Physical Description: Genoa Central School is a two-story Neoclassical-style school building with a temple front flanked by two side wings. The original volume has been extended to the east (rear), and various single-story rear additions have been constructed. The building has a concrete foundation, brick exterior with stone trim and detailing, and a flat built-up roof. The temple front in the center of the façade is three bays wide and features stone square engaged

Physical Description: columns, the building's primary entrance within the center bay, "GENOA CENTRAL SCHOOL" carved into the entablature, and a pediment. The primary entrance is a set of double doors within a stone surround, with paired transom lights, and a stone pediment. The remaining bays within the temple front are occupied by multi-light wood fixed windows. Fenestration across the rest of the façade is characterized by eight-over-eight or four-over-four awning windows; the eight-over-eight windows are in sets of three and have stone mullions separating them. A stone cornice with decorative trim surrounds the top of the second story. The rear volumes appear to mimic the main volume, as they have minimally decorated brick exteriors with stone trim and multi-light windows.

Statement of Significance: Genoa Central School is a Neoclassical-style school building located in the Village of Genoa. It was constructed in 1939 on the site of the previous School No. 6 that had stood there since at least 1859. Based on historic aerial imagery, the building appears to have achieved its current form by 1969. It retains its integrity of location, setting, design, materials, association, and feeling. Thus, it appears to meet National Register Criterion A in the area of Education for its association with the twentieth-century development of education in the Town of Genoa, as well as Criterion C in the area of Architecture as an extant example of an early-twentieth-century Neoclassical-style school building with mid-twentieth-century additions. The former school is additionally a contributing resource to the proposed Hamlet of Genoa Historic District.

Statement of The Marsh Farmstead is an active farm that includes an altered

Significance: nineteenth-century farmhouse and various historic and non-historic agricultural buildings. According to historic maps of Cayuga County, the farm remained within the Marsh family from at least 1853 to at least 1904. The property has undergone significant alterations, especially the farmhouse, which has lost most of its historic exterior materials. Although the property retains its agricultural association it does not appear to meet National Register eligibility criteria.

Statement of The cottage at 427 Boscobel Lane appears to have been built in about 1905.

Significance: Development of lakefront cottages on Owasco Lake began in the mid-nineteenth century and appears to have been limited to the major "points" where creeks flow into the lake, depositing sediment and forming small areas of relatively flat shoreline. Early recreational development along the lake was concentrated along the west shore, which was easily accessible via a railroad. Many nineteenth- and early-twentieth-century cottages on the lake have been substantially altered through enclosure of porches and replacement of siding and windows. The cottage at 427 Boscobel Lane is one of the few nineteenth- and early-twentieth-century lakefront cottages on Owasco Lake which retains sufficient integrity of materials and design to convey its significance under National Register Criterion C in the area of Architecture, as a representative example of a nineteenth-century lakefront cottage.

Physical Description: Tudor Revival-style dwelling with complex massing, steeply pitched gable roofs with gabled dormers, turrets with conical roofs, and three massive brick chimneys. The building is clad in vertical board and clapboard siding, and has two large porches and an entry set within a large Tudor arch. Many windows are non-historic, although numerous original leaded casement sash remain. Primary interior spaces survive with little alteration, including the living room with an elaborate fireplace surround, the library with paneled walls overlooking the lake, and the curved main staircase. South of Galilee is the two-story, rustic-style Lakeside Chapel completed in 1953. It has a gable roof, modest tower and steeple, and wood siding. North of Galilee is Bethany, a 1962 Modern retreat center consisting of two octagonal "pods" containing sleeping rooms, joined by a central octagonal pod with a meeting space. West of Galilee is Emmaus Commons, a former two-story residence heavily remodeled in the early 2000s as a dining hall with additional meeting space. West of this grouping of buildings are the mid-twentieth-century wood-frame and wood-clad Wesley Lodge; the 1965 wood-frame and wood-clad Capernaum Lodge; the 1963 Mount Tabor group of four cabins and a rustic lodge; and additional late-twentieth-century residential and support buildings. Site features include a large parking lot, dock, and outdoor chapel. A dam built prior to 1918 to provide hydroelectric power to the site is located just southeast of the gatehouse.

Statement of Casowasco was begun in the late nineteenth century as the 73-acre

Statement of a former farmstead, it then consisted of three residences, a boathouse, and Significance: a barn. The name Casowasco was given to the property, combining "Case" with "Owasco". The building known now as Galilee was completed in 1896 as the Case family's primary residence on the site. Willard Case conducted research into electrical generation and battery storage, and built a private hydroelectric dam at Casowasco. Theodore Case developed the first commercially successful technology for pairing sound with motion picture film in the 1920s, and co-founded Fox-Case Corporation. The Cases conducted experiments at their home laboratory in Auburn as well as at Casowasco. Following Theodore Case's death in 1944, his wife, Alice Gertrude Eldred Case (Gertrude; 1901-1977), sold Casowasco in 1946 for a fraction of its value to the United Methodist Church for use in youth ministry. The property was then transformed into the year-round retreat center and summer camp that is still operating today. The gatehouse, dam, Galilee, and the heavily-altered Emmaus Commons are the only Case-era structures that survive. The remaining primary buildings on the property - Bethany, Lakeside Chapel, Wesley Lodge, Capernaum Lodge, and Mount Tabor - were all constructed in the 1950s and 1960s to provide residential and meeting space for the summer camp and retreat center. These buildings are evocative of mid-twentieth-century summer camp design in their use of rustic wood cladding, low rooflines, and extensive porches. While Casowasco as a whole has been significantly altered from the period of its use by the Case Family (c. 1890-1946), Galilee retains integrity of location, design, materials, feeling, and association from this period and appears to meet National Register Criterion B for its association with the Case family. The property as a whole retains integrity of location, setting, design, materials, feeling, and association, and therefore appears to meet Criterion A in the areas of Entertainment/Recreation and Social History as a mid-twentieth century summer camp and retreat center.

Statement of Significance: The Merrifield Cobblestone House was reportedly constructed in 1842 by Ozam Merrifield. It was part of a farmstead of 10 acres (as of 1850) producing potatoes and orchard fruit. The house's form, massing, and details are typical of Greek Revival domestic architecture in New York State. It retains integrity of location, setting, design, materials, feeling, and association, and meets the registration requirements set forth in the Cobblestone Architecture of New York State multiple property documentation form. The Merrifield Cobblestone House therefore meets National Register Criterion C in the area of Architecture as an example of cobblestone residential architecture and as a notable example of Greek Revival architecture in Cayuga County.

Statement of Significance: The cottage at 463 Fire Lane 23 appears to have been built in about 1900 and is among the grandest of the surviving late-nineteenth- and early-twentieth-century cottages on Owasco Lake. Development of lakefront cottages on Owasco Lake began in the mid-nineteenth century and appears to have been limited to the major "points" where creeks flow into the lake, depositing sediment and forming small areas of relatively flat shoreline. Early recreational development along the lake was concentrated along the west shore, which was easily accessible via a railroad. Many nineteenth- and early-twentieth-century cottages on the lake have been substantially altered through enclosure of porches and replacement of siding and windows. The cottage at 463 Fire Lane 23 is one of the few nineteenth or early-twentieth-century lakefront cottages on Owasco Lake which retains sufficient integrity of materials and design to convey its significance under National Register Criterion C in the area of Architecture, as a notable example of a late- nineteenth- or early-twentieth-century Shingle-style cottage on Owasco Lake.

Statement of Significance: The Doran Cottage was constructed between 1875 and 1904, and was located along the Southern Central Railroad which enabled the development of lakefront vacation homes in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. The railroad ceased operation in the mid-twentieth century. The cottage is typical of late nineteenth or early twentieth century lakefront cottages in the Finger Lakes region, with simple massing, wood cladding, rustic plank storm shutters, and extensive porches oriented for lake views. The small boathouse is also typical for a lake cottage of this period. Together, the cottage and boathouse retain integrity of location, setting, design, materials, feeling, and association, and appear to meet National Register Criterion C in the area of Architecture as an intact example of a late-nineteenth- or early-twentieth-century lakefront vacation property.

Statement of The cottage at 478 Glenwod Lane appears to have been built in about 1890.

Significance: Development of lakefront cottages on Owasco Lake began in the mid-nineteenth century and appears to have been limited to the major "points" where creeks flow into the lake, depositing sediment and forming small areas of relatively flat shoreline. Early recreational development along the lake was concentrated along the west shore, which was easily accessible via a railroad. Many nineteenth- and early-twentieth-century cottages on the lake have been substantially altered through enclosure of porches and replacement of siding and windows. The cottage at 478 Glenwood Lane is one of the few nineteenth-century lakefront cottages on Owasco Lake which retains sufficient integrity of materials and design to convey its significance under National Register Criterion C in the area of Architecture, as a representative example of a nineteenth-century cottage on Owasco Lake.

Statement of Significance: The northwest corner of Burns Road and Long Hill Road was the site of a hotel in the mid-nineteenth century, which appears to have stood until the 1870s, based on historic mapping. The 1904 New Century Atlas of Cayuga County depicts School No. 8 on the site; however, this appears to be a mapping error since the school is depicted north of 3259 Long Hill Road on earlier and later maps. Based on its scale, utilitarian form, and simple materials, the building at 3259 Long Hill Road appears to have been constructed as a manufacturing building in about 1900. Further research may yield additional information about its historic use. The building retains integrity of location, setting, design, and materials, and appears to meet National Register Criterion C in the area of Architecture as an unusually intact example of an early-twentieth-century rural manufacturing building.

Statement of Significance: The Bennett House was constructed in about 1830, most likely for William Bennett (1779-1855) and Urania Bennett (c.1779-1848). Bennett owned a farmstead (not extant) roughly 1.2 miles north of his home in the hamlet of Stewarts Corners that totaled 650 acres and was valued at $19,500 in 1850, which was very large for a farm of this period in the Town of Venice. According to the Storke 1879 History of Cayuga County, Bennett was an early migrant to the Town of Venice who first settled about a mile north of the hamlet, later residing in the hamlet. The farm's prosperity evidently allowed him to purchase or construct the residence at 3262 Long Hill Road, which was then sited on a village green which extended south to the site of the former Stewarts Corners Baptist Church, along with the store and post office opposite his house (3286 Long Hill Road) and three houses south of the store on the east side of Long Hill Road (none of which are extant). The Bennett House retains integrity of location, setting, design, materials, feeling, and association, and appears to meet National Register Criterion A in the

The farm is identified as the property of the Jackson family in the 1853, 1859, and 1875 maps of Cayuga County, and it had become the property of C. Mulligan by the time of the 1904 map. It is possible that the farmhouse was originally an early-nineteenth-century Federal-style residence that was converted to the Queen Anne style in the late nineteenth century. Beneath the storefront is a course of flat wood trim, and above it, a bracketed cornice extends from the exterior wall and wraps around to cover the east bay of the north elevation, which features a large plate glass window with trim beneath and a transom board above. The north bay of the façade's second story has a bay window with wood paneling, decorative trim, bracketed cornice, and flat roof. Fenestration along the rest of the second story of the building is characterized by one-over-one double-hung windows with brick segmental arch headers and brick sills. The rear elevation's first story has two tripartite windows with wood surrounds, brick segmental arch headers, and brick sills. The rear elevation also has an enclosed wood porch extending from the second story that shares a wall with Sylvan Lodge No.41 to the south. The north entrance has two secondary entrances with segmental arch headers and one boarded-up door opening. A course of brick dentils surrounds the building directly beneath the bracketed cornice.

Statement of Significance: The Italianate commercial building at 161 Main Street is identified in the 1853 map of the Village of Moravia as G. Jewett's store. It currently houses a dining establishment at the first story and residences at the second story, thus retaining its original functions. The building also retains its integrity of location, setting, design, materials, association, and feeling. Thus, it appears to meet National Register Criterion C in the area of Architecture as an extant example of an Italianate-style commercial building in the Village of Moravia.

Statement of Significance: The Williams Farmhouse is an early-nineteenth-century residence that appears to have been originally constructed in the Federal style and later remodeled in the Italianate style. The 1853 map of the Town of Venice identifies M. Williams as the owner. However, by the time of the 1859 map, the property belonged to Volney Lester and continued to remain in the Lester family at least until 1904, when the property was identified as part of a farmstead identified as "Lestershire." It is possible that the Lester family added the Italianate features to the residence soon after they acquired it between 1853 and 1859. Based on these maps, the Lester family was prominent in Venice's agricultural economy. The residence has since been subdivided from the agricultural land around it, but it retains its integrity of location, setting, design, materials, and feeling. Thus, it appears to meet National Register Criterion C in the area of Architecture as a representative example of an early-nineteenth-century Federal-style farmhouse that was converted to the Italianate style in the mid-nineteenth century.

Statement of Significance: Eight Square Schoolhouse No. 16 is a mid-nineteenth-century former schoolhouse. It is identified as the schoolhouse for School District No. 16 in the 1853 and 1859 maps of the Town of Venice, and School District No. 7 in the 1875 and 1904 maps. According to a previous building-structure inventory form, Roger Conklin, whose family was locally prominent in agriculture, became the owner of the property in 1941 when Genoa Central School consolidated. It has since been renovated and appears to remain empty. Although the building is no longer a schoolhouse, it retains its integrity of location, setting, design, association, and feeling. Therefore, the schoolhouse appears to meet National Register Criterion A in the area of Education for its association with the development of public education in the Town of Venice, as well as Criterion C in the area of Architecture as an example of both a nineteenth-century one-room schoolhouse and an octagonal building.

Statement of Significance: East Venice Cemetery was established as early as the late eighteenth century. It contains the burials of some of the town's earliest non-Native settlers and remains an active burial ground. The burial markers throughout the cemetery represent a remarkably wide range of sizes, styles, and levels of ornamentation common throughout the nineteenth, twentieth, and twenty-first centuries. There are simple rectangular or round-arched tablets, obelisks and columns of marble and of granite, variously shaped monuments, and engraved symbols and motifs that are characteristic of time of their respective marker. Thus, the cemetery appears to meet National Register Criterion A in the area of Exploration/Settlement for its association with the early history of the Town of Venice, as well as Criterion C in the area of Art for its notable array of burial marker designs and motifs from the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.
