171 Grant Ave.

Sprint opened a store for cell phone sales and billing services at the plaza in June. Manager Pat Burns said Sprint moved from the Fingerlakes Mall to target more foot and auto traffic.

"This is going to be a better business location," he said. "We do better in a building than a kiosk."

CAPITOL RIOT

The question of presidential power

Jan. 6 hearings bring up debate

GARY FIELDS | Associated Press

The House Jan. 6 committee's investigation of the aftermath of the 2020 presidential election and the events leading up to the U.S. Capitol insurrection is raising questions about former President Donald Trump's role and whether he committed crimes. The various schemes and talking points that witnesses have revealed also highlight what a president has the authority to do.

Government and legal experts say the bigger question is: Can further limits be put on presidential authority to make sure there are no repeats of 2020 in future administrations?

What laws form the basis for the presidential powers in question?

There are two primary ones: the Insurrection Act, first enacted in 1792, and the National Emergencies Act of 1976.

The Insurrection Act is a long-standing presidential power that gives the president wide latitude to use military forces to stop a rebellion or domestic violence. Military forces are normally barred by the Posse Comitatus Act from joining in civilian law enforcement actions.

Elizabeth Goitein, senior director of the liberty and national security program at the Brennan Center for Justice, said the insurrection "in my opinion" could have been the catalyst for the president to invoke the act and bring in the military to escort congressional lawmakers out of the proceedings for their safety. "That doesn't mean Donald Trump would have been the president, but it would have thrown a wrench in the works," she said.

Under the NEA, dozens of statutory authorities become available to any president when national emergencies are declared. They include everything from severe-weather responses to civil disorder. Congress can vote to terminate the declaration, but if the president vetoes, a two-thirds supermajority is required to overcome the veto.

"The statute itself doesn't say what an emergency is. It leaves it up to the president," said Chris Edelson, assistant professor of government at American University. "That means an unscrupulous president can use it" for ill purposes. It is up to Congress to rein in the president, he said.

JACQUELYN MARTIN, ASSOCIATED PRESS

With the White House in the background, President Donald Trump speaks at a rally Jan. 6, 2021, in Washington.

What issues were raised at the last hearing?

In the most recent hearing, former White House counsel Pat Cipollone discussed a rancorous meeting in which Trump's outside legal team brought a draft executive order to seize the states' voting machines. In his testimony Cipollone said the plan was a terrible idea. It had been floated before.

"You can't preemptively seize voting machines. If there was a reason to do so, you need a court order," Edelson said.

At the same meeting, there were a range of theories pushed, including invoking martial law.

It was an idea Trump adviser Michael Flynn had floated before, along with seizing the voting machines.

What about martial law?

Under the Insurrection Act the president can call on the military in certain circumstances, but they are intended to support civilian law enforcement. One example was the use of the military during the 1992 Los Angeles riots. Under martial law the military takes over the function of the civilian government.

Martial law, said Goitein, "gives me nightmares" because the law is unsettled.

"The whole concept of martial law, there's not even an agreed upon definition of what it is," she said.

Are there guardrails to prevent future leaders from abusing power?

The House passed the Protecting Our Democracy bill last year and sent it to the Senate. The legislation would prevent presidents from pardoning themselves, strengthen reporting requirements for campaigns and clarify and enhance criminal penalties for campaigns that accept foreign information sought or obtained for political advantage.

The Senate has taken no action on the proposal. Without congressional action, the questions over presidential power and its expansiveness remain open.

"The Constitution assumes that checks and balances work. If the president goes too far, Congress will rein him in," said Edelson. In Trump's case, Congress has not shown an appetite for doing that.

CATHOLIC EDUCATION

Finding holy moments in Gettysburg and elsewhere

While praying for inspiration for this article, I browsed through a book by Matthew Kelly called “Holy Moments: A Handbook for the Rest of Your Life.” Kelly, an Australian-born author, speaker, entrepreneur and founder of The Dynamic Catholic Institute, came to speak at Auburn High School over five years ago and inspired his audience to become “the best version of yourself.” I decided to become part of the Dynamic Catholic Ambassador’s Club helping Matthew Kelly re-energize the Catholic Church by creating resources that help us grow spiritually and rediscover the beauty of Catholicism.

So, what is a holy moment? Matthew Kelly describes it as “a single moment in which you open yourself to God. You make yourself available to Him. You set aside personal preference and self-interest, and for one moment, you do what you prayerfully believe God is calling you to do.” While reading, I realized that the mission of St. John Paul II Academy is embedded in creating holy moments. Everything from interaction with parents and students to curriculum choices, textbook choices, field trip choices, song choices and prayer choices are derived from our hunger for meaning and wisdom.

Perhaps hunger for meaning was the purpose for creating one of our holy moments — a school trip to Gettysburg and The National Shrine of St. Elizabeth Ann Seton. This holy moment spurred several smaller holy moments for JPII families to spend time with their children while learning, playing, talking, praying, sharing and smiling all the way. Prior to our trip, we studied the battles, geography and politics that revolved around Gettysburg. We watched the movie “Lincoln,” recited and studied the poem “O Captain! My Captain!” by Walt Whitman and researched local Civil War heroes, including Myles Keogh, Abner Doubleday and abolitionists such as Harriet Tubman and Lucretia Mott. We prepared our minds and hearts to explore the holy moments of the Union and Confederate troops, Abraham Lincoln, St. Elizabeth Ann Seton and the Sisters of Charity.

This all came to life when we arrived in Gettysburg and set foot in the cemetery, listened to taps, walked along the battlefields and town imagining the sights, sounds and smells experienced over 200 years ago, and explored the artifacts in the museum. We were able to see the famous cannon shell hole on the south side of the Trostle brick barn and honor the sacrifices that so many made in order to grant and protect the freedoms we have today. During our JPII Christmas concert, we sang “The Battle Hymn of the Republic”: “In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea, with a glory in His bosom that transfigures you and me, as He died to make men holy, let us die to make men free, His truth is marching on.” These lyrics took on a new meaning rooted in sacrifice, perseverance, loyalty and compassion — another holy moment.

On the last day of our trip, we traveled to The National Shrine of St. Elizabeth Ann Seton in Emmitsburg, Maryland. Elizabeth was the first American-born citizen to be given the title of “saint” after enduring the heartbreaking loss of her husband, raising five children, converting to Catholicism and founding the Sisters of Charity of St. Joseph and St. Joseph’s Academy. This first free Catholic school for girls included a chapel where Mother Seton prayed and received communion. Next to the chapel was Mother Seton’s bedroom, where she died from tuberculosis at age 46. After an awe-inspiring tour of the stone farmhouse and St. Joseph’s House & Cemetery, we attended Eucharistic Adoration and Mass at the basilica where her remains are entombed. The shrine’s property was also the site of the 1863 Union encampment where officers conducted a war council to prepare for the Battle of Gettysburg. The sisters’ first involvement in battlefield nursing/military service in the U.S. was during the Civil War. The trip ended with a generous holy moment by a JPII grandmother and her friend who collected bottle/can money and made a donation so each child could purchase a memento from the gift shop.

Matthew Kelly challenges us to create holy moments and teach three others. If we apply spiritual multiplication, one person teaches three, those three each teach three, those nine each teach three, etc. After 21 cycles, we surpass the world’s population: 7,960,000,000. Wow!

“Go to him with faith, love and confidence — He will help. Fill yourself with His Spirit and He Himself will govern.” — St. Elizabeth Ann Seton
