Statement of Significance: The King Farmstead was established in the early nineteenth century. In the mid-nineteenth century it was the home of Lewis King (1787-1857) and Mary Lampman King (1787-1850), along with their children. Abram King (1824-1888) inherited the farmstead but by 1875 it was no longer in the King family. Typical for a nineteenth-century farmstead in Cayuga County, it evolved from a diversified farm that produced cereal crops, livestock, fruit, and value-added goods such as butter and cheese to specializing in dairying by the turn of the twentieth century. Aerial imagery shows that a second barn and at least one silo were located south of the surviving barn until about 2010. Due to the loss of all but one period agricultural building, the farmstead does not appear to meet National Register Criterion A in the area of Agriculture. However, the residence retains integrity of location, setting, design, materials, feeling, and association, and therefore appears to meet Criterion C in the area of Architecture as an example of Federal-style domestic architecture in the Town of Scipio.

Statement of Significance: The Morgan Farmstead was established prior to 1853, when it was a 100-acre, diversified farm occupied by Nathan G. Morgan (1799-1869; State Senator in 1838 and 1839). By 1859, Morgan had relocated to the Town of Springport and the farmstead was owned by E. O'Hara, followed by the Close family in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. During the Close family's ownership, the farm specialized in dairy production, as evidenced by the large gambrel-roofed dairy barn with two silos added in about 1900. Although diminished in acreage, the farmstead retains integrity of location, setting, design, materials, feeling, and association and appears to meet National Register Criterion A in the area of Agriculture for its association with the development of Cayuga County's agricultural economy from the mid-nineteenth century through the early twentieth century. It also appears to meet Criterion C in the area of Architecture as a notable example of Greek Revival-style domestic architecture.

Statement of The Culver Farmhouse was built in about 1830. By the 1850s it was the Significance: home of Daniel K. Culver (1791-1856), Rebecca Mix Culver (1794-1883) and their children. A barn and two silos were demolished in the late twentieth or early twenty-first century. Surviving outbuildings appear to date from the mid-twentieth century. Despite the loss of period agricultural buildings and of the property's historic acreage, the farmhouse retains its rural setting. It appears to meet National Register Criterion C in the area of Architecture as an example of a modest, one-and-one-half-story, brick Greek Revival-style residence in the Town of Fleming.

Statement of Significance: The hamlet of Scipioville was initially called Watkins Corners after early settler Henry Watkins (1742-1824), who emigrated from Washington County in about 1790. Watkins built the Federal-style residence at 3357 NY-34B in the first quarter of the nineteenth century and resided there with his wife, Johanna Loomis Watkins, and four children. The farmstead was subsequently inherited by Watkins' son Samuel Watkins (1780-1855) and remained in the Watkins family into the twentieth century. The Henry Watkins Farmhouse retains integrity of location, setting, design, materials, feeling, and association. Statement of Significance: The Amaziah Griswold House was constructed as early as 1801 near the crossroads of two early major transportation routes that would eventually develop into the hamlet of Scipioville. Amaziah Griswold migrated to the Town of Scipio from Columbia County and was a shoemaker. One of the earliest newspapers established in Cayuga County, the Western Luminary, was reportedly first published in the house in 1801. Despite some loss of integrity of materials through the introduction of vinyl siding and windows, the house's modest, Federal-style massing and fenestration pattern are still clearly visible. The Amaziah Griswold House appears to meet National Register Criterion A in the area of Exploration/Settlement for its association with the early history of the hamlet of Scipioville.

Physical Description: The Hoxie Farmstead is an approximately three-acre farmstead consisting of a Greek Revival residence, an English barn, a concrete silo, and hay fields. The residence is a one-and-one-half-story, five-bay-wide house with a side-gable orientation. Greek Revival features include the wide frieze with frieze-band windows and gable returns. The slight asymmetry of the primary

The primary entrance consists of a historic, although not original, glazed wood door beneath a bracketed, circa-1900 portico. Windows are six-over-six sash with wood shutters at the first floor and narrow frieze-band windows with iron grilles at the second floor. A single-story wing on the north has a full-width porch and a secondary entrance. The English barn has a stone foundation and board-and-batten siding.

Statement of Significance: The Hoxie Farmstead was established in the early nineteenth century. By 1853 it was owned by Quakers William (1812-1890) and Phebe Battey (1821-1898) Hoxie and it remained in the Hoxie family into the twentieth century. William and Phebe Hoxie are buried in the Quaker Cemetery on Polar Ridge Road, which was associated with a Hicksite Friends Meeting House (not extant) which stood adjacent to the cemetery. The Hoxie Farmstead was at least 150 acres in the mid-nineteenth century and was a typical diversified farm of the period, producing butter, cheese, eggs, and wool and growing wheat, oats, corn, and barley. Despite a reduction in acreage, the Hoxie Farmstead retains integrity of location, setting, design, materials, feeling, and association and appears to meet National Register Criterion A in the area of Agriculture for its association with the agricultural development of Cayuga County, as well as Criterion C in the area of Architecture as an example of a nineteenth-century farmstead with a Greek Revival-style residence. It may also meet Criterion A in the area of Social History for its association with the Hicksite Quakers in Cayuga County.

Based on historic maps of the Town of Niles, the residence remained in the Selover family from at least 1853 to at least 1904. Based on the presence of the barn and the property's proximity to other properties that were historically owned by the Selover family throughout the nineteenth century, this residence was most likely part of the family's agricultural operation and prominence in town. Though the property has lost most of its association with agriculture, it retains its integrity of location, design, materials, and feeling. Description: Window and door openings on the primary elevation have heavy cut-stone lintels and sills. Below the roof eave is a wide wood frieze with gable returns at the gable ends. Elliptical fanlights with stone sills are located at attic level in the gable ends. The associated barn complex, to the north of the house across Skillet Road, includes a gambrel-roofed dairy barn sheathed in metal siding and attached to a modern cowshed. A group of three pole barns east of the house also have metal siding.

Statement of The John O'Hara Farmstead was established in the late eighteenth century
Significance: by John O'Hara (1775-1839), who migrated from Saratoga County in 1794 and settled in the Town of Scipio with his wife, Esther Bennett O'Hara (1772-1841). O'Hara's heirs enlarged the family farming enterprise through the purchase of additional farms, owning at least four farms and three tenant houses in the 1850s. The farmstead remained in the O'Hara family into the twentieth century. Like many surviving farms, it specialized in dairy by the turn of the twentieth century, as evidenced by the circa-1900 dairy barn, and it remains an active dairy farm today. Although the the spatial relationship between the circa-1900 barn and residence is still present, historic mapping and aerial imagery indicates that multiple historic farm buildings have been lost. The farmstead is therefore not recommended to meet National Register Criterion A in the area of Agriculture. However, the farmhouse retains integrity of location, setting, design, materials, feeling, and association and appears to meet Criterion C in the area of Architecture as an example of Greek Revival domestic architecture in the Town of Scipio.

Statement of Wyckoff Station, also called Owasco Lake Station, was built in about 1870,
Significance: when the New York Central Railroad opened between Auburn and Owego. The track, which is no longer extant, ran east of the station, between it and the lake, with a siding to the west of the station. The station was apparently a combination passenger and freight station, serving as a depot for the area's dairy farmers as well as a passenger station for visitors to the growing community of lakefront homes along Owasco Lake. The roof was raised prior to about 1924 to expand the upper floor, possibly as a residence, and a cantilevered second-story porch was added on the north elevation at the same time. Although the rail line was abandoned in the mid-twentieth century, the station retains integrity of location, setting, design, materials, feeling, and association. It appears to meet National Register Criterion A in the area of Transportation for its association with the New York Central Railroad in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. It also appears to meet Criterion C in the area of Architecture as an intact, surviving nineteenth-century rural train depot.

Statement of The Henry Wyckoff Farmstead was established in the first half of the Significance: nineteenth century. It was reportedly built from 1829 to 1835 for Henry V. Wyckoff (1801-1869) and Esther O'Hara Wyckoff (1806-1896). In 1850, the federal census lists the Wyckoffs along with four of their children and three hired laborers. The farm was a successful and typically diversified farm of the mid-nineteenth century. Henry V. Wyckoff was the son of Peter Wyckoff (1774-1840) and Phebe Ditmars Wyckoff (1775-1846), early settlers in the Town of Scipio who migrated from New Jersey. The farmstead was inherited by Henry V. Wyckoff's son, Peter V. Wyckoff (1838-1878), who was noted as a farmer, station agent, and grain buyer in the 1879 Storke History of Cayuga County, New York. The extant train station east of the farmstead was known as "Wyckoff Station." The farmhouse is an excellent example of cobblestone construction and meets the registration requirements set forth

New York State Proposed Historic District Inventory Form

Report Created: August 8, 2024

	Municipality: Genoa	# of Properties: 6
Hamlet of Genoa Historic District	County: Cayuga	Acreage: 89.68

Narrative Description The Hamlet of Genoa Historic District includes the civic/institutional, religious, commercial, and residential buildings that form the core of the Hamlet of Genoa. The buildings are located along Main Street (NY-90) and several its side streets: South, Maple, Academy, and Stevens Streets. Salmon Creek, the primary drainage between Cayuga and Owasco lakes, flows north to south through the hamlet. Contributing residences within the district date from the early nineteenth century through the early twentieth century and are primarily modest, wood-frame examples of popular styles including Federal, Greek Revival, Italianate, Queen Anne, and Colonial Revival. Commercial buildings in the district include the ca.-1885 Genoa Hotel, a pair of ca.-1900 single-story former stores (one of which is now Smith's General Store Museum), and a ca.-1930 single-story store. Two contributing churches are located in the district: the 1843 Gothic Revival-style Genoa Presbyterian Church and the 1830 Early Classical Revival-style Universalist Church (now a private residence). At the south end of Academy Street is the two-story, brick and cast stone, Georgian Revival-style former Genoa Central School completed in 1939. Non-contributing buildings within the district include the ca.-1970 fire station and several prefabricated homes.

Statement of Significance The hamlet of Genoa was founded in the late eighteenth century due to its location along Salmon Creek, which provided water power for early grist and saw mills. By 1830, the hamlet had mills, residences, at least two stores, and a church. Several extant residence date from this early period. Rail service arrived in Genoa by 1853, augmenting its modest manufacturing sector, which included a boot and shoe factory and an agricultural implement factory. In the mid-nineteenth century, the Genoa Academy was established and reportedly had a student body of over 300 at one time. It was replaced with the former Genoa Central School, completed in 1939. Development was concentrated along main Street and its three early side streets (Mill, Academy, and Church Streets) until North, Maple, and Bradley Streets were developed as residential areas in the second half of the nineteenth century.

Although several contributing buildings within the historic district have lost integrity of materials through unsympathetic alterations, the district as a whole appears to retain sufficient integrity of setting, materials, design, feeling, and association to convey its significance under National Register Criterion A in the area of Community Planning and Development as an example of a nineteenth-century rural hamlet in Cayuga County. The district also appears to meet Criterion C in the area of Architecture for its collection of period homes and civic/religious buildings representing popular styles of the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

Boundary Description The proposed historic district boundary includes parcels along Main Street (NY-90) beginning at the west at 9981 NY-90 and continuing through 10149 NY-90 at the east. The boundary also includes parcels located on Maple Street (south from Main Street through 1084 Maple Street), Stevens Street (all parcels), Academy Street (all parcels excepting 987 Academy Street at the far south), and South Street (north from Main Street through 980 South Street).

Boundary Justification The proposed boundary includes the entirety of the early-nineteenth-century core of the hamlet of Genoa along with some of the residential areas that developed north of Main Street in the latter half of the century. Resources omitted from the proposed boundary (notably, the parcels along North and Bradley Streets) are late-nineteenth- and early-twentieth-century residences that lack integrity of materials and design, or have been replaced with late-twentieth-century residences.
