(r) "regulated toxic substance": a substance on a list of regulated toxic substances promulgated pursuant to 42 U.S.C. section 7412 (r).

(s) "responsible party": an owner, operator, manager, or corporate officer of the person who owns, leases or operates a facility, provided that if such facility is leased, the responsible party shall be the lessee of the facility or his or her representative.

(t) "risk management plan": a plan filed by a responsible party with the commissioner pursuant to section 24-718 of this chapter.

(u) "special health hazard list": a list of hazardous substances that the commissioner may develop through regulation which would consist of substances that have been proven to be carcinogenic, mutagenic or teratogenic, as established by at least one study conducted in accordance with established scientific principles, and thereby pose a special hazard to health and safety.

(v) "treatment": any method, technique, or process, including neutralization, designed to change the physical, chemical, or biological character or composition of any hazardous substance so as to neutralize such substance or so as to render such substance nonhazardous, safe to transport, amendable to recovery, amendable to storage, or reduced in volume. Such term includes any activity or processing designed to change the physical form or chemical composition of a hazardous substance so as to render it nonhazardous.

CHAPTER 7*15 COMMUNITY RIGHT-TO-KNOW LAW

The commissioner by regulation shall develop a list of hazardous substances, complying with the requirements of section 24-702(j) of this chapter, within six months from enactment of this section provided that if the commissioner determines that any substance on the required base list, as established by section 24-702(j) of this chapter, should not be placed on the final promulgated list, then the commissioner shall submit a written statement to the council indicating the reason why an amendment is necessary, at least sixty days before the date the list is to take effect. The council may within thirty days following receipt of the commissioner's statement requesting an amendment either: (i) approve or disapprove such amendment or (ii) determine that an additional ten days is needed to study such amendment by the adoption of an appropriate resolution. Upon approval by the council, such amendment shall take effect immediately. If the council disapproves such amendment, the commissioner shall not be precluded from resubmitting such amendment to the council at a later date. If the council does not approve or disapprove such amendment within such thirty day period, such amendment shall take effect on the thirty-first day after submission to the council unless the council had determined by resolution that an additional ten days is needed to study such amendment, in which case, the amendment shall take effect on the forty-first day after such submission to the council unless the council has approved or disapproved such amendment prior to such forty-first day. Except for the substances contained on the special health hazard list developed pursuant to the requirements of section 24-704 of this chapter, any substance contained on the hazardous substance list shall be reported to the commissioner, if such hazardous substance has been present at a facility in an amount which exceeds five hundred pounds. For the reporting period ending on March first, nineteen hundred eighty-nine, any mixture present in a facility in an amount which exceeds five hundred pounds, shall be reported if it contains in a concentration of one percent or more any hazardous substance listed on the New Jersey Special Health Hazards List, a subcategory of the New Jersey Right-to-Know Hazardous Substance List (New Jersey Administrative Code, stat. 34:5A-1 et seq.) as in effect in December, nineteen hundred eighty-seven. For the reporting period ending March first, nineteen hundred ninety, any mixture present in a facility shall be reported in an amount which exceeds five hundred pounds if it contains in a concentration of one tenth of one percent or more of any such hazardous substance. For the reporting period ending on March first, nineteen hundred ninety-one, the commissioner shall by regulation establish a threshold reporting quantity for each hazardous substance and hazardous substances in mixture that are included on the New Jersey Special Health Hazards List shall be reported in the same concentration as required in the previous year. If the commissioner fails to set a specific threshold reporting quantity by March first, nineteen hundred ninety-one, then each of the hazardous substances without a specific threshold reporting quantity shall be reported to the commissioner if ten or more pounds are present at a facility.

(5) the chemical name or the common name of each hazardous substance present at the facility as provided on the material safety data sheet and the CAS indentification*16 number for each hazardous substance;

(6) an estimate, in ranges of the maximum amount and average daily amount, of the number of days located at the facility, and the specific location of each hazardous substance present at the facility at any time during the preceding calendar year;

(7) a brief description of the manner of storage of each hazardous substance present at the facility; and

(8) an indication of whether the responsible party elects to withhold location information of a specific hazardous substance from disclosure to the public pursuant to subdivision (b) of this section.

(b) A person submitting information for a facility pursuant to this chapter may request the commissioner to withhold from disclosure to the public the location of any specific hazardous substance required to be reported on a facility inventory form.

(a) A responsible party of a facility shall file a completed facility inventory form for such facility with the department for each substance on the hazardous substance list or the special health hazard list present within a facility that has been present in the preceding calendar year in a quantity which exceeds the threshold reporting quantity established under section 24-703 of this chapter, on or before March first of each year, beginning in nineteen hundred eighty-nine. A responsible party of a facility shall also be required to file with the department a facility inventory update, on a form approved by the department through regulation, if a previously unreported hazardous substance is added at a facility or if an already reported quantity of a hazardous substance increases by twenty-five percent or more, within thirty days of the occurrence of such event.

(b) A responsible party of a facility shall also be required to file a completed material safety data sheet for each hazardous substance at the facility with the department and with the fire department on or before March first of each year, beginning in nineteen hundred eighty-nine.

(c) A responsible party shall make copies of all information filed with the department pursuant to this section available at the facility to emergency response personnel undertaking response measures at such facility.

(d) On or before December thirty-first, nineteen hundred ninety-three, the commissioner shall by rule establish a schedule of fees that shall be paid upon the filing of the facility inventory form required by this chapter. NOTE

1. Provisions of L.L. 54/1993 § 1:

Section 1. Legislative findings. The Council finds that filing fees for facilities submitting facility inventory forms to the city's department of environmental protection are necessary to create revenue for funding of the department's "community right-to-know program". That program, established pursuant to local law number 26 for the year 1988, is currently supported by tax levy funds. Such fees, based upon the amount of hazardous substances present, number of different hazardous substances present and type of hazardous substances present, will defray the administrative costs of the department's right-to-know program, and will allow for restoration of the program's critically needed inspectional staff.

§ 24-709 Trade Secrets.

(a) Any person required under section 24-706 to submit information to the department may withhold from such submittal the specific chemical indentity of a hazardous substance, including the chemical name and other specific identification, if such information has been withheld as a trade secret pursuant to section three hundred twenty-two of the emergency planning and community right-to-know act of nineteen hundred eighty-six (42 U.S.C. section 11001, et seq.), article forty-eight of the public health law or article twenty-eight of the labor law. No person shall be entitled to withhold such trade secret information from such submittal unless such person demonstrates to the satisfaction of the commissioner that such information has been so determined to be a trade secret and that such person has taken reasonable measures to protect the confidentiality of such information and intends to continue to take such measures. The commissioner may grant a temporary extension of not more than thirty days from the reporting requirements of section 24-706 for the purpose of allowing such person to make such demonstration.

(b) With respect to any information not withheld as a trade secret in the manner described by subdivision (a) of this section, the commissioner may withhold from disclosure, pursuant to article six of the public officers law, (i) specific chemical identities, including chemical names and other specific information, which are trade secrets which if disclosed would cause substantial injury to the competitive position of a commercial enterprise or (ii) methods or processes described in plans filed pursuant to section 24-718 of this chapter entitled to protection as trade secrets. The commissioner shall promulgate by rule a procedure for implementing the provisions of this subdivision. The subdivision shall not be construed to affect, limit or modify in any manner the reporting requirements of section 24-706.

(c) 1. Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, in a response to an emergency caused by the presence or release of a hazardous substance, the commissioner shall make trade secret information about such hazardous substance available, upon request, to emergency response personnel responding to such an emergency.

2. Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, for the purpose of medical diagnosis or treatment of an individual exposed to a hazardous substance, where the commissioner has withheld any information from disclosure pursuant to subdivision (b) of this section, the person submitting such information to the department shall upon request disclose such information to medical personnel, including doctors and nurses, treating such an individual.

(d) Except as is necessary for the internal administration of the department or as is otherwise provided by subdivision (c) of this section, or by federal, state or local law, no person shall disclose to any other person any information, record or portions thereof received by the department pursuant to this chapter and determined by the commissioner to be a trade secret pursuant to subdivision (b) of this section. Each person having access to such information or records, including persons receiving such information or records pursuant to subdivision (c) of this section, shall, in a written confidentiality agreement with the person submitting such information to the department, agree that he or she will not use the information, record or portion thereof for any purpose other than internal administration of the department, response to an emergency caused by the presence or release of a hazardous substance, or medical diagnosis or treatment. In the case of a medical emergency, a written confidentiality agreement is not required as a precondition of disclosure pursuant to subdivision (c) of this section, but shall be entered into by the person receiving the information as soon as circumstances permit.

(e) Nothing in this section shall be constructed to affect, limit or modify in any manner the disclosure of any information to a health professional to the extent such disclosure is required or authorized pursuant to section three hundred twenty-three of the emergency planning and community right-to-know act of nineteen hundred eighty-six (42 U.S.C. section 11001, et seq.).

§ 24-711 Labeling requirements.

Within thirty days after a facility inventory form is first required to be filed for a facility, all hazardous substances present at such facility shall be clearly marked with a label showing the chemical name and CAS identification number of the hazardous substance. The information set forth on the label shall be in accordance with a recognized hazardous substances labeling system, accepted by the commissioner. In the case of a substance protected under the "trade secrets" provision contained in section 24-709 of this chapter, the label should bear the specific code assigned by the commissioner for such substance.

§ 24-712 Inspections of a facility.

(a) The department, upon providing prior notice, shall have the authority to inspect any facility during normal business hours. However, whenever there is a reason to believe that a facility is in violation of the requirements of this chapter, the department shall be authorized to inspect the facility without prior notice. Any reasonable party who refuses to allow an authorized employee or representative of the department to conduct an inspection of the facility after appropriate credentials are presented shall be in violation of this chapter and shall be subject to the penalties provided in subdivision c of section 24-713 of this chapter.

(b) Within twenty business days of receipt of a written complaint in such form as may be prescribed by the commissioner, alleging a violation of any of the provisions of this chapter, the department shall investigate such complaint and shall inform the complainant of the results of such investigation.

§ 24-713 Violations.

(a) Any person who knowingly or recklessly makes any false statement, representation or certification on a facility inventory form, risk management plan, or any other document filed with the department, or on any label required, pursuant to this chapter, shall, upon conviction, be subject to a fine of not more than two thousand dollars, or imprisonment of up to one year, or both. In addition to its application to any other person, the penalty provided for in this subdivision shall be deemed a special fine for a corporation within the meaning of section 80.10 of the penal law of the state of New York.

(b) Any person who violates the requirements of sections 24-706, 24-711 or 24-718 of this chapter shall be liable for a civil penalty, as follows: (1) for a first violation, in an amount of not less than five hundred nor more than five thousand dollars; (2) for a second violation, in an amount of not less than three thousand five hundred nor more than ten thousand dollars; and (3) for each subsequent violation, in an amount of not less than seven thousand five hundred nor more than twenty thousand dollars. For purposes of this section, the second and any subsequent violation shall only occur after notice of the first violation has been properly served and an opportunity to cure said violation has been provided to the violator, provided that such opportunity to cure shall not exceed thirty days. For purposes of this section, a second or subsequent violation shall occur where a person violates section 24-706, 24-711 or 24-718 of this chapter within five years of having been found to have violated this chapter. Such penalties may be recovered in a civil action brought in the name of the commissioner or in a proceeding before the environmental control board. In determining the civil penalty, the hearing officer or judge shall consider any evidence presented by the defendant showing a good faith effort to comply with relevant requirements of this chapter, the nature and seriousness of the defendant's violation of the chapter, whether the violation was voluntarily disclosed, previous violations, if any, of this chapter and any other evidence found to be relevant.

(c) Any person who without justification refuses to allow an inspection of a facility pursuant to section 24-712 of this chapter shall be subject to a civil penalty, returnable before the environmental control board or in civil court in the name of the commissioner, in an amount not to exceed twenty thousand dollars.

§ 24-714 Private right of action.

(a) Except as provided in subdivision (c) of this section, any person may commence an action in a court of competent jurisdiction on his or her own behalf against a responsible party of a facility for failure to file any information required to be filed with the department or fire department pursuant to section 24-706 of this chapter. Such action shall be brought in the county in which the alleged violation occurred or where the complainant resides. The court may impose the civil penalty provided for violation of this chapter.

(b) No action may be commenced under subdivision (a) of this section prior to sixty days after the plaintiff has given notice of the alleged violation to the commissioner and the alleged violator. Notice required under this subdivision shall be given in such manner as may be prescribed by the commissioner.

(c) No action may be commenced under subdivision (a) if the commissioner has commenced and is diligently pursuing an administrative or civil action concerning the facility which would be the subject of such action to enforce the reporting requirements of this chapter or to impose any civil penalty for violation of such reporting requirements.

(d) The court, in issuing any final order in any section brought pursuant to this section, may award costs of litigation, including reasonable attorney's and expert witness fees, to the prevailing party whenever the court determines such an award is appropriate.

(e) In any action brought pursuant to this section, the commissioner, may intervene as a matter of right.

Each member shall hold office for a three year term or until such time as the board shall cease to exist or until such member shall resign or is removed from office for good cause shown. Each member appointed shall have a working knowledge of emergency response procedures or in managing hazardous substances.

(c) Any vacancy on the board shall be filled by appointment pursuant to subdivision b of this section.

(d) The members of the board shall serve without compensation for their services as board members except that each shall be allowed reimbursement for the necessary and actual expenses which such member shall incur in the performance of his or her duties under this section.

(e) The board shall be authorized and responsible to: (1) serve as a working forum for the exchange of views, concerns, ideas, information and recommendations relating to the management of hazardous substances and the planning of emergency response measures; (2) review existing hazardous substances emergency response training programs; (3) review existing requirements for handling extremely hazardous substances emergency response situations as established under the emergency planning and community right-to-know act of nineteen hundred eighty-six; (4) review the annual summary of incident reports as required pursuant to section 24-715 of this chapter; and (5) assist the commissioner in the development, review and revision of the hazardous substance list and corresponding threshold levels where appro- priate.

(f) The board shall meet at least four times per year at least once every quarter, keep a record of its deliberations and determine its own rules of procedure.

§ 24-718 Risk management plan.

(a) On or before March first of each year beginning in nineteen hundred ninety-five, a responsible party of a facility where an extremely hazardous substance or a regulated toxic substance is present in an amount that equals or exceeds the threshold planning quantities established by the United States environmental protection agency in regulations promulgated pursuant to applicable law, shall file with the commissioner a risk management plan in accordance with the provisions of this section. Where a substance is classified as both an extremely hazardous substance and a regulated toxic substance and different threshold planning quantities have been established, the lower threshold planning quantity shall apply in determining whether such substance is present at a facility in an amount that equals or exceeds the threshold planning quantities.

(b) Review of risk management plans. (1) Within thirty days after receipt of a risk management plan, the commissioner shall determine whether such plan is complete. If the commissioner determines that the plan is incomplete, then he or she shall notify the responsible party that the plan is incomplete and identify in what respect the plan is incomplete. Within fifteen days after such notification, the responsible party shall file a revised plan consistent with the commissioner's notification. Within fifteen days after receipt of such revised plan, the commissioner shall determine whether the revised plan is complete.

(2) Within ninety days after the commissioner's determination that the responsible party has filed a complete plan, the commissioner shall approve or make modifications to such plan and shall notify the responsible party filing such plan in writing of his or her approval or modifications. The commissioner shall, within a reasonable period of time prior to approving or making modifications to such plan, submit such plan to the commissioner of the fire department and the commissioner of the fire department may recommend modifications to such plan to the commissioner.

(3) If the commissioner makes modifications to the responsible party's risk management plan, the responsible party shall incorporate such modifications into its risk management plan, provided, however, that the responsible party may, within forty-five days after receipt of such modifications, submit alternative modifications to the commissioner or explain why the commissioner's modifications are not necessary. The commissioner shall within forty-five days review the alternative modifications or explanation and shall: (i) require the responsible party to incorporate, by a date certain not to exceed forty-five days, either the commissioner's modifications, the alternative modifications or a combination of such modifications into its risk management plan, (ii) approve the unmodified plan or (iii) disapprove the plan.

(4) The commissioner shall provide a copy of each approved risk management plan to the emergency response agencies and to other governmental entities that may request an approved plan.

(c) On or before July first, nineteen hundred ninety-four, the commissioner, in consultation with the emergency response agencies, shall by rule establish the contents of a risk management plan, which shall be designed to prevent the accidental release and to minimize the consequences of any such release of any extremely hazardous or regulated toxic substance. The plan shall include but need not be limited to: (1) a site plan; (2) a safety review of design for new and existing equipment and processes; (3) an emergency response program, including an emergency response plan, emergency response training, and emergency response exercises; (4) standard operating procedures; (5) a preventive maintenance program for equipment; (6) a training program for equipment operators, including duration and type of training, and retraining; (7) accident investigation procedures; and (8) a risk assessment program, including a hazard analysis and a consideration of the use of alternate equipment and alternate substances.

(d) Preparation of risk management plan. The risk management plan shall be prepared by one or more of the following persons: an industrial hygientist certified by the American Board of Industrial Hygienists, a professional engineer licensed pursuant to section 7206 of the New York state education law, a safety professional certified by the Board of Certified Safety Professionals, or other qualified person authorized by rule of the commissioner. A plan submitted pursuant to this section shall contain proof satisfactory to the commissioner of the qualifications of the person who prepared such plan.

(e) The risk management plan shall be made available to department personnel at the time of an inspection of a facility for which a plan is required pursuant to subdivision (a) of this section.

(f) On or before November first, nineteen hundred ninety-four, the commissioner, in consultation with emergency response agencies, shall make reasonable efforts to provide information to responsible parties regarding the requirements of this section and the rules promulgated hereunder.

Section added L.L. 92/1993 § 8, eff. Dec. 1, 1993. (See Note 1)

NOTE

1. Provisions of L.L. 92/1993 § 1:

Section 1. Legislative findings. The council finds that a substance listed by the United States environmental protection agency as "extremely hazardous" pursuant to 42 U.S.C. section 11002(a) of the emergency planning and community right-to-know act or as a "regulated toxic substance" pursuant to 42 U.S.C. section 7412 (r) of the clean air act, may pose a greater risk to human health and the environment than other hazardous substances.

The council further finds that an entity defined as a "responsible party" pursuant to the city's community right-to-know law, local law number 26 for the year 1988, as amended, has an obligation to identify hazards which may result from releases of hazardous substances using appropriate hazard assessment techniques, to design and maintain a safe facility taking such steps as are necessary to prevent releases, and to minimize the consequences of releases that do

To limit the potential for exposure to extremely hazardous substances and regulated toxic substances, and to minimize the adverse effects should exposure occur through fire, explosion, spill or other accidental release, the council determines that it is appropriate for facilities storing such substances to prepare a risk management plan that will limit the potential for release of such substances and provide for a contingency plan for responding to an accidental release through fire, explosion, spill or other accidental release.

§ 24-803 Reduction of greenhouse gas emissions that contribute to global warming.

a. (1) Reduction of emissions citywide. There shall be, at minimum, a thirty percent reduction in citywide emissions by calendar year 2030, relative to such emissions for the base year for citywide emissions.

(2) The emissions reduction required by paragraph one of this subdivision shall be achieved through the applicable policies, programs and actions included in PlaNYC, and any additional policies, programs and actions to reduce greenhouse gas emissions that contribute to global warming. If the office determines that such emissions reduction is not feasible despite the best efforts of city government, such office shall report such findings and make recommendations with respect to policies, programs and actions that may be undertaken to achieve such reductions.

b. Reduction of emissions from city government operations. (1) There shall be, at minimum, a thirty percent reduction in city government emissions by calendar year 2017, relative to such emissions for the base year for city government emissions.

(2) The emissions reduction required by paragraph one of this subdivision shall be achieved through the applicable policies, programs and actions included in PlaNYC, and any additional policies, programs and actions to reduce greenhouse gas emissions that contribute to global warming. If the office determines that such emissions reduction is not feasible despite the best efforts of city government, such office shall report such findings and make recommendations with respect to policies, programs and actions that may be undertaken to achieve such reductions.

c. Carbon dioxide equivalent emission inventories. (1) No later than September 17, 2008, and no later than every September 17 thereafter, the office shall complete and post on its website an inventory and analysis of citywide emissions measured in carbon dioxide equivalent for the previous calendar year, and shall calculate the percentage change in citywide emissions measured in carbon dioxide equivalent for such calendar year, relative to such emissions for the base year for citywide emissions.

(2) No later than September 17, 2008, and no later than every September 17 thereafter, the office shall complete and post on its website an inventory and analysis of city government emissions measured in carbon dioxide equivalent for the fiscal year ending in the previous calendar year, and shall calculate the percentage change in city government emissions measured in carbon dioxide equivalent for such calendar year, relative to such emissions for the base year for city government emissions.

d. Voluntary global warming emissions reduction program. The effort to reduce citywide emissions set forth in subdivision a of this section shall include, but not be limited to, voluntary programs developed and implemented no later than March 1, 2009, that encourage private entities operating within the city of New York to commit to reducing their own greenhouse gas emissions measured in carbon dioxide equivalent to help facilitate the citywide emissions reduction effort.

§ 25-110 City planning commission to regulate the height and bulk of buildings, areas of yards, courts and open spaces and density of population.

a. The city planning commission, subject to the provisions of sections one hundred ninety-seven-c, two hundred and two hundred one of the charter, where applicable, shall have power to regulate and limit the height and bulk of buildings, to regulate and determine the area of yards, courts and other open spaces and to regulate density of population. The commission, subject to the same limitations, may divide the city into districts of such number, shape and area as it may deem best suited to carry out such purposes.

b. The regulations as to height and bulk of buildings, the area of yards, courts and other open spaces and density of population shall be uniform for each class of buildings throughout each district. The regulation in one or more districts may differ from those in other districts. Such regulations shall be designed to secure safety from fire and other dangers and to promote the public health and welfare, including, so far as conditions may permit, provisions for adequate light, air and convenience of access.

c. The commission shall pay reasonable regard to the character of buildings erected in each district, the value of the land and the use to which it may be put, to the end that such regulations may promote public health, safety and welfare and the most desirable use for which the land of each district may be adapted and may tend to conserve the value of the buildings and may enhance the value of land throughout the city.

§ 25-111 City planning commission to regulate location of trades and industries and of buildings designed for specific uses.

a. The city planning commission, subject to the provisions of sections one hundred ninety-seven-c, two hundred and two hundred one of the charter, where applicable, may regulate and restrict the location of trades and industries and the location of buildings designed for specific uses, and may divide the city into districts of such number, shape and area as it may deem best suited to carry out such purposes.

b. For each such district, regulations may be imposed designating the trades and industries that shall be excluded or subjected to special regulations and designating the uses for which buildings may not be erected or altered. Such regulations shall be designed to promote the public health, safety and general welfare.

c. The commission shall give reasonable consideration, among other things, to the character of the district, its peculiar suitability for particular uses, the conservation of property values, and the direction of building development in accord with a well-considered plan.

HISTORICAL NOTE

Section added chap 907/1985 § 1

DERIVATION

Formerly § 200-2.0 added chap 929/1937 § 1

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. The Planning Commission has the power to regulate the uses of buildings after their erection even though the building is not used for trade or industry. Thus, a resolution was valid which required that doctor's offices in a multiple dwelling in a residence district must be on the street floor or the floor immediately above if there is access to such offices from other than a public hall. An information charging a landlord with violating such resolution by leasing a 12th-floor apartment to a doctor was proper.-People v. 960 Park Avenue Corp., 286 App. Div. 493, 145 N.Y.S. 2d 190 [1955], aff'd, 1 N.Y. 2d 771, 153 N.Y.S. 2d 46 [1956].

¶ 2. The fundamental difference between this section and § 201 is that the Commission under § 201 must act on all formal applications for zoning between May 5 and June 5 of each year, and the application must be filed during the preceding month of April of that year. Under this section, there are no limitations as to time. It is not necessary, however, under this section that the idea or suggestion originate with the Commission and a resolution adopted on an informal application made at a time not specified in § 201 was proper and valid.-Fieldston Garden Apartments, Inc. v. City of New York, 7 Misc. 2d 147, 145 N.Y.S. 2d 907 [1955], aff'd, 3 A.D. 2d 493, 145 N.Y.S. 2d 402 [1957].

¶ 3. The power to regulate the density of population has not been delegated to the Planning Commission and since the power is in derogation of the common law, its inclusion may not be applied. Thus, the Planning Commission was not vested with power to rezone on the basis of density of population so as to restrict a certain area to single family dwellings.-Matter of Hall (Leonard), 174 Misc. 454, 21 N.Y.S. 2d 43 [1940].

¶ 4. The Commissioner of Licenses rejected the application of a junk dealer at a particular location because of the harm the junk business might work on the residential area involved. Held: in the light of the history and purpose of the regulation of junk dealers, it is obvious that a license is required in order to eliminate or at least curtail the readily available market for stolen property which this business affords. The clear implication, therefore, is that delegated discretion was intended, in this instance, to be limited to this specific subject, i.e., to the prevention of the distribution of stolen goods. Therefore, the refusal of the Commissioner to grant the license because of the mere objections of the residents (as to possible adverse effect upon the area) was arbitrary and in excess of authority conferred.-Matter of Bologno, 7 N.Y. 2d 155, 196 N.Y.S. 2d 90, 164 N.E. 2d 389 [1959].

¶ 5. The City Planning Commission is the agency charged with deciding whether a particular enterprise is suited to the location involved and the Department of Consumer Affairs had no appropriate statutory authority to require petitioner to limit its hours of operation, increase its security personnel, and erect an enclosure as a condition for renewal of petitioner's license to conduct an amusement arcade business.-While You Wait Photo Corp. v. Dept. of Consumer Affairs of City of N.Y., 87 App. Div. 2d 46 [1982].

a. No person, association or corporation shall take by deed, devise or otherwise any land in the county of Queens for cemetery purposes, nor set apart or use any ground for cemetery purposes in such county. Existing religious corporations, cemetery associations and corporations, however, shall have the right to use for cemetery purposes, land lawfully taken by recorded deed, or devise and set apart or used for cemetery purposes or for the purposes of the convenient transaction of their general business, prior to July seventeenth, nineteen hundred forty-seven.

b. The provisions of subdivision a of this section shall not in any manner prevent an incorporated religious society organized under the laws of the state of New York prior to the year eighteen hundred twenty-five now owning cemetery land in Queens county from acquiring and using land of not more than ten acres contiguous to said cemetery land as and when said additional land in its ownership and use for cemetery purposes has been approved by the city council.

§ 25-113 Filing of subdivision maps and recording of deeds of subdivision property.

a. Every map referred to in section two hundred two of the charter shall be prepared, approved and certified and shall be filed as follows: one copy thereof in the office in which conveyances of real estate are required to be recorded in the county in which the land shown thereon is situated; one copy thereof in the office of the corporation counsel; one copy thereof in the office of the president of the borough in which the land shown on the map is situated; one copy thereof in the office of the secretary of the board of estimate; one copy thereof in the office of the department of city planning; one copy thereof in the office of the city clerk; and, one copy thereof in the office of the department of buildings for the county in which the land shown thereon is situated.

b. The register or county clerk, as the case may be, shall refuse:

1. To receive for filing any such subdivision map unless the commission or the department of buildings has certified that the subdivision does not result in the violation of any applicable zoning laws.

2. To accept for recording any deed or other instrument affecting real property which has a map attached thereto or made a part thereof, unless it shall have endorsed thereon the certification of the secretary of the board of estimate to the effect that the same has been approved pursuant to section two hundred two of the charter and unless the commissioner of the department of buildings has certified that such subdivision does not result in the violation of any applicable zoning laws.

¶ 1. Where two buildings under a common ownership were converted in 1923 into a single dwelling, and ever since were occupied as such with one certificate of occupancy, and since 1933 were classified as a "heretofore erected Class A multiple dwelling," they could not again be transformed into two buildings by a change of the one common ownership into two separate ownerships, particularly since permitting the alteration of one portion of the dwelling would destroy the use to which the other portion was being applied, or compel the owner to comply with all the provisions of the Multiple Dwelling Law relating to buildings erected since 1929 (Admin. Code § 666(6)-2.0; Multiple Dwelling Law §§ 8, 9, 13)-In re 165 West 71st St., Inc. (Murdock), 109 (122) N.Y.L.J. (5-26-43) 2059, Col. 6 F.

CHAPTER 2 BOARD OF STANDARDS AND APPEALS

a. Petition. Any person or persons, jointly or severally aggrieved by any decision of the board may present to the supreme court a petition duly verified, setting forth that such decision is illegal, in whole or in part, specifying the grounds of the illegality. Such petition must be presented to a justice of the supreme court or at a special term of the supreme court within thirty days after the filing of the decision in the office of the board.

b. Order of certiorari. Upon the presentation of such petition, the justice or court may allow an order of certiorari directed to the board to review such decision and shall prescribe therein the time within which a return thereto must be made and served upon the relator's attorney, which shall not be less than ten days and may be extended by the court or a justice thereof. Such order shall be returnable at a special term of the supreme court of the judicial district in which the property affected, or a portion thereof, is situated. The allowance of the order shall not stay proceedings upon the decision appealed from, but the court may on application, on notice to the board and on due cause shown, grant a restraining order.

c. Return to order. The board shall not be required to return the original papers acted upon by it, but it shall be sufficient to return certified or sworn copies thereof or of such portions thereof as may be called for by such order. The return must concisely set forth such other facts as may be pertinent and material to show the grounds of the decisions appealed from and must be verified.

d. Proceedings upon return. If, upon the hearing, it shall appear to the court that testimony is necessary for the proper disposition of the matter, it may take evidence or appoint a referee to take such evidence as it may direct and report the same to the court with his or her findings of fact and conclusions of law, which shall constitute a part of the proceedings upon which the determination of the court shall be made. The court may reverse or affirm, wholly or partly, or may modify the decision brought up for review.

e. Costs. Costs shall not be allowed against the board, unless it shall appear to the court that it acted with gross negligence or in bad faith or with malice in making the decision appealed from.

f. Preferences. All issues in any proceeding under this section shall have preference over all other civil actions and proceedings.

DERIVATION

Formerly § 668e-1.0 added chap 929/1937 § 1

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. Under Administrative Code § 668e-1.0, Special Term in considering the claim of illegality of an assailed ruling is limited to the return or to the return plus such additional proof as it deems necessary, and there is no necessity or authority for the filing of a return by the petitioner. C.P.A., Art. 78, which authorizes a reply, is inapplicable.-Davis Engineering Corp. v. Murdock, 115 (135) N.Y.L.J. (6-11-46) 2314, Col. 2 T.

¶ 2. Manufacturer of oil preheater held entitled to an order directing the Board of Standards and Appeals to take additional proof to determine whether disapproval of petitioner's oil preheater rested on reasonable grounds.-In re Davis Engineering Corp. (Murdock), 116 (2) N.Y.L.J. (7-2-46) 14, Col. 7 M.

¶ 2.1. Where it appeared that the Board of Standards and Appeals desired more evidence from an objectant but thereafter no notice was sent to the latter and the Board granted a variance without obtaining such further evidence, the determination was annulled and the matter remitted for further proof.-Matter of Jewish Community Center (Murdock), 145 (35) N.Y.L.J. (2-21-61) 16, Col. 4 M.

¶ 3. Upon the record presented, Court was not satisfied that the Board of Standards and Appeals properly exercised its discretion in granting the variance, since the reasons referred to in their return and the facts referred to in their determining resolution were referred to as "reasons urged by the applicant" and as what "the applicant contends", and not as findings of the Board, and were, in addition, largely conclusory in form.-In re American Seminary of Bible, Inc., 280 App. Div. 792, 112 N.Y.S. 2d 904 [1952], modifying, 104 N.Y.S. 2d 660 [1951].

¶ 3.1. A resolution granting a variance was improper where it was based upon statements and contentions of the applicant. The Board should have made definite findings of fact of its own.-In re Cutrano (Murdock), 138 (44) N.Y.L.J. (8-30-57) 6, Col. 6 T.

¶ 3.2. Where a determination of the Board of Standards and Appeals listed merely reasons for its action rather than findings of fact, the matter had to be remitted to the Board for the rendition of a determination in proper form.-M.H.C. Realty Corp. v. Murdock, 141 (80) N.Y.L.J. (4-27-59) 15, Col. 1 T.

¶ 3.3. A Board decision denying a variance was remanded where it listed only reasons for its action which did not constitute findings of fact.-In re Steelmaster, Inc. (Murdock), 140 (70) N.Y.L.J. (10-8-58) 14, Col. 3 F.

¶ 4. The Board of Standards and Appeals is not required to make findings in every case but only where it develops that a return to a petition to review is necessary, in which case it is required to state the grounds upon which it is decided. These grounds, or findings, can be based on the evidence taken, or facts stated to be within knowledge of the Board, or conclusions based on facts in which judicial notice can be taken. There was no requirement that they be drawn by any particular persons, and it is sufficient if the verification of the return shows that they were in fact the bases upon which the court reached its decision.-In re 200 East End Avenue Corp. (Bd. of Standards and Appeals), 129 (38) N.Y.L.J. (2-26-53) 638, Col. 4 M.

¶ 5. In cases in which the Board of Zoning Appeals denies variances, as well as cases where it grants variances it must make findings to support its decision.-Bellnord Associated, Inc. v. Murdock, 132 (118) N.Y.L.J. (12-21-54) 9,Col. 6 F.

¶ 5.1. A determination of the Board of Standards and Appeals granting a zoning variance was annulled where it showed no basis for its conclusory findings.-In re Union League Club (Murdock), 141 (74) N.Y.L.J. (4-17-59) 12, Col. 3 M.

¶ 6. A reply was unauthorized in a certiorari proceeding to review determination of Board of Standards and Appeals instituted pursuant to Administrative Code § 668e-1.0.-In re Chapmaid Realty Corp., 119 (7) N.Y.L.J. (1-2-48) 124, Col. 7 T. (6) In view of provision in § 688 of the charter that any decision of the Board might be reviewed by certiorari as provided by law, and provisions of Administrative Code § 668e-1.0, which provides for a petition and return, the provisions of C.P.A. Art. 78 were inapplicable, and petitioner's reply would therefore be struck out as unauthorized.-Aisloff v. Murdock, 81 N.Y.S. 2d 872 [1948].

¶ 7. Where referee was appointed solely to determine whether action of Board of Standards and Appeals in disapproving petitioning manufacturer's appliances was arbitrary, and the referee had found that it was arbitrary, and notwithstanding ample opportunity to do so before the referee and the Court the Board had failed to show that its belated claim that the appliances were a fire hazard had any foundation in fact, the entire matter, including the evidence taken before the referee, would not be remitted to the Board for their further action thereon.-In re Davis Engineering Corp. (Murdock), 117 (113) N.Y.L.J. (5-15-47) 1914, Col. 5 F.

¶ 7.1. Article 78 of the Civil Practice Act applies to certiorari proceedings to review determinations of the Board of Standards and Appeals. Consequently, where a Special Term order remitted to the Board a matter involving a zoning variance for a rehearing in accordance with the views expressed by the court, the order was intermediate and not subject to appeal except by permission of the Special Term.-North American Holding Corp. v. Murdock, 6 A.D. 2d 596, 180 N.Y.S. 2d 436 [1958], aff'd, 6 N.Y. 2d 902, 190 N.Y.S. 2d 708, 160 N.E. 2d 926.

¶ 8. A proceeding against the Board of Standards and Appeals was governed by the special provisions of Administrative Code § 668e, rather than by the general provisions of C.P.A., Art 78. However, the appropriate proceedings under the Administrative Code might be taken upon the present petition, which was timely, inasmuch as if the proceeding were dismissed a new proceeding would be too late under § 688e.-45 Plaza Corp. v. Murdock, 105 (142) N.Y.L.J. (6-19-41) 2756, Col. 7 F.

¶ 8.1. On September 10 aggrieved property owners moved under Art. 78 of the Civil Practice Act to review the determination of the Board of Standards and Appeals concerning a zoning variance, which determination had been published in the Board's bulletin on August 13. On September 17, by stipulation, the order of certiorari was substituted for the moving papers. The petition was sufficient under both Art. 78 and § 668e-1.0 of the Administrative Code, and the papers served on September 10 were timely. The form or label of the documents is immaterial.-Matter of Kohnberg v. Murdock, 4 App. Div. 2d 750, 164 N.Y.S. 2d 870 [1957], rev'g, 4 Misc. 2d 877, 159 N.Y.S. 2d 515 [1956].

¶ 8.2. The 30-day limitation upon the presentation of the petition is exclusive.-Clarizio v. Murdock, 136 (82) N.Y.L.J. (10-26-56) 8, Col. 2 F.

¶ 8.3. Petition to review a determination made by the Board of Standards and Appeals was timely filed within the fair sense of this section where petitioner invoked the jurisdiction of the court by serving the notice of motion and petition on Board within thirty day period although not presented to a Justice of the Supreme Court or at a Special Term of the Supreme Court within thirty days after filing or publication of the decision.-Matter of Bolles-Texas v. Bd. of Standards & Appeals, 53 Misc. 2d 798, 279 N.Y.S. 2d 796 [1967].

¶ 9. Time within which to bring a proceeding under Art. 78, to review a determination by the Board of Standards and Appeals, was governed by Administrative Code § 668e-1.0, limiting the time to 30 days after filing of the decision in the office of the Board, or its publication in the bulletin, and was not governed by C.P.A. § 1286, which provides for a four-month period of limitation. That the action of the Board was attacked as an abuse of discretion and not as illegal, was immaterial.-In re Nathan (Murdock), 62 N.Y.S. 2d 415 [1944].

¶ 10. The thirty-day period within which the applicant for a variance was required to present his petition to the Supreme Court for review of decision of the Board of Standards and Appeals did not begin to run from the time petitioner's attorney received a copy of the Board's bulletin, to which he was a yearly subscriber, but from the time of the filing of the decision in the office of the Board, or its publication in the bulletin.-In re Fleischer (Murdock), 62 N.Y.S. 2d 417 [1946].

¶ 11. Petition to court for review of the decision of the Board of Standards and Appeals denying application for variance was dismissed where the proceeding was not instituted within thirty days after publication of the decision in the Board's bulletin.-Id.

¶ 12. C.P.A. § 1286, providing for a four-month period within which to institute proceedings to review a determination, was not controlling with respect to a petition for review of a decision of the Board of Standards of the City of New York denying an application for a variance.-Id.

¶ 13. That over 30 days had elapsed since publication of the decisions of the Board of Standards and Appeals without an order of certiorari having been signed, was fatally defective to the petitioners.-In re Wermter (Bd. of Standards and Appeals), 124 (88) N.Y.L.J. (11-6-50) 1085, Col. 4 F.

¶ 14. The words "publication in the bulletin," as used in Administrative Code § 668e-1.0, as determining date from which time is to be computed for presenting a petition to review a decision of the Board of Standards and Appeals, cannot reasonably be held to require any more than that the bulletin in which the decision is contained be made available for distribution in order to commence the running of the time limited. The time when the bulletin is received by the party is not determinative.-Hercher v. Murdock, 200 Misc. 275, 105 N.Y.S. 2d 164 [1951].

¶ 15. Where the decision was published on March 18, 1941, an order of certiorari issued on May 8, 1941 was vacated on ground the application therefor was not timely made within requirement of Administrative Code § 668e-1.0 that the order be dated not more than thirty days after publication of the decision.-In re 521 Fifth Ave. Corp. (Murdock), 62 N.Y.S. 2d 414 [1941].

¶ 16. To review a decision of the Board of Standards and Appeals, a duly verified petition must be presented to a Justice of the Supreme Court by the party aggrieved within thirty days after the filing of the decision in the office of the Board or its publication in its bulletin. No discretion is allowed the Court to extend the time for review. The service of a notice of motion on the last day for filing a petition was ineffective and the court did not have jurisdiction.-Matter of Barry, 134 (3) N.Y.L.J. (7-6-55) 4, Col. 5 M.

¶ 17. Service on the Board of Standards and Appeals within the 30 day limitation period of a notice of motion of appeal from a determination of the Board, which notice was returnable before the Court more than 30 days after the date of the determination, was held not to be timely since the law is clear, definite and unambiguous with respect to the procedure and requirements for such review.-In re Barry (Bd. of Standards and Appeals) 134 (3) N.Y.L.J. (7-6-55) 4, Col. 5 M.

¶ 17.1 A proceeding to review and annul a determination of the Board of Standards and Appeals was not untimely where a copy of the petition and a notice of motion was served within the 30-day period after publication of the Board's determination. It made no difference that the petition was not returnable until after the 30-day period expired.-Matter of Satin, 12 App. Div. 2d 526, 208 N.Y.S. 2d 518 [1960].

¶ 18. Purchase money mortgagee of real property affected by action of defendant Board of Standards and Appeals in granting a zoning ordinance, was a party aggrieved and might maintain a proceeding to review the Board's grant of the variance-if not on her own behalf, she was to be deemed to have acted as the agent and with the consent of the holder of the legal title.-Eckerman v. Murdock, 276 App. Div. 927, 94 N.Y.S. 2d 557 [1950], aff'g, 195 Misc. 280, 91 N.Y.S. 2d 637.

¶ 18.1. Democratic District Leader of assembly district embracing the subject area was not a party aggrieved entitled to bring a proceeding for review by certiorari of a determination granting a variance to applicant for construction of an office building which would exceed existing bulk restriction, since there was no showing that he or the people he represented would suffer any special injury.-In re Osborne (Glass), 158 (83) N.Y.L.J. (10-30-67) 19, Col. 7 F.

¶ 19. Where on September 9 the City Planning Commission filed with the Board of Estimate a resolution which would forbid construction of six-story multiple dwellings in the area in question but such zoning change did not become effective until October 10, and on October 5 a permit was issued to respondent authorizing the building of such a multiple dwelling in that locality, application of owners of residential homes in the vicinity to enjoin construction of the dwelling pendente lite, was denied, in view of the controverted matters of fact and the complicated questions of law. However, since respondent conceded that its rights were to be resolved on basis of the status of things as at the time of the effective date of the zoning change, it might be held that it had knowingly proceeded thereafter at its peril. In the balance of interests, a restraining order should not issue, but the proceedings should be promptly heard.-In re Astor Village Taxpayers, Inc. (Board of Standards and Appeals), 129 N.Y.S. 2d 781 [1954].

¶ 19.1. Where defendants procured a variance from the zoning ordinance for the erection of an apartment house, an injunction action to restrain the construction was improper. Plaintiff had an adequate remedy by certiorari to review the action of the Board of Standards and Appeals, in which it could have sought a stay.-Yates Construction Corp. v. G.N.G. Bldg. Corp., 15 Misc. 2d 690, 182 N.Y.S. 2d 703 [1958].

¶ 19.2. An action for declaratory judgment that an order of the N.Y.C. Department of Buildings was unlawful and void was dismissed where petitioner did not first appeal to the Board of Standards and Appeals.-Namro Holding Corp. v. City of New York, 31 Misc. 2d 480, 221 N.Y.S. 2d 67 [1961].

¶ 19.3. Petitioners were not entitled to restrain the Board from proceeding with an application by a property owner for a variance of zoning regulations pursuant to § 666(5) of the Charter. The petitioners, if aggrieved, could have the Board's action reviewed in certiorari proceedings, pursuant to this section of the Code.-Lacitra v. Foley, 20 Misc. 2d 922, 195 N.Y.S. 2d 285 [1959].

¶ 20. The Board was not arbitrary when it denied an application to permit a change in occupancy of premises as a three-family dwelling. The petitioner had originally obtained approval of plans for the erection of a building for occupancy by one family, a doctor's office and a garage but had proceeded to erect a three-family house contrary to the approved plans and without applying for or obtaining a certificate of occupancy.-Seinfield v. Murdock, 148 N.Y.S. 2d 359 [1955].

¶ 20.1. Upon application for a permanent zoning variance, the Board of Standards and Appeals decided that this would be unwarranted and granted a two-year variance. More than four months prior to the expiration of this variance, the owner applied for an extension. No notice was given to interested parties. Thereupon the Board amended its resolution by granting a variance for an additional five years without having any new facts before it. Under such circumstances, the extension was unwarranted.-New York Life Insurance Company v. Murdock, 15 Misc. 2d 552, 182 N.Y.S. 2d 397 [1958], aff'd, 8 App. Div. 2d 191, 186 N.Y.S. 2d 778 [1959].

¶ 20.2. The Board of Standards and Appeals could vote upon a variance to erect a gasoline service station, even though two of the Board were not members thereof at the time of the public hearing, where such members made an independent appraisal and reached an independent conclusion.-Tuohy v. Murdock, 140 (12) N.Y.L.J. (7-17-58) 5, Col. 8 F.

¶ 20.3. A Board hearing upon a variance may be informal. It need not be conducted like a trial.-In re Warshauer Haym Salomon Home for the Aged, 140 (97) N.Y.L.J. (11-19-58) 13, Col. 8 F.

¶ 20.4. In granting a variance, the Board need not sustain every contention of the applicant. The Board's decision may be based in part upon its own inspection and knowledge.-In re Warshauer Haym Salomon Home for the Aged, 140 (97) N.Y.L.J. (11-19-58) 13, Col. 8 F.

¶ 21. There is no statutory authority for directing the Board of Standards and Appeals to furnish a bill of particulars in a proceeding to review a determination of the Board.-Seinfield v. Murdock, 148 N.Y.S. 2d 359 [1955].

¶ 22. Application for an order reviewing and annulling respondent's determination which denied petitioner's application for certificate of occupancy denied where petitioners failed to first exhaust their remedies before the Board of Standards and Appeals.-Green v. Gillroy, 133 (13) N.Y.L.J. (1-19-55) 8, Col. 1 M.

¶ 22.1. Petitioner's request for cancellation of a notice of violation and directing issuance of certificate of occupancy for certain premises could not be reviewed under C.P.A. Art. 78 where the petitioner did not exhaust his administrative remedies by first appealing to the Board of Standards and Appeals.-Bard Manor, Inc. v. Rothkrug, 139 (25) N.Y.L.J. (2-5-58) 11, Col. 7 F.

¶ 22.2. Petitioners were not entitled to an order directing the recognition of existing certificates of occupancy or to the issuance of new certificates of occupancy where they had substantially complied with the law in the alteration of a building but had difficulty in obtaining the certificates. Petitioners were entitled to an order or determination of the Board, which order would be the subject of an appeal.-In re Walker, 31 Misc. 2d 915, 221 N.Y.S. 2d 564 [1961].

¶ 23. The provisions of this section are not controlling over contradictory provisions of the Civil Practice Act or any other general statute. Inasmuch as this section provides for verification of the petition, the acknowledgment of the petition was sufficient and the petition could be amended to correct the defect.-Smith v. Board of Standards and Appeals, 2 App. Div. 2d 67, 153 N.Y.S. 2d 131 [1956].

¶ 24. The failure to verify a petition for certiorari under this section is not a jurisdictional defect and can be corrected.-Smith v. Board of Standards and Appeals, 2 App. Div. 2d 67, 153 N.Y.S. 2d 131 [1956].

¶ 25. Petitioner was engaged in long distance moving business prior to zoning change. The court in reversing an order issued at special term which annulled a determination of the Board of Standards and Appeals of the City of New York stated, whether the certificate of occupancy should include other phases of business activities must be decided upon adequate proof to be taken upon notice to all parties.-Matter of Gscheidle v. Murdock, 280 App. Div. 74, 111 S. 2d 740 [1952].

¶ 26. A certiorari proceeding need not be initiated in the judicial district where the property is located, but it must be returnable therein. However, a defect in this respect is procedural and not jurisdictional.-St. Nicholas Russian Orthodox Church v. Board of Standards and Appeals, 140 (78) N.Y.L.J. (10-21-58) 12, Col. 4 T.

¶ 27. Action by an owner and lessee to enjoin the construction on adjoining premises of a building allegedly in violation of zoning ordinances was not barred by the plaintiff's failure to appeal to the Board of Standards and Appeals from the granting of the building permit.-Lesron Jr., Inc. v. Feinberg, 13 A.D. 2d 90, 213 N.Y.S. 2d 602 [1961].

¶ 28. There was no authority or necessity for a reply in certiorari proceedings to review a determination of the Board of Standards and Appeals of the City of New York instituted pursuant to this section of the Code.-Application of River Drive Construction Corp., 30 Misc. 2d 139, 216 N.Y.S. 2d 955 [1961], aff'd, 14 A.D. 2d 884, 218 N.Y.S. 2d 566 [1961].

¶ 29. The Court would not interfere in an application to the Board of Standards and Appeals where there was no showing of new evidence or change of law.-In re N.Y. Central R.R. (Foley), 147 (55) N.Y.L.J. (3-21-62) 14, Col. 2 M.

¶ 30. Commencement of proceeding under this section by an order to show cause rather than an order of certiorari was not fatal, as respondents were sufficiently advised of the relief sought.-In re Zakin, 149 (55) N.Y.L.J. (3-21-63) 17, Col. 4 M.

¶ 31. Where adequate remedies were available to tenant under its lease tenant was not an "aggrieved party" entitled to bring an Article 78 proceeding to annul and cancel an alteration permit issued to the landlord.-Max Schling, Inc. v. Gribetz, 154 (109) N.Y.L.J. (12-8-65) 18, Col. 5 F.

¶ 32. Article 78 proceeding was timely commenced when notice of motion dated March 8, 1967 was served on Board of Standards and Appeals on March 10, 1967 and determination of Board was published in its bulletin on February 9, 1967 even though notice of motion was not literally presented to a Justice of the Supreme Court within thirty days of publication.-Bolles-Texas Corp. v. Bd. of Standards and Appeals, 53 Misc. 2d 798, 279 N.Y.S. 2d 796 [1967].

¶ 33. Where petitioner seeking review of determination of Board of Standards and Appeals by which a variance of requirements of Multiple Dwelling Law was denied on the ground of an alleged lack of jurisdiction served all parties with notice of petition and petition to review within thirty days after publication of Board's decision in its bulletin proceeding was not barred by the applicable statute of limitations even though papers were not presented to court until after expiration of the third day limitation period.-Matter of DeMarco (Glass) 157 (92) N.Y.L.J. (5-12-67) 17, Col. 2 M.

¶ 34. The four month statute of limitations contained in Article 78 CPLR is inapplicable where a specific shorter time is provided as in this section which requires that review from determination of Board of Standards and Appeals granting a zoning variance may be had upon presentation of a petition to the Court within thirty days after filing of the decision in the office of the Board or its publication in the bulletin.-In re McNaught, 157 (40) N.Y.L.J. (3-1-67) 22, Col. 5 M.

¶ 35. Requirement of Board of Standards and Appeals that subtenant obtain consent of landlord in order to appeal a determination of the Fire Department placing a violation on the premises because of subtenant's alleged improper storage of certain materials is not unreasonable or arbitrary.-Matter of J.S. Wald & Co., Inc. (Foley), 157 (31) N.Y.L.J. (2-15-67) 16, Col. 4 F.

¶ 36. Proceeding for certiorari to review and set aside a determination of the Board of Standards and Appeals which granted Lincoln Plaza Associates a variance from zoning resolutions was not timely where the certiorari proceeding was instituted within thirty days after the publication of the decision in the bulletin but not within thirty days after filing of the Board's decision in the offices of the Board and the Board's decision was properly filed at the close of the hearing when the Chairman read into the record a prepared written statement of a proposed decision granting the variance, a vote was taken and the vote sheet immediately filed.-In re City of N.Y. (Lincoln Plaza Associates) 161 (81) N.Y.L.J. (4-25-69) 16, Col. 2 M.

¶ 37. Adjoining landowner who had not established that he would be specially, personally and adversely affected was not a person aggrieved so as to attack zoning variances.-In re Ken Bar Development Corp. (Board of Standards and

¶ 38. Community Planning Board had no standing to bring an Article 78 proceeding to review a variance granted by respondent permitting certain changes to be made in a restaurant in a general residential district where it was contended that the restaurant catered to "intoxicated and drug-drenched patrons" who were "disorderly and boisterous", but a resident owner of nearby property and tenants living in the immediate vicinity had such standing.-Community Planning Board No. 2 v. Board of Standards & Appeals, 43 A.D. 2d 670, 350 N.Y.S. 2d 138 [1973].

¶ 39. A civic association of over 1,000 owners and residents in the immediate vicinity of the area involved was an aggrieved person within the meaning of this statute and had standing to institute an Article 78 proceeding to review the determination of the New York City Board of Standards and Appeals which denied a request to reconsider a grant of variance to construct a six-story multiple dwelling.-Matter of Douglaston Civic Asso. v. Galvin, 36 N.Y. 2d 1, 364 N.Y.S. 2d 830, 324 N.E. 2d 317 [1974].

¶ 40. Subd. (a) requires that an Art. 78 proceeding against the Board of Standards and Appeals be commenced "within 30 days after filing of the decision in the office of the board, or its publication in the bulletin." The 30 day period begins to run upon the first act to occur (i.e., the filing or publication), not the last. Petition is untimely. Mandamus is not available since the board's accepting jurisdiction is discretionary and not as of right.-The ad hoc committee to save Dean St. and Carlton Ave. v. N.Y.C. Board of Standards and Appeals, 191(60) N.Y.L.J. (3-28-84) 11, Col. 4 T.

CHAPTER 3 LANDMARKS PRESERVATION AND HISTORIC DISTRICTS

a. The council finds that many improvements, as herein defined, and landscape features, as herein defined, having a special character or a special historical or aesthetic interest or value and many improvements representing the finest architectural products of distinct periods in the history of the city, have been uprooted, notwithstanding the feasibility of preserving and continuing the use of such improvements and landscape features, and without adequate consideration of the irreplaceable loss to the people of the city of the aesthetic, cultural and historic values represented by such improvements and landscape features. In addition, distinct areas may be similarly uprooted or may have their distinctiveness destroyed, although the preservation thereof may be both feasible and desirable. It is the sense of the council that the standing of this city as a world wide tourist center and world capital of business, culture and government cannot be maintained or enhanced by disregarding the historical and architectural heritage of the city and by countenancing the destruction of such cultural assets.

b. It is hereby declared as a matter of public policy that the protection, enhancement, perpetuation and use of improvements and landscape features of special character or special historical or aesthetic interest or value is a public necessity and is required in the interest of the health, prosperity, safety and welfare of the people. The purpose of this chapter is to (a) effect and accomplish the protection, enhancement and perpetuation of such improvements and landscape features and of districts which represent or reflect elements of the city's cultural, social, economic, political and architectural history; (b) safeguard the city's historic, aesthetic and cultural heritage, as embodied and reflected in such improvements, landscape features and districts; (c) stabilize and improve property values in such districts; (d) foster civic pride in the beauty and noble accomplishments of the past; (e) protect and enhance the city's attractions to tourists and visitors and the support and stimulus to business and industry thereby provided; (f) strengthen the economy of the city; and (g) promote the use of historic districts, landmarks, interior landmarks and scenic landmarks for the education, pleasure and welfare of the people of the city.

Administrative Code of the City of New York

Title 25 Land Use

CHAPTER 3 LANDMARKS PRESERVATION AND HISTORIC DISTRICTS

§ 25-302 Definitions.

As used in this chapter, the following terms shall mean and include:

a. "Alteration." Any of the acts defined as an alteration by the building code of the city.

b. "Appropriate protective interest." Any right or interest in or title to an improvement parcel or any part thereof, including, but not limited to, fee title and scenic or other easements, the acquisition of which by the city is determined by the commission to be necessary and appropriate for the effectuation of the purpose of this chapter.

c. "Capable of earning a reasonable return." Having the capacity, under reasonably efficient and prudent management, of earning a reasonable return. For the purposes of this chapter, the net annual return, as defined in subparagraph (a) of paragraph three of subdivision v of this section, yielded by an improvement parcel during the test year, as defined in subparagraph (b) of such paragraph, shall be presumed to be the earning capacity of such improvement parcel, in the absence of substantial grounds for a contrary determination by the commission.

c-1. "Chair." The chair of the landmarks preservation commis- sion.

d. "City-aided project." Any physical betterment of real property, which:

(1) may not be constructed or effected without the approval of one or more officers or agencies of the city; and

(2) upon completion, will be owned in whole or in part by any person other than the city; and

(3) is planned to be constructed or effected, in whole or in part, with any form of aid furnished by the city (other than under this chapter), including, but not limited to, any loan, grant, subsidy or other mode of financial assistance, exercise of the city's powers of eminent domain, contribution of city property, or the granting of tax exemption or tax abatement; and

(4) will involve the construction, reconstruction, alteration or demolition of any improvement in a historic district or of a landmark.

e. "Commission." The landmarks preservation commission.

f. "Day." Any day other than a Saturday, Sunday or legal holiday; provided, however, that for purposes of section 25-303 and subdivision d of section 25-317 of this chapter, the term "day" shall mean every day in the week.

f-1. "Designation report." The report prepared by the commission and used as a basis for designating a landmark or historic district pursuant to this chapter.

g. "Exterior architectural feature." The architectural style, design, general arrangement and components of all of the outer surfaces of an improvement, as distinguished from the interior surfaces enclosed by said exterior surfaces, including, but not limited to, the kind, color and texture of the building material and the type and style of all windows, doors, lights, signs and other fixtures appurtenant to such improvement.

h. "Historic district." Any area which:

(1) contains improvements which:

(a) have a special character or special historical or aesthetic interest or value; and

(b) represent one or more periods or styles of architecture typical of one or more eras in the history of the city; and

(c) cause such area, by reason of such factors, to constitute a distinct section of the city; and

(2) has been designated as a historic district pursuant to the provisions of this chapter.

i. "Improvement." Any building, structure, place, work of art or other object constituting a physical betterment of real property, or any part of such betterment.

j. "Improvement parcel." The unit of real property which (1) includes a physical betterment constituting an improvement and the land embracing the site thereof, and (2) is treated as a single entity for the purpose of levying real estate taxes, provided however, that the term "improvement parcel" shall also include any unimproved area of land which is treated as a single entity for such tax purposes.

k. "Interior." The visible surfaces of the interior of an improvement.

l. "Interior architectural feature." The architectural style, design, general arrangement and components of an interior, including, but not limited to, the kind, color and texture of the building material and the type and style of all windows, doors, lights, signs and other fixtures appurtenant to such interior.

m. "Interior landmark." An interior, or part thereof, any part of which is thirty years old or older, and which is customarily open or accessible to the public, or to which the public is customarily invited, and which has a special historical or aesthetic interest or value as part of the development, heritage or cultural characteristics of the city, state or nation, and which has been designated as an interior landmark pursuant to the provisions of this chapter.

n. "Landmark." Any improvement, any part of which is thirty years old or older, which has a special character or special historical or aesthetic interest or value as part of the development, heritage or cultural characteristics of the city, state or nation, and which has been designated as a landmark pursuant to the provisions of this chapter.

o. "Landmark site." An improvement parcel or part thereof on which is situated a landmark and any abutting improvement parcel or part thereof used as and constituting part of the premises on which the landmark is situated, and which has been designated as a landmark site pursuant to the provisions of this chapter.

p. "Landscape feature." Any grade, body of water, stream, rock, plant, shrub, tree, path, walkway, road, plaza, fountain, sculpture or other form of natural or artificial landscaping.

q. "Minor work." Any change in, addition to or removal from the parts, elements or materials comprising an improvement, including, but not limited to, the exterior architectural features or interior architectural features thereof and, subject to and as prescribed by regulations of the commission if and when promulgated pursuant to section 25-319 of this chapter, the surfacing, resurfacing, painting, renovating, restoring or rehabilitating of the exterior architectural features or interior architectural features or the treating of the same in any manner that materially alters their appearance, where such change, addition or removal does not constitute ordinary repairs and maintenance and is of such nature that it may be lawfully effected without a permit from the department of buildings.

q-1. "Offense." As used in the phrase "second and subsequent offense", a violation encompassing some or all of the conditions or actions described or encompassed by a prior notice of violation or summons. For purposes of this definition, there shall be a presumption that the conditions encompassed by a second or subsequent offense have been in existence for each day between the time the respondent admits to liability or is found liable for or guilty of the prior offense and the time the second or subsequent notice of violation or summons is served.

r. "Ordinary repairs and maintenance." Any:

(1) work done on any improvement; or

(2) replacement of any part of an improvement;

for which a permit issued by the department of buildings is not required by law, where the purpose and effect of such work or replacement is to correct any deterioration or decay of or damage to such improvement or any part thereof and to restore same, as nearly as may be practicable, to its condition prior to the occurrence of such deterioration, decay or damage.

s. "Owner." Any person or persons having such right to, title to or interest in any improvement so as to be legally entitled, upon obtaining the required permits and approvals from the city agencies having jurisdiction over building construction, to perform with respect to such property any demolition, construction, reconstruction, alteration or other work as to which such person seeks the authorization or approval of the commission pursuant to section 25-309 of this chapter.

t. "Person in charge." The person or persons possessed of the freehold of an improvement or improvement parcel or a lesser estate therein, a mortgagee or vendee in possession, assignee of rents, receiver, executor, trustee, lessee, agent or any other person directly or indirectly in control of an improvement or improvement parcel.

u. "Protected architectural feature." Any exterior architectural feature of a landmark or any interior architectural feature of an interior landmark.

v. "Reasonable return." (1) A net annual return of six per centum of the valuation of an improvement parcel.

(2) Such valuation shall be the current assessed valuation established by the city, which is in effect at the time of the filing of the request for a certificate of appropriateness; provided that:

(a) The commission may make a determination that the valuation of the improvement parcel is an amount different from such assessed valuation where there has been a reduction in the assessed valuation for the year next preceding the effective date of the current assessed valuation in effect at the time of the filing of such request; and

(b) The commission may make a determination that the value of the improvement parcel is an amount different from the assessed valuation where there has been a bona fide sale of such parcel within the period between March fifteenth, nineteen hundred fifty-eight, and the time of the filing of such request, as the result of a transaction at arm's length, on normal financing terms, at a readily ascertainable price, and unaffected by special circumstances such as, but not limited to, a forced sale, exchange of property, package deal, wash sale or sale to a cooperative. In determining whether a sale was on normal financing terms, the commission shall give due consideration to the following factors:

(1) The ratio of the cash payment received by the seller to (a) the sales price of the improvement parcel and (b) the annual gross income from such parcel;

(2) The total amount of the outstanding mortgages which are liens against the improvement parcel (including purchase money mortgages) as compared with the assessed valuation of such parcel;

(3) The ratio of the sales price to the annual gross income of the improvement parcel, with consideration given, where the improvement is subject to residential rent control, to the total amount of rent adjustments previously granted, exclusive of rent adjustments because of changes in dwelling space, services, furniture, furnishings, or equipment, major capital improvements, or substantial rehabilitation;

(4) The presence of deferred amortization in purchase money mortgages, or the assignment of such mortgages at a discount;

(5) Any other facts and circumstances surrounding such sale which, in the judgment of the commission, may have a bearing upon the question of financing.

(3) For the purposes of this subdivision v:

(a) Net annual return shall be the amount by which the earned income yielded by the improvement parcel during a test year exceeds the operating expenses of such parcel during such year, excluding mortgage interest and amortization, and excluding allowances for obsolescence and reserves, but including an allowance for depreciation of two per centum of the assessed value of the improvement, exclusive of the land, or the amount shown for depreciation of the improvement in the latest required federal income tax return, whichever is lower; provided, however, that no allowance for depreciation of the improvement shall be included where the improvement has been fully depreciated for federal income tax purposes or on the books of the owner; and

(b) Test year shall be (1) the most recent full calendar year, or (2) the owner's most recent fiscal year, or (3) any twelve consecutive months ending not more than ninety days prior to the filing (a) of the request for a certificate, or (b) of an application for a renewal of tax benefits pursuant to the provisions of section 25-309 of this chapter, as the case may be.

w. "Scenic landmark." Any landscape feature or aggregate of landscape features, any part of which is thirty years old or older, which has or have a special character or special historical or aesthetic interest or value as part of the development, heritage or cultural characteristics of the city, state or nation and which has been designated a scenic landmark pursuant to the provisions of this chapter.

x. As used in section 25-317.1:

(1) "Type A violation." Except as otherwise defined by the rules of the commission, the following work done or condition created or maintained in violation of this chapter without an appropriate approval from the commission:

(a) the removal of or alterations to, except for painting, a significant portion of an exterior architectural feature, including, without limitation thereof, removal of or alterations to:

(i) the windows on a single facade or, where original, historic or special windows exist, the removal of or alterations to a significant portion of such original, historic or special windows on a single facade;

(ii) a decorative element made of metal, glass, wood, brick, ceramic and/or stone including, without limitation thereof, a cornice, lintel, grille or molding;

(iii) the paving stones or curbstones of a stone sidewalk;

(iv) an exterior doorway or stoop;

(v) a wall, fence, railing, porch, balcony or roof, including dormers, bays, gables and parapets; and

(vi) a storefront, but not including the installation of signs, awnings, flagpoles or banners;

(b) the removal of or alterations to a significant portion of a protected feature of an interior landmark as described in the designation report;

(c) the construction of all or a portion of a new building, structure, addition or any other improvement on a landmark site or within the boundaries of a historic district. Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, any significant modification of the existing bulk or envelope of a building shall be a violation under this paragraph;

(d) the elimination by paving or other construction of a significant portion of an area-way, planting area, or front, rear or side yards, where such feature is a significant component of the landmark or historic district;

(e) where the improvement is not a building or an interior landmark, the removal of or alterations to a significant portion of such improvement;

(f) the failure to submit to the commission any periodic inspection report required under the terms of a restrictive declaration recorded in connection with any zoning permit, certification or authorization granted to an improvement under the jurisdiction of the commission.

(2) "Type B violation". Except as otherwise defined by the rules of the commission, the failure to maintain an improvement in a condition of good repair in violation of section 25-311 of this chapter, and where such condition results or may result in significant deterioration of either a significant portion of the improvement or a character-defining, protected, architectural feature of such improvement.

(a) For purposes of this subdivision, and without limiting the scope thereof, the term "significant deterioration" shall include the failure to maintain:

(i) the improvement in a structurally sound or reasonably water-tight condition; or

(ii) a character-defining, protected, architectural feature in a structurally sound or reasonably water-tight condition or otherwise failing to preserve the integral historic material of such feature.

(b) For purposes of this subdivision, the term "significant deterioration" shall not include:

(i) any condition that may permit some water penetration and/or evidence slight structural deterioration, unless such condition has existed over a period of time such that it has led or may reasonably lead to significant water penetration or structural damage to a significant part of a facade or roof; or

(ii) the failure to maintain a small part of a single, character-defining, protected, architectural feature or a small portion of the decorative, architectural features of the improvement taken as a whole.

(3) "Type C violation". All other violations of this chapter, except for violations of section 25-311 of this chapter.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Landmarks Preservation Commission did not exceed its power when it ordered defendants to remove sculpture from parcel located in Greenwich Village Historic District, as Landmarks Preservation Law applies to unimproved free-standing plot which is not part of larger tax parcel but "is treated as a single entity for such tax purposes, Ad Code §§25-302(j) and 25-305(a), nor was the action an unconstitutional taking of property. City of New York v. Shakespear, 202 AD2d 237, 608 N.Y.S.2d 460, motion for leave to appeal dismissed 84 N.Y.2d 923, 621 N.Y.S.2d 521 [1994].

¶ 2. The court rejected a claim that this section was unconstitutionally vague. Russo v. Beckelman, 204 A.D.2d 160, 611 N.Y.S.2d 869 (1st Dept. 1994).

¶ 3. The City had the power to landmark an interior of a famous restaurant that was customarily open or accessible to the public. Matter of Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association of America v. City of New York, 82 N.Y.2d 35, 603 N.Y.S.2d 399 (1993).

¶ 4. A church may be prevented by the landmarks law from replacing a church-owned building (an auxiliary structure adjacent to the church's main house of worship) with an office tower. Since the law is facially neutral, it does not infringe on the free exercise of religion. The church unsuccessfully contended that the refusal of the City to permit the sale adversely affected the finances of the church and thus impaired its performance of charitable and community activities. The mere fact that over 15 percent of landmarked properties happen to be religious properties does not mean that the statute is aimed at religious buildings, many religious structures have special character or special historic or aesthetic interests that make them candidates for landmarking, independent of their religious nature. St. Bartholomew's Church v. City of New York, 914 F.2d 349 (2nd Cir. 1990).

¶ 5. Review of a administrative determination regarding landmarking is limited to whether the decision has a rational basis or whether they were arbitrary and capricious. The mere fact that a reason is not given for a determination does not render it arbitrary and capricious. Matter of the Application of 400 East 64/65th Street Block Association v. City of New York, 183 A.D.2d 531, 583 N.Y.S.2d 452 (1st Dept. 1992).

CHAPTER 3 LANDMARKS PRESERVATION AND HISTORIC DISTRICTS

a. For the purpose of effecting and furthering the protection, preservation, enhancement, perpetuation and use of landmarks, interior landmarks, scenic landmarks and historic districts, the commission shall have power, after a public hearing:

(1) to designate and, as herein provided in subdivision j, in order to effectuate the purposes of this chapter, to make supplemental designations as additions to, a list of landmarks which are identified by a description setting forth the general characteristics and location thereof;

(2) to designate and, in order to effectuate the purposes of this chapter, to make supplemental designations as additions to, a list of interior landmarks, not including interiors utilized as places of religious worship, which are identified by a description setting forth the general characteristics and location thereof;

(3) to designate and, in order to effectuate the purposes of this chapter, to make supplemental designations as additions to a list of scenic landmarks, located on property owned by the city, which are identified by a description setting forth the general characteristics and location thereof; and

(4) to designate historic districts and the location and boundaries thereof, and, in order to effectuate the purposes of this chapter, to designate changes in such locations and boundaries and designate additional historic districts and the location and boundaries thereof.

b. It shall be the duty of the commission, after a public hearing, to designate a landmark site for each landmark and to designate the location and boundaries of such site.

c. The commission shall have power, after a public hearing, to amend any designation made pursuant to the provisions of subdivisions a and b of this section.

d. The commission may, after a public hearing, whether at the time it designates a scenic landmark or at any time thereafter, specify the nature of any construction, reconstruction, alteration or demolition of any landscape feature which may be performed on such scenic landmark without prior issuance of a report pursuant to subdivision c of section 25-318. The commission shall have the power, after a public hearing, to amend any specification made pursuant to the provisions of this subdivision.

e. Subject to the provisions of subdivisions g and h of this section, any designation or amendment of a designation made by the commission pursuant to the provisions of subdivisions a, b and c of this section shall be in full force and effect from and after the date of the adoption thereof by the commission.

f. Within ten days after making any such designation or amendment thereof, the commission shall file a copy of same with the council, the department of buildings, the city planning commission, the board of standards and appeals, the fire department and the department of health and mental hygiene.

g. (1) Within sixty days after such filing, the city planning commission shall (a) hold a public hearing on any such designation of a historic district and (b) shall submit to the council a report with respect to the relation of such designation, whether of a historic district or a landmark, interior landmark, scenic landmark, or landmark site, or amendment of such designation to the zoning resolution, projected public improvements and any plans for the development, growth, improvement or renewal of the area involved. The city planning commission shall include with any such report its recommendation, if any, for council action with respect to any such designation of a historic district.

(2) The council may modify or disapprove by majority vote any designation of the commission or amendment thereof within one hundred twenty days after a copy thereof is filed with the council provided that the city planning commission has submitted the report required by this subdivision or that sixty days have elapsed since the filing of the designation or amendment with the council. All votes of the council pursuant to this subdivision shall be filed by the council with the mayor and shall be final unless disapproved by the mayor within five days of such filing. Any such disapproval by the mayor shall be filed by the mayor with the council and shall be subject to override by a two-thirds vote of the council within ten days of such filing. If the council shall disapprove such designation or amendment, such designation or amendment shall continue in full force and effect until the time for disapproval by the mayor has expired; provided, however, that if the mayor disapproves such council disapproval, it shall continue in full force and effect unless the council overrides the mayor's disapproval. If the council shall modify such designation or amendment, such designation or amendment as adopted by the commission shall continue in full force and effect until the time for disapproval by the mayor has expired, and after such time such modification shall be in effect; provided, however, that if the mayor disapproves such council modification, the designation or amendment as adopted by the commission shall continue in full force and effect unless the council overrides the mayor's disapproval, and in the event of override the modification shall take effect on and after the date of such override.

h. (1) The commission shall have power, after a public hearing, to adopt a resolution proposing rescission, in whole or in part, of any designation or amendment or modification thereof mentioned in the preceding subdivisions of this section. Within ten days after adopting any such resolution, the commission shall file a copy thereof with the council and the city planning commission.

(2) Within sixty days after such filing, the city planning commission shall submit to the council a report with respect to the relation of such proposed rescission of any such designation, whether of a historic district or a landmark, interior landmark, scenic landmark or landmark site, or amendment or modification thereof, to the zoning resolution, projected public improvements and any plans for the development, growth, improvement, or renewal of the area involved.

(3) The council may approve, disapprove or modify such proposed rescission within one hundred twenty days after a copy of the resolution proposing same is filed with the council, provided that the city planning commission has submitted the report required by this subdivision or that sixty days have elasped since the filing of such resolution. Failure to take action on such proposed rescission within such one hundred twenty-day period shall be deemed a vote to disapprove such proposed rescission. All votes of the council pursuant to this subdivision shall be filed by the council with the mayor and shall be final unless disapproved by the mayor within five days of such filing. Any such mayoral disapproval shall be filed by the mayor with the council and shall be subject to override by a two-thirds vote of the council within ten days of such filing. If such proposed rescission is approved or modified by the council, such rescission or modification thereof shall not take effect until the time for disapproval by the mayor has expired; provided, however, that if the mayor disapproves such rescission or modification, it shall not take effect unless the council overrides the mayor's disapproval. If such proposed rescission is disapproved by the council, it shall not take effect unless the mayor disapproves such council disapproval and the council fails to override the mayor's disapproval.

i. The commission may at any time make recommendations to the city planning commission with respect to amendments of the provisions of the zoning resolution applicable to improvements in historic districts.

j. All designations and supplemental designations of landmarks, landmark sites, interior landmarks, scenic landmarks and historic districts made pursuant to subdivision a shall be made pursuant to notices of public hearings given, as provided in section 25-313. In addition to such notice, the commission shall give notice to the city planning commission, all affected community boards and the office of the borough president in whose borough the property or district is located in advance of any public hearing relating to such designations.

k. Upon its designation of any improvement parcel as a landmark and of any landmark site, interior landmark, scenic landmark or historic district or any amendment of any such designation or rescission thereof, the commission shall cause to be recorded in the office of the register of the city of New York in the county in which such landmark, interior landmark, scenic landmark or district lies, or in the case of landmarks, interior landmarks, scenic landmarks and districts in the county of Richmond in the office of the clerk of said county of Richmond, a notice of such designation, amendment or rescission describing the party affected by, in the case of the county of Richmond, its land map block number or numbers, and its tax map, block and lot number or numbers, and in the case of all other counties, by its land map block and lot number or numbers.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. The designation of the Leonard Jerome House as a landmark after the owner had entered into a contract for its sale to a purchaser who proposed to raze the building and erect an office building on the site did not constitute a deprivation of property without due process of law as the only effect of the law is to prohibit "alteration, reconstruction or demolition of the exterior architectural features of the building without prior approval of the commission, the owner being at liberty to do as it pleases with the interior." Matter of Manhattan Club v. Landmarks Preservation Comm., 51 Misc. 2d 556, 273 N.Y.S. 2d 848 [1966].

¶ 2. Petition of real estate owner for an order prohibiting the Commission from naming certain areas within Greenwich Village as Historic Districts on the ground that it could take no action on these proposals between December 28, 1966 which was the expiration date of the 18-month period after the Commission was appointed and that period beginning 36 months thereafter was denied as a designation can be made during the ":interim" 36-month period and hearings could be had within such periods provided these be limited to those made pursuant to notices published in the first 18-month period and subsequent 6-month periods. Ragone v. Landmarks Preservation Commission, 157 (51) N.Y.L.J. (3-16-67) 15, Col. 3 F.

¶ 3. A landmark designation of a building that had been the home of J. P. Morgan, Jr. and which was now owned by a religious corporation and used for its offices was an unconstitutional confiscation of the corporation's property where the building was wholly inadequate for the purposes of the religious corporation which wished to demolish the mansion and build a modern office building on the site and where no adequate compensation was awarded for curtailment of the owner's free use of the premises.-Lutheran Church in America v. City of N.Y., 35 N.Y. 2d 121, 376 N.E. 2d 305, 359 N.Y.S. 2d 7 [1974].

¶ 4. Application of landmarks law through denial of a certificate of appropriateness for construction of a tower over Grand Central Station was not unconstitutional since in this case the application of the law did not impose such a burden as to constitute a compensable taking the plaintiffs not being able to establish that they were incapable of obtaining a reasonable return from Grand Central Terminal operations.-Penn Central Transportation Co. v. City of N.Y., 50 A.D. 2d 265 [1975].

¶ 5. Designation of landmarks by the Landmarks Preservation Commission of an historic district need not be in accord with a well considered plan required for zoning regulations.-Omabuild N.V. v. Bd. of Estimate, 116 Misc. 2d 566 [1982].

¶ 6. If the Commission's records are erroneous or the Commission fails to furnish the requisite information to the owner of a building, and the owner commences work on the building believing it not to be in an historic district, the Commission is equitably estopped from opposing the alterations if the Commission later determines the building to be within an historic district.-Harney v. Norman, 192 (84) N.Y.L.J. (10-30-84) 14, Col. 1 T.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Landmarks preservation commission was estopped from directing petitioners to restore 15 windows in their cooperative apartment, an estimated cost of $400,000. Petitioners' architects prior to replacing the old windows searched the municipal department of buildings' records and obtained permits from that agency without finding an historic district designation on file. Commission is obligated to file such designation pursuant to § 25-303(f), and this is a serious omission. Absence of such notice and where another apartment in the same building did receive a dispensation and same relief should be granted. Rudey v. Landmarks Comm., 182 AD2d 61, 587 N.Y.S.2d 623, aff'd 82 N.Y.2d 832, 606 N.Y.S.2d 588 (1993).

§ 25-304 Scope of commission's powers.

a. Nothing contained in this chapter shall be construed as authorizing the commission, in acting with respect to any historic district or improvement therein, or in adopting regulations in relation thereto, to regulate or limit the height and bulk of buildings, to regulate and determine the area of yards, courts and other open spaces, to regulate density of population or to regulate and restrict the locations of trades and industries or location of buildings designed for specific uses or to create districts for any such purpose.

b. Except as provided in subdivision a of this section, the commission may, in exercising or performing its powers, duties or functions under this chapter with respect to any improvement in a historic district or on a landmark site or containing an interior landmark, or any landscape feature of a scenic landmark, apply or impose, with respect to the construction, reconstruction, alteration, demolition or use of such improvement or landscape feature or the performance of minor work thereon, regulations, limitations, determinations or conditions which are more restrictive than those prescribed or made by or pursuant to other provisions of law applicable to such activities, work or use.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. A group of neighborhood residents challenged the issuance by the Landmarks Preservation Commission of a certificate of appropriateness for a warehouse which was located at the edge of a historic district. The developer planned to build a hotel complex which was partly adjacent to but just outside the historic district. The court held that the doctrine of exhaustion of administrative remedies applied, so that if the petitioners contested whether the Commission had jurisdiction to approve the project, that issue had to be raised before the Commission or the court could not consider the issue in an Article 78 proceeding. There was actually a judicial estoppel here, because the petitioners previously asked the Commission to disapprove the project and then, when unsuccessful, belatedly claimed that the Commission had proceeded in excess of its jurisdiction. In any event, the court held that the Commission properly exercised jurisdiction over the entire project, because the hotel project involved structural components which were to be integrated into a single hotel building with common mechanical systems. The wall of the historic warehouse was to be pierced and removed in order to create a two story link and hotel tower. Thus, where the hotel project could not be separated from, and had a direct link to, the warehouse, the Commission had the power to approve or disapprove of the project. 67 Vestry Tenants Association v. Raab, 658 N.Y.S.2d 804 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 1997).

§ 25-305 Regulation of construction, reconstruction, alterations and demolition.

a. (1) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph two of this subdivision a, it shall be unlawful for any person in charge of a landmark site or an improvement parcel or portion thereof located in an historic district or any part of an improvement containing an interior landmark to alter, reconstruct or demolish any improvement constituting a part of such site or constituting a part of such parcel and located within such district or containing an interior landmark, or to construct any improvement upon land embraced within such site or such parcel and located within such district, or to cause or permit any such work to be performed on such improvement or land, unless the commission has previously issued a certificate of no effect on protected architectural features, a certificate of appropriateness or a notice to proceed authorizing such work, and it shall be unlawful for any other person to perform such work or cause same to be performed, unless such certificate or notice has been previously issued.

(2) The provisions of paragraph one of this subdivision a shall not apply to any improvement mentioned in subdivision a of section 25-318 of this chapter, or to any city-aided project, or in cases subject to the provisions of section 25-312 of this chapter.

(3) It shall be unlawful for the person in charge of any improvement or land mentioned in paragraph one of this subdivision a to maintain same or cause or permit same to be maintained in the condition created by any work in violation of the provisions of such paragraph one.

b. (1) Except in the case of any improvement mentioned in subdivision a of section 25-318 of this chapter and except in the case of a city-aided project, no application shall be approved and no permit or amended permit for the construction, reconstruction, alteration or demolition of any improvement located or to be located on a landmark site or in an historic district or containing an interior landmark shall be issued by the department of buildings, and no application shall be approved and no special permit or amended special permit for such construction, reconstruction or alteration, where required by article seven of the zoning resolution, shall be granted by the city planning commission or the board of standards and appeals, until the commission shall have issued either a certificate of no effect on protected architectural features, a certificate of appropriateness or a notice to proceed pursuant to the provisions of this chapter as an authorization for such work.

c. (1) A copy of every application or amended application for a permit to construct, reconstruct, alter or demolish any improvement located or to be located on a landmark site or in an historic district or containing an interior landmark shall, at the time of the submission of the original thereof to the department of buildings, be filed by the applicant with the commission. A copy of every application, under article seven of the zoning resolution, for a special permit for any work which includes the construction, reconstruction or alteration of any such improvement shall, at the time of the submission of such application or amended application of the city planning commission or the board of standards and appeals, as the case may be, be filed with the commission.

(2) Every such copy of an application or amended application filed with the commission shall include plans and specifications for the work involved, or such other statement of the proposed work as would be acceptable by the department of buildings pursuant to the building code. The applicant shall furnish the commission with such other information relating to such application as the commission may from time to time require.

(3) Together with the copies of such application or amended application, every such applicant shall file with the commission a request for a certificate of no effect on protected architectural features or a certificate of appropriateness in relation to the proposed work specified in such application.

a. (1) In any case where an applicant for a permit from the department of buildings to construct, reconstruct, alter or demolish any improvement on a landmark site or in an historic district or containing an interior landmark, or an applicant for a special permit from the city planning commission or the board of standards and appeals authorizing any such work pursuant to article seven of the zoning resolution, or amendments thereof, files a copy of such application or amended application with the commission, together with a request for a certificate of no effect on protected architectural features, the commission shall determine: (a) whether the proposed work would change, destroy or affect any exterior architectural feature of the improvement on a landmark site or in an historic district or any interior architectural feature of the interior landmark upon which said work is to be done; and (b) in the case of construction of a new improvement, whether such construction would affect or not be in harmony with the external appearance of other, neighboring improvements on such site or in such district. If the commission determines such question in the negative, it shall grant such certificate; otherwise, it shall deny such request.

(2) Within thirty days after the filing of such application and request, the commission shall either grant such certificate, or give notice to the applicant of a proposed denial of such request. Upon written demand of the applicant filed with the commission after the giving of notice of a proposed denial, the commission shall confer with the applicant. The commission shall determine the request for a certificate within thirty days after the filing of such demand. If a demand is not filed within ten days after the giving of notice of the proposed denial, the commission shall determine such request within five days after the expiration of such ten-day period.

(3) In the event of a denial of such a certificate, the applicant may file with the commission a request for a certificate of appropriateness with respect to the proposed work specified in such application.

§ 25-307 Factors governing issuance of certificate of appropriateness.

a. In any case where an applicant for a permit to construct, reconstruct, alter or demolish any improvement on a landmark site, or in an historic district or containing an interior landmark, files such application with the commission together with a request for a certificate of appropriateness, and in any case where a certificate of no effect on protected architectural features is denied and the applicant thereafter, pursuant to the provisions of section 25-306 of this chapter, files a request for a certificate of appropriateness, the commission shall determine whether the proposed work would be appropriate for and consistent with the effectuation of the purposes of this chapter. If the commission's determination is in the affirmative on such question, it shall grant a certificate of appropriateness, and if the commission's determination is in the negative, it shall deny the applicant's request, except as otherwise provided in section 25-309 of this chapter.

b. (1) In making such determination with respect to any such application for a permit to construct, reconstruct, alter or demolish an improvement in an historic district, the commission shall consider (a) the effect of the proposed work in creating, changing, destroying or affecting the exterior architectural features of the improvement upon which such work is to be done, and (b) the relationship between the results of such work and the exterior architectural features of other, neighboring improvements in such district.

(2) In appraising such effects and relationship, the commission shall consider, in addition to any other pertinent matters, the factors of aesthetic, historical and architectural values and significance, architectural style, design, arrangement, texture, material and color.

(3) All determinations of the commission pursuant to this subdivision b shall be made subject to the provisions of section 25-304 of this chapter, and the commission, in making any such determination, shall not apply any regulation, limitation, deter- mination or restriction as to the height and bulk of buildings, the area of yards, courts or other open spaces, density of population, the location of trades and industries, or location of buildings designed for specific uses, other than the regulations, limitations, determinations and restrictions as to such matters prescribed or made by or pursuant to applicable provisions of law, exclusive of this chapter; provided, however, that nothing contained in such section 25-304 or in this subdivision b shall be construed as limiting the power of the commission to deny a request for a certificate of appropriateness for demolition or alteration of an improvement in an historic district (whether or not such request also seeks approval, in such certificate, of construction or reconstruction of any improvement), on the ground that such demolition or alteration would be inappropriate for and inconsistent with the effectuation of the purposes of this chapter, with due consideration for the factors hereinabove set forth in this subdivision b.

c. In making the determination referred to in subdivision a of this section with respect to any application for a permit to construct, reconstruct, alter or demolish any improvement on a landmark site, other than a landmark, the commission shall consider (1) the effects of the proposed work in creating, changing, destroying or affecting the exterior architectural features of the improvement upon which such work is to be done, (2) the relationship between such exterior architectural features, together with such effects, and the exterior architectural features of the landmark, and (3) the effects of the results of such work upon the protection, enhancement, perpetuation and use of the landmark on such site. In appraising such effects and relationship, the commission shall consider, in addition to any other pertinent matters, the factors mentioned in paragraph two of subdivision b of this section.

d. In making the determination referred to in subdivision a of this section with respect to an application for a permit to alter, reconstruct or demolish a landmark, the commission shall consider the effects of the proposed work upon the protection, enhancement, perpetuation and use of the exterior architectural features of such landmark which cause it to possess a special character or special historical or aesthetic interest or value.

e. In making the determination referred to in subdivision a of this section with respect to an application for a permit to alter, reconstruct or demolish an improvement containing an interior landmark, the commission shall consider the effects of the proposed work upon the protection, enhancement, perpetuation and use of the interior architectural features of such interior landmark which cause it to possess a special character or special historical or aesthetic interest or value.

§ 25-309 Request for certificate of appropriateness authorizing demolition, alterations or reconstruction on ground of insufficient return.

a. (1) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph two of this subdivision a, in any case where an application for a permit to demolish any improvement located on a landmark site or in an historic district or containing an interior landmark is filed with the commission, together with a request for a certificate of appropriateness authorizing such demolition, and in any case where an application for a permit to make alterations to or reconstruct any improvement on a landmark site or containing an interior landmark is filed with the commission, and the applicant requests a certificate of appropriateness for such work, and the applicant establishes to the satisfaction of the commission that:

(a) the improvement parcel (or parcels) which includes such improvement, as existing at the time of the filing of such request, is not capable of earning a reasonable return; and

(b) the owner of such improvement:

(1) in the case of an application for a permit to demolish, seeks in good faith to demolish such improvement immediately (a) for the purpose of constructing on the site thereof with reasonable promptness a new building or other income-producing facility, or (b) for the purpose of terminating the operation of the improvement at a loss; or

(2) in the case of an application for a permit to make alterations or reconstruct, seeks in good faith to alter or reconstruct such improvement, with reasonable promptness, for the purpose of increasing the return therefrom;

the commission, if it determines that the request for such certificate should be denied on the basis of the applicable standards set forth in section 25-307 of this chapter, shall, within ninety days after the filing of the request for such certificate of appropriateness, make a preliminary determination of insufficient return.

(2) In any case where any application and request for a certificate of appropriateness mentioned in paragraph one of this subdivision a is filed with the commission with respect to an improvement, the provisions of this section shall not apply to such request if the improvement parcel which includes such improvement has received, for three years next preceding the filing of such request, and at the time of such filing continues to receive, under any provision of law (other than this chapter or section four hundred fifty-eight, four hundred sixty or four hundred seventy-nine of the real property tax law), exemption in whole or in part from real property taxation; provided, however, that the provisions of this section shall nevertheless apply to such request if such exemption is and has been received pursuant to section four hundred twenty-a, four hundred twenty-two, four hundred twenty-four, four hundred twenty-five, four hundred twenty-six, four hundred twenty-seven, four hundred twenty-eight, four hundred thirty, four hundred thirty-two, four hundred thirty-four, four hundred thirty-six, four hundred thirty-eight, four hundred forty, four hundred forty-two, four hundred forty-four, four hundred fifty, four hundred fifty-two, four hundred sixty-two, four hundred sixty-four, four hundred sixty-eight, four hundred seventy, four hundred seventy-two or four hundred seventy-four of the real property tax law and the applicant establishes to the satisfaction of the commission, in lieu of the requirements set forth in paragraph one of this subdivision a, that:

(a) The owner of such improvement has entered into a bona-fide agreement to sell an estate of freehold or to grant a term of at least twenty years in such improvement parcel, which agreement is subject to or contingent upon the issuance of the certificate of appropriateness or a notice to proceed;

(b) The improvement parcel which includes such improvement, as existing at the time of the filing of such request, would not, if it were not exempt in whole or in part from real property taxation, be capable of earning a reasonable return;

(c) Such improvement has ceased to be adequate, suitable or appropriate for use for carrying out both (1) the purposes of such owner to which it is devoted and (2) those purposes to which it had been devoted when acquired unless such owner is no longer engaged in pursuing such purposes; and

(d) The prospective purchaser or tenant:

(1) In the case of an application for a permit to demolish seeks and intends, in good faith either to demolish such improvement immediately for the purpose of constructing on the site thereof with reasonable promptness a new building or other facility; or

(2) In the case of an application for a permit to make alterations or reconstruct, seeks and intends in good faith to alter or reconstruct such improvement, with reasonable promptness.

b. In the case of an application made pursuant to paragraph one of subdivision a of this section by an applicant not required to establish the conditions specified in paragraph two of such subdivision, as promptly as is practicable after making a preliminary determination as provided in paragraph one of such subdivision a, the commission, with the aid of such experts as it deems necessary, shall endeavor to devise, in consultation with the applicant, a plan whereby the improvement may be (1) preserved or perpetuated in such manner or form as to effectuate the purposes of this chapter, and (2) also rendered capable of earning a reasonable return.

c. Any such plan may include, but shall not be limited to, (1) granting of partial or complete tax exemption, (2) remission of taxes and (3) authorization for alterations, construction or reconstruction appropriate for and not inconsistent with the effectuation of the purposes of this chapter.

d. In any case where the commission formulates any such plan, it shall mail a copy thereof to the applicant promptly and in any event within sixty days after giving notice of its preliminary determination of insufficient return.

The commission shall hold a public hearing upon such plan.

e. (1) If the commission, after holding a public hearing pursuant to subdivision d of this section, determines that a plan which it has formulated, consisting only of tax exemption and/or remission of taxes, meets the standards set forth in subdivision b of this section, as such plan was originally formulated, or with such modifications as the commission deems necessary or appropriate, the commission shall deny the request of the applicant for a certificate of appropriateness and shall approve such plan, as originally formulated, or with such modifications.

(2) Such plan, as so approved, shall set forth the extent of tax exemption and/or remission of taxes deemed necessary by the commission to meet such standards.

(3) The commission shall promptly mail a certified copy of such approved plan to the applicant and shall promptly transmit a certified copy thereof to the tax commission. Upon application made by the owner of such improvement pursuant to the provisions of paragraph five of this subdivision e, the tax commission shall grant, for the fiscal year next succeeding the date of approval of such plan, the tax exemption and/or remission of taxes provided for therein.

(4) In accordance with procedures prescribed by the regulations of the commission, it shall determine, upon application by the owner of such improvement made in advance of each succeeding fiscal year, the amount of tax exemption and/or remission of taxes, if any, which it deems necessary, as a renewal of such plan for the ensuing year, to meet the standards set forth in subdivision b of this section, and shall promptly mail a certified copy of any approved renewal of such plan to the applicant and shall promptly transmit a certified copy of such renewal to the tax commission. Upon application made by the owner of such improvement pursuant to the provisions of paragraph five of this subdivision e, the tax commission shall grant, for such fiscal year, the tax exemption and/or remission of taxes specified in such determination.

(5) Where any such plan or a renewal thereof is approved by the commission, pursuant to the provisions of the preceding paragraphs of this subdivision e, prior to January first next preceding the fiscal year to which the tax benefits of such plan or renewal thereof are applicable, the owner shall not be entitled to such benefits for such fiscal year unless he or she files an application therefor with the tax commission between February first and March fifteenth, both dates inclusive, next preceding such fiscal year. Where any such plan or a renewal thereof is approved by the commission between January first and June thirtieth, both dates inclusive, next preceding the fiscal year to which the tax benefits of such plan or renewal thereof are applicable, the owner shall not be entitled to such benefits for such fiscal year unless he or she files an application therefor with the tax commission on or before August first of such fiscal year.

f. (1) In any case where the commission determines, after holding a public hearing pursuant to subdivision d of this section, that a plan which it has formulated, consisting in whole or in part of any proposal other than tax exemption and/or remission of taxes, meets the standards set forth in subdivision b of this section, as such plan was originally formulated, or with such modifications as the commission deems necessary or appropriate, the commission shall approve such plan, as originally formulated, or with such modifications, and shall promptly mail a copy of same to the applicant.

(2) The owner of the improvement proposed to be benefited by such plan mentioned in paragraph one of this subdivision f may accept or reject such plan by written acceptance or rejection filed with the commission. If such an acceptance is filed, the commission shall deny the request of such applicant for a certificate of appropriateness. If a new application for a permit from the department of buildings and a new request for a certificate of appropriateness are filed, which application and request conform with such proposed plan, the commission shall grant such certificate as promptly as is practicable and in any event within thirty days after such filing.

(3) If such accepted plan consists in part of tax exemption and/or remission of taxes, the provisions of paragraphs two, three, four and five of subdivision e of this section shall govern the granting of such tax exemption and/or remission of taxes.

g. (1) Except in a case where the applicant is required to establish the conditions set forth in paragraph two of subdivision a of this section, if

(a) The commission does not formulate and mail a plan pursuant to the provisions of subdivisions b, c, and d of this section within the period of time prescribed by such subdivision d; or

(b) The commission does not approve a plan pursuant to the provisions of subdivision e or f of this section within sixty days after the mailing of such plan to the applicant; or

(c) A plan approved by the commission pursuant to the provisions of paragraph one of subdivision f of this section is rejected by the owner of such improvement pursuant to the provisions of paragraph two of such subdivision;

the commission may, within ten days after expiration of the applicable period referred to in subparagraphs (a) and (b) of this paragraph one, or within ten days after the filing of a rejection of a plan pursuant to paragraph two of subdivision f of this section, as the case may be, transmit to the mayor a written recommendation that the city acquire a specified appropriate protective interest in the improvement parcel which includes the improvement with respect to which the request for a certificate of appropriateness was filed, and shall promptly notify the applicant of such action.

(2) If, within ninety days after transmission of such recommendation, or, if no such recommendation is transmitted, within ninety days after the expiration of the period herein prescribed for such transmission, the city does not:

(a) Give notice, pursuant to section three hundred eighty-two of the charter, of an application to condemn such interest or any other appropriate protective interest agreed upon by the mayor and the commission; or

(b) Enter into a contract with the owner of such improvement parcel to acquire such interest, as so recommended or agreed upon;

the commission shall promptly grant, issue and forward to the owner, in lieu of the certificate of appropriateness requested by the applicant, a notice to proceed.

h. No plan which consists in whole or in part of the granting of a partial or complete tax exemption or remission of taxes pursuant to the provisions of this chapter shall be deemed to have been approved by the commission unless it is also approved by the mayor and council within the period of time prescribed by this section for approval of such plan by the commission.

i. (1) In any case where the applicant is required to establish the conditions set forth in paragraph two of subdivision a of this section, as promptly as is practicable after making a preliminary determination with respect to such conditions, as provided in paragraph one of subdivision a of this section, and within one hundred and eighty days after making such preliminary determination, the commission, alone or with the aid of such persons and agencies as it deems necessary and whose aid it is able to enlist, shall endeavor to obtain a purchaser or tenant (as the case may be) of the improvement parcel or parcels with respect to which the application has been made, which purchaser or tenant will agree, without condition or contingency relating to the issuance of a certificate of appropriateness or notice to proceed and subject to the provisions of paragraph three of this subdivision i, to purchase or acquire an interest identical with that proposed to be acquired by the prospective purchaser or tenant whose agreement is the basis of the application, on reasonably equivalent terms and conditions.

(2) The applicant shall, within a reasonable time after notice by the commission that it has obtained such a purchaser or tenant, which notice shall be served within the period of one hundred and eighty days provided by paragraph one of this subdivision i, enter into such agreement to sell or lease (as the case may be) with the purchaser or tenant so obtained. Such notice shall specify a date for the execution of such agreement, which may be postponed by the commission at the request of the applicant.

(3) The provisions of this section shall not, after the consummation of such agreement, apply to such purchaser or tenant or to the heirs, successors or assigns of such purchaser or tenant.

(4) (a) If, within the one hundred eighty day period following the commission's preliminary determination pursuant to paragraph one of subdivision a of this section, the commission shall not have succeeded in obtaining a purchaser or tenant of the improvement parcel, pursuant to paragraph one of this subdivision i, or if, having obtained such a purchaser or tenant, such purchaser or tenant fails within the time provided in paragraph two of this subdivision i, to enter into the agreement provided for by such paragraph two, the commission, within twenty days after the expiration of the one hundred eighty day period provided for in paragraph one of this subdivision i, or within twenty days after the date upon which a purchaser or tenant obtained by the commission pursuant to the provisions of such paragraph one fails to enter into the agreement provided for by said paragraph, whichever of said dates later occurs, may transmit to the mayor a written recommendation that the city acquire a specified appropriate protective interest in the improvement parcel or parcels which include the improvement or are part of the landmark site with respect to which the request for a certificate of appropriateness was filed, and shall promptly notify the applicant of such action.

(b) If, within ninety days after transmission of such recommendation, or, if no such recommendation is transmitted, within ninety days after the expiration of the period herein prescribed for such transmission, the city does not give notice, pursuant to section three hundred eighty-two of the charter, of an application to condemn such interest or any other appropriate protective interest agreed upon by the mayor and the commission, or does not enter into a contract with the owner of such improvement parcel to acquire such interest, as so recommended and agreed upon; the commission shall promptly grant, issue and forward to the owner, in lieu of the certificate of appropriateness requested by the applicant, a notice to proceed.

(5) Such notice to proceed shall authorize the work of demolition, alteration, and/or reconstruction sought with respect to the improvement parcel or parcels concerning which the application was made, only if such work (a) is undertaken and performed by the purchaser or tenant specified pursuant to the provisions of paragraph two of subdivision a of this section, in the application, or a bona-fide assignee, successor, lessee or sub-lessee of such purchaser or tenant (other than the owner who made application therefor), and (b) is undertaken and performed with reasonable promptness after the issuance of such notice to proceed.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. Matter of designation of complex of buildings used as a home for elderly mariners as a landmark was remanded for further consideration where lower court was not supplied with sufficient facts on which to render a satisfactory determination as to such questions as whether the preservation of the charity's buildings would seriously interfere with the use of the property, whether the buildings were capable of conversion to a useful purpose without excessive cost and whether the cost of maintaining them without use would entail serious expenditure.-Matter of the Trustees of the Sailors' Snug Harbor, 29 A.D. 2d 376, 288 N.Y.S. 2d 314 [1968].

¶ 2. Test for constitutional application of landmarks law to a charity is whether maintenance of the landmark either physically or financially prevents or seriously interferes with carrying out the charitable purpose.-Id.

¶ 3. The omission of specific words authorizing alterations to non-landmark buildings from this section 207-8.0(a)(1) was a simple oversight and it was the legislative intent to give the Commission power to afford lesser relief than the permission to demolish.-1025 Fifth Ave. v. § 25-310 Regulation of minor work.

a. (1) Except as otherwise provided in section 25-312 of this chapter, it shall be unlawful for any person in charge of an improvement located on a landmark site or in an historic district or containing an interior landmark to perform any minor work thereon, or to cause or permit such work to be performed, and for any other person to perform any such work thereon or cause same to be performed, unless the commission has issued a permit, pursuant to this section, authorizing such work.

(2) It shall be unlawful for any person in charge of any such improvement to maintain same or cause or permit same to be maintained in the condition created by any work done in violation of the provisions of paragraph one of this subdivision a.

b. The owner of an improvement desiring to obtain such a permit, or any person authorized by the owner to perform such work, may file with the commission an application for such permit, which shall include such description of the proposed work, as the commission may prescribe. The applicant shall submit such other information with respect to the proposed work as the commission may from time to time require. The commission shall promptly transmit such application to the department of buildings, which shall, as promptly as is practicable, certify to the commission whether a permit for such proposed work, issued by such department, is required by law. If such department certifies that such a permit is required, the commission shall deny such application, and shall promptly give notice of such determination to the applicant. If such department certifies that no such permit is required, the commission shall determine such application as hereinafter provided.

c. (1) The commission shall determine:

(a) Whether the proposed work would change, destroy or affect any exterior architectural feature of an improvement located on a landmark site or in an historic district or interior architectural feature of an improvement containing an interior landmark; and

(b) If such work would have such effect, whether judged by the standards set forth in subdivisions b, c, d and e of section 25-307 of this chapter with respect to an improvement of similar classification hereunder, such work would be appropriate for and consistent with the effectuation of the purposes of this chapter.

(2) If the commission determines the question set forth in subparagraph (a) of paragraph one of this subdivision c in the negative, or determines the question set forth in subparagraph (b) of such paragraph in the affirmative, it shall grant such permit, and it shall deny such permit if it determines such question set forth in subparagraph (a) in the affirmative and determines such question set forth in subparagraph (b) in the negative.

d. The procedure of the commission in making its determination with respect to any such application shall be as prescribed in subparagraph two of subdivision a of section 25-306 of this chapter, except that any period of thirty days referred to in such subparagraph shall, for the purposes of this subdivision d, be deemed to be twenty days.

e. The provisions of this section shall be inapplicable to any improvement mentioned in subdivision a of section 25-318 of this chapter and to any city-aided project.

§ 25-313 Public hearings; conferences.

a. The commission shall give notice of any public hearing which it is required or authorized to hold under the provisions of this chapter by publication in the City Record for at least ten days immediately prior thereto.

The owner of any improvement parcel on which a landmark or a proposed landmark is situated or which is a part of a landmark site or proposed landmark site or which contains an interior landmark or proposed interior landmark, or any property which includes a scenic landmark or proposed scenic landmark shall be given notice of any public hearing relating to the designation of such proposed landmark, landmark site, interior landmark or scenic landmark, the amendment to any designation thereof or the proposed rescission of any designation or amendment thereto. Such notice may be served by the commission by registered mail addressed to the owner or owners at his or her or their last known address or addresses, as the same appear in the records of the office of the commissioner of finance or if there is no name in such records, such notice may be served by ordinary mail addressed to "Owner" at the street address of the improvement parcel or property in question. Failure by the commission to give such notices shall not invalidate or affect any proceedings pursuant to this chapter relating to such improvement parcel or property.

b. At any such public hearing, the commission shall afford a reasonable opportunity for the presentation of facts and the expression of views by those desiring to be heard, and may, in its discretion, take the testimony of witnesses and receive evidence; provided, however, that the commission, in determining any matter as to which any such hearing is held, shall not be confined to consideration of the facts, views, testimony or evidence submitted at such hearing.

c. The commission may delegate to any member or members thereof the power to conduct any such public hearing and to hold any conference required to be held under the provisions of sections 25-306 and 25-310 of this

d. The commission, may, in its discretion, direct that notice of any such public hearing on a request for a certificate of appropriateness, or on any plan formulated by the commission in relation thereto, be given by the applicant to such owners of property in the neighborhood of the improvement or improvement parcel to which such request relates, as the commission deems proper. When so directed, the applicant shall mail a notice of such hearing to such owners, at their last known addresses, as the same appear in the records of the office of the commissioner of finance, and shall likewise mail a notice of such hearing to persons who have filed written requests for such notice with the commission. A reasonable period of time, as prescribed by the regulations of the commission, shall be afforded the applicant for giving notice of such hearing to such owners and persons. Any failure to give or receive such notice shall not invalidate any such hearing or any determination made by the commission with respect to such request for a certificate or with respect to such plan.

§ 25-317.1 Civil penalties.

a. Any person who violates any provision of sections 25-305, 25-310 or 25-311 or subdivision c of section 25-317 of this chapter or any order issued by the chair with respect to such provisions shall be liable for a civil penalty which may be recovered by the corporation counsel in a civil action in any court of competent jurisdiction. Such civil penalty shall be determined as follows:

(1) The defendant shall be liable for a civil penalty of up to the fair market value of the improvement parcel, with or without the improvement, whichever is greater, where in violation of such provision or order:

(a) all or substantially all of an improvement on a landmark site or within a historic district has been demolished;

(b) work has been performed or a condition created or maintained which significantly impairs the structural integrity of an improvement on a landmark site or within a historic district;

(c) work has been performed or a condition created or maintained which results in the destruction, removal or significant alteration of more than fifty percent of the square footage of two facades of an improvement on a landmark site or within a historic district, including party and sidewalls; or

(d) the defendant has failed to take action to prevent any condition described in subparagraph a, b or c of this paragraph from occurring.

(2) Where, in violation of such provision or order, work is performed or a condition is created or maintained which results in the destruction, removal or significant alteration of a significant portion of the protected features identified in the designation report of an interior landmark, the defendant shall be liable for a civil penalty equal to two times the estimated cost of replicating the protected features that were demolished, removed or altered.

(3) All other violations. The defendant shall be liable for a civil penalty of not more than five thousand dollars.

(4) For the purposes of this subdivision, each day during which there exists any violation of the provisions of paragraph three of subdivision a of section 25-305 of this chapter or paragraph two of subdivision a of section 25-310 of this chapter or subdivision a, b or c of section 25-311 of this chapter or any order issued by the chair with respect to such provisions shall constitute a separate violation.

b. In addition to or as an alternative to any of the remedies and penalties provided in this chapter, any person who violates any provision of sections 25-305, 25-310 or 25-311 or subdivision c of section 25-317 of this chapter or any order issued by the chair with respect to such provisions shall be liable for a civil penalty which may be recovered in an administrative proceeding before the office of administrative trials and hearings, the environmental control board or other administrative tribunal having jurisdiction as hereinafter provided.

(1) An administrative proceeding for civil penalties shall be commenced by the service of a notice of violation in accordance with the applicable law and rules governing the procedures of the administrative tribunal before which the notice of violation is returnable or as otherwise provided by the rules of the commission. The notice of violation shall identify the allegedly illegal conditions or work with reasonable specificity. As used in this subdivision, the term "reasonable specificity" shall mean a description of work or conditions, reasonably described given the circumstances, sufficient to inform a reasonable person that (1) work has been or is being done without an appropriate approval from the commission, (2) conditions have been created or are being maintained in violation of this chapter, or (3) there has been a failure to take action to prevent conditions that are in violation of this chapter. Such administrative tribunal shall have the power to impose civil penalties in accordance with this chapter. A judgment of an administrative tribunal imposing civil penalties may be enforced by the commencement of a civil action or proceeding in a court or as otherwise authorized by the applicable law governing the procedures of such administrative tribunal. Prior to serving a notice of violation, the chair shall serve a warning letter upon a respondent either personally or by mail in the manner provided by the rules of the commission. The warning letter shall inform the respondent that the chair believes the respondent has violated the provisions of this chapter, shall describe generally the allegedly illegal conditions and/or activities, shall warn the respondent that the law authorizes civil penalties for such violations, and shall provide the respondent with a grace period for removing or applying for a permit to legalize or otherwise address the allegedly illegal conditions. No such warning letter shall be required prior to the service of a notice of violation where (i) the subject violation is a second or subsequent offense, (ii) the subject violation is alleged to be an intentional violation, or (iii) the chair is seeking civil penalties for failure to comply with a stop work order, issued pursuant to this chapter.

(2) Except as otherwise specifically provided in this chapter, where a respondent has been found liable for or admitted liability to a violation of this chapter in an administrative proceeding, a civil penalty for such violation shall be imposed in accordance with the schedule set forth below.

(a) Type A and Type B violations. (i) First offense. The respondent shall be liable for a civil penalty of not more than five thousand dollars.

(ii) Second and subsequent offenses. The respondent shall be liable for a civil penalty of not more than two hundred fifty dollars a day for each day that a condition underlying a prior violation continues to exist, measured from the date the respondent was found liable for or admitted liability to the prior violation, but in no event shall the civil penalty be less than the maximum possible penalty for a first offense.

(b) Type C violation. (i) First offense. The respondent shall be liable for a civil penalty of not more than five hundred dollars.

(ii) Second and subsequent offenses. The respondent shall be liable for a civil penalty of not more than fifty dollars a day for each day that a condition underlying a prior violation continues to exist, measured from the date the respondent was found liable for or pled guilty to the prior violation, but in no event shall the civil penalty be less than the maximum possible penalty for a first offense.

(3) Notwithstanding the penalty schedule set forth above, the chair may, in his or her discretion, for good cause shown, recommend that a lesser or no civil penalty be imposed on a respondent in an administrative proceeding.

(4) Restrictions on service of notice of violation for second or subsequent offense. (a) The chair shall not serve a notice of violation for a second or subsequent offense unless (i) more than twenty-five days have elapsed since the respondent was found liable or admitted liability in the prior proceeding and (ii) where the respondent in the prior proceeding has submitted an application to the commission for an appropriate approval to legalize or to undertake the work necessary to cure the condition underlying the prior proceeding, more than thirty days have elapsed since such application has been disapproved or denied in whole or in part or if granted, such approval by its terms has expired. If the respondent has filed more than one such application with the commission, the thirty day period shall commence after the first such application has been disapproved or denied in whole or in part or, if granted, by its terms has expired.

(b) Nothing in this subdivision shall prohibit the chair, subject to the rules of the administrative tribunal having jurisdiction over the proceeding, from serving an amended notice of violation for the purpose of clarifying the allegedly illegal conditions referred to in the prior notice of violation, or from serving a subsequent notice of violation that alleges separate violations of this chapter. An amended notice of violation shall be returnable on the same date and before the same administrative body as the initial notice of violation.

(5) Multiple violations incurred for the same work. If work, reasonably identified in a notice of violation, was done without an appropriate approval from the commission, the total amount of any civil penalty for such work shall be determined by, to the extent feasible, separately considering and assessing a penalty for each type of work and/or each distinct effect on the protected features of the landmark, interior landmark or improvement in an historic district. In no event shall the civil penalty exceed five thousand dollars for a first offense. Where the respondent is the owner, separate penalties shall not be assessed for each type of work and/or each distinct effect if the illegal work was performed during a period of time when the premises were leased to and under the control of a person other than the owner.

(6) Grace period. (a) No civil penalty shall be imposed in an administrative proceeding for a first violation if prior to the return date of the notice of violation, the respondent concedes liability for the violation and supplies the commission with proof, satisfactory to the commission, that the violation has been corrected. If the respondent makes any misrepresentation or omission of a material fact to the commission regarding the removal of the violation, the respondent shall be liable for a civil penalty of not more than ten thousand dollars.

(b) No civil penalty shall be imposed in an administrative proceeding for a first violation if prior to the return date of the notice of violation the respondent concedes liability for the violation and submits an application to the commission for approval to legalize or to undertake the work necessary to cure the violation.

(c) The provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to a second or subsequent offense or where the respondent is alleged to have violated a stop work order or where the respondent has after the issuance of a warning letter pursuant to paragraph one of subdivision (b) of section 25-317.1 applied for and received a permit to cure or otherwise address a violation, and the respondent has failed to cure the violation pursuant to the terms of such permit.

§ 25-317.2 Violations of landmarks laws: enforcement.

a. Stop-work orders. (1) An order to stop work may be issued by the chair, or his or her authorized representative, at any time when the chair reasonably believes that work is being performed in violation of the provisions of this chapter. Each order issued by the chair shall have his or her signature affixed thereto, but the chair may authorize any subordinate to affix such signature.

(2) Such order may be given orally or in writing to a person in charge or apparently in charge of the improvement or involved in the work being performed thereon or may be served on the owner or person in charge of the improvement parcel as otherwise provided in the commission's rules. The police department and the department of buildings shall, upon the request of the chair, assist the chair in the enforcement of such orders. Where the order is given orally a written notice of such order shall be mailed to the person to whom the order was addressed or affixed to the premises where the violation occurred within forty-eight hours after service of such oral order.

b. Contents of orders. All stop work orders issued by the chair shall identify the allegedly illegal conditions or work with reasonable specificity. As used in this subdivision, the term "reasonable specificity" shall mean a description of work or conditions, reasonably described given the circumstances, sufficient to inform a reasonable person that (1) work has been or is being done without an appropriate approval from the commission or (2) conditions have been created or are being maintained in violation of this chapter. The order shall also identify the subject premises by the tax block and lot or street address, and shall be addressed to a person in charge of the improvement, or to a person who is alleged to have created the illegal conditions or performed, authorized overseen or permitted the illegal work. The chair may issue a separate order to each person who, as a result of the same condition or work, is alleged to have violated the provisions of this chapter.

c. In addition to any of the remedies or penalties provided for in this section, failure to comply with a stop work order shall be subject to the payment of a civil penalty in the sum of five hundred dollars for each day there is non-compliance, to be recovered in a civil action brought in the name of the chair or in an administrative proceeding before the office of administrative trials and hearings, the environmental control board or other administrative tribunal having jurisdiction.

d. Enforcement proceedings. (1) Upon the violation of any provision of this chapter, or the failure to comply with any stop-work order issued by the chair thereunder, or whenever any person is about to engage in or is engaging in any act or practice that may constitute a violation of any provision of this chapter, the chair may request the corporation counsel to institute all necessary actions and/or proceedings to restrain, correct or abate such violation or potential violation, to compel compliance with such order and/or to seek civil penalties pursuant to this chapter. The corporation counsel may institute such actions or proceedings as may be necessary and appropriate for such purposes.

(2) Such actions and proceedings may be instituted by the corporation counsel in the name of the city in any court of appropriate jurisdiction. In such actions or proceedings, the city may apply for restraining orders, preliminary injunctions or other provisional remedies, with or without notice.

e. Notice of violation; presumptive evidence. In any action or proceeding founded upon a claim by the chair that any law or rule enforceable by the commission has been violated, or that a lawful order issued by the chair has not been complied with, a notice of violation shall be presumptive evidence of any matter stated therein.

f. In addition to police officers, officers and employees of the commission and employees of other city agencies designated by the chair may enforce the provisions of this chapter and may issue summonses and appearance tickets returnable in the criminal court and notices of violation returnable before the environmental control board, the office of administrative trials and hearings or other administrative tribunal having jurisdiction.

§ 25-318 Reports by commission on plans for proposed projects.

a. Plans for the construction, reconstruction, alteration or demolition of any improvement or proposed improvement which:

(1) is owned by the city or is to be constructed upon property owned by the city; and

(2) is or is to be located on a landmark site or in an historic district or contains an interior landmark;

shall, prior to city action approving or otherwise authorizing the use of such plans with respect to securing the performance of such work, be referred by the agency of the city having responsibility for the preparation of such plans to the commission for a report. Such report shall be submitted to the mayor, the city council and to the agency having such responsibility and shall be published in the City Record within forty-five days after such referral.

b. (1) No officer or agency of the city whose approval is required by law for the construction or effectuation of a city-aided project shall approve the plans or proposal for, or application for approval of, such project, unless, prior to such approval, such officer or agency has received from the commission a report on such plans, proposal or application for approval.

(2) All such plans, proposals or applications for approval shall be referred to the commission for a report thereon before consideration of approval thereof is undertaken by any such officer or agency, and the commission shall submit its report to each such officer and agency and such report shall be published in the City Record within forty-five days after such referral.

c. Except as provided in subdivision d of section 25-303, where the commission so requests, plans for the construction, reconstruction, alteration or demolition of any landscape feature of a scenic landmark shall, prior to city action approving or otherwise authorizing the use of such plans with respect to securing the performance of such work, be referred by the agency of the city having responsibility for the preparation of such plans to the commission for a report. Such report shall be submitted to the mayor, the city council and to the agency having such responsibility and shall be published in the City Record within forty-five days after such referral. No such report shall recommend disapproval of any such plans where land contour work or earthwork is necessary in order to conform with applicable laws concerning regulation of lots, storm water disposal and water courses. The commissioner of parks and recreation may request an advisory report concerning work proposed to be performed on, or in the vicinity of, a scenic landmark, and such report shall be published in the City Record.

d. In addition to the powers conferred by this chapter, the commission shall have the powers specifically conferred upon it by chapter thirty-seven of the charter.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. A plan for removal of the Central Park bandshell, which had been designated as a scenic landmark as well as a national historic landmark, had to be reviewed by the entire Landmarks Commission. Where the Commission had previously approved a plan but the revised plan differs materially from the prior plan, the change required full review rather than a mere letter from the chairperson of the Commission. London v. Art Commission of the City of New York, 190 A.D.2d 557, 593 N.Y.S.2d 233 (1st Dept. 1993).

¶ 2. It was a technical violation of the statute when the Parks Department approved a museum renovation plan prior to referral of the plan to the Landmarks Preservation Commission (LPC). However, the court held that the violation was of a minor procedural nature and did not render ineffective the Parks Department approval, particularly where the LPC ultimately approved the work and there was no claim that any work was done which was not within the scope of the LPC approval. § 25-322 Notification; lease notification.

a. Upon designation by the commission of any improvement or property as a landmark and of any landmark site, interior landmark or historic district, or any amendment of such designation, the owner of such improvement or property shall be notified in writing of such designation by the commission. Such notice shall be sent to the owner or owners at his or her or their last known address or addresses, as the same appear in the records of the office of the commissioner of finance or if there is no name in such records, such notice may be sent to the street address of the improvement parcel or property in question, addressed to "Owner". The failure by the commission to give notice of designation as required by this subdivision shall not invalidate or affect any actions or proceedings pursuant to this chapter relating to such improvement parcel or property, except that no action or proceeding pursuant to subparagraph d of this section shall be commenced until thirty days after such notice has been given.

b. It shall be the duty of the owner or person in charge of an improvement or property that is a landmark, interior landmark or is located on a landmark site or within an historic district to ensure that every lease or sublease, or renewal thereof, between the owner or such other person in charge as lessor and a nonresidential tenant as lessee and concerning such improvement or property shall contain a notice, conspicuously set forth therein, stating that in accordance with sections 25-305, 25-306, 25-309 or 25-310 of this chapter the lessee must obtain a permit from the commission before commencing any exterior or interior work on the improvement or property, except for ordinary repair and maintenance as that term is defined in subdivision r of section 25-302 of this chapter. When an improvement or property is designated a landmark, interior landmark or as part of an historic district during the term of a lease or sublease of all or a portion of such improvement or property, the lessor of such lease or sublease shall, within thirty days after being notified in writing of such designation by the commission or a person in charge, send a written notice as described above to all nonresidential lessees of such lessor. Such notice shall be sent by certified or registered mail, return receipt requested to all nonresidential lessees on the first two floors of the improvement or property, and shall be sent to all other nonresidential lessees by any means reasonably designed to ensure that notice is given.

c. The commission shall promulgate such regulations as it deems necessary to comply with the provisions of this section, with respect to notice requirements in all nonresidential leases for buildings under its jurisdiction.

d. Any person who violates subdivision b of this section, or the regulations promulgated hereunder, shall be subject to a civil penalty of not more than five hundred dollars per violation which shall be returnable to the environmental control board.

As used in this chapter:

(a) "Average full valuation of taxable real property" means the valuation obtained by taking the assessed valuation of taxable real property in the district as it appears upon the last completed and four preceding assessment rolls of the city and dividing each by the applicable state equalization rate as determined by the state board of equalization and assessment pursuant to article twelve of the real property tax law for each of the assessment rolls and dividing the sum of the quotients thus obtained by five.

(b) "District" means a business improvement district established pursuant to this chapter.

(c) "District charge" means a levy imposed on behalf of a district as provided in the district plan.

(d) "District management association" means the association established pursuant to section 25-414 of this chapter.

(e) "District plan" or "plan" means a proposal as defined in section 25-405 of this chapter.

(f) "Owner" means owner of record.

(g) "Tenant" means an occupant pursuant to a lease of commercial space or a dwelling unit, other than an owner.

The district plan shall contain the following;

(a) a map of the district;

(b) the written report or reports of the city council containing:

(l) a description of the boundaries of the district proposed for establishment or extension in a manner sufficient to identify the lands included;

(2) a description of the present and proposed uses of such lands;

(3) the improvements proposed and the maximum cost thereof;

(4) the total annual amount proposed to be expended for improvements, maintenance and operation;

(5) the proposed source or sources of financing;

(6) the proposed time for implementation and completion of the district plan;

(7) any proposed rules and regulations to be applicable to the district;

(8) a list of the properties to be benefited, and a statement of the method or methods by which the expenses of a district will be imposed upon benefited real property, in proportion to the benefit received by such property, to defray the cost thereof, including operation and maintenance. Notwithstanding any inconsistent provision of section 25-407 of this chapter, the plan may provide that all or any class or category of real property which is exempt by law from real property taxation and which would not benefit from the establishment or extension of the district may nevertheless be included within the boundaries of the district but such property shall not be subject to any district charge;

(9) a statement identifying the district management association for the district; and

(10) any other item or matter required to be incorporated therein by the city council.

§ 25-404 Powers of the city council.

Upon establishment of a district pursuant to the provisions of this chapter, the city council shall have authority to exercise the following powers with respect to such district, subject to the provisions of this chapter: (a) To provide for district improvements located on or within municipally or district owned or leased property which will restore or promote business activity in the district: (1) construction and installation of landscaping, planting, and park areas;

(2) construction of lighting and heating facilities;

(3) construction of physically aesthetic and decorative safety fixtures, equipment and facilities;

(4) construction of improvements to enhance security of persons and property within the district;

(5) construction of pedestrian overpasses, underpasses and connections between buildings;

(6) closing, opening, widening or narrowing of existing streets;

(7) construction of ramps, sidewalks, plazas, and pedestrian malls;

(8) rehabilitation or removal of existing structures as required;

(9) removal and relocation of utilities and vaults as required;

(10) construction of parking lot and parking garage facilities; and

(11) construction of fixtures, equipment, facilities and appurtenances as may enhance the movement, convenience and enjoyment of the public and be of economic benefit to surrounding properties such as: bus stop shelters; benches and street furniture; booths, kiosks, display cases, and exhibits; signs; receptacles; canopies; pedestrian shelters and fountains.

(b) To provide for the operation and maintenance of any district improvement;

(c) To provide for additional maintenance or other additional services required for the enjoyment and protection of the public and the promotion and enhancement of the district whether or not in conjunction with improvements authorized by this section, including:

(1) enhanced sanitation services;

(2) services promoting and advertising activities within the district;

(3) marketing education for businesses within the district;

(4) decorations and lighting for seasonal and holiday purposes; and

(5) services to enhance the security of persons and property within the district.

§ 25-405 District plan.

(a) The mayor may provide for the preparation of a district plan, upon his or her own initiative, or at the request of an individual or agency designated by him or her, or at the request of the city council, or upon the written petition, signed and acknowledged, of (1) the owners of at least fifty-one percent of the assessed valuation of all the taxable real property within the boundaries of the district proposed for establishment or extension, as shown upon the latest completed assessment roll of the city, and (2) at least fifty-one percent of the owners of real property within the area included in the district proposed for establishment or extension.

(b) The establishment or extension of a district shall be based upon the district plan filed in the office of the city clerk, except as provided in subdivision (c) of this section.

(c) The district plan shall first be submitted to the city planning commission which shall forward a copy within five days to the city council and to the council member or members representing the council district or districts in which the proposed district is located, to the community board or boards for the community district or districts in which the proposed district is located, and to the respective borough board and borough president, if the plan involves properties located in two or more community districts. Each community board shall notify the public of the proposed plan in accordance with the requirements established by the city planning commission, and may conduct a public hearing and submit a written recommendation to the city planning commission not later than thirty days after receipt of the plan. The city planning commission shall review the plan and recommendations, and, after a public hearing, prepare a report. The city planning commission shall submit its report to the mayor, to the affected borough president, to the city council and to the council member or members representing the council district or districts in which the proposed district is located, together with copies of any recommendation of a community board, within sixty days from the date of expiration of the community board's period for reviewing the plan and submitting recommendations. This report shall certify the city planning commission's unqualified approval, disapproval or qualified approval with recommendations for modifications of the district plan. A copy of this report together with the original district plan shall be transmitted for filing with the city clerk. In the event the city planning commission shall fail to submit its report within ninety-five days of receipt of the original district plan, it shall be required to immediately transmit the original plan to the city clerk for filing and no report of the city planning commission shall be necessary.

(d) All district plans shall conform with the requirements of this chapter. The mayor may determine that the plan or any part of the plan, shall be prepared by, or under the supervision of city officers and employees to be designated by the mayor, or by persons or firms to be employed for that purpose. Except as otherwise provided in this chapter, the expense incurred for the preparation of the plan or part of the plan shall be a city charge.

(e) If the city shall thereafter establish or extend the district or provide the improvements or additional services or contract for the required services, the expense incurred by the city for the preparation of the plan or any part of the plan shall be deemed to be part of the cost of the improvement, or the rendering of additional services, and the city shall be reimbursed in the amount paid, or the portion of that amount which the city council, at a public hearing held pursuant to this chapter, shall allocate against the district.

§ 25-406 Notice and hearing

(a) After the filing of the district plan in the office of the city clerk, the city council may adopt a resolution and shall enter the same in the minutes of its proceedings. This resolution shall contain a copy of the district plan, any report of the city planning commission or board, the fact that a district plan is on file in the city clerk's office for public inspection and the time when and the place where the city council will meet and hold a public hearing to hear all persons interested in the subject thereof.

(b) The resolution shall also contain a statement that any owner of real property, deemed benefited and therefore within the district, objecting to the plan must file an objection at the office of the city clerk within thirty days of the conclusion of the hearing on forms made available by the clerk, and, further, that if (1) owners of at least fifty-one percent of the assessed valuation of all the benefited real property situated within the boundaries of the district proposed for establishment or extension, as shown upon the latest completed assessment roll of the city, or (2) at least fifty-one percent of the owners of benefited real property within the area included in the district proposed for establishment or extension, so file their objections, the district will not be established or extended.

(c) The city council shall cause a copy of the resolution or a summary thereof to be published at least once in the City Record or a newspaper in general circulation in the city, the first publication to be not less than ten nor more than thirty days before the day set for the hearing required by this section. In addition, not less than ten nor more than thirty days before the date set for the hearing, the city council shall cause a copy of the resolution or a summary thereof to be mailed to each owner of real property within the proposed district at the address shown on the latest city assessment roll, to such other persons as are registered with the city to receive tax bills concerning real property within the proposed district, and to the tenants of each building within the proposed district. If the city council publishes or mails a summary of the resolution, such summary shall include the business address of the city clerk, a statement that copies of the resolution shall be made available free of charge to the public, the improvements proposed and the maximum cost thereof, the total annual amount proposed to be expended for improvements, maintenance and operation, and a statement indicating the rights of owners to object pursuant to subdivision (b) of this section.

(d) The resolution may further state the place, other than the city clerk's office, where the district plan may be inspected in advance of the hearing, if the city council determines that, in the public interest, any additional place of inspection is necessary or desirable.

CHAPTER 4 CITY BUSINESS IMPROVEMENT DISTRICTS

§ 25-407 Establishment or extension of the district.

(a) Not earlier than thirty days after the conclusion of the last day of the public hearing held pursuant to section 25-406 of this chapter, the city council shall determine:

(1) whether the notice of hearing for all hearings required to be held was published and mailed as required by law and is otherwise sufficient;

(2) except as otherwise provided in section 25-403 of this chapter, whether all the real property within the boundaries of the proposed district or extension will benefit from the establishment or extension of the district;

(3) whether all the real property benefited is included within the limits of the proposed district or extension; and

(4) whether the establishment or extension of the district is in the public interest.

(b) (1) If the city council shall determine the question of paragraph four of subdivision (a) of this section in the negative, or if the requisite number of owners shall have filed their objections as provided in section 25-406 of this chapter, the city council shall adopt a resolution disapproving the establishment or extension of the district, stating the reasons for its determination and enter the same in the minutes of its proceedings. Thereafter no plan for the establishment or extension of a district to include any part of the property proposed to be included in the disapproved district may be prepared as provided in section 25-405 of this chapter until the expiration of at least one year from the date of disapproval.

(2) If the city council shall find that notice was incorrectly or insufficiently given or that, except as otherwise provided in section 25-403 of this chapter, any part or portion of the real property within the boundaries of the proposed district or extension is not benefited thereby or that certain property benefited thereby has not been included therein, it shall call a further hearing at a definite place and time not less than ten nor more than thirty days after this determination. In the resolution calling such hearing, it shall specify the necessary changes, if any, to the boundaries of the proposed district or extension to be made in order that, except as otherwise provided in section 25-403 of this chapter, all of the real property and only that real property as is deemed benefited shall be included within the boundaries of the proposed district or extension. Such a further hearing shall also be required in the event that the city council proposes to amend the district plan to reduce improvements or services or provide additional improvements or services not included in the original plan prior to the establishment of the district. Notice of the further hearing shall be published and mailed in the manner provided in section 25-406 of this chapter, except that, where boundaries are to be altered, this notice shall also specify the manner in which it is proposed to alter the boundries*2 of the proposed district or extension. The further hearing shall be conducted in the same manner as the original hearing.

(c) If and when the city council shall determine in the affirmative all of the questions set forth in subdivision (a) of this section, and provided that the requisite number of owners shall not have objected as provided in section 25-406 of this chapter, it may adopt a local law approving the establishment or extension of the district as the boundaries shall be finally determined and the construction of the improvement or providing of the service in the district. Such local law shall become effective only upon compliance with section 25-408 of this chapter.

(d) Upon the recommendation of the district management association and after a public hearing, the city council may adopt a local law at any time prior to or after the establishment of a district to change the method of assessment as set forth in the plan. Notice of such public hearing and a description of the proposed change shall be given in the manner set forth in section 25-406 of this chapter.

§ 25-408 Review by the state comptroller.

(a) The state comptroller shall review as provided in this section: (1) the establishment or extension of a district; and (2) the amendment of a district plan pursuant to subdivision (c) of section 25-410 of this chapter.

(b) Within twenty days after the adoption of a local law by the city council pursuant to section 25-407*3 or subdivision (c) of section 25-410 of this chapter the mayor shall forward the following information to the state comptroller at Albany, New York:

(1) an itemized statement of the then outstanding indebtedness of the city for all purposes, as evidenced by bonds, bond anticipation notes, capital notes, deferred payment notes and budget notes; the amount of budgetary appropriations for the payment of any outstanding indebtedness, whether or not appropriations have been realized as cash; the amount of indebtedness proposed to be contracted for the improvement, and the amounts, purposes and probable date of issuance of any bonds, bond anticipation notes, capital notes, deferred payments notes and budget notes which the city has authorized to be issued but which in fact have not been issued to date;

(2) a statement of the total assessed valuation of the taxable real property situated in the proposed district or extension of a district, as shown on the latest completed and four preceding assessment rolls of the city and of the amount of city real property taxes levied against such property in the preceding fiscal year;

(3) a statement of the average full valuation of the taxable real property of the city determined in accordance with the provisions of paragraph seven-a of section 2.00 of the local finance law; and

(4) a statement, the form of which shall be determined by the state comptroller, attesting that the provisions of this chapter have been met, signed and verified by the mayor.

(c) The state comptroller shall review the information submitted pursuant to paragraphs one, two and three of subdivision (b) above to determine that the tax and debt limitations provided in section 25-412 of this chapter will not be exceeded by the establishment or extension of the district.

(d) The state comptroller shall notify the city of his or her determination within sixty days of the receipt of the items specified in subdivision (b) of this section. Unless the state comptroller determines within such time that the tax and debt limitations provided in section 25-412 of this chapter will be exceeded by the establishment or extension of the district or that the statement required by paragraph four of subdivision (b) of this section does not comply with the provisions of such paragraph, the city may proceed with the establishment or extension of the district upon receipt of the notice from the state comptroller of his or her determination.

(e) Upon the city's compliance with any other requirements established by law, the local law adopted pursuant to section 25-407 of this chapter shall become effective.

§ 25-409 Publication; filing; judicial review.

(a) The city clerk shall cause a certified copy of the local law adopted pursuant to the provisions of this chapter establishing or extending any district, or increasing the maximum total amount proposed to be expended for the improvement in any district or extension, or changing the method of assessment, or authorizing the district to incur debt to provide for additional improvements or services within the district, to be duly recorded in the city clerk's office within ten days after such local law becomes effective. When so recorded this local law shall be presumptive evidence of the regularity of the proceedings for the establishment or extension of the district, of the proceedings instituted for the construction of any improvement and of all other actions taken in relation to it.

(b) Within ten days after the local law becomes effective, the city clerk shall, in addition to any other filing required by law, cause a certified copy thereof to be filed in the office of the state comptroller at Albany, New York, and within two weeks thereafter shall cause a copy of the local law or a summary thereof to be published at least once in the City Record or a newspaper of general circulation in the city.

(c) This local law shall be final and conclusive unless a proceeding to review is commenced in accordance with this subdivision. Any person aggrieved by any local law adopted pursuant to this chapter may seek judicial review of the local law in the manner provided by article seventy-eight of the civil practice law and rules, provided the proceeding is commenced within thirty days from the date of the publication of the copy or summary of the local law pursuant to subdivision (b) of this section. No review shall be had unless the petitioner shall give an undertaking approved by the supreme court, or a justice thereof, as to form, amount and sufficiency of sureties, that, in the event of failure to modify the local law, he or she will pay to the city all costs and expenses as are incurred by it on account of the proceedings, as shall be determined by the court. In the event that upon this review there shall be any modification by the court of the local law, the court shall direct the modification by judgment which shall be final and conclusive, and the city clerk shall cause the judgment to be recorded and filed in the same places and manner as was the local law which was modified.

§ 25-410 Amendments to the district plan.

(a) At any time after the establishment or extension of a district pursuant to the provisions of this chapter, the district plan upon which the establishment or extension was based, may, upon the recommendation of the district management association, be amended by the city council after compliance with the procedures set forth in this section.

(b) Amendments to the district plan which provide for additional improvements or services or any change in the method of assessment upon which the district charge is based, or an increase only in the amount to be expended annually for improvements, services, maintenance and operation may be adopted by local law, provided that the city council shall, after a public hearing, determine that it is in the public interest to authorize the additional improvements, services or increase in the maximum annual amount and that the tax and debt limits prescribed in section 25-412 of this chapter will not be exceeded. The city council shall give notice of the hearing by publication of a notice in at least one newspaper having general circulation in the district specifying the time when and the place where the hearing will be held and stating the increase proposed in the maximum amount to be expended annually. This notice shall be published once at least ten days prior to the date specified for the hearing.

(c) Amendments to the district plan which provide for the district to incur indebtedness in order to provide for additional improvements or which provide for an increase in the total maximum amount to be expended for improvements in the district, may be adopted by local law, provided that the city council shall, after a public hearing, determine that it is in the public interest to authorize the district to incur indebtedness to provide for additional improvements or to increase the maximum total amount to be expended for improvements in the district and that the tax and debt limits prescribed in section 25-412 of this chapter will not be exceeded. Notice of the hearing shall be published and mailed in the manner provided in section 25-406 of this chapter. The local law adopted pursuant to this subdivision shall not be effective until reviewed by the state comptroller in accordance with section 25-408 of this chapter.

(a) The expense incurred in the construction or operation of any improvement or provision of additional services in a district pursuant to this chapter shall be financed in accordance with the district plan upon which the establishment or extension of the district was based. Services for which district property owners are charged pursuant to the plan must be in addition to or an enhancement of those provided by the city prior to the district's establishment. The expense and cost apportioned to benefited real property in accordance with the plan shall be a charge upon each benefited parcel of real property within the district.

(b) The charge upon benefited real property pursuant to this chapter shall be imposed as provided in the district plan. If the formula includes an ad valorem component, this component shall be determined by the assessed value of each parcel as entered on the latest completed assessment roll used by the city for the levy of general city taxes. The charge shall be determined, levied and collected in the same manner, at the same time and by the same officers, as general city taxes are levied and collected.

(c) When a district has been established pursuant to this chapter, the city may, for the purpose of providing funds for making capital improvements within such district, issue and sell bonds or other municipal obligations as provided in the local finance law and other applicable laws and statutes. Principal and interest payments on these bonds or other municipal obligations may be made in whole or in part from the proceeds of charges imposed upon benefited real property within the district.

§ 25-414 District management association.

(a) There shall be a district management association for each district established pursuant to the provisions of this chapter (which shall pursuant to the not-for-profit corporation law have one or more classes of membership, voting or nonvoting) for the purpose of carrying out such activities as may be prescribed in the plan. Notwithstanding any inconsistent provision of paragraph (e) of section six hundred eleven of the not-for-profit corporation law, the certificate of incorporation or by-laws of such association shall provide for voting representation of owners of property and tenants within the district, and may provide that the votes of members who are property owners be weighted in proportion to the assessment levied or to be levied against the properties within the district, provided that in no case shall the total number of votes assigned to any one such member or to any number of such members under common ownership or control exceed thirty-three and one-third percent of the total number of votes which may be cast.

(b) The board of directors of the association shall be composed of representatives of owners and tenants within the district, provided, however, that not less than a majority of its members shall represent owners and provided further that tenants of commercial space and dwelling units within the district shall also be represented on the board. The board shall include, in addition, four members, one member appointed by each of the following: the mayor, the comptroller, the borough president of the borough in which the district is located and the council member representing the council district in which the proposed district is located, or if the proposed district is located in more than one council district, by the speaker of the city council after consultation with the council members representing the council districts in which the proposed district is located. The additional four members shall serve as the incorporators of the association pursuant to the not-for-profit corporation law. The association may be incorporated prior to the effective date of any district established pursuant to this chapter.

(c) In addition to such other powers as are conferred on it by law, the district management association may make recommendations to the city council with respect to any matter involving or relating to the district.

(d) For such consideration as it may deem appropriate and consistent with the powers granted pursuant to section 25-404 of this chapter, the city council may license or grant to the district management association the right to undertake or permit commercial activities or other private uses of the streets or other parts of the district in which the city has any real property interest.

§ 25-479 Hudson Square business improvement district.

a. The city council having determined, pursuant to section 25-407 of chapter four of this title: that notice of hearing for all hearings required to be held was published and mailed as required by law and was otherwise sufficient; that, except as otherwise provided in section 25-403 of chapter four of this title, all the real property within the boundaries of the district will benefit from the establishment of the district; that all the real property benefited is included within the limits of the district; and that the establishment of the district is in the public interest; and the council having determined further that the requisite number of owners have not objected as provided in section 25-406 of chapter four of this title, there is hereby established in the borough of Manhattan, the Hudson Square business improvement district. Such district is established in accordance with the district plan required to be filed with the city clerk pursuant to subdivision b of this section.

b. Immediately upon adoption of this local law by the council, the council shall file with the city clerk the district plan upon which the Hudson Square business improvement district is based.

c. The district plan shall not be amended except in accordance with chapter four of this title.

Title 26 Housing and Building

CHAPTER 2 RELOCATION SERVICES

§ 26-301 Relocation of tenants.

1. The commissioner of housing preservation and development shall have the power and it shall be his or her duty:

(a) To provide and maintain tenant relocation services

(i) for tenants of real property which the commissioner of housing preservation and development is authorized to maintain and supervise; and

(ii) for tenants of real property acquired for public purposes, excluding real property acquired by or on behalf of the New York city housing authority or the triborough bridge and tunnel authority; and

(iii) for tenants of real property located in any neighborhood improvement district designated by the city planning commission, where the displacement of such tenants results from the enforcement of any law, regulation, order or requirement pertaining to the maintenance and operation of such property or the health, safety and welfare of its occupants; and

(iv) when authorized by the mayor, for the tenants of any privately owned building or other improvement which is to be voluntarily rehabilitated in accordance with an urban renewal plan pursuant to law; and

(v) for tenants of any privately owned building where the displacement of such tenants results from the enforcement of any law, regulation, order or requirement pertaining to the maintanance or operation of such building or the health, safety and welfare of its occupants.

Such services shall consist of such activities as he or she may deem necessary, useful or appropriate for the relocation of such tenants, including but not limited to the gathering and furnishing of information as to suitable vacant accommodations, the making of studies and surveys for the purpose of locating such accommodations and the provision of facilities for the registration of such accommodations with the department by owners, lessors and managing agents of real property and others.

(b) Subject to the approval of the mayor, to fix and promulgate and from time to time amend a schedule of payments to be made to or for the benefit of and to aid in the relocation of tenants. Such schedule with respect to payments resulting from or relative to state or state-aided programs or activities within the city of New York shall also be subject to the approval of the director of the state division of the budget and of the head of the state department or agency having jurisdiction over such program, activity or aid. Such schedule shall provide for equal treatment of tenants under similar circumstances, shall be applicable as herein provided and may include but need not be limited to payments to be made to such tenants to induce their voluntary removal, moving expenses and expenses of redecorating accommodations to which such tenants are relocated and payments to persons for the services of finding accommodations to which such tenants are to be relocated. Such schedule may include maximum or minimum payments, or both. The acceptance of a payment provided for under such schedule by a landlord, owner or authorized agent shall not be deemed a violation of any rent regulation or statutory prohibition to the contrary.

(c) Subject to the approval of the mayor, to adopt and promulgate and from time to time amend supplementary rules and regulations not inconsistent with the provisions of this section in regard to relocation practices and procedures, applicable as herein provided.

(d) To schedule and coordinate the tenant relocation operations of agencies, persons, firms and corporations to which the rules and regulations promulgated pursuant to this section are applicable.

(e) To review conditions of city-owned dwellings used for residential purposes and, upon submission of a report by two qualified employees of the agency following a personal inspection, setting forth a finding that any such dwelling is in condition which endangers the life, health or safety of the occupants, and if he or she accepts such report, the commissioner may certify that the conditions in the dwelling are such that they require that the dwelling be vacated in which event he or she shall:

(i) order such dwelling to be vacated by its occupants upon no less than thirty days written notice to such occupants; and

(ii) provide relocation services and allowances for occupants who relocate pursuant to any such order and the regulations promulgated by the department.

2. The commissioner shall have power, when authorized by the mayor , to let contracts for the furnishing of maintenance services, payments and benefits deemed necessary, useful or appropriate for the purpose of assisting in the relocation of tenants of real property mentioned in subparagraphs (i), (ii), (iii) and (iv) of paragraph (a) of subdivision one of this section, provided that payments to be made to or for the benefit of such tenants shall be those fixed and promulgated pursuant to paragraph (b) of subdivision one of this section.

3. Notwithstanding any other provisions of law, the schedule promulgated pursuant to paragraph (b) of subdivision one of this section and the rules and regulations promulgated pursuant to paragraph (c) of subdivision one of this section shall, to the extent to which they are not inconsistent with any federal act or regulation issued pursuant thereto, be applicable to every agency and public corporation engaged in the relocation of tenants including, but not limited to, the department of housing preservation and development, the New York city housing authority and the triborough bridge and tunnel authority, and shall also be applicable, as therein provided and to the extent to which they are not inconsistent with any federal act or regulation issued pursuant thereto, to every person,firm or corporation whose relocation activities are subject to the supervision of the department pursuant to section 26-302 of this chapter provided, however, that where the commissioner furnishes relocation services to any tenants pursuant to the provisions of subparagraph (iv) of paragraph (a) of subdivision one of this section, such schedule shall be applicable to the person, firm or corporation which has contracted with the city for the rehabilitation of the building or other improvement occupied by such tenants, and such person, firm or corporation shall make payments to or for the benefit of such tenants in accordance with such schedule, subject to adjustment as to payments with respect to which federal reimbursement is provided.

4. The commissioner shall have the power to investigate, examine and inspect relocation operations which are subject to the provisions of this section.

5. The commissioner shall annually submit to the mayor, the board of estimate, and the council a detailed report on tenant relocation activities which are subject to the provisions of this section and recommendations in regard thereto and shall coordinate the efforts of and consider the reports, recommendations and suggestions of public and private agencies and civic groups in regard thereto.

6. a. There shall be an interagency relocation coordinating committee, which shall consist of a deputy mayor designated by the mayor, and representatives of the department of buildings, the department of city planning, department of health and mental hygiene, the department of housing preservation and development, the New York city housing authority, the commission on human rights, the board of education, the triborough bridge and tunnel authority and the department of social services. Each such board, authority, commission or agency and the head of each such department shall appoint as a representative one officer or employee who is a member of the staff of such board, authority, commission, department or agency and is qualified to participate in the functions of the committee as herein prescribed. Such representatives shall represent their respective agencies as members of the committee. The deputy mayor designated by the mayor as a member of such committee shall be its chairperson. It shall advise the commissioner of housing preservation and development for the purpose of assisting the commissioner in developing a relocation program for the city which will best serve the public interest. The members of the committee shall serve as such without additional compensation.

b. Notwithstanding any other provisions of law, no officer or employee of the city or other public officer or employee shall be ineligible for appointment or service as a member of the committee and any such officer or employee may accept any such appointment and serve as such member without forfeiture of any other city or public office or any other city position or other position of public employment by reason thereof.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. Tenant was entitled to receive from City costs of relocating its amusement park rides and equipment when it was an occupant at time City retook title to property pursuant to a condemnation order in 1972 although it was not an occupant when title originally vested in the City in 1971.-Matter of MHG Enterprises, Inc. & Other Condemnees in Possession v. City of N.Y., 91 Misc. 2d 842 [1977].

¶ 2. Tenants in emergency relocation center in Bronx for whom Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development (HPD) was responsible for relocating, who had benefits terminated by HPD for their refusal of three "standard" apts. (as per HPD's regulns.) were entitled to bring class action. Change in HPD's defn. of "standard" apt. from "hazardous" viol. standard to "immediately hazardous" viol. standard was arbitrary and capricious. Permanent injunction granted preventing HPD from using such standard.-Matter of Goodwin v. Gleidman, 119 Misc. 2d 538 [1983].

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Eviction proceedings were brought by the City because it had posted a vacate order pursuant to §26-301(1)(e) that a city-owned in rem building was unsafe. Before the City can be relieved from its statutory duty to repair the building, it must demonstrate that its conduct did not create the condition of disrepair or allow it to occur through neglect. Hearing is required on the repair costs. Lacks v. City of New York, 156 Misc. 2d 749 [1993].

¶ 2. The City of New York does not have unfettered discretion to issue a vacate order. If repair work is economically feasible, the City cannot employ a vacate order as a means of avoiding its obligation to keep the building in good repair. Lacks v. City of New York, 201 A.D.2d 309, 607 N.Y.S.2d 32 (1st Dept. 1994).

¶ 3. The City issued a vacate order, relocated a group of tenants, and then sought reimbursement for relocation expenses. The landlord contended that the tenants vacated the premises not because of the vacate order but because of eviction proceedings commenced by the landlord against the tenants prior to the issuance of the vacate order. The court held that in the absence of proof that the tenants even received the vacate order prior to their departure from the premises, and in the absence of proper documentation of the expenses in question, the City was not entitled to a lien for relocation expenses. Thus, the court granted the landlord's application for an order vacating the City's lien. Toolsee v. HPD, 299 A.D.2d 209, 750 N.Y.S.2d 24 (1st Dept. 2002).

¶ 4. Admin. Code § 26-301 requires the Department of Housing Preservation and Development to provide location assistance for tenants of privately owned buildings where the displacement of the tenant results from the enforcement of any law or regulation pertaining to maintenance of operation of the building. Thus, a tenant, who was residing in an illegal basement apartment and who was forced to leave the premises due to a vacate order, was held to be entitled to relocation assistance. The court rejected HPD's argument that the occupant of an illegal apartment could not be deemed a permanent resident for purposes of the relocation statute. Cupidon v. Donovan, 8 Misc.3d 1024(A), 803 N.Y.S.2d 17, 2005 WL 1880605 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 2005).

¶ 5. Tenants in buildings subject to orders to vacate are entitled to relocation services, provided by the New York City Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development, regardless of whether the dwelling units which are subject to the vacate orders are lawful. Smith v. Donovan, 61 A.D.3d 505, 878 N.Y.S.2d 675 (1st Dept. 2009).

CHAPTER 2 RELOCATION SERVICES

§ 26-305 Expenses of relocation pursuant to vacate order.

1. Whenever the department of housing preservation and development has incurred expenses in providing relocation services for tenants pursuant to subparagraph (v) of paragraph (a) of subdivision one of section 26-301 of this chapter, the department shall be entitled to reimbursement of such expenses from the owner of the building from which such tenants were relocated, if the conditions giving rise to the need for such relocation arose as a result of the negligent or intentional acts of such owner, or as a result of his or her failure to maintain such dwelling in accordance with the standards prescribed by the housing or health code governing such dwelling. "Owner" for purposes of this section shall mean and include the owner or owners of the freehold of the premises or lesser estate therein, a mortgagee or vendee in possession, assignee of rents, receiver, executor, trustee, lessee, agent, or any other person, firm or corporation, directly or indirectly in control of a dwelling.

2. The expenses incurred for which payment to the department is due under the provisions of this section shall include but not be limited to departmental costs, bonuses, moving expenses or other reasonable allowances given to induce tenants to relocate voluntarily.

3. The department may bring an action against the owner for the recovery of such expenses. The institution of such action shall not suspend or bar the right to pursue any other remedy provided by this section or any other law for the recovery of such expenses.

4. To the extent that such expenses are not recovered by the department, they shall, except as herein provided, constitute a lien or liens upon such building and the lot upon which it stands, governed by the provisions of law regulating mechanics liens.

(a) No such lien shall be valid for any purpose until the department shall file a notice of lien containing the same particulars as are required to be stated with reference to mechanics liens, with the further statement that the expenses had been incurred for relocation services provided pursuant to subparagraph (v) of paragraph (a) of subdivision one of section 26-301 of this chapter together with a statement of such expenses. The department may file one or more such liens for relocation expenses incurred with respect to any building within one year of incurring any such expenses. In computing such one year period, the latest date on which any expense in relation to which such notice was filed has been incurred shall be deemed the date on which all of the expenses stated in such notice were incurred.

(b) Such lien or liens shall continue for a period of ten years from the time of filing of notice thereof, unless proceedings are in the meantime taken to enforce or discharge such lien or liens, which proceedings may be taken at any time during the continuance of such lien or liens or unless an order is granted within [three] ten years from the time of the filing of any such lien or liens by a court of record or a judge or justice thereof continuing such lien or liens, in which case such lien or liens shall be redocketed as of the date of granting such order and a statement made continuing such lien or liens by virtue of such order. No lien shall be continued by such order for more than ten years from the granting thereof, but a new order and entry may be made in each successive ten-year period. Any judgment in a proceeding to enforce or discharge such lien shall constitute a lien in the same manner and from the same date as the original lien. The initiation of any such proceedings shall not suspend or bar the right to pursue any other remedy provided by this section or any other law for the recovery of such expenses.

(c) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in paragraph b of this subdivision, a lien which already exists and is currently docketed on the effective date of the local law that added this paragraph shall be deemed continued for a period of ten years commencing from the date of the last renewal or docketing of said lien, whichever is later.

Authorization for a lien in favor of the City for cost of relocation services where a fire had occurred at the premises, which was filed in accordance with this section was constitutional where an opportunity for an immediate hearing existed upon application to enforce or discharge the lien.-Gibor Associates v. City of N.Y., 91 Misc. 2d 915 [1977].

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. In City of New York v. New York & Hong Kong Reciprocation Exchange Corp., 193 Misc.2d 716, 749 N.Y.S.2d 405 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 2002), 55 persons allegedly were living illegally in the basement of the subject building. The City issued a vacate order, relocated the 55 tenants, and then sought reimbursement from the building owner for the costs of relocation. Although 55 people allegedly resided in the basement cubicles, there were only a total of 20 beds there. The statute provides for reimbursement in connection with relocation of "tenants," and the court had to decide whether the relocated persons constituted "tenants" within the meaning of the statute. The court held that in the absence of evidence as to the length of time that the occupants resided at the premises (some may not have lived there for more than a day or two), the occupants did not qualify as "tenants." Thus, the court dismissed the City's action for reimbursement of relocation expenses.

CHAPTER 3 RENT CONTROL

a. The council hereby finds that a serious public emergency continues to exist in the housing of a considerable number of persons in the city, which emergency was created by war, the effects of war and the aftermath of hostilities; that such emergency necessitated the intervention of federal, state and local government in order to prevent speculative, unwarranted and abnormal increases in rents; that there continues to exist an acute shortage of dwellings; that unless residential rents and evictions continue to be regulated and controlled, disruptive practices and abnormal conditions will produce serious threats to the public health, safety and general welfare; that to prevent such perils to health, safety and welfare, preventive action through enactment of local legislation by the council continues to be imperative; that such action, as a temporary measure to be effective until it is determined by the council that such emergency no longer exists, is necessary in order to prevent exactions of unjust, unreasonable and oppressive rents and rental agreements and to forestall profiteering, speculation and other disruptive practices tending to produce threats to the public health; that the transition from regulation to a normal market of free bargaining between landlord and tenant, while still the objective of state and city policy, must be administered with due regard for such emergency; that in order to prevent uncertainty, hardship and dislocation, the provisions of this chapter are declared to be necessary and designed to protect the public health, safety and general welfare.

b. The council further declares that it is city policy to utilize the powers conferred by this chapter, in a manner consistent with the purposes and provisions thereof, to encourage and promote the improvement and rehabilitation of the housing accommodations subject to control hereunder, for the purpose of protecting the public health, safety and general welfare.

¶ 2. Local Law 13 of 1964, which provides for the decontrol of certain apartments having a maximum rental of $250 or more per month, is constitutional. Gauthier v. Gabel, 44 Misc 2d 887, 255 NYS2d 200 [1964], aff'd, 16 NY2d 720, 268 NYS2d 105, 209, NE2d 723 [1965].

¶ 3. Landlord was not entitled to rent in excess of maximum rent under rent control in non-payment summary proceeding brought against tenant of a rent controlled apartment even though parties upon consent of tenant stipulated in a prior summary proceeding to such an increase such an agreement being against public policy. Norms Realty v. Rodriguez, 108 Misc 2d 124 [1981].

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. There is no distinction between an over-charge in rent and a failure to refund rent in regard to the treble damage penalty of an apartment subject to the Emergency Tenant Protection Act of 1974 where the tenants had paid rent increases based on a tax escalation clause in their leases and the landlord had received refunds from the city from tax certiorari proceedings. Shainess v. Division of Housing & Community Renewal, 78 AD2d 788 [1988].

¶ 2. President Park, Inc. v. Brabham, 635 N.Y.S.2d 432 (Civ.Ct. New York Co. 1995). Where a rent controlled building is sold to the City of New York, the premises are no longer rent controlled. However, if the building is later resold to a private party, the building reverts back to rent control.

CHAPTER 3 RENT CONTROL

§ 26-403 Definitions.

When used in this chapter, unless a different meaning clearly appears from the context, the following terms shall mean and include:

a. Administrator. The commissioner of the state division of housing and community renewal.

b. City rent agency. The state division of housing and community renewal.

c. "Documents." Records, books, accounts, correspondence, memoranda and other documents, drafts and copies of any of the foregoing.

d. "Federal act." The Emergency Price Control Act of nineteen hundred forty-two, and as thereafter amended and as superseded by the Housing and Rent Act of nineteen hundred forty-seven, and as the latter was thereafter amended prior to May first, nineteen hundred fifty, and regulations adopted pursuant thereto.

e. "Housing accommodation." 1. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph two of this subdivision e, any building or structure, permanent or temporary, or any part thereof, occupied or intended to be occupied by one or more individuals as a residence, home, sleeping place, boarding house, lodging house or hotel, together with the land and buildings appurtenant thereto, and all services, privileges, furnishings, furniture and facilities supplied in connection with the occupation thereof, and any plot or parcel of land (as distinguished from any building constructed or placed thereon) which is not owned by the city and which was rented prior to May first, nineteen hundred fifty, for the purpose of permitting the tenant thereof to construct his or her own private dwelling (as such term "private dwelling" is defined in subdivision six of section four of the multiple dwelling law) thereon and on which there exists such a private dwelling owned and occupied by a tenant of such plot or parcel, or on or after July first, nineteen hundred seventy-one such private dwelling is owned and occupied by a member of the tenant's immediate family provided that the member of the tenant's immediate family was in occupancy of the private dwelling with the tenant prior to the transfer of title and possession for a continuous period of two years, including:

(a) Entire structures or premises as distinguished from the individual housing accommodations contained therein, wherein twenty-five or less rooms are rented or offered for rent by any lessee, sublessee, or other tenant of such entire structure or premises; and

(b) Housing accommodations which, under subparagraph (i) of paragraph two of this subdivision e, are or at any time become exempt from or not subject to control and which, while in such status, are certified by a city agency having jurisdiction to be a fire hazard or in a continued dangerous condition or detrimental to life or health; and the subsequent removal of the conditions on which such certification is based shall not cause any such housing accommodation to become exempt from or not subject to control; and

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this chapter, all housing accommodations in any multiple dwelling aided by a loan made by the city under article eight of the private housing finance law; provided that where any such housing accommodation, if this subparagraph (c) were not applicable thereto, would not be subject to rent control under this chapter and the regulations thereunder prior to the date on which rent control with respect to such multiple dwelling is required by the provisions of such article eight to begin, this subparagraph (c) shall operate to make such housing accommodation subject to rent control under this chapter and the regulations thereunder only on and after such date; and provided further that if any such housing accommodation, on the date on which rent control with respect thereto ceases to be required by such article eight, would not be subject to rent control, or would be eligible for decontrol on the landlord's application, under the provisions of this chapter and the regulations thereunder, if this subparagraph (c) were not applicable thereto, then such housing accommodation, after such date, shall not be subject to rent control, or shall be eligible for decontrol, as the case may be, in the same manner as if this subparagraph (c) had not been applicable to such housing accommodation.

2. The term "housing accommodation" shall not include:

(a) structures in which all of the housing accommodations are exempt or not subject to control under this chapter or any regulation issued thereunder; or

(b) a hospital, convent, monastery, asylum, public institution, or college or school dormitory or any institution operated exclusively for charitable or educational purposes on a non-profit basis; or

(c) notwithstanding any previous order, finding, opinion or determination of the state rent commission, housing accommodations in any establishment which on March first, nineteen hundred fifty, was and still is commonly regarded as a hotel in the community in which it is located and which customarily provides hotel services such as maid service, furnishing and laundering of linen, telephone and secretarial or desk service, use and upkeep of furniture and fixtures and bellboy service, provided, however, that the term "hotel" shall not include any establishment which is commonly regarded in the community as a rooming house, nor shall it include any establishment not identified or classified as a "hotel", "transient hotel" or "residential hotel" pursuant to the federal act, irrespective of whether such establishment either provides some services customarily provided by hotels, or is represented to be a hotel, or both; and provided further that housing accommodations in hotels which have been and still are occupied by a tenant who has resided in such hotel continuously since December second, nineteen hundred forty-nine, so long as such tenant occupies the same, shall continue to remain subject to control under this chapter; or

(d) Any motor court, or any part thereof; any trailer or trailer space used exclusively for transient occupancy or any part thereof (provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed as legalizing or authorizing any use or occupancy of a trailer or trailer space where prohibited by law); or any tourist home serving transient guests exclusively, or any part thereof; or

(e) Nonhousekeeping, furnished housing accommodations, located within a single dwelling unit not used as a rooming or boarding house, but only if: (1) no more than two tenants for whom rent is paid (husband and wife being considered one tenant for this purpose), not members of the landlord's immediate family, live in such dwelling unit; and (2) the remaining portion of such dwelling unit is occupied by the landlord or his or her immediate family; or

(f) Housing accommodations owned and operated by the United States, the state of New York, or the New York city housing authority; or owned by the city and under the jurisdiction of the city department of housing preservation and development pursuant to the New York city charter; or owned and operated by the city; or housing accommodations in buildings in which rentals are fixed by or subject to the supervision of the state commissioner of housing and community renewal;

(g) Housing accommodations in buildings operated exclusively for charitable purposes on a non-profit basis; or

(h) Except as otherwise provided in item six of subparagraph (i) of this paragraph two, housing accommodations which were completed on or after February first, nineteen hundred forty-seven, provided, however, that, the former structure or any lesser portion thereof, was not vacated, on or after the effective date of this first provision of this subparagraph (h), other than by voluntary surrender of possession or in the manner provided in this chapter, and provided further that maximum rents established under the veterans' emergency housing act, for priority constructed housing accommodations completed on or after February first, nineteen hundred forty-seven, shall continue in full force and effect, if such accommodations are being rented to veterans of world war II or their immediate families who, on June thirtieth, nineteen hundred forty-seven, either occupied such housing accommodations or had a right to occupy such housing accommodations at any time on or after July first, nineteen hundred forty-seven, under any agreement whether written or oral; or

(i) Except as otherwise provided in subparagraphs (b) and (c) of paragraph one of this subdivision e: (1) Housing accommodations created by a change from a non-housing use to a housing use on or after February first, nineteen hundred forty-seven, but only if the space comprising such accommodations was devoted to a non-housing use on February first, nineteen hundred forty-seven; or

(2) Additional housing accommodations, other than rooming house accommodations, created by conversion on or after February first, nineteen hundred forty-seven; provided, however, that any housing accommodations created as a result of any such conversion on or after May first, nineteen hundred fifty, shall continue to be subject to rent control as provided for herein unless the state rent commission, prior to May first, nineteen hundred sixty-two, issued an order decontrolling them, or the city rent agency, on or after such date, issues an order decontrolling them; and the city rent agency shall issue such an order if there has been a structural change involving substantial alterations or remodeling and such change has resulted in additional housing accommodations consisting of self-contained family units as defined by regulations issued by the city rent agency, with due regard for the shortage of housing accommodations suitable for family occupancy and for the purposes of this chapter in relation thereto; and provided further, that any such order of decontrol of the state rent commission or the city rent agency shall remain effective after April thirtieth, nineteen hundred sixty-two only so long as the housing accommodations are not occupied for other than single family occupancy; and provided further, that any such order of decontrol shall not apply to that portion of the original housing accommodations occupied by a tenant in possession at the time of the conversion, but only so long as that tenant continues in occupancy; and provided further, that no such order of decontrol shall be issued unless such conversion occurred after the entire structure, or any lesser portion thereof as may have been thus converted, was vacated by voluntary surrender of possession, or in the manner provided in this chapter, or (where vacated prior to May first, nineteen hundred sixty-two) in the manner provided by section five of the state rent act; and provided further that notwithstanding any of the foregoing provisions of this item two, no such order of decontrol shall be issued with respect to housing accommodations of any type resulting from conversion, after April thirtieth, nineteen hundred sixty-two, to rooming house accommodations or to single room occupancy accommodations, and such resulting accommodations shall continue to be housing accommodations subject to rent control under this chapter and the regulation thereunder; or

(3) Housing accommodations rented after April first, nineteen hundred fifty-three, which were or are continuously occupied by the owner thereof for a period of one year prior to the date of renting; provided, however, that this item three shall not apply where the owner acquired possession of the housing accommodation after the issuance of a certificate of eviction under subdivision two of section five of the state rent act or under subdivision b of section 26-408 of this chapter within the two year period immediately preceding the date of such renting, and provided further that this item three shall not apply to any such housing accommodation rented on or after May first, nineteen hundred sixty-two, where an exemption of any housing accommodation in the same building was obtained under paragraph (h) of subdivision two of section two of the state rent act or has been previously obtained under this item three; and provided further, that this exemption shall remain effective only so long as the housing accommodations are not occupied for other than single family occupancy; or

(4) Housing accommodations in one or two family houses which were or shall become vacant on or after April first, nineteen hundred fifty-three; provided, however, that this exemption shall remain effective only so long as the housing accommodations are not occupied for other than single family occupancy; or

(6) (i) Such housing accommodations resulting from substantial demolition (as such accommodations are defined in this item six), as are decontrolled by order of the city rent agency pursuant to this item six; provided that all housing accommodations resulting from substantial demolition which are not so decontrolled shall continue to be housing accommodations subject to rent control under this chapter and the regulations thereunder.

(ii) The term "housing accommodation resulting from substantial demolition", as used herein, shall mean any housing accommodation (a) which is created on or after May first, nineteen hundred sixty-two, as a result of the substantial demolition of a multiple dwelling and the reconstruction of such building in such manner as to retain any portion thereof existing prior to such demolition, and (b) which is so created after the issuance of one or more certificates permitting the eviction of any tenant or tenants of such multiple dwelling for the purpose of effecting such demolition.

(iii) No order shall be issued under this item six decontrolling any housing accommodation resulting from substantial demolition unless, after such reconstruction, all housing accommodations in the building are self-contained family units as defined by regulations issued by the city rent agency, with due regard for the shortage of housing accommodations suitable for family occupancy and for the purposes of this chapter in relation thereto.

(iv) The city rent agency shall issue regulations, with due regard for such shortage and purposes, specifying minimum requirements for qualifying any housing accommodation resulting from substantial demolition as suitable for occupancy by larger families (including, with respect to the individual unit, but not limited to, number of rooms, space suitable for sleeping purposes and total floor area) and likewise prescribing, subject to such variations and classifications as such agency may determine to be reasonably necessary, the ratio between the total number of housing accommodations resulting from substantial demolition in the building, and the number of such accommodations which must meet such requirements for larger family occupancy, in order that a decontrol order may be granted hereunder.

(v) The city rent agency shall issue an order decontrolling all of the housing accommodations resulting from substantial demolition in the building, if such accommodations meet the requirements of sub-item (iii) of this item six, and if the prescribed proportion thereof meets the requirements of sub-item (iv) of this item six for larger family occupancy; provided that (a) if all such accommodations meet the requirements of such sub-item (iii), but less than the prescribed proportion thereof meet the requirements of such sub-item (iv), then the city rent agency shall issue an order decontrolling only those accommodations which meet the requirements of both such sub-items; and (b) any order of decontrol issued under this item six shall remain effective only so long as the accommodations decontrolled by such order are not occupied for other than single family occupancy.

(vi) In the case of any housing accommodations vacated on or after March twenty-sixth, nineteen hundred sixty-four, no order of decontrol shall be issued under this item six for any housing accommodations resulting from substantial demolition thereof unless such reconstruction occurred after the structure was vacated by voluntary surrender of possession, or in the manner provided in this chapter; or

(7) (i) Individual housing accommodations having unfurnished maximum rents of two hundred and fifty dollars or more per month as of April first, nineteen hundred sixty, or furnished maximum rents of three hundred dollars or more per month as of April first, nineteen hundred sixty, which are or become vacant on or after the effective date of this item seven; or

(ii) On and after October first, nineteen hundred sixty-four individual housing accommodations having unfurnished maximum rents of three hundred dollars or more per month as of April first, nineteen hundred sixty, or furnished maximum rents of three hundred and sixty dollars or more per month as of April first, nineteen hundred sixty; provided, however, that where any such housing accommodation is occupied by a tenant whose household contains one or more children attending an elementary or secondary school, such housing accommodation shall continue to remain subject to control under this chapter and the regulations thereunder until June thirtieth, nineteen hundred sixty-five; and provided further, that where such housing accommodation on March twenty-sixth, nineteen hundred sixty-four is occupied by a tenant whose household contains four or more related persons, it shall continue to remain subject to control under this chapter and the regulations thereunder so long as such tenant remains in occupancy; or

(iii) On and after April first, nineteen hundred sixty-five individual housing accommodations having unfurnished maximum rents of two hundred and fifty dollars to two hundred ninety-nine dollars and ninety-nine cents, inclusive, per month as of April first, nineteen hundred sixty, or furnished maximum rents of three hundred dollars to three hundred fifty-nine dollars and ninety-nine cents inclusive, per month as of April first, nineteen hundred sixty; provided, however, that where any such housing accommodation is occupied by a tenant whose household contains one or more children attending an elementary or secondary school, such housing accommodation shall continue to remain subject to control under this chapter and the regulations thereunder until June thirtieth, nineteen hundred sixty-five; and provided further, that where such housing accommodations on March twenty-sixth, nineteen hundred sixty-four is occupied by a tenant whose household contains four or more related persons, it shall continue to remain subject to control under this chapter and the regulations thereunder so long as such tenant remains in occupancy.

(iv) The exemptions provided for in this item seven shall remain effective only so long as the housing accommodations are not occupied for other than single family occupancy.

(v) The term "related persons", as used in this item seven, shall be limited to the tenant and a parent, grandparent, child, stepchild, grandchild, brother or sister of the tenant or of the tenant's spouse or the spouse of any of the foregoing, who customarily occupied the housing accommodation on and before the effective date of this item seven. The tenant's spouse or an unmarried child or grandchild of the tenant who temporarily resided elsewhere on the effective date of this item seven because of attendance at an educational institution or service in the armed forces of the United States shall be deemed to be a related person in occupancy.

(8) No more than two housing accommodations in any one year period in an owner-occupied structure containing six or fewer housing accommodations which are or become vacant on or after August first, nineteen hundred seventy, by voluntary surrender or pursuant to section 26-408 of this chapter; provided, however, that this exemption shall remain effective only so long as the housing accommodations are not occupied for other than residential dwelling purposes; and provided further, that if the city rent agency shall make a finding of harassment in violation of subdivision d of section 26-412 of this chapter with respect to a housing accommodation in a structure containing six or less housing accommodations, in addition to all other criminal or civil fines, penalties, injunctive relief and enforcement penalties and remedies authorized by section 26-413 of this chapter, no housing accommodation in such structure shall be decontrolled pursuant to this item eight until a minimum period of three years has elapsed since the making of such finding of harassment by the city rent agency. Structures containing six or fewer housing accommodations shall be considered to be structures containing six or fewer housing accommodations for the purposes of this item eight, notwithstanding that such structures shall contain commercial accommodations in addition to such housing accommodations.

(9) Housing accommodations which became vacant on or after June thirtieth, nineteen hundred seventy-one, provided, however, that this exemption shall not apply or become effective with respect to housing accommodations which the commissioner determines or finds became vacant because the landlord or any person acting on his or her behalf, with intent to cause the tenant to vacate, engaged in any course of conduct (including but not limited to, interruption or discontinuance of essential services) which interfered with or disturbed or was intended to interfere with or disturb the comfort, repose, peace or quiet of the tenant in his or her use or occupancy of the housing accommodations and provided, further, however, that nothing contained herein shall be deemed to preclude the applicability to such housing accommodations of the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen seventy-four.

(10) Housing accommodations not occupied by the tenant, not including subtenants or occupants, as his or her primary residence, as determined by a court of competent jurisdiction. No action or proceeding shall be commenced seeking to recover possession on the ground that a housing accommodation is not occupied by the tenant as his or her primary residence unless the owner or lessor shall have given thirty days notice to the tenant of his or her intention to commence such action or proceeding on such grounds.

(j) Upon the issuance of an order of decontrol by the division, housing accommodations which: (1) are occupied by persons who have a total annual income in excess of one hundred seventy-five thousand dollars per annum in each of the two preceding calendar years, as defined in and subject to the limitations and process set forth in section 26-403.1 of this chapter; and (2) have a maximum rent of two thousand dollars or more per month. Provided however, that this exclusion shall not apply to housing accommodations which became or become subject to this law by virtue of receiving tax benefits pursuant to section four hundred eighty-nine of the real property tax law.

(k) Any housing accommodation which becomes vacant on or after April first, nineteen hundred ninety-seven and where at the time the tenant vacated such housing accommodation the maximum rent was two thousand dollars or more per month, or any housing accommodation which is or becomes vacant on or after the effective date of the rent regulation reform act of 1997 with a maximum rent of two thousand dollars or more per month. This exclusion shall apply regardless of whether the next tenant in occupancy or any subsequent tenant in occupancy actually is charged or pays less than two thousand dollars a month. Provided however, that this exclusion shall not apply to housing accommodations which became or become subject to this law by virtue of receiving tax benefits pursuant to section four hundred eighty-nine of the real property tax law. This subparagraph shall not apply, however, to or become effective with respect to housing accommodations which the commissioner determines or finds that the landlord or any person acting on his or her behalf, with intent to cause the tenant to vacate, has engaged in any course of conduct (including, but not limited to, interruption or discontinuance of required services) which interfered with or disturbed or was intended to interfere with or disturb the comfort, repose, peace or quiet of the tenant in his or her use or occupancy of the housing accommodations and in connection with such course of conduct, any other general enforcement provision of this law shall also apply.

f. "Landlord." An owner, lessor, sublessor, assignee, or other person receiving or entitled to receive rent for the use or occupancy of any housing accommodation or an agent of any of the foregoing.

g. "Maximum rent." The maximum lawful rent for the use of housing accommodations. Maximum rents may be formulated in terms of rents and other charges and allowances.

h. "Person." An individual, corporation, partnership, association, or any other organized group of individuals or the legal successor or representative of any of the foregoing.

i. "Rent." Consideration, including any bonus, benefit or gratuity demanded or received for or in connection with the use or occupancy of housing accommodations or the transfer of a lease of such housing accommodations.

j. "State Enabling Act." The local emergency housing rent control act.

k. "State Rent Act." The emergency housing rent control law.

l. "State rent commission." The temporary state housing rent commission created by the emergency housing rent control law.

m. "Tenant." A tenant, subtenant, lessee, sublessee, or other person entitled to the possession or to the use or occupancy of any housing accommodation.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. The provisions of this section defining the term "hotel" for rent control purposes are valid and constitutional. Contention was rejected that the provisions of this section deprived those who owned or operated accommodations having hotel status on March 1, 1950, but were unable to prove that their accommodations had hotel status on June 30, 1947 of a previously acquired statutory right without due process. 378 Realty Corp. v. New York City Rent and Rehabilitation Admr., 13 NY2d 817, 242 NYS2d 347 [1963], aff'd 39 Misc 2d 30, 240 NYS2d 58 [1963].

¶ 2. The definition of a hotel in subd. e, par. 2, of this section is constitutional. 378 Realty Corp. v. New York City Rent and Rehabilitation Administration, 39 Misc 2d 30, 240 NYS2d 58 [1963], aff'd 13 NY2d 817, 242 NYS2d 347.

¶ 3. Refusal of City Rent and Rehabilitation Administration to decontrol apartment was proper where building was owned by corporation and individual and individual while having a permanent residence with his family occupied apartment from time to time for about two years in order to have a place to stay during the time he worked in maintaining the house and other houses owned by him in the same neighborhood. Golgrace Realty Co. v. City Rent & Rehab. Administration, 50 Misc 2d 139, 269 NYS2d 886 [1966].

¶ 4. Provision of rent control law including within housing subject to rent control a plot or parcel of land rented prior to May 1, 1950 for purpose of permitting tenant to construct his own private dwelling and on which there exists such a private dwelling owned and occupied by the tenant was constitutional and not subject to decontrol under this section. Matter of Federated Homes v. Berman, 24 NY2d 978, 302 NYS2d 600 [1969], aff'g, 31 App. Div. 2d 624, 625, 296 NYS2d 962, 963 [1968].

¶ 5. Apartment in four family apartment house which had been decontrolled prior to May 1, 1962 was brought within the control of the City Rent Act where it was not rented until after that date and another apartment in the premises had been previously decontrolled. Bueno Realty Corp. v. Berman, 30 AD2d 860, 293 NYS2d 62 [1968].

¶ 6. Multiple dwelling owned by limited profit housing company and organized under the New York Private Housing Finance Law and financed by mortgages made to the New York State Housing Finance Agency was not public housing and such apartments are not subject to New York City rent control laws. Matter of Fuller v. Urstadt, 61 Misc 2d 988, 307 NYS2d 91 [1970], aff'd, 35 App Div 2d 537, 313 NYS2d 160.

¶ 7. Although premises constructed in 1976 with § 236 National Housing Act subsidy were not subject to rent control, tenant could be evicted only for good cause and was entitled to procedural due process in determination of whether cause exists since joint state and federal government participation in affording housing for the poor placed project within protection of the Fourteenth Amendment. Hudsonview Terrace, Inc. v. Maury, 100 Misc 2d 331, 419 NYS2d 409 [1979].

¶ 8. Where an apartment was occupied by a sister of the tenant of record, both of whom at one time had lived there together, and tenant of record continued to pay the rent, the apartment was not subject to decontrol on the ground that it was not the primary residence of the tenant, the test of tenancy for purposes of this section being not whether apartment is occupied by tenant of record or whether the rent is personally paid by the person in possession but whether it is occupied by the person entitled to possession. Herzog v. Joy, 74 AD2d 372 [1980].

¶ 9. Landlord was entitled to possession of apartment on ground that it was occupied by a person, other than a member of the tenant's immediate family where the tenant was living there with another woman since "lesbians living together" do not constitute members of the other's immediate family. Avest Seventh Corp. v. Ringelheim, 109 Misc 2d 284 [1981].

¶ 10. Lease for apt. owned by Columbia University did not contain an affiliation clause so purportedly unauthorized person who had been rent-controlled tenant for 27 years after prime affiliated tenant had vacated premises, was protected from eviction as a month-to-month tenant. Premises were ruled subject to Rent Control. Trustees of Columbia University v. Lorch, 189 (8) NYLJ (1-12-83), 12, col. 3M.

¶ 11. This section, providing for thirty day notices to terminate the tenancy of rent-controlled tenants is effective April 1, 1984 and any notices served before such date are premature and ineffective. Parkview Assoc. v. Lalor, 124 Misc 2d 998 [1984].

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Non-purchasing tenant in a rent controlled apartment building converting to cooperative ownership may not be evicted because of nonprimary residence. Tenant married another tenant of building and used both apartments for residential purposes. Both apartments contain only 1,134 square feet. The apartments are one combined primary residence. E. 18th St. Assoc. v. Sijacki, 138 Misc 2d 494 [1987].

¶ 2. Legal definition of "family" (as it relates to noneviction proceedings) expanded to include homosexual couples living together. Miguel Braschi may inherit the rent-controlled apartment he shared with his male lover. Dispute arises because the term "family" is not defined in the rent-control code. However the rent-control laws are remedial in nature, designed for the public good and should be interpreted broadly. In this case, Braschi and Leslie Blanchard were "permanent life partners" together for 10 years, regarding each other as spouses. A new test for determining the qualifications for "family" are (1) "exclusivity and longevity" of a relationship, (2) "level of emotional and financial commitment", (3) how the couple "conducted their everyday lives and held themselves out to society" and (4) the "reliance placed upon one another for daily family services". Braschi v. Stahl Assoc. Co., 74 NY2d 201 [1989].

¶ 3. A critical requirement of rent control is that the tenant maintain the apartment as a primary residence. The legislative purpose in permitting eviction of tenants who do not use their units as their primary residence was to ensure that the continuing shortage of rental housing was not exacerbated by tenants using their apartments only occasionally for convenience or for storage. Cox v. J.D. Associates, 217 A.D.2d 179, 637 N.Y.S.2d 27 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1995).

¶ 4. Where a landlord prevails in a non-primary residence proceeding against a statutory rent controlled tenant, and the attorney fee clause in the now expired lease is deemed to be projected into the statutory tenancy, the landlord is entitled to an award of attorney's fees. Duell v. Condon, 84 N.Y.2d 773, 622 N.Y.S.2d 891.

¶ 5. This section provides for recontrol of units previously decontrolled where the city determines the building is a fire hazard or in a dangerous condition or detrimental to life or health. Under this provision, housing accommodations which were rented on or after April 1, 1953 can be recontrolled. Legra v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 194 A.D.2d 667, 599 N.Y.S.2d 102 (2nd Dept. 1993).

¶ 6. Under the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989 (FIRREA), the Resolution Trust Corp. (RTC) was created for the purpose of managing the assets of failed financial institutions. The court held that under the RTC's powers to repudiate contracts, it could repudiate a rent controlled tenancy. The tenants and the State of New York argued that the tenancy was statutory rather than contractual in nature, but the court found that the federal law pre-empted the state scheme of rent regulation. A rent controlled tenancy would expire one year from the date the tenant was served with notice of the RTC's election to repudiate the lease. Resolution Trust Corp v. Diamond, 45 F.3d 665 (2nd Cir. 1995).

¶ 7. A notice purporting to terminate a rent controlled tenancy on the ground of non-primary resident cannot merely state that the tenant does not maintain the apartment as a primary residence. The underlying facts regarding non-primary residence must be stated. Kaycee West 113th Street Corp. v. Diakoff, 160 A.D.2d 573, 554 N.Y.S.2d 216 (1st Dept. 1990).

¶ 8. The court found that where a rent controlled tenant subleased the apartment to a series of occupants, collected rent substantially higher than the lawful rent and was listed as the head of the household in a regulated cooperative at another location, the tenant did not maintain the subject apartment as a primary residence and thus could be evicted. Manhattan Apartments v. Pflesinger, N.Y.L.J., Nov. 1, 1995, page 30, col. 2 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 9. A tenant who is serving a sentence of 15 years to life after conviction of murder in the second degree, cannot reasonably deemed to have a primary residence in the apartment which he occupied prior to the conviction. Emay Properties Corp. v.. Norton, 136 Misc.2d 127, 519 N.Y.S.2d 90 (App.Term 1st Dept. 1987).

¶ 10. A husband and wife moved into an apartment under the terms of a lease signed only by the husband. The lease later expired, but the parties remained as statutory tenants under rent control. Many years later, they entered into a separation agreement under which during his lifetime, the wife would have the sole right to use and occupy the apartment, and that upon her death, the husband could return and exercise the same right. The husband then vacated the apartment and established a residence elsewhere. The wife occupied the apartment, living alone until her granddaughter moved in. After the husband moved out, a plan for converting the building to cooperative ownership was accepted for filing by the Attorney General. Under that plan, each "tenant in occupancy" had the right to purchase the shares allocated to his or her apartment at a discounted "insider" price. Both the husband and the wife sought to exercise this right by tendering subscription agreements and down payments, but the sponsor refused to let either spouse purchase the apartment without the other. The wife then brought an action seeking a declaratory judgment that she had the sole right to purchase the shares. After the wife died, the granddaughter took over the action. The court held that the granddaughter, whose rights were derived from the wife, had the sole right to purchase the apartment. The reason was that the wife had been a "tenant in occupancy" at the time for exercise of the right to purchase. She had been entitled to occupy the apartment under the rent control laws so long as she continued to pay the rent, while the husband had relinquished his right to occupy the apartment several years before the critical date. Weinstein v. Hohenstein, 122 A.D.2d 842, 505 N.Y.S.2d 905 (2nd Dept. 1986), aff'd 69 N.Y.2d 1017, 517 N.Y.S.2d 907 (1987).

¶ 11. The tenant qualified as a primary resident where he lists the Manhattan address on his driver's license, voter registration and city income tax, has a bank account in New York, is active in Manhattan community organizations and receives ongoing care from medical professionals here. The tenant was found to have a sufficient nexus to New York even though he resides for half the year at a Florida cooperative apartment. Center for Modern Psychoanalytic Studies v. Doe, N.Y.L.J., Nov. 6, 1998, page 21, col. 2 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 12. Where the landlord prevails in a primary residence case as against a rent controlled tenant, the landlord is entitled to an award of use and occupancy (generally much higher than controlled rents) running from the date that the notice of termination was served upon the tenant, not from the later time that the court determines that the tenant was not a primary resident. King Enterprises, Inc. v. Guelaff, N.Y.L.J., Oct. 15, 1997, at 26, col. 4 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.). This is in line with Epsom Downs v. Allen, Apr. 16, 1993, at 25, col. 3 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 13. A mere allegation in the notice of termination that the tenant is married to a German national and maintains a home in Germany is not enough to sustain a primary residence proceeding. The petition would have to be more specific as to the factors showing that the tenant lacks a sufficient nexus to qualify for primary residence, referring to such items as voting records or use of the apartment. It is not enough to allege that the tenant has a residence elsewhere, since the tenant's connection to that other home might be limited to mere ownership or occasional use as vacation home. H.O. Realty Corp. v. Fernandez, N.Y.L.J., Jan. 28, 1998, at 27, col. 3 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 14. A vaguely articulated intent to return to the apartment at some unspecified time in the future is insufficient to defend a non-primary residence claim. See 1286 First Realty Assocs. v. Malatinsky, 176 Misc.2d 596, 675 N.Y.S.2d 25 (App.Term 1st Dept. 1998) (tenant has been absent from Manhattan apartment for several years, living in a health care facility for a time and then in an apartment in Queens, and had not filed tax returns or voted from the Manhattan address in several years).

¶ 15. Although proof that the tenant has had very low utility usage is strong evidence of non-primary residence, it is not conclusive. In one case, the tenant successfully defended a non-primary residence proceeding despite the low level of utility usage. The tenant had filed tax returns using the address of the subject apartment, and explained the low utility usage by indicating that she had been hospitalized numerous times during the period in question. Great Northern Realty, Inc. v. Ward, N.Y.L.J., 9-30-99, page 28, col. 6 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 16. Where a rent controlled tenant obtained SCRIE benefits (senior citizen rent increase exemption) for a second (rent stabilized) apartment, the court held that the tenant had not maintained the rent controlled apartment as a primary residence. The court noted that the tenant had filed a services complaint (Adm. Code Sec. 26-514) with the state housing agency relating to the second apartment. The purpose of the rent regulation laws is to relieve housing shortages, and that purpose would not be achieved if a rent stabilized tenant were permitted to maintain a rent controlled apartment at the same time, the court said. Sullivan Properties, L.P. v. Sanabria, N.Y.L.J., Sept. 9, 1999, page 26, col. 2 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 17. One of the important factors in determining whether or not the tenant has maintained the apartment as a primary residence, is the amount of time that the tenant spends at the apartment. However, the mere fact that a tenant spends a substantial time away from the apartment does not compel a finding of non-primary residence. In one case, a tenant successfully defended a non-primary residence case, even though she owned some investment property in Freeland, Pennsylvania, which contained two residential units. The landlord pointed out that the tenant received much of her mail in Pennsylvania, but the tenant explained this by showing that the subject building had very small mail boxes which were not large enough to hold her mail, and that as a result she had been having difficulty receiving reliable mail service. The tenant was also helped by the fact that she had paid New York City income taxes even after acquiring the Pennsylvania property, and that she registered and insured her automobile in New York. Moreover, the tenant explained her frequent trips to Pennsylvania by the fact that she was having difficulty renting out the two apartments because of depressed economic conditions in this old coal mining area of Pennsylvania. Hart Future Co. v. Rose, N.Y.L.J., May 10, 2000, page 31, col. 2 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 18. The fact that a tenant spent a substantial amount of time in Guatemala doing charitable work, did not deprive her of her primary residence at the subject apartment, where there was no evidence that she intended to make Guatemala her permanent home. The court also considered the facts that the tenant maintained utility accounts at the subject address, listed the apartment as her residence on a driver's license, paid New York City taxes and served as a juror in New York County. Carmine, Ltd. v. Duggan, N.Y.L.J., Dec. 27, 2000, page 22, col.2 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 19. In 23 Jones Street v. Keebler-Beretta, 186 Misc.2d 799, 721 N.Y.S.2d 452 (App.Term 1st Dept. 2000), a wife of a deceased tenant was claiming succession rights, claiming while her husband was alive, she resided with him at the subject apartment. Although this is technically a succession rights case, it contains some useful law concerning primary residence. The wife was able to establish primary residence through the testimony of witnesses who observed her going into the building with groceries, and through the testimony of a friend who had performed repairs for her and had seen her belongings in the apartment. Although she frequently received mail at another address, she was able to explain that through submission of evidence that there were security problems with the mailboxes in the subject building. Moreover, the fact that the wife did not introduce her tax returns as evidence of residence did not result in a negative inference against her; the landlord could have asked for copies of the tax returns during the pre-trial discovery phase, but never did so.

¶ 20. So long as there is no oppressive conduct or overreaching, a court will enforce a contract between a landlord and tenant under which the tenant agrees to vacate a rent controlled apartment in exchange for a sum of money ($10,000 in this case). Merwest Realty Corp. v. Prager, 264 A.D.2d 313, 694 N.Y.S.2d 38 (1st Dept. 1999).

¶ 21. Tenants of rent regulated apartments sometimes need to travel for business reasons. So long as they otherwise maintain their primary residence in New York City, and do not merely use the apartment as a convenient "pied a terre" for occasional visits, they are in compliance with the primary residence rules. Chelsmore Apartments v. Garcia, 189 Misc.2d 542, 733 N.Y.S.2d 329 (Civ.Ct. New York Co. 2001).

¶ 22. In one case, a rent-controlled tenant successfully defended a non-primary residence proceeding. Even though the tenant was absent from the apartment and stayed with a friend for nearly a two-year period, the tenant (who had lived in the apartment as a primary residence during the previous 30 years) was able to explain the absence by showing that the apartment was being refurbished and was cluttered and dirty while the work was going on. Ascot Realty, LLC v. Richstone, 10 A.D.3d 513, 781 N.Y.S.2d 513 (1st Dept. 2004), leave to appeal dismissed, 4 N.Y.3d 842, 797 N.Y.S.2d 413 (2005).

¶ 23. In a non-primary residence holdover proceeding, the tenant contended that his store front unit was not a "housing accommodation" within the meaning of Sec. 26-403(e)(1), and that a residential holdover proceeding did not lie. The tenant stated that the premises were primarily used as a painting and dance studio, but also admitted that he kept his belongings there, and the place was furnished when he initially occupied it in 1967. Photographs offered by the tenant revealed that the unit was fully decorated and equipped for independent living. He used the unit for sleeping and housing overnight guests. Even though toilet facilities were shared with other tenants, this was still a residential unit within the statutory definition. The unit, which contained a sofa bed, dresser, refrigerator and stove, was equipped for residential use when he moved in, and the tenant acknowledged the residential nature of his tenancy in several prior court and administrative proceedings, including a harassment proceeding in which he said he had lived in the unit since 1967. Thus, the court concluded that this was a housing accommodation, and set aside a jury's findings that the premises were not a housing accommodation. Brullo v. Myers, 11 Misc.3d 26, 812 N.Y.S.2d 733 (App. Term 1st Dept. 2006).

¶ 24. In one case, the court had to determine whether a tenant was protected by rent control or whether the apartment was vacant since July 1, 1971 and was therefore decontrolled. The court held that even though a tenant did not move into the subject apartment after July 1, 1971, where the tenant received the keys to the apartment in May 1971 and did not move in until renovations to the apartment and installations of appliances was completed, the tenant qualified for rent control. Moreover, the tenant did not lose rent control status by virtue of moving in 1978 from one rent-controlled apartment to another at the request of the prior landlord. Saad v. Elmuza, 12 Misc.3d 57, 818 N.Y.S.2d 414 (App.Term 2nd & 11th Judic. Dists. 2006).

¶ 25. In Lex & Third 116th Street Corp. v. Marrero, 23 Misc.3d 59, 880 N.Y.S.2d 453 (App.Term 1st Dept. 2009), the court found that the respondent tenant and his family had continuously occupied the subject apartment since before June 30, 1971, and that the apartment was subject to rent control. The tenant had acceded to the landlord's demand that he execute a rent stabilized lease for what the landlord misrepresented to be an unregulated apartment some 13 years after the rent controlled tenancy began. The court, however, said that this fact did not negate the tenant's otherwise persuasive showing that his father's tenancy was rent controlled. A contrary holding would have run afoul of the statutory proscription against agreements waiving the benefits of the rent control laws and ignoring the well-established principle that deregulation of apartments is only available through regular, officially authorized means and not by private compact.

¶ 26. Lana and Edward's Realty v. Darren Lipari, 2009 WL 1259047, 2009 NY Misc. Lexis 1065 (Civ. Ct. Kings 2009). This case was a non-payment proceeding brought by petitioner in response to respondent's rent overcharge claim. As a rent controlled tenant, respondent seeks treble damages and legal fees. Petitioner seeks to strike respondent's rent overcharge claim, and claims that apartment in question is not subject to rent control. Petitioner states that rent control laws do not apply to buildings of three or more units completed or converted to residential use prior to Feb. 1, 1947 and continuously occupied by the tenant or the tenant's successor since July 1, 1971, pursuant to NYC Admin. Code §26-403(e). According to the petitioner, the commercial unit in the building was not completed or converted to residential use prior to Feb. 1, 1947, and only the two residential units are relevant here. As applied here, petitioner contends that rent control status would be conferred if the unit was continuously occupied since April 1, 1953.

The case cited by the plaintiff (Saad v. Elmuza, 12 Misc.3d 57, 818 NYS2d 484 (App. Term 2d Dept., 2006) applies to buildings with three or more residential units, but does not address the specific issues in this case, the court opined. Specifically, it does not address whether after April 1, 1953, the vacancy of a residential apartment in a two family building with commercial space decontrols that unit. Administrative Code of the City of NY §26-403[e][2][4] removes Housing Accommodations in one or two family houses which were or shall become vacant on or after April 1, 1953 from rent control. The Appellate Div. 2d Dept found that the legislative intent was to decontrol only one or two family houses used exclusively for residential purposes. Therefore, this property which contains three units, two residential and one commercial, would not be covered by this exemption.

Under Admin. Code of the City of NY §26-403[e][2][9], housing units in buildings, other than one or two family homes, which become vacant after June 30, 1971, are no longer subject to rent control. Since the apartment here has been continuously occupied since June 30, 1971, the apartment remains subject to rent control regulation. Thus, the petition must be dismissed as petitioner did not make a prima facie case. Respondent is not a month to month tenant and a proceeding on this basis must fail, the court said.

¶ 27. In one case, where a rent controlled tenant married in 1969, his spouse became a rent controlled tenant in her own right. After their 35-year marriage became unraveled, the spouse was excluded from the apartment pursuant to an order of protection issued by a criminal court. Subsequently, the tenant and his spouse were granted a judgment of divorce; however, the judgment failed to address the rights of the parties relative to possession of the marital apartment. The court held that since no court had adjudicated the relative rights of the spouses to the apartment, the tenant could not use a summary proceeding as a device for removal of his ex-wife and the child of the marriage (the parties had a son). Cudar v. O'Shea, 24 Misc.3d 129(A), 2009 WL 1886828 (App.Term 2d Dept.).

Title 26 Housing and Building

CHAPTER 3 RENT CONTROL

§ 26-403.1 High income rent decontrol.

(a) For purposes of this section, annual income shall mean the federal adjusted gross income as reported on the New York state income tax return. Total annual income means the sum of the annual incomes of all persons who occupy the housing accommodation as their primary residence other than on a temporary basis, excluding bona fide employees of such occupants residing therein in connection with such employment and excluding bona fide sub-tenants in occupancy pursuant to the provisions of section two hundred twenty-six-b of the real property law. In the case where a housing accommodation is sublet, the annual income of the sublessor shall be considered.

(b) On or before the first day of May in each calendar year, the owner of each housing accommodation for which the maximum rent is two thousand dollars or more per month may provide the tenant or tenants residing therein with an income certification form prepared by the division of housing and community renewal on which such tenant or tenants shall identify all persons referred to in subdivision (a) of this section and shall certify whether the total annual income is in excess of one hundred seventy-five thousand dollars in each of the two preceding calendar years. Such income certification form shall state that the income level certified to by the tenant may be subject to verification by the department of taxation and finance pursuant to section one hundred seventy-one-b of the tax law and shall not require disclosure of any income information other than whether the aforementioned threshold has been exceeded. Such income certification form shall clearly state that: (i) only tenants residing in housing accommodations which have a maximum rent of two thousand dollars or more per month are required to complete the certification form; (ii) that tenants have protections available to them which are designed to prevent harassment; (iii) that tenants are not required to provide any information regarding their income except that which is requested on the form and may contain such other information the division deems appropriate. The tenant or tenants shall return the completed certification to the owner within thirty days after service upon the tenant or tenants. In the event that the total annual income as certified is in excess of one hundred seventy-five thousand dollars in each such year, the owner may file the certification with the state division of housing and community renewal on or before June thirtieth of such year. Upon filing such certification with the division, the division shall, within thirty days after the filing, issue an order of decontrol providing that such housing accommodations shall not be subject to the provisions of this law as of the first day of June in the year next succeeding the filing of the certification by the owner. A copy of such order shall be mailed by regular and certified mail, return receipt requested, to the tenant or tenants and a copy thereof shall be mailed to the owner.

(c) 1. In the event that the tenant or tenants either fail to return the completed certification to the owner on or before the date required by subdivision (b) of this section or the owner disputes the certification returned by the tenant or tenants, the owner may, on or before June thirtieth of such year, petition the state division of housing and community renewal to verify, pursuant to section one hundred seventy-one-b of the tax law, whether the total annual income exceeds one hundred seventy-five thousand dollars in each of the two preceding calendar years. Within twenty days after the filing of such request with the division, the division shall notify the tenant or tenants that such tenant or tenants must provide the division with such information as the division and the department of taxation and finance shall require to verify whether the total annual income exceeds one hundred seventy-five thousand dollars in each such year. The division's notification shall require the tenant or tenants to provide the information to the division within sixty days of service upon such tenant or tenants and shall include a warning in bold faced type that failure to respond will result in an order of decontrol being issued by the division for such housing accommodation.

2. If the department of taxation and finance determines that the total annual income is in excess of one hundred seventy-five thousand dollars in each of the two preceding calendar years, the division shall, on or before November fifteenth of such year, notify the owner and tenants of the results of such verification. Both the owner and the tenants shall have thirty days within which to comment on such verification results. Within forty-five days after the expiration of the comment period, the division shall, where appropriate, issue an order of decontrol providing that such housing accommodation shall not be subject to the provisions of this law as of the first day of March in the year next succeeding the filing of the owner's petition with the division. A copy of such order shall be mailed by regular and certified mail, return receipt requested, to the tenant or tenants and a copy thereof shall be sent to the owner.

3. In the event the tenant or tenants fail to provide the information required pursuant to paragraph one of this subdivision, the division shall issue, on or before December first of such year, an order of decontrol providing that such housing accommodation shall not be subject to the provisions of this law as of the first day of March in the year next succeeding the last day on which the tenant or tenants were required to provide the information required by such paragraph. A copy of such order shall be mailed by regular and certified mail, return receipt requested, to the tenant or tenants and a copy thereof shall be sent to the owner.

4. The provisions of the state freedom of information act shall not apply to any income information obtained by the division pursuant to this section.

(d) This section shall apply only to subparagraph (j) of paragraph two of subdivision e of section 26-403 of this code.

(e) Upon receipt of such order of decontrol pursuant to this section, an owner shall offer the housing accommodation subject to such order to the tenant at a rent not in excess of the market rent, which for the purposes of this section means a rent obtainable in an arm's length transaction. Such rental offer shall be made by the owner in writing to the tenant by certified and regular mail and shall inform the tenant that such offer must be accepted in writing within ten days of receipt. The tenant shall respond within ten days after receipt of such offer. If the tenant declines the offer or fails to respond within such period, the owner may commence an action or proceeding for the eviction of such tenant.

§ 26-403.2 Increase in maximum collectable rent.

Notwithstanding any provision of this law to the contrary in the case where all tenants occupying the housing accommodation on the effective date of this section have vacated the housing accommodation and a family member of such vacating tenant or tenants is entitled to and continues to occupy the housing accommodation subject to the protections of this law, if such accommodation continues to be subject to this law after such family member vacates, on the occurrence of such vacancy the maximum collectable rent shall be increased by a sum equal to the allowance then in effect for vacancy leases for housing accommodations covered by the rent stabilization law of nineteen hundred sixty-nine, including the amount allowed by paragraph five-a of subdivision c of section 26-511 of such law. This increase shall be in addition to any other increases provided for in this law including an adjustment based upon a major capital improvement, or a substantial increase or decrease in dwelling space or a change in the services, furniture, furnishings or equipment provided in the housing accommodation, pursuant to section 26-405 of this law and shall be applicable in like manner to each second subsequent succession.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. An apartment was rented to a couple in 1949 and, years later, the couple's daughter became the successor tenant. Subsequently, the daughter's nephew became the successor tenant. The statutory amendment which entitled the landlord to charge a vacancy allowance to a second successor tenant became effective on June 19, 1997. The court stated that where, as here, the nephew resided at the apartment prior to the effective date of the statute, the landlord would not be entitled to a vacancy allowance until the nephew vacated the apartment. Thus, if the nephew, when he vacates, is able to pass the apartment to a successor, the vacancy allowance provision will not be triggered until a secondsuccessor (past the nephew) takes over possession of the apartment. § 26-405 General powers and duties of the city rent agency.

a. (1) At the time this chapter shall become effective, the city rent agency shall establish maximum rents which, subject to the provisions of subdivision b of this section, shall be the maximum rents in effect on April thirtieth, nineteen hundred sixty-two pursuant to the state rent act and the regulations thereunder.

(2) (a) Notwithstanding the foregoing provision of this subdivision, and except as provided in subparagraph (b) of this paragraph two, effective August first, nineteen hundred seventy, the maximum rent in effect on July thirty-first, nineteen hundred seventy shall be adjusted as follows: (i) For any individual housing accommodation for which one or more but less than two full fifteen per centum rent increases has been granted since May first, nineteen hundred fifty-three pursuant to former subparagraph (d) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section the maximum rent shall be increased by eight per centum.

(ii) For any individual housing accommodation for which no full fifteen per centum rent increase has been granted since May first, nineteen hundred fifty-three pursuant to former subparagraph (d) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section the maximum rent shall be increased by fifteen per centum, except that if there was no such increase for any individual housing accommodation for which a first rent was established pursuant to former subdivision m of this section after July thirty-first, nineteen hundred sixty-five and before August first, nineteen hundred sixty-eight, the maximum rent shall be increased by five per centum, and except that if there was no such increase for any individual housing accommodation for which a first rent was established pursuant to such subdivision on or after August first, nineteen hundred sixty-eight there shall be no increase in maximum rent. On or after August first, nineteen hundred seventy, a landlord may file application for labor cost rent adjustment pursuant to subparagraph (l) of paragraph (1) of subdivision g of this section. In lieu of such labor cost rent adjustment, the landlord of a building with twenty or fewer housing accommodations shall have the option of filing for a five per centum increase in maximum rent for any individual housing accommodation for which two or more full fifteen per centum increases have been granted since May first, nineteen hundred fifty-three pursuant to former subparagraph (d) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section.

Nothing contained in this subparagraph (a) however, shall have the effect of establishing the maximum rent in an amount less than the maximum rent in effect on July thirty-first, nineteen hundred seventy nor of increasing by more than fifteen per centum the maximum rent for any housing accommodation.

(b) Where the maximum rent in effect on July thirty-first, nineteen hundred seventy for any individual housing accommodation is less than sixty dollars per month such rent shall be increased effective August first, nineteen hundred seventy by ten dollars per month where the housing accommodation is comprised of three rooms or less and by fifteen dollars per month where the housing accommodation is comprised of more than three rooms.

(c) Where a lease is in effect for any housing accommodation on August first, nineteen hundred seventy, no adjustment of maximum rent for such accommodation shall become effective until the expiration of such lease. Where a housing accommodation becomes vacant on or after August first, nineteen hundred seventy and before January first, nineteen hundred seventy-two by voluntary surrender of possession by the tenant the maximum rent shall be increased by no more than fifteen per centum over the maximum rent established for such accommodation at the time the vacancy occurred, provided that a report is filed with the city rent agency as prescribed by its regulations. If the city rent agency shall make a finding of harassment in violation of subdivision d of section 26-412 of this chapter for the purpose of obtaining such a vacancy, in addition to all other civil or criminal penalties, injunctive relief and enforcement remedies authorized by section 26-413 of this chapter, no housing accommodation in the building shall thereafter be entitled to the benefit of a rental increase as a result of becoming vacant between the aforesaid dates.

(d) The total of (i) the increase pursuant to subparagraph (a) of this paragraph, or (ii) any increases granted between December thirty-first, nineteen hundred sixty-nine and December thirty-first, nineteen hundred seventy-one pursuant to subparagraph (a), (b), or (c) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section and (iii) any increase granted on or after the effective date of this paragraph pursuant to subparagraph (l) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section shall not exceed fifteen per centum of the "1970 base rent". For purposes of this subparagraph, the "1970 base rent" is the maximum rent on July thirty-first, nineteen hundred seventy minus the amount of any increase granted between December thirty-first, nineteen hundred sixty-nine and July thirty-first, nineteen hundred seventy pursuant to subparagraph (a), (b), or (c) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section. This subparagraph shall not operate to decrease any maximum rent existing on its effective date.

(e) The rent increases provided for in this paragraph two shall be collectible upon the landlord's filing a report with the city rent agency on forms to be prescribed by such agency, including simplified forms for landlords of buildings with twelve or fewer housing accommodations, and giving such notice to the tenant as such agency may prescribe, subject to adjustment upon order of the city rent agency. The report shall contain a certified statement by the landlord that there is no legally habitable rent controlled housing accommodation in the building which has not been rented for a period of six months or more on the date of the filing of such report, or that if there is such a housing accommodation, the reasons it has not been rented is that it is being altered pursuant to a permit issued by the department of buildings no later than three months after the vacancy commenced and that the alteration is of such a nature that the accommodation must be kept vacant while it is being made or for such other cause found by the city rent agency not to be inconsistent with the purpose of this chapter, provided further that in the case of an alteration it is commenced within sixty days from the issuance of said permit. A copy of the permit and the application therefor shall accompany the report. No report shall be accepted for filing and no rent increase provided for in this paragraph two shall be collected in the absence of any such certified statement by the landlord. Any excess shall be credited to the tenants in full commencing with the rental payment following the receipt by the landlord of such order of adjustment. If such report is filed on or before October thirty-first, nineteen hundred seventy, the increase shall take effect August first, nineteen hundred seventy. If the report is filed thereafter, such increase shall take effect with the first rental payment following filing.

(f) The rent increases provided for in this paragraph two shall not be collected for the period between March thirty-first, nineteen hundred and seventy-one and December thirty-first, nineteen hundred seventy-one until the landlord shall have filed with the city rent agency a certified statement attesting that for every month for which he or she has received a rent increase pursuant to subparagraphs (a) and (b) of this paragraph two, he or she has expended or incurred in the operation, maintenance and improvements of the housing accommodations from which increases were collected an amount which equals the amount expended per month for such purpose averaged over the preceding five years, or such lesser period that he or she has been landlord of such properties, plus ninety per centum of all increased rents so collected.

(3) The city rent agency shall establish maximum rents to be effective January first, nineteen hundred seventy-two by dividing the maximum gross building rental from all housing accommodations in the property whether or not subject to or exempt from control under this chapter by the number of such accommodations, after giving consideration to such factors as may be prescribed by formula, such as size and location of housing accommodations and number of rooms. Such maximum gross building rental shall be computed on the basis of real estate taxes, water rates and sewer charges and an operation and maintenance expense allowance, a vacancy allowance not in excess of two per cent, and a collection loss allowance, both as prescribed by such agency, and an eight and one-half per centum return on capital value. The operating and maintenance expense allowance shall include provision for the cost of fuel, utilities, payroll, maintenance repairs, replacement reserves and miscellaneous charges attributed to the property, excluding mortgage interest and amortization, and may be varied by the agency for different types of properties depending upon such factors as the year of construction, elevator or non-elevator buildings, and the average number of rooms per individual housing accommodations in the building. Capital value shall be equalized assessed valuation based upon the appropriate tax class ratio which is established pursuant to article twelve of the real property tax law. Where the property receives income from sources other than such housing accommodations, the taxes, water and sewer charges and the capital value attributed to the portion consisting of housing accommodations shall be in the same ratio of the total taxes, water and sewer charges (where not computed separately) and the total capital value as the gross income from such portion consisting of housing accommodations bears to the total gross income from the property, as prescribed by the agency.

The agency shall report to the council on or before October fifteenth, nineteen hundred seventy-one as to the status of preparation of the formulas necessary to implement the rent adjustments to be effective January first, nineteen hundred seventy-two.

(4) The city rent agency shall establish maximum rents effective January first, nineteen hundred seventy-four and biennially thereafter by adjusting the existing maximum rent to reflect changes, if any, in the factors which determine maximum gross building rental under paragraph three of this subdivision except that commencing January first, nineteen hundred eighty-two, said maximum rent shall no longer recognize or reflect the adjustment allocable to changes in heating costs after April ninth, nineteen hundred seventy-nine.

Notwithstanding any other provisions in this paragraph to the contrary, commencing January first, nineteen hundred seventy-four, the city rent agency shall require each owner to make available for examination his or her books and all other financial records relating to the operation of each building under his or her ownership containing accommodations subject to this chapter at least once every three years for the purpose of determining whether the maximum formula rent is appropriate for each building in light of actual expenditures therefor and shall also alter such formula rent to take into account significant variations between the formula and actual cost experience. The agency shall also establish maximum costs for the factors under paragraph three of this subdivision which determine maximum gross building rental to preclude increases which would otherwise results from excessive expenditures in the operation and maintenance of the building. The return allowed on capital may be revised from time to time by local law.

(5) Where a maximum rent established pursuant to this chapter on or after January first, nineteen hundred seventy-two, is higher than the previously existing maximum rent, the landlord may not collect more than seven and one-half percentum increase from a tenant in occupancy on such date in any one year period, provided however, that where the period for which the rent is established exceeds one year, regardless of how the collection thereof is averaged over such period, the rent the landlord shall be entitled to receive during the first twelve months shall not be increased by more than seven and one-half percentum over the previous rent and additional annual rents shall not exceed seven and one-half percentum of the rent paid during the previous year. Notwithstanding any of the foregoing limitations in this paragraph five, maximum rent shall be increased if ordered by the agency pursuant to subparagraphs (d), (e), (f), (g), (h), (i), (k), (l), (m) or (n) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section. Commencing January first, nineteen hundred eighty, rent adjustments pursuant to subparagraph (n) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section shall be excluded from the maximum rent when computing the seven and one-half percentum increase authorized by this paragraph five. Where a housing accommodation is vacant on January first, nineteen hundred seventy-two, or becomes vacant thereafter by voluntary surrender of possession by the tenants, the maximum rent established for such accommodations may be collected.

(6) Where a new maximum rent has been established pursuant to former subdivision m of this section or, following the repeal of such subdivision, pursuant to subparagraph (m) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section, a new maximum rent shall not be established pursuant to paragraph three of this subdivision. Except with respect to a housing accommodation to which the preceding sentence applies, where the maximum rent on December thirty-first, nineteen hundred seventy-one is higher than the maximum rent established pursuant to paragraph three of this subdivision, such prior maximum rent shall continue in effect until the maximum rent under paragraph three, as adjusted from time to time pursuant to the provisions of this chapter, shall equal or exceed such prior maximum rent, at which time the maximum rent for such housing accommodations shall be as prescribed in this chapter.

(7) Section eight housing assistance.

(a) Notwithstanding any provision of this chapter, if during a rental period in which the landlord is eligible for an adjustment or establishment of rents pursuant to paragraph three or four of this subdivision, housing assistance payments are being made pursuant to section eight of the United States housing act of nineteen hundred thirty-seven, as amended, with respect to any housing accommodation covered by this chapter, the maximum rent collectible from the tenant in occupancy shall be the lesser of: (1) the maximum rent established pursuant to paragraph three of this subdivision as adjusted pursuant to this chapter, computed without regard to the limitations of paragraph five of this subdivision (provided that in any case the rent paid by the tenant pursuant to this chapter without regard to this paragraph is higher than such rent, the rent paid shall be substituted for such rent), or

(2) the contract or fair market rent approved for the housing accommodation pursuant to federal law or regulation.

(b) Prior to the collection of any increase in maximum rent pursuant to this paragraph, the landlord shall advise the city rent agency of his or her intent to compute the maximum rent pursuant to this paragraph.

(c) If a housing accommodation to which this subdivision applies ceases for any reason to be governed by this paragraph, the maximum rent collectible from the tenant shall be computed as if this paragraph had not applied and any adjustments thereto which would have been permitted pursuant to this chapter during the period such rent was set by this paragraph shall be proper rental adjustments.

(8) Notwithstanding the provisions of this chapter, upon the sale in any manner authorized by law of a multiple dwelling which was previously subject to the provisions of such chapter and which was acquired by the city in a tax foreclosure proceeding or pursuant to article nineteen-A of the real property actions and proceedings law, for a dwelling unit which was subject to this chapter pursuant to the local emergency housing rent control act at the time the city so acquired title, is occupied by a tenant who was in occupancy at the time of acquisition and remains in occupancy at the time of sale, the maximum rent shall be the last rent charged by the city, or on behalf of the city, for such dwelling unit, which rent shall not exceed the rent computed pursuant to paragraph three of this subdivision, computed as of the time of such sale. This paragraph shall not apply to redemptions from city ownership pursuant to chapter four of title eleven of the code.

(9) The city rent agency, prior to establishing biennially maximum base rents pursuant to this chapter and before establishing a maximum base rent which is different from the previously existing maximum base rent for dwellings covered by this law, shall hold a public hearing or hearings for the purpose of collecting information the city rent agency may consider in establishing maximum base rents. Notice of the date, time, location and summary of subject matter for the public hearing or hearings shall be published in the City Record for a period of not less than fourteen days, and at least once in one or more newspapers of general circulation at least fourteen days immediately preceding each hearing date, at the expense of the city of New York, and the hearing shall be open for testimony from any individual, group, association or representative thereof who wants to testify.

b. Such agency, to effectuate the purposes of this chapter, and in accordance with the standards set forth in paragraph two of subdivision c of this section, may set aside and correct any maximum rent resulting from illegality, irregularity in vital matters or fraud, occurring prior to or after May first, nineteen hundred sixty-two.

c. (1) Whenever such agency determines that such action is necessary to effectuate the purposes of this chapter, it may also establish maximum rents for housing accommodations to which this chapter applies, where no maximum rent with respect thereto was in effect on April thirtieth, nineteen hundred sixty-two, or where no registration statement had been filed with respect thereto as required by the state rent act, or where for any other reason the provisions of subdivision a of this section are not susceptible to application to any such housing accommodations.

(2) Such rents shall be established, having regard for the maximum rents for comparable housing accommodations or any other factors bearing on the equities involved, consistent with the purposes of this chapter.

d. Where any housing accommodations, which are decontrolled (including those decontrolled by order) or exempted from control pursuant to the provisions of subparagraph (i) of paragraph two of subdivision e of section 26-403 of this chapter, are certified by any city agency having jurisdiction to be a fire hazard or in a continued dangerous condition or detrimental to life or health, the city rent agency shall establish maximum rents for such housing accommodations, having regard for the maximum rents for comparable housing accommodations or any other factors bearing on the equities involved, consistent with the purposes of this chapter.

e. Notwithstanding any other provision of this chapter, and subject to the provisions of subdivision f of this section, provision shall be made pursuant to regulations prescribed by the city rent agency for the establishment, adjustment and modification of maximum rents with respect to rooming house and single room occupancy accommodations, which shall include those housing accommodations subject to control pursuant to the provisions of subparagraph (c) of paragraph two of subdivision e of section 26-403 of this chapter (other than those accommodations subject to control under the last proviso of such subparagraph (c)), having regard for any factors bearing on the equities involved, consistent with the purposes of this chapter, to correct speculative, abnormal and unwarranted increases in rent.

f. On or before June thirtieth, nineteen hundred sixty-two, the city rent agency shall undertake a survey and investigation of all factors affecting rents, rental conditions and rental practices with respect to rooming houses and single room occupancy accommodations within the city for the purpose of determining whether the provisions of this chapter and the regulations thereunder relating to the establishment and adjustment of maximum rents for rooming house and single room occupancy accommodations are reasonably designed to prevent exaction of unreasonable and oppressive rents. Not later than January fifteenth, nineteen hundred sixty-three, such agency shall submit to the council a report setting forth the results of such survey and investigation, together with the findings and recommendations of such agency and any amendments to this chapter and the regulations thereunder which such agency may deem necessary or desirable for the accomplishment of the purposes of this chapter in relation to such accommodations.

During the period between May first, nineteen hundred sixty-two and the thirtieth day next succeeding the date of the submission of such report to the council (1) no application for an increase in any maximum rent for any rooming house or single room occupancy accommodations may be filed on any ground other than those specified in subparagraphs (f) and (g) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section, and (2) no maximum rents for any rooming house or single room occupancy accommodations shall be increased on any grounds other than those specified in such subparagraphs (f) and (g); provided that where the maximum rents for any such accommodations were or are decreased prior to or during such period because of the landlord's reduction of living space, essential services, furniture, furnishings or equipment, and such reduction has been corrected, an application for restoration of the rent decrease may be filed and such rents may be adjusted so as to fix maximum rents which the city rent agency may determine to be proper, pursuant to the provisions of subdivision e of this section, but which shall not in any event exceed the maximum rents for such accommodations in effect immediately prior to such rent decrease.

g. (1) The city rent agency may from time to time adopt, promulgate, amend or rescind such rules, regulations and orders as it may deem necessary or proper to effectuate the purposes of this chapter, including practices relating to recovery of possession; provided that such regulations can be put into effect without general uncertainty, dislocation and hardship inconsistent with the purposes of this chapter; and provided further that such regulations shall be designed to maintain a system of rent controls at levels which, in the judgment of such agency, are generally fair and equitable and which will provide for an orderly transition from and termination of emergency controls without undue dislocations, inflationary price rises or disruption. Provision shall be made, pursuant to regulations prescribed by such agency, for individual adjustment of maximum rents where:

(a) The rental income from a property yields a net annual return of less than six per centum of the valuation of the property.

(1) Such valuation shall be the current assessed valuation established by the city, which is in effect at the time of the filing of the application for an adjustment under this subparagraph (a); provided that:

(i) The city rent agency may make a determination that the valuation of the property is an amount different from such assessed valuation where there has been a reduction in the assessed valuation for the year next preceding the effective date of the current assessed valuation in effect at the time of the filing of the application; and

(ii) Such agency may make a determination that the value of the property is an amount different from the assessed valuation where there has been a bona fide sale of the property within the period February first, nineteen hundred sixty-one, and the time of filing of the application, as the result of a transaction at arm's length, on normal financing terms, at a readily ascertainable price, and unaffected by special circumstances such as but not limited to a forced sale, exchange of property, package deal, wash sale or sale to a cooperative; provided, however, that where an application was filed under this subparagraph (a) on or before the effective date of this sub-item (ii), the city rent agency may determine the value of the property on the basis that there has been a bona fide sale of the property within the period between March fifteenth, nineteen hundred fifty-eight, and the time of the filing of the application. In determining whether a sale was on normal financing terms, such agency shall give due consideration to the following factors:

(a) the ratio of the cash payment received by the seller to (1) the sales price of the property and (2) the annual gross income from the property;

(b) the total amount of the outstanding mortgages which are liens against the property (including purchase money mortgages) as compared with the assessed valuation of the property;

(c) the ratio of the sales price to the annual gross income of the property, with consideration given to the total amount of rent adjustments previously granted, exclusive of rent adjustments because of changes in dwelling space, services, furniture, furnishings or equipment, major capital improvements, or substantial rehabilitation;

(d) the presence of deferred amortization in purchase money mortgages, or the assignment of such mortgage at a discount;

(e) Any other facts and circumstances surrounding such sale which, in the judgment of such agency, may have a bearing upon the question of financing; and

(iii) Where the assessed valuation of the land exceeds four times the assessed valuation of the buildings thereon, the city rent agency may determine a valuation of the property equal to five times the assessed valuation of the buildings, for the purposes of this subparagraph (a).

(2) An application for an increase in any maximum rent under this subparagraph (a) of this paragraph one may not be filed with respect to any property if, on the date when the application is sought to be filed:

(i) Less than two years have elapsed since the date of the filing of the last prior application for an increase under this subparagraph (a) of this paragraph one with respect to such property, which application resulted in the granting of an increase; or

(ii) Less than two years have elapsed since the last sale of the property, and the application is based upon a sale price in excess of the assessed valuation. This subitem shall not apply, however, where less than two years have elapsed since the last sale of the property and the application is based upon a sale within such two-year period at a price in excess of the assessed valuation, if such price is less than the price in the last sale which meets the criteria heretofore specified in this subparagraph (a) occurring prior to two years before the application is sought to be filed and since February first, nineteen hundred sixty-one.

(3) No increase in maximum rents shall be granted under this subparagraph (a) by the city rent agency while there is pending without final disposition any judicial proceeding to correct the final determination of the tax commission with respect to the assessed valuation of such property, (a) for the city fiscal year in which the landlord filed the application for such increase or (b) for the city fiscal year immediately preceding the filing of the application for such increase.

(4) For the purposes of this subparagraph (a): (i) Net annual return shall be the amount by which the earned income exceeds the operating expenses of the property, excluding mortgage interest and amortization, and excluding allowances for obsolescence and reserves, but including an allowance for depreciation of two per centum of the value of the buildings exclusive of the land, or the amount shown for depreciation of the buildings in the latest required federal income tax return, whichever is lower; provided, however, that no allowance for depreciation of the buildings shall be included where the buildings have been fully depreciated for federal income tax purposes or on the books of the owner; and

(ii) Test year shall be the most recent full calendar year or the landlord's most recent fiscal year or any twelve consecutive months ending not more than ninety days prior to the filing of the application for an increase;

(b) Where a building contains no more than nineteen rental units and the landlord has not been fully compensated by increases in rental income sufficient to offset unavoidable increases in property taxes, fuel, utilities, insurance and repairs and maintenance, excluding mortgage interest and amortization, and excluding allowance for depreciation, obsolescence and reserves, which have occurred since the federal date determining the maximum rent; or

(c) The landlord operates a hotel or rooming house or owns a cooperative apartment and has not been fully compensated by increases in rental income from the controlled housing accommodations sufficient to offset such unavoidable increases in property taxes and other costs as are allocable to such controlled housing accommodations, including costs of operation of such hotel or rooming house, but excluding mortgage interest and amortization, and excluding allowances for depreciation, obsolescence and reserves, which have occurred since the federal date determining the maximum rent or the date the landlord commenced the operation of the property, whichever is later; or

(d) The landlord and tenant in occupancy voluntarily enter into a valid written lease in good faith with respect to any housing accommodation, which lease provides for an increase in the maximum rent on the basis of specified increased services, furniture, furnishings, or equipment, provided the city rent agency determines that the specified increased services, furniture, furnishings or equipment have a market value commensurate with the increased rent, the increase maximum rent is not in excess of fifteen per centum and the lease is for a term of not less than two years, provided further that a report of lease is filed as prescribed by regulations issued by the city rent agency or has been otherwise accepted by such agency, and provided further, that where the entire structure, or any lesser portion thereof was vacated by order of a city department having jurisdiction, on or after November twenty-second, nineteen hundred sixty-three and any tenants therein were relocated by the department of relocation, or such structure was boarded up by the department of real estate, such lease increases in subsequently executed leases shall not become effective for any housing accommodations in the structure until such departments have been reimbursed for expenses necessarily incurred in connection with the foregoing; provided further, however, that the landlord may obtain such lease increases without making such reimbursement where the vacating was caused by fire or accident not resulting from any unlawful act or omission on the part of the landlord; or

(e) The landlord and tenant by mutual voluntary written agreement agree to a substantial increase or decrease in dwelling space or a change in the services, furniture, furnishings or equipment provided in the housing accommodations. An adjustment under this subparagraph shall be equal to one-fortieth of the total cost incurred by the landlord in providing such modification or increase in dwelling space, services, furniture, furnishings or equipment, including the cost of installation, but excluding finance charges, provided further than*36 an owner who is entitled to a rent increase pursuant to this subparagraph shall not be entitled to a further rent increase based upon the installation of similar equipment, or new furniture or furnishings within the useful life of such new equipment, or new furniture or furnishings. The owner shall give written notice to the city rent agency of any such adjustment pursuant to this subparagraph.37 ; or

(f) There has been since March first, nineteen hundred fifty-nine, an increase in the rental value of the housing accommodations as a result of a substantial rehabilitation of the building or housing accommodation therein which materially adds to the value of the property or appreciably prolongs its life, excluding ordinary repairs, maintenance and replacements; or

(g) There has been since July first, nineteen hundred seventy, a major capital improvement required for the operation, preservation or maintenance of the structure. An adjustment under this subparagraph (g) shall be in an amount sufficient to amortize the cost of the improvements pursuant to this subparagraph (g) over a seven-year period; or

(h) There have been since March first, nineteen hundred fifty-nine, in structures containing more than four housing accommodations, other improvements made with the express consent of the tenants in occupancy of at least seventy-five per centum of the housing accommodations; provided, however, that whenever the city rent agency has determined that the improvements proposed were part of a plan designed for overall improvement of the structure or increases in services, it may authorize increases in maximum rents for all housing accommodations affected upon the express consent of the tenants in occupancy of at least fifty-one per centum of the housing accommodations, and provided further that no adjustment granted hereunder shall exceed fifteen per centum unless the tenants have agreed to a higher percentage of increase, as herein provided; or

(i) There has been, since March first, nineteen hundred fifty-nine, a subletting without written consent from the landlord or an increase in the number of adult occupants who are not members of the immediate family of the tenant, and the landlord has not been compensated therefor by adjustment of the maximum rent by lease or order of the city rent agency or pursuant to the state rent act or the federal act; or

(j) The presence of unique or peculiar circumstances materially affecting the maximum rent has resulted in a maximum rent which is substantially lower than the rents generally prevailing in the same area for substantially similar housing accom- modations.

(k) The landlord has incurred, since January first, nineteen hundred seventy, in connection with and in addition to a concurrent major capital improvement pursuant to subparagraph (g) of this paragraph, other expenditures to improve, restore or preserve the quality of the structure. An adjustment under this subparagraph shall be granted only if such improvements represent an expenditure equal to at least ten per centum of the total operating and maintenance expenses for the preceding year. An adjustment under this subparagraph shall be in addition to any adjustment granted for the concurrent major capital improvement and shall be in an amount sufficient to amortize the cost of the improvements pursuant to this subparagraph over a seven-year period.

(l) (1) The actual labor expenses currently incurred or to be incurred (pursuant to a collective agreement or other obligation actually entered into by the landlord) exceed the provision for payroll expenses in the current applicable operating and maintenance expense allowance under subdivision a of this section. No application pursuant to this subparagraph may be granted within one year from the granting of an adjustment in maximum rent pursuant to this subparagraph (l), or pursuant to subparagraph (a) of this paragraph. Any rent increase the applicant would be entitled to, or such portion thereof, shall not exceed a total increase of seven and one-half per centum per annum of the maximum rent as provided in paragraph five of subdivision a of this section.

(2) Any adjustment in the maximum rents pursuant hereto shall be subject to:

(i) The adjustment in maximum rent for any twelve-month period for any housing accommodation shall not exceed four percent of the maximum rent in effect on December thirty-first, nineteen hundred seventy-three.

(ii) Where the increase in labor costs compensable herein is the result of an industry-wide collective bargaining agreement or a specific agreement in anticipation of, or subsequent to, an industry-wide collective bargaining agreement, the adjustment shall be in such amount (subject to the above limitation) that the increased rental income from January first, nineteen hundred seventy-four to December thirty-first, nineteen hundred seventy-six shall reflect the increased labor costs for the period from April thirtieth, nineteen hundred seventy-three to April thirtieth, nineteen hundred seventy-six.

(3) For the purpose of this subparagraph (l) the increase in labor costs shall be the amount by which the labor costs (a) actually in effect and paid, or (b) actually in effect and paid or payable and fixed and determined pursuant to agreement on the date of the filing of the application and projected over the period ending April thirtieth, nineteen hundred seventy-six, exceed the labor costs for the twelve calendar months immediately preceding the last day of the month in which the wage agreement became effective.

(4) Notwithstanding any other provision of this chapter, the adjustment pursuant to this subparagraph shall be collectible upon the landlord's filing of a report with the city rent agency, subject to the provisions of subparagraph (e) of paragraph two of subdivision a of this section.

(5) No increase in the maximum rent for any housing accommodation may be granted under this subparagraph (l) if on the date when the application is sought to be filed, less than the full term of such agreement has elapsed since the date of the filing of the last prior application for an increase with respect to such property under this subparagraph (l), which application resulted in the granting of an increase. Where, however, the landlord establishes the existence of unique or peculiar circumstances affecting an increase in labor costs for the property, the agency may accept such application where it determines that such acceptance is not inconsistent with the purposes of this local law.

(6) The increase authorized herein shall be apportioned equitably among all the housing accommodations in the property whether or not subject to control under this chapter.

(m) Where the rehabilitation or improvement of sub-standard or deteriorated housing accommodations has been financed under a governmental program providing assistance through loans, loan insurance or tax abatement or has been undertaken under another rehabilitation program not so financed but approved by the commissioner.

(n) (1) The city rent agency shall hereafter promulgate in January of each year;

(i) findings regarding the price increase or decrease, respectively, for all types of heating fuel, including numbers two, four and six home heating oils, utility supplied steam, gas, electricity and coal, together with the sales and excise taxes thereon, on December thirty-first as compared to the January first in any year; and

(ii) standards for consumption of heating fuel, which shall be no more than two hundred twenty-five gallons per year per room commencing January first, nineteen hundred eighty-one, for buildings using heating oils for heat with comparable unit limitations to be established by the city rent agency for utility supplied steam, gas, electricity, coal and any other types of heating systems, provided that such consumption standards for heating fuels shall be reduced by five gallons per room per year for heating oils and a comparable amount for other heating fuels for the next succeeding year and ten gallons per room per year for heating oils and a comparable amount for other heating fuels for two succeeding years thereafter.

Such findings and consumption standards shall be published in the City Record.

(2) To obtain a rental adjustment pursuant to this subparagraph (n), the landlord shall file a report with the agency on forms prescribed by the agency and shall:

(i) certify the amount of heating fuel consumed in the calendar year immediately prior to the filing of the report;

(ii) state the type of fuel used and the number of rooms in the building;

(iii) certify that (a) all essential services required to be provided have been and will continue to be maintained and (b) there has been no rent reduction order issued pursuant to this chapter based on the landlord's failure to provide heat or hot water during the prior twelve months;

(iv) certify on information and belief, in order to qualify for an additional rent increase pursuant to this subparagraph (n), that for an individual housing accommodation, if the maximum rent collectible pursuant to paragraph five of subdivision a of this section plus actual rent adjustments pursuant to this subparagraph (n) and such additional rent increase, is equal to or exceeds the maximum rent established pursuant to paragraphs three and four of subdivision a of this section plus the amount calculated pursuant to subitem (i) of item three and subitem (i) of item four of this subparagraph (n), each to be allocated to such housing accommodation pursuant to subitem (ii) of item four of this subparagraph (n), that the landlord will not be earning an amount in excess of the statutory return specified in subparagraph (a) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section after collection of a rent increase pursuant to this subparagraph (n), with respect to a building or buildings serviced by a single heating plant;

(v) report any funds received with respect to the housing accommodations from any governmental grant program compensating such landlord for fuel price increases during the period for which an adjustment is obtained pursuant to this subparagraph (n);

(vi) provide such other information as the agency may require.

(3) Rent adjustments for controlled housing accommodations for annual heating fuel cost increases or decreases experienced after December thirty-first, nineteen hundred seventy-nine, shall be determined as follows:

(i) the increase or decrease in heating fuel prices found by the agency for that year shall be multiplied by the actual consumption, not to exceed that year's consumption standard established pursuant to subitem (ii) of item one of this subparagraph; and

(ii) seventy-five percentum of such amount shall be allocated among all rental space in the building, including commercial, professional and similar facilities, provided, for the purposes of this subparagraph (n), that living rooms, kitchens over fifty-nine square feet in area and bedrooms shall be considered rooms and that bathrooms, foyers and kitchenettes shall not be considered rooms.

(4) Rent adjustments for controlled housing accommodations for heating fuel cost increases or decreases experienced from April ninth, nineteen hundred seventy-nine, through and including December thirty-first, nineteen hundred seventy-nine, shall be determined as follows:

(i) the increase or decrease in heating fuel prices found by the agency for that period shall be multiplied by seventy-five percentum of the actual heating fuel consumption during the period from January first, nineteen hundred seventy-nine, through and including December thirty-first, nineteen hundred seventy-nine, which consumption shall not exceed seventy-five percentum of that year's consumption standard established by the agency; and

(ii) such amount shall be allocated among all rental space in the building, including commercial, professional and similar facilities, provided, for the purposes of this subparagraph (n), that living rooms, kitchens over fifty-nine square feet in area and bedrooms shall be considered rooms and that bathrooms, foyers and kitchenettes shall not be considered rooms.

The city rent agency shall promulgate findings for heating fuel price increases or decreases and standards for consumption for the periods set forth in this item four thirty days after this local law is enacted. The standard for consumption shall be no more than seventy-five percentum of two hundred thirty gallons per room for buildings using heating oils for heat with comparable unit limitations to be established by the city rent agency for utility supplied steam, gas, electricity, coal and any other types of heating systems.

(5) A landlord who files a report pursuant to this subparagraph and who falsely certifies shall not be eligible to collect any rent adjustment pursuant to this subparagraph for two years following a determination of a false certification and, in addition, any adjustments obtained pursuant to this subparagraph for up to two years prior to such determination shall not be collectible for that same two year period. Such landlord shall also be subject to any additional penalties imposed by law.

(6) A landlord annually may file a report pursuant to this subparagraph (n) after promulgation by the agency of the findings and consumption standards set forth in item one of subparagraph (n). A rent adjustment pursuant to such report shall be prospectively collectible upon the landlord's serving and filing the report, provided, however, that if a landlord files such report within sixty days of the promulgation of such findings and consumption standards, such rent adjustment shall be retroactive to and shall be effective as of the January first of the year in which the report is filed.

(7) A landlord demanding or collecting a rent adjustment pursuant to this subparagraph (n) shall at the time of either the demand or collection issue to the tenant either a rent bill or receipt separately setting forth the amount of the adjustment pursuant to this subparagraph (n) and the amount of the maximum rent otherwise demanded or collected. If the tenant has been issued a valid senior citizen rent exemption order or a valid disability rent exemption order, the owner shall also separately state the amount payable by the senior citizen or person with a disability after the exemption.

(8) In the event that a rent reduction order is issued by the city rent agency based upon the landlord's failure to provide heat or hot water to housing accommodations for which the landlord is collecting a rent adjustment pursuant to this subparagraph (n), the rent adjustment shall not be collected during the time such rent reduction order is in effect and for twelve months following the date of the restoration of the rent reduction. In addition, the landlord shall not be eligible to collect any subsequent rent adjustment pursuant to this subparagraph (n) until twelve months following the date of the restoration of the rent reduction.

(9) In the event that the city rent agency promulgates a finding of a price decrease, if any landlord who has obtained a rent adjustment pursuant to this subparagraph (n) does not file a report for a rent adjustment pursuant to this subparagraph (n) within sixty days of the promulgation of such findings, then all rent adjustments obtained pursuant to this subparagraph (n) shall not be collectible for a period of twelve months.

(10) Any rent adjustment obtained pursuant to this subparagraph (n) shall not be included in the maximum rent established pursuant to paragraph four or five of subdivision (a) of this section.

(11) The city rent agency shall have the power to promulgate such regulations as it may consider necessary or convenient to implement and administer the provisions of this subparagraph (n). The regulations shall also require that any rent adjustment granted pursuant to this subparagraph (n) be reduced by an amount equal to any governmental grant received by the landlord compensating the landlord for any fuel price increases, but not required by the city, the agency or any granting government entity to be expended for fuel related repairs or improvements.

(o) (1) There has been an increase in heating and heating fuel expenditures in a property resulting from a city-wide rise in heating fuel costs such that the verifiable expenditures for heating or heating fuel in a property for nineteen hundred seventy-four exceeds the verifiable expenditures for such heating or heating fuel during nineteen hundred seventy-three.

(2) To obtain a rental adjustment pursuant to this subparagraph (o), the landlord must certify that he or she is presently maintaining all essential services required to be furnished with respect to the housing accommodations covered by such certification, and that he or she will continue to so maintain such essential services for the period of any such adjustment.

(3) To obtain a rental adjustment pursuant to this subparagraph (o), the landlord must certify on information and belief that he or she will not be earning an amount in excess of the statutory return specified in subparagraph (a) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section after collection of such rental adjustment, with respect to the building or buildings serviced by a single heating plant; and where the building, or buildings serviced by a single heating plant, contains forty-nine or fewer housing accommodations, the landlord must certify that the amount expended directly for heating or heating fuel in nineteen hundred seventy-four equalled or exceeded ten per cent of the total rental income which was derived from the property during nineteen hundred seventy-four; and, where the building, or buildings serviced by a single heating plant, contains fifty or more housing accommodations the landlord must certify that the amount expended directly for heating or heating fuel in nineteen hundred seventy-four equalled or exceeded seven and one-half percentum of the total rental income which was derived from the property during nineteen hundred seventy-four.

(4) The total rental adjustments for a property to be allocated or deemed allocated pursuant to this subparagraph (o) shall not exceed onehalf of the gross amount by which the total verifiable expenditures for heating or heating fuel for nineteen hundred seventy-four exceeds the total verifiable expenditures for such heating or heating fuel for nineteen hundred seventy-three.

(5) Such total rental adjustments shall be allocated or deemed allocated pursuant to this subparagraph (o) to all housing accommodations subject to this chapter, to all other housing accommodations, and to all commercial, professional and similar facilities in or associated with the property in a manner to be determined by the agency. In no event shall any adjustment in maximum rent pursuant to this subparagraph (o) for any housing accommodations subject to this chapter exceed a monthly increase of two dollars per room, as defined by item eight below. In any apartment containing five or more rooms, any increase shall not exceed the total of nine dollars.

(6) Any adjustment pursuant to this subparagraph (o) shall be effective for all or part of the period July first, nineteen hundred seventy-five through June thirtieth, nineteen hundred seventy-six. Any adjustment pursuant to this subparagraph shall automatically expire no later than June thirtieth, nineteen hundred seventy-six.

(7) The rental increases provided for herein shall be effective and collectible upon the landlord's filing a report with the agency on forms prescribed by the agency and upon giving such notice to the tenants as the agency shall prescribe, subject to adjustments upon order of the agency.

(8) In determining the amount of an adjustment allocation of an adjustment pursuant to this subparagraph (o), only living rooms, kitchens over fifty-nine square feet in area, dining rooms and bedrooms shall be considered rooms; bathrooms, foyers, and kitchenettes shall not be considered rooms.

(2) In any case where any housing accommodation was vacated on or after the effective date of this paragraph two, other than by voluntary surrender of possession or in the manner provided in this chapter, the city rent agency may, by regulations having due regard for the equities involved, bar adjustments pursuant to subparagraphs (f) and (g) of paragraph one of this subdivision g, except for work which:

(a) is necessary in order to remove violations against the property;

(b) is necessary to obtain a certificate of occupancy if such certificate is required by law; or

(c) could have been performed with a tenant in physical possession of the housing accommodation.

(3) Any adjustment pursuant to subparagraph (a), (b), or (c) of paragraph one of this subdivision shall be subject to the limitation set forth in paragraph five of subdivision a of this section; provided:

(a) that in ordering an adjustment pursuant to such subparagraph (a), the city rent agency may waive such limitation where a greater increase is necessary to make the earned income of the property equal to its operating expenses; and

(b) that where due to such limitation the landlord will not receive the full amount of the rent increase to which he or she would otherwise be entitled, the order of the city rent agency shall increase the maximum rent by a further additional amount during each succeeding twelvemonth period, not to exceed seven and a half percentum of the maximum rent in effect on the date of the filing of the application for an adjustment, under the maximum rent shall reflect the full increase to which the landlord is entitled.

(4) Any increase in maximum rent shall be apportioned equitably among all the controlled housing accommodations in the property. In making such apportionment and in fixing the increases in maximum rents, the city rent agency shall give due consideration (a) to all previous adjustments or increases in maximum rents by lease or otherwise; and (b) to all other income derived from the property, including income from space and accommodations not controlled, or the rental value thereof if vacant or occupied rent-free, so there is allocated to the controlled housing accommodations therein only that portion of the amount of increases necessary pursuant to subparagraph (a), (b), (c) or (k) of paragraph one of this subdivision g, as is properly attributable to such controlled accommodations.

(5) The city rent agency shall compile and make available for public inspection at reasonable hours at its principal office and at each appropriate local office, the manual of accounting procedures and advisory bulletins applicable to applications under subparagraphs (a), (b) and (c) of paragraph one of this subdivision g, and all amendments to such manual and bulletins.

(6) (a) No application for an increase in any maximum rent may be filed under subparagraph (a), (b) or (c) of paragraph one of this subdivision g with respect to any property unless there is annexed to such application:

(1) A report of search issued by the agency of the city having jurisdiction stating either that no violations against such property are recorded or a receipt (or photocopy thereof) issued by that agency attesting to the payment of the fee for the report of search or that all violations recorded against such property have been cleared, corrected or abated; and

(2) A certification by the landlord of such property that he or she is maintaining all essential services required to be furnished and that he or she will continue to maintain such services so long as any such increase in the maximum rent continues in effect.

(b) Except as provided in subparagraph (c) of this paragraph six and paragraph four of subdivision h of this section, no landlord shall be entitled to an increase in the maximum rent on any ground unless he or she certifies that he or she is maintaining all essential services furnished or required to be furnished as of the date of the issuance of the order adjusting the maximum rent and that he or she will continue to maintain such services so long as the increase in such maximum rent continues in effect; nor shall any landlord be entitled to any increase in the maximum rent on any ground where an agency of the city having jurisdiction certifies that the housing accommodation is a fire hazard or is a continued dangerous condition or detrimental to life or health or is occupied in violation of law; nor shall any landlord be entitled to any increase where the landlord has not removed the violations recorded against such property as shown in the report of search required under subparagraph (a) of this paragraph six.

(c) Where an application for an increase in any maximum rent is filed under subparagraph (f) and/or (g) of paragraph one of this subdivision g, and the landlord is not entitled to any increase by reason of the provisions of subparagraph (b) of this paragraph six, the city rent agency may waive such provisions and issue orders increasing the maximum rent effective as of the date of the issuance of the orders provided, however, that the landlord agrees in writing to deposit the entire amount of such increase in maximum rent into an escrow account administered by the city rent agency in accordance with rules and regulations to be promulgated by such agency for the purpose of obtaining compliance with such provisions and further agrees to obtain and submit to the city rent agency within one year from the date of issuance of such orders; a report of search issued by the agency of the city having jurisdiction stating that the violations shown in the report of search required under subparagraph (a) of this paragraph six have been removed, cleared, corrected or abated, and his or her own certification that he or she is and will continue to maintain all essential services in accordance with the provisions of subparagraph (b) of this paragraph six. In the event the landlord fails to fully comply with such provisions within one year from the date of the issuance of the order increasing the maximum rent, the city agency may, having due regard for the equities involved, revoke such orders and direct full refund to the tenants of the entire increase paid by the tenants as a result of such orders. Any person serving as escrow agent shall not be liable except for fraud or misfeasance.

(d) No new maximum rent shall be established pursuant to paragraph three or four of subdivision a of this section unless not more than one hundred fifty days nor less than ninety days prior to the effective date thereof, the landlord has certified that he or she is maintaining all essential services required to be furnished with respect to the housing accommodations covered by such certification, and that he or she will continue to maintain such services so long as such new maximum rent is in effect. Each such certification filed to obtain a new maximum rent pursuant to paragraph four of subdivision a of this section shall be accompanied by a certification by the landlord that he or she has actually expended or incurred ninety per centum of the total amount of the cost index for operation and maintenance established for his or her type of building.

(e) The city rent agency shall establish a counseling service to provide assistance to tenants and to landlords of buildings containing nineteen or fewer housing accommodations, by way of instruction in the management, maintenance and upkeep of housing accommodations, their respective responsibilities thereto, the programs and enforcement remedies available in the agency and from other city agencies, and assistance in the preparation of applications and other forms.

(7) Before ordering any adjustment in maximum rents, the city rent agency shall accord a reasonable opportunity to be heard thereon to the tenant and the landlord.

h. (1) Whenever in the judgment of the city rent agency such action is necessary or proper in order to effectuate the purposes of this chapter, such agency may, by regulation or order, regulate or prohibit speculative or manipulative practices or renting or leasing practices, including practices relating to recovery of possession, which in the judgment of such agency are equivalent to or are likely to result in rent increases inconsistent with the purposes of this chapter.

(2) Whenever in the judgment of such agency such action is necessary or proper in order to effectuate the purposes of this chapter, such agency may provide regulations to assure the maintenance of the same living space, essential services, furniture, furnishings and equipment as were provided on the date determining the maximum rent, and such agency shall have power by regulation or order to decrease the maximum rent or take action as provided in paragraph four of this subdivision h for any housing accommodation with respect to which a maximum rent is in effect, pursuant to this chapter, if it shall find that the living space, essential services, furniture, furnishings or equipment to which the tenant was entitled on such date have been decreased. The amount of the reduction in maximum rent ordered by such agency under this paragraph shall be reduced by any credit, abatement or offset in rent which the tenant has received pursuant to section two hundred thirty-five-b of the real property law that relates to one or more conditions covered by such order.

(3) Whenever any agency of the city having jurisdiction certifies that any housing accommodation is a fire hazard or is in a continued dangerous condition or detrimental to life or health, or is occupied in violation of law, the city rent agency may issue an order decreasing the maximum rent or take action as provided in paragraph four of this subdivision h for such housing accommodation in such amount as it deems necessary or proper, until the agency issuing such certification has certified that such housing accommodation is no longer a fire or other hazard and is not in a condition detrimental to life and health and is not occupied in violation of law.

(4) (a) Whenever in the judgment of the city rent agency such action is necessary or proper in order to effectuate the purposes of this chapter, such agency may, in lieu of decreasing the maximum rents as provided in paragraphs two and three of this subdivision h, enter into a contract wherein the landlord agrees in writing to deposit all income derived from the property, including income from spaces and accommodations not controlled, into an escrow or trust account for use in maintaining or restoring essential services and equipment, for removing violations against the property or housing accommodations therein, making such repairs as are necessary to remove a certification from any city agency having jurisdiction thereof that the housing accommodation is a fire hazard or is in a continued dangerous condition or detrimental to life or health, or is occupied in violation of law, and/or for such other uses as the city rent agency deems necessary or proper for the preservation, repair or maintenance of the property. The city rent agency may adopt such rules and regulations and orders as it may deem necessary or proper to effectuate the purposes of this paragraph, including but not limited to the issuance of orders adjusting all controlled rents to the appropriate maximum rent effective as of the first day of the month following the execution of the contract provided, however, that in the event the city rent agency shall determine that the landlord has breached such contract, such agency may issue orders (1) decreasing the maximum rents pursuant to such contract; (2) containing a directive that rent collected by the landlord in excess of the rent thus decreased be refunded to the tenants; and (3) containing such other determinations and directives as are necessary in order to effectuate the purposes of this paragraph four.

(b) Notwithstanding any provision of this chapter to the contrary, whenever in the judgment of the city rent agency action as provided in paragraph two or three of this subdivision h is necessary or proper in order to effectuate the purposes of this chapter, such agency may in lieu of decreasing the maximum rents thereof issue orders adjusting all controlled rents and directing that rents be paid into an escrow account for the uses stated in subparagraph (a) of this paragraph four where:

(1) The landlord fails to take corrective action after notice by the city rent agency of proposed action to decrease the maximum rents pursuant to paragraph two or three of this subdivision h, and,

(2) The city rent agency has notified all mortgagees who have filed with the city rent agency a declaration of interest in such property and in such proposed action, and,

(3) The landlord has failed for three consecutive months to collect any controlled rents or to commence court proceedings for their collection or if such proceedings have been commenced, the landlord has not diligently prosecuted them or such proceedings have not resulted in judgment in favor of such landlord.

(c) The city rent agency shall promulgate rules and regulations for the administration of escrow and trust accounts set forth in this paragraph four. Any person serving as escrow agent or trustee shall not be liable except for fraud, breach of fiduciary duties or misfeasance.

(5) Whenever the essential services, furnishings, furniture or equipment of any individual housing accommodation are reduced, impaired, mutilated, or made unworkable as the result of the neglect, failure to exercise due care, or failure of the tenant to take practicable precautions to prevent such condition, the landlord shall restore such services, furniture, furnishings or equipment and pursuant to regulations to be prescribed by the city rent agency may make application for a temporary increase in the maximum rent based upon the cost of such restoration. In the event of the failure of the tenant to make restitution within a reasonable time, as determined by the city rent agency an order shall be issued adjusting the maximum rent for such tenant in an amount sufficient to recover the cost over twelve monthly installments, or until the tenant surrenders possession, whichever is sooner. The provisions of this paragraph shall be in addition to all other rights and remedies of the landlord.

(6) If at least six months before the effective date of any adjustment or establishment of rents pursuant to paragraph three or four of subdivision a of this section, the landlord has not certified to the agency having jurisdiction that (a) all rent impairing violations (as defined by section three hundred two-a of the multiple dwelling law), and (b) at least eighty per centum of all other violations of the housing maintenance code or other state or local laws that impose requirements on property that were recorded against the property one year prior to such effective date have been cleared, corrected, or abated, no increase pursuant to such paragraphs shall take effect until he or she shall have entered into a written agreement with the city rent agency to deposit all income derived from the property into an escrow or trust account pursuant to subparagraph (a) of paragraph four of this subdivision, in addition to the procedures set forth in this paragraph and all other applicable penalties and procedures under this chapter, such violation shall also be subject to repair or removal by the city pursuant to the provisions of article five of subchapter five of the housing maintenance code, the landlord to be liable for the cost thereof.

i. Any regulation or order issued pursuant to this section may be established in such form and manner, may contain such classifications and differentiations, and may provide for such adjustments including the establishment of new or adjusted maximum rents in whole dollar amounts, and such reasonable exceptions as in the judgment of the city rent agency are necessary or proper in order to effectuate the purposes of this chapter.

j. No increase or decrease in maximum rent shall be effective prior to the date on which the order therefor is issued, except as hereinafter provided. If an application for an increase pursuant to subparagraph (a) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section submitted on or after August first, nineteen hundred seventy is accompanied by a certified statement of expenditures and no order is issued thereon within four months of the filing of an application based on assessed value or equalized assessed value, or eight months of the filing of an application based on sale price, with all required documentation the increased rent requested shall thereafter be placed in an interest bearing escrow account until a final determination is made upon such application by the city rent agency. Upon initial determination by the agency an order shall be issued providing for the payment of the increased amount, if any, due to the landlord from the date of first deposit of rent in said escrow account with interest, and the excess amount, if any, be paid the tenants entitled thereto, with an appropriate amount of interest. The city rent agency shall promulgate rules and regulations for the administration of such escrow accounts. Any person serving as escrow agent shall not be liable except for fraud or misfeasance.

k. Regulations, orders, and requirements under this chapter may contain such provisions as the city rent agency deems necessary to prevent the circumvention or evasion thereof.

l. The powers granted in this action shall not be used or made to operate to compel changes in established rental practices, except where such action is affirmatively found by the city rent agency to be necessary to prevent circumvention or evasion of any regulation, order, or requirement under this chapter.

m. Findings. The council finds that there is an acute and continuing housing shortage; that this shortage has and continues to have an adverse effect on the population and especially on inhabitants of the city who are sixty-two years of age or older and of limited means, as well as persons with disabilities, who cannot pay enough rent to induce private enterprise to maintain decent housing at rents they can afford to pay; that this condition is and continues to be particularly acute in a time of rising costs such as the present; that present rising costs and the continuing increase in rents pursuant to amendments to the New York city rent and rehabilitation law may result in such persons being unable to pay their rent, thus making them subject to eviction; that such hardships fall with particular severity upon older persons in the population, as well as persons with disabilities, because of their particular inability to find alternative accommodations within their means, because of the trauma experienced by many older persons, as well as persons with disabilities, who have to relocate and because they may endanger their health by paying additional sums for shelter and thereby deprive themselves of other necessities; that hardships imposed upon such people adversely affect their health and welfare and the general welfare of the inhabitants of the city. The council is aware of the provisions set forth in chapter three hundred seventy-two and chapter one thousand twelve of the laws of nineteen hundred seventy-one. It is our considered opinion that this legislation extending the rent exemption to cover the resultant rent increases due to the maximum rents established January first, nineteen hundred seventy-two, is not more stringent or restrictive than those presently in effect. It is found and declared to be necessary for the health, welfare and safety of persons who are sixty-two years of age or older, persons with disabilities and inhabitants of the city that the city continue a system of special rent adjustments for such older persons, as well as extend such special rent adjustments to persons with disabilities as hereinafter provided.

(1) No increase in maximum rent pursuant to paragraph two or paragraph three, four or five of subdivision a of this section, or subparagraph (a), (b), (c), (l) or (n) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section, shall be collectible from a tenant to whom there has been issued a currently valid rent exemption order pursuant to this subdivision, except as provided in such order.

(2) A tenant is eligible for a rent exemption order pursuant to this subdivision if:

(i) the head of the household residing in the housing accommodation is sixty-two years of age or older or is a person with a disability, and is entitled to the possession or to the use or occupancy of a dwelling unit. To qualify as a person with a disability for the purposes of this section, an individual shall submit to such agency as the mayor shall designate proof (as specified by regulation of such agency as the mayor shall designate) showing that such individual is currently receiving social security disability insurance (SSDI) or supplemental security income (SSI) benefits under the federal social security act or disability pension or disability compensation benefits provided by the United States department of veterans affairs, or was previously eligible by virtue of receiving disability benefits under the supplemental security income program or the social security disability program and is currently receiving medical assistance benefits based on determination of disability as provided in section three hundred sixty-six of the social services law.

(ii) The aggregate disposable income (as defined by regulation of the department for the aging) of all members of the household residing in the housing accommodation whose head of household is sixty-two years of age or older does not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand five, twenty-six thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand six, twenty-seven thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand seven, twenty-eight thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand eight, and twenty-nine thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand nine, per year, after deduction of federal, state and city income and social security taxes. For purposes of this subparagraph, "aggregate disposable income" shall not include gifts or inheritances, payments made to individuals because of their status as victims of Nazi persecution, as defined in P.L. 103-286, or increases in benefits accorded pursuant to the social security act or a public or private pension paid to any member of the household which increase, in any given year, does not exceed the consumer price index (all items United States city average) for such year which take effect after the date of eligibility of a head of the household receiving benefits under this subdivision whether received by the head of the household or any other member of the household;

(iii) the aggregate disposable income (as defined by regulation of such agency as the mayor shall designate) for the current income tax year of all members of the household residing in the housing accommodation whose head of the household is a person with a disability pursuant to this section does not exceed the maximum income above which such head of the household would not be eligible to receive cash supplemental security income benefits under federal law during such tax year. For purposes of this subparagraph, "aggregate disposable income" shall not include gifts or inheritances, payments made to individuals because of their status as victims of Nazi persecution, as defined in P.L. 103-286, or increases in benefits accorded pursuant to the social security act or a public or private pension paid to any member of the household which increase, in any given year, does not exceed the consumer price index (all items United States city average) for such year which take effect after the date of eligibility of a head of the household receiving benefits under this subdivision whether received by the head of the household or any other member of the household.

(iv) (a) in the case of a head of the household who does not receive a monthly allowance for shelter pursuant to the social services law, the maximum rent for the housing accommodations exceeds one-third of the aggregate disposable income or if any expected increase in the maximum rent pursuant to paragraph two, three, four or five of subdivision a of this section, or subparagraph (a), (b), (c), (l) or (n) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section would cause such maximum rent to exceed one-third of the aggregate disposable income; or

(b) in the case of a head of the household who receives a monthly allowance for shelter pursuant to the social services law, the maximum rent for the housing accommodations exceeds the maximum allowance for shelter which the head of the household is entitled to receive pursuant to the social services law or if any expected increase in the maximum rent pursuant to paragraph two, three, four or five of subdivision a of this section, or subparagraph (a), (b), (c), (l) or (n) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section would cause such maximum rent to exceed the maximum allowance for shelter which the head of the household is entitled to receive.

(3) (a) A rent exemption order pursuant to this subdivision shall provide:

(i) in the case of a head of the household who does not receive a monthly allowance for shelter pursuant to the social services law, that the landlord may not collect from the tenant to whom it is issued rent at a rate in excess of one-third of the aggregate disposable income, or the maximum collectible rent in effect on December thirty-first of the year preceding the effective date of the order, whichever is greater; or

(ii) in the case of a head of the household who receives a monthly allowance for shelter pursuant to the social services law, that the landlord may not collect from the tenant to whom it is issued rent at a rate in excess of either the maximum allowance for shelter which the head of the household is entitled to receive, or the maximum collectible rent in effect on December thirty-first of the year preceding the effective date of the order, whichever is greater; except,

(iii) that the landlord may collect from the tenants described in items (i) and (ii) of this subparagraph increases in rent pursuant to subparagraphs (d), (e), and (i) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section.

(b) Each such order shall expire upon termination of occupancy of the housing accommodation by the tenant to whom it is issued. The landlord shall notify the department for the aging, in the case of a household whose eligibility for such order is based on the fact that the head of such household is sixty-two years of age or older, or such agency as the mayor shall designate, in the case of a household whose eligibility for such order is based on the fact that the head of such household is a person with a disability, on a form to be prescribed by such department, within thirty days of each such termination of occupancy.

(c) When a rent reduction order is issued by the city rent agency, the amount of the reduction shall be subtracted from the rent payable by the tenant specified in a currently valid rent exemption order issued pursuant to this subdivision. The landlord may not collect from the tenant a sum of rent exceeding the adjusted amount while the rent reduction order is in effect.

(4) Any landlord who collects, or seeks to collect or enforce, rent from a tenant in violation of the terms of a rent exemption order shall, for the purposes of all remedies, sanctions and penalties provided in this chapter, be deemed to have collected or attempted to collect or enforce, a rent in excess of the legal maximum rent.

(5) A rent exemption order shall be issued to each tenant who applies to the New York City department for the aging or such other agency as the mayor shall designate in accordance with such department or agency's regulations and who is found to be eligible under this subdivision. Such order shall take effect on the first day of the first month after receipt of such application, except that where the aggregate disposable income of all members of the household residing in the housing accommodation whose head of the household is sixty-two years of age or older is greater than five thousand dollars per year but does not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand five, twenty-six thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand six, twenty-seven thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand seven, twenty-eight thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand eight, and twenty-nine thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand nine, per year pursuant to subparagraph (ii) of paragraph two of subdivision m of this section on orders issued on applications received before July first, nineteen hundred seventy-five, the effective date of such order shall be the later of (1) June thirtieth, nineteen hundred seventy-four or (2) the last day of the month in which a person becomes an eligible head of household in the housing accommodation in which such person resides at the time of filing the most recent application for a rent exemption order; and further, except that where any other application has been received within ninety days of the issuance of the order increasing the tenant's maximum rent pursuant to paragraph three, four or six of subdivision (a) of this section, or subparagraph (a), (b), (c), or (l) of paragraph (1) of subdivision (g) of this section or pursuant to court order, whichever is later, the rent exemption order shall without further order take effect as of the effective date of said order increasing the tenant's rent including any retroactive increments collectible pursuant to such orders.

(6) A rent exemption order shall be valid for a period of two years and may be renewed for further two year periods upon application by the tenant; provided, that upon any such renewal application being made by the tenant, any rent exemption order then in effect with respect to such tenant shall be deemed renewed until such time as the department for the aging or such other agency as the mayor shall designate shall have found such tenant to be either eligible or ineligible for a rent exemption order but in no event for more than six additional months. If such tenant is found eligible, the order shall be deemed to have taken effect upon expiration of the exemption. In the event that any such tenant shall, subsequent to any such automatic renewal, not be granted a rent exemption order, such tenant shall be liable to his or her landlord for the difference between the amounts he or she has paid under the provisions of the automatically renewed order and the amounts which he or she would have been required to pay in the absence of such order. Any rent exemption order issued pursuant to this subdivision shall include provisions giving notice as to the contents of this paragraph relating to automatic renewals of rent exemption orders. Any application or renewal application for a rent exemption order shall also constitute an application for a tax abatement under such section. The department for the aging and such other agency as the mayor shall designate may, with respect to renewal applications by tenants who have been found eligible for rent exemption orders, prescribe a simplified form including a certification of the applicant's continued eligibility in lieu of a detailed statement of income and other qualifications.

(7) Notwithstanding the provisions of this chapter, a tenant who resides in a housing accommodation which becomes subject to this chapter upon the sale by the city of New York of the building in which such housing accommodation is situated may be issued a rent increase exemption order for increases in rent which occurred during ownership of such building by the city of New York provided that such tenant would have been otherwise eligible to receive a rent increase exemption order at the time of such increase but for the fact that such tenant occupied a housing accommodation owned by the city of New York and was therefore not subject to this chapter. Application for such rent increase examption orders shall be made within one year from the date such building is sold by the city of New York or within one year of the effective date of this provision, whichever is later.

(8) Notwithstanding the provisions of this chapter or chapter four of this title, when a dwelling unit is subject to regulation under this chapter or chapter four of this title is reclassified by a city rent agency order subject to the other chapter, the tenant, who holds a senior citizen rent increase exemption order or disability rent increase exemption order at the time of the reclassification or is otherwise eligible and entitled to an exemption order from one or more rent increases but for the reclassification of the dwelling unit, may be issued a rent increase exemption order under the chapter to which the unit is thereafter subject by virtue of the reclassification continuing the previous exemption notwithstanding the reclassification of the dwelling unit or, where no previous rent increase exemption order has been granted, issuing an initial order exempting the tenant from paying the rent increase to the extent for which he or she would have been eligible and entitled to be exempted at the time of the increase and reclassification but for the fact of reclassification of the dwelling unit including exemption from the rent increase granted pursuant to subparagraph (m) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section to the extent that it is not predicated upon any improvement or addition in a category as provided for in subparagraph (d), (e), (f), (g), (h) or (i) of paragraph one of subdivision g of this section. Application for such rent increase exemption order shall be made within ninety days from the date of reclassification or within ninety days of the effective date of this paragraph, whichever is later. The rent increase exemption order shall take effect as of the effective date of reclassification including any retroactive increments pursuant to such rent increase.

(9) Notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, where a head of household holds a current, valid rent exemption order and, after the effective date of this paragraph, there is a permanent decrease in aggregate disposable income in an amount which exceeds twenty percent of such aggregate disposable income as represented in such head of the household's last approved application for a rent exemption order or for renewal thereof, such head of the household may apply for a redetermination of the amount set forth therein. Upon application, such amount shall be redetermined so as to re-establish the ratio of adjusted rent to aggregate disposable income which existed at the time of the approval of such eligible head of the household's last application for a rent exemption order or for renewal thereof; provided, however, that in no event shall the amount of the adjusted rent be redetermined to be (i) in the case of a head of the household who does not receive a monthly allowance for shelter pursuant to the social services law, less than one-third of the aggregate disposable income; or (ii) in the case of a head of the household who receives a monthly allowance for shelter pursuant to the social services law, less than the maximum allowance for shelter which such head of the household is entitled to receive pursuant to such law. For purposes of this paragraph, a decrease in aggregate disposable income shall not include any decrease in such income resulting from the manner in which such income is calculated pursuant to any amendment to paragraph c of subdivision one of section four hundred sixty-seven-b of the real property tax law, any amendment to the regulations of the department for the aging made on or after April first, nineteen hundred eighty-seven or any amendment to the regulations of such other agency as the mayor shall designate made on or after the effective date of the local law that amended this section. For purposes of this paragraph, "adjusted rent" shall mean maximum rent less the amount set forth in a rent exemption order.

Effective date of L.L. 52/1986 with special provisions

Section 5. This local law shall take effect immediately and shall be retroactive to and shall be deemed to have been in full force and effect on and after August second, nineteen hundred eighty-six. Notwithstanding any inconsistent provision of the administrative code, any person who on August second, nineteen hundred eighty-six would have been eligible for a rent increase exemption order pursuant to such code but for the fact that his or her income exceed the ten thousand five hundred dollar income limitation in effect before the enactment of this local law, and who as a result of the enactment of this local law increasing the maximum income limitation to twelve thousand twenty-five dollars is eligible effective August second, nineteen hundred eighty-six, for such order, may file an application for such order within ninety days of the enactment of this local law, and any such order issued to such applicant shall be effective as of August second, nineteen hundred eighty-six.

NOTE 1. Provisions of L.L. 73/1997: Section 1. Legislative findings. In 1970, the city council enacted local law 30 which made fundamental reforms in computing rent increases for residential dwellings subject to the New York city rent and rehabilitation law (rent control). Included among these reforms was the establishment of the maximum base rent formula, which is used today to compute the maximum rent that may be charged for a rent controlled apartment for the ensuing two-year period. The maximum base rent formula is based upon several cost components plus an eight and one-half percent return on capital value, where "capital value" is defined as equalized assessed valuation using the special state equalization ratio established pursuant to article 12-A of the New York state real property tax law (RPTL). At the time of local law 30's enactment, the only other official equalization measurement in existence was the article 12 (RPTL) state equalization rate, which, like the article 12-A special state equalization ratio, provided an equalization ratio of assessments to market values for all taxable real property situated in New York city. Although the article 12 state equalization rate and the article 12-1 special state equalization ratio were numerically similar at that time, the council selected the article 12-A special state equalization ratio for computing capital value. It is the council's understanding that, at the time, the article 12-A special state equalization ratio closely and more accurately reflected the current market value of all taxable real property in New York city so as to provide the best possible measurement for computing "capital value". However, since the enactment of local law 30 the city has altered the way in which it assesses property. Beginning in 1981 with the state legislature's enactment of chapter 1057, all properties in the city of New York were classified into one of four classes, with class one consisting of residential dwellings of three units or less, class two consisting of multiple dwellings of four units or more, class three consisting of utility property and class four consisting of all other property not designated as class one, two or three, predominantly commercial. Under this class structure system, class two residential property is assessed at a substantially higher percentage of the fair market value than class one. Because the article 12-A special state equalization ratio reflects the average assessment ratio for all four classes of property, using it to compute equalized assessed valuation for class one and class two properties only, produces distorted values for each of these classes. More specifically, using the article 12-A special state equalization ratio to compute equalized assessed valuation artificially inflates the capital values for class two properties resulting in a doubling of the statutory eight and one-half percent return on capital value, while at the same time, it artificially decreases the capital values for class one properties, resulting in a return on capital value that is less than half of the statutory rate. In light of the statutory eight and one-half percent return on capital value, the unforeseen result of a return on a distorted measure of capital value, described above, is contrary to the obvious intent of local law 30. In 1989, the New York state division of housing and community renewal, which also acknowledged the gross inequity and unintended consequence that results from the utilization of the article 12-A special state equalization ratio, began using the more appropriate ratio, the article 12 tax class ratio, and continued to do so to the present. Since the creation of the class structure system the state has provided a separate ratio of assessed value to market value for each class of property. The council finds that the article 12 tax class ratio provides a more accurate measure of the value of properties for a particular class than the article 12-A special state equalization ratio because the article 12 tax class ratio measures the value of those properties within that particular class as opposed to the article 12-A special state equalization ratio which measures the value of all real property within the city, including one-, two- and three-family dwellings, utility property and commercial property, for the purpose of establishing the city's constitutional tax and debt limits. By requiring the appropriate tax class ratio established pursuant to article 12 to be used in calculating equalized assessed valuation, this local law fulfills the obvious intent of the council in a way that fairly serves both landlords and tenants. § 3. Notwithstanding any other provision of this local law, the standard adjustment factor for the 1996/97 maximum base rent cycle shall be computed in accordance with the provisions of section 2 of this local law. § 4. If any clause, sentence, paragraph, section or part of this local law shall be adjudged by any court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, such judgment shall not affect, impair or invalidate the remainder thereof, but shall be confined in its operation to the clause, sentence, paragraph, section or part thereof directly involved in the controversy in which such judgment shall have been rendered. § 5. This local law shall take effect immediately.

NOTE 2. Provisions of L.L. 67/2003: § 5. This local law shall take effect immediately, and shall be retroactive to and shall be deemed to have been in full force and effect on and after September 1, 2003. Notwithstanding any other provision of the administrative code of the city of New York, any person who on or after September 1, 2003 through the date of enactment of this local law would have been eligible for a rent increase exemption order pursuant to such code but for the fact that his or her income exceeded the income limitation of twenty thousand dollars in effect before the enactment of this local law, and who as a result of the enactment of this local law increasing the maximum income limitation to twenty-four thousand dollars is eligible for such order on or after September 1, 2003 through the date of enactment of this local law may file an application for such order within ninety days of the enactment of this local law. Any such rent increase exemption order issued to such applicant shall be effective as of that date on or after September 1, 2003 through the date of enactment of this local law upon which such person would have been eligible for such rent increase exemption order but for the fact that his or her income exceeded the income limitation of twenty thousand dollars in effect before the enactment of this local law.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. Allocating a decrease in rent resulting from the elimination of lobby attendants equally among all tenants without regard for the rent paid by each or the size of their respective apartments was arbitrary. In re Jambaru Realty Corp., 148 (98) N.Y.L.J. (11-21-62) 14, Col. 3 F.

¶ 2. An order granting an increase in rents was not arbitrary where the tenant rented the apartment for himself, his wife and his two children, but thereafter his wife and children ceased to live with him and he took three cousins into the premises. Increased occupancy is not predicated solely upon the number of tenants, but considers whether the tenants are members of an immediate family. In re Goldstein, 148 (39) N.Y.L.J. (8-24-62) 6, Col. 4 M.

¶ 3. The landlord of a 35-unit apartment was not entitled to a temporary injunction restraining the Rent Administrator from reducing maximum rents because of violations posted against the apartment house where there were no showing that such reduction would cause irreparable damage to the owner. A reduction could be reviewed in an Article 78 proceeding and if the owner was successful, he could maintain an action against the tenants for the full back rents. Yorkshire Associates v. Halpern, 148 (28) N.Y.L.J. (8-9-62) 6, Col. 2 F.

¶ 4. A second full increase for the replacement of a refrigerator was properly denied where there was no evidence that the refrigerator (a gas type prohibited by the Health Department) was absolutely banned or could not have been adjusted. In re Ginsburg, 148 (27) N.Y.L.J. (8-8-62) 4, Col. 6 T.

¶ 5. The requirement of subdivision b of § 91 of the regulations, that a protest be verified by each tenant joining therein, may be waived by the agency, in light of the power to initiate a proceeding on its own initiative with respect to the maintenance of essential services. Matter of Jambaru Realty Corp., 19 App. Div. 2d 700, 241 NYS2d 460 [1963].

¶ 6. A landlord's application for a rent increase based on the net annual return of the property was denied by a State officer on the ground of abnormal financing. Thereafter, a protest was filed with the City Rent Administrator. The landlord was entitled to a hearing on the merits despite the provision barring rent increases sought before two years had elapsed since purchase. Matter of 35th Avenue Realty Co., 40 Misc 2d 247, 242 NYS2d 872 [1963].

¶ 7. The provisions of this section which provide for a rent increase if the landlord is earning less than 6% of the value of his premises; value being defined as current assessed value at the time the application is filed, is not unconstitutional. Hartley Holding Corp. v. Gabel, 13 N.Y. 2d 36, 247 NYS2d 77, 196 NE2d 537 [1963].

¶ 8. A two-year lease provided that the maximum rent would be automatically increased by a permissible percentage (Regs. 33.2). It also provided for the installation of improvements and for additional rent increases therefor. The landlord obtained a rent increase on documents showing the cost of certain improvements. On a subsequent proceeding it was shown that the landlord had fraudulently exaggerated the cost of the improvements. Held:the Administrator properly refused to investigate the truthfulness of the landlord's fraud tainted application but it was error to revoke the "automatically increased" rental. Matter of Lucot, Inc., 20 App. Div. 2d 94, 244 NYS2d 582 [1963], aff'd, 15 NY2d 774, 257 NYS2d 343, 205 NE2d 535 [1965].

¶ 9. The Administrator properly reduced rents on housing accommodations upon a certification by the Department of Buildings that the building was a fire hazard and detrimental to life and health. It was not necessary that the Administrator make an independent investigation of the conditions. Matter of F & M Realty Co., 40 Misc 2d 1098, 244 NYS2d 660 [1963], aff'd 21 App. Div. 2d 853, 252 NYS2d 285 [1964].

¶ 10. State Rent Administrator's determination that price paid by landlord for property was bona fide and on normal financing terms and was proper basis on which to compute whether property was yielding 6% return was binding on subsequently established city rent administrator who could not use lesser assessed valuation. Matter of Ess Pee Bee Realty Corp., 22 App. Div. 2d 207, 254 NYS2d 377 [1964], aff'd, 16 NY2d 524, 208 NE2d 450, 260 NYS2d 640 [1965].

¶ 11. The Rent Administrator, in a proceeding to increase rent sufficiently to allow a 6% return, could not disregard both the assessed valuation and the purchase price of the property in favor of a price which was $30,000 lower than the price paid by the petitioner and which had been paid by a predecessor in title three months before petitioner acquired the property. Matter of Maflo Holding Corp. v. Gabel 22 App. Div. 2d 198, 254 N.Y.S. 2d 429 [1964], aff'd 16 N.Y. 2d 577, 260 NYS2d 845, 208 NE2d 787 [1955].

¶ 12. City rent regulations (§ 33, subd. d, par 1) providing for not more than one order adjusting rents in a 24-month period is invalid as repugnant to this section. Miller v. Gabel, 41 Misc. 2d 970, 246 NYS2d 964 [1964], aff'd, 251 NYS 1009 [1964].

¶ 13. Failure to make independent physical inspection of premises to verify that landlord was providing essential services was ground to remand order granting rent increase. Matter of Klinger, 41 Misc. 2d 955.

¶ 14. A 15% limitation on rent adjustments over any 24-month period was applicable to prior adjustment increases granted by the State Rent Administrator. Matter of 1825 Realty Co. v. Gabel, 44 Misc. 2d 767, 254 NYS2d 893 [1964].

¶ 15. A landlord is entitled as a matter of right to a rent increase sufficient to yield him a 6% net annual return on the value of his property. The administrator erred in rejecting an application for an increase which was supported by a seventeen page itemized schedule of operating expenses totaling $59,628. There were one or two "fraudulent bills" of only $102 and commissioner took more than two years to come to decision to reject application. Matter of 911 Walton Associates, 45 Misc. 2d 224, 256 NYS2d 450 [1964].

¶ 16. A new depreciation basis taken in property upon the death of the former owner, pursuant to the Federal income tax rules, provided the owner with a depreciation allowance which should be considered in an application for a maximum rent adjustment. Matter of Klorfein, 21 App. Div. 2d 773, 250 NYS2d 795 [1964].

¶ 17. Where two apartment houses located on opposite sides of the street were purchased together for $820,000 by separate partnerships composd of the same persons and a portion of the total purchase price was allocated to each of the two properties following in close ratio the respective assessments, rent roles, mortgages, number of apartments and prior sales, City Rent and Rehabilitation Administration was not warranted in rejecting apportioned purchase price and substituting the assessed value as a basis for a rent determination. Where as here the evidence showed the allocation of a total fair price to be consistent with the total, a fair allocation of a bona fide purchase with a normal financing should be treated in the same way as separate purchases at the allocated prices. Matter of 1455 Realty Co. v. Berman, 21 NY2d 675, 234 NE2d 258, 287 NYS2d 97 [1967].

¶ 18. The District Director's order establishing a maximum rent is binding on the Civil Court and the order of the rent commission may not be collaterally attacked. Thompson Properties, Inc. v. DiBiase, 57 Misc 2d 1085, 294 NYS2d 220 [1968].

¶ 19. Formula for computing return is reasonable and system of rent regulation in New York City is constitutional. Felner v. Office of Rent Control, 27 NY2d 692, 314 NYS2d 11, 262 NE2d 217 [1970].

¶ 20. Section 2 of LL No. 24 of 1973 which repealed the maximum base rent provisions (MBR) violated Laws 1971, ch. 372 which prohibits enactment in cities with population of one million or more of any local legislation subjecting rent-controlled housing accommodations to "more stringent or restrictive provisions of regulation and control than those presently in effect" but section 3 of LL No. 24 of 1973 which repealed the $8^1/_2$% hardship increase provided for by LL No. 30 of 1970 was valid. 210 East 68th St. Corp. v. City Rent Agency, 34 NY2d 560, 354 NYS2d 941, 310 NE2d 538 [1974].

¶ 21. Rent Commissioner's determination which established rents for two apartments and directed refunds of overcharges was arbitrary where the maximum rent of record ceased to exist because of a renovation coupled with lawful occupancy. In the Matter of East 12th Associates v. Leventhal, 46 App. Div. 2d 657 [1974].

¶ 22. A kitchen, for purposes of computing the maximum base rent in a rent-controlled multiple dwelling is not required to be more than 59 square feet to be counted as a room. Matter of Plaza Management Co. v. Dept of Rent & Housing Maintenance, 80 Misc 2d 348 [1974].

¶ 23. Housing and Development Administration had power to impose a service fee to process 1974-1975 maximum base rent-maximum collectible rent increase orders. Carole Ann Realties v. Starr, 41 NY2d 992 [1977].

¶ 24. Landlord was properly denied "first rents" where renovations costing over $100,000 did not constitute a substantial rehabilitation of the rental premises. Asen Bros. & Brook v. Leventhal, 54 NY2d 839 [1981].

¶ 25. Although landlord had substantially complied with 80% of the repairs for the non-rent-impairing violations on record at least 6 months before effective date of rent increase. Maximum Base Rent increases would not be granted because landlord had not repaired 80% of the violations and the 80% rule is in itself a "substantial compliance" rule which should not be further reduced. Pearce, Mayer & Greer v. Joy, 48 NY2d 680 [1979], aff'g, 63 AD2d 928.

¶ 26. Words "individual adjustment of maximum rents" in subdivision g is to be construed as meaning that each adjustment shall be considered separately and individually and word "individual" is not to be read as "one and only one", hence landlord who obtained government assisted financing to rehabilitate housing accommodations could obtain a second rent adjustment to enable it to meet loan obligations. Johnson v. Joy, 48 NY2d 689 [1979], aff'g, 65 AD2d 701.

¶ 27. Petitioner who corrected 19 out of 24 non-rent-impairing violations which was 79.16% was not entitled to a maximum base rent increase since substantial compliance is not sufficient to satisfy the 80% rule. Matter of 304 W. 89 St. Realty Corp. v. Joy, 72 AD2d 535 421 NYS2d 71 [1979].

¶ 28. Petitioner senior citizen is not allowed to deduct business loss in computing max. "aggregate disposable income" as fixed in § Y51-5.0n.(2)(ii) for senior citizen rent increase exemption and defined in § 34.6(d)(1) NYC Rent and Eviction Regulations.-Matter of Walinska v. NYC Dept. of Rent and Housing Maintenance, 93 AD2d 722 [1983]; affirmed 60 NY2d 658 [1983].

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Petitioner turned 62 years of age 15 days after rent increase took effect. Departments denial of a rent increase exemption order was arbitrary and capricious. Applicant meets all the criteria of § 26-405(m)(2). This statute's purpose is to alleviate hardships on seniors of low income and it should be liberally construed. Petition remanded for reconsideration. Lee v. Biderman, 143 Misc 2d 658 [1989].

¶ 2. The administrative agency can lawfully require that an owner seeking a maximum base rent increase certify that at least 80 percent of all non-rent-impairing violations recorded against the property have been corrected. Barklee Realty Co. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 159 A.D.2d 416, 553 N.Y.S.2d 112 (1st Dept. 1990), appeal dismissed, 76 N.Y.2d 844, 560 N.Y.S.2d 128, lv. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 709, 563 N.Y.S.2d 61.

¶ 3. For purposes of deciding whether not to grant a maximum base rent increase, the refusal of the administrative agency to waive a violation regarding unlawful professional use of the apartment was not an abuse of discretion. Although the landlord contended that she did everything possible to terminate the use of the apartments, the agency could consider the fact that she chose to rent the apartments to professional tenants in the first place. Melohn v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 190 A.D.2d 527, 593 N.Y.S.2d 30 (1st Dept. 1993).

¶ 4. Under the statutory scheme of rent control, the maximum base rent that a landlord can collect from a rent controlled tenant is calculated by using a formula which includes, as one of its many factors, the capital value of the property. In one case, the owners of rent controlled units challenged the method by which the state rent agency calculated the maximum base rent for apartments. The state computed the capital value component of the maximum base rent using the equalization rate under Real Property Tax Law Art. 12, which specifically measured the value of apartment buildings, rather than RPTL Art. 12-A, which measured the value of all real property within the City of New York. The court granted the landlords' petiton, holding that where Admin.Code § 26-405 specified the use of Art. 12-A in terms of equalization rates, that provision was mandatory, and the state agency could not lawfully use Article 12, even if its practice resulted in lower rents for tenants. Community Housing Improvement Program, Inc. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 230 A.D.2d 66, 656 N.Y.S.2d 777 (App.Div. 3d Dept. 1997).

¶ 5. The formula for the maximum base rent (MBR) for rent controlled New York City apartments ensures landlords an 8.5 percent return on capital value, defined as equalized assessed valuation under the Real Property Tax Law (RPTL). The RPTL provides two possible applicable measures of equalized assessed valuation, Article 12-A, which was formerly used, and Article 12, which the City has now adopted for use in its MBR formula. A group of landlords, whose MBR's were allegedly diminished by reason of the change, challenged the action, alleging that the City's adoption of Article 12 to measure capital value violated the Urstadt Law (Unconsolidated Laws Sec. 8605), which prohibits "more stringent or restrictive" rent regulation. The court, however, upheld the City's adoption of the Article 12 measurement. In beginning its analysis, the Court of Appeals explained that the "equalization rate" is the ratio between assessed value and market value for every local assessing unit. Under Article 12, New York City real property falls into four classes: (1) one, two and three-family homes; (2) most apartment buildings; (3) utility real property; and (4) all other real property. Article 12-A does not provide a similar classification. The court noted that the phrase "more stringent or restrictive" was not the equivalent of "less profitable" to landlords. Then, the court distinguished the instant case from others in which the agency's action has been struck down. For example, prior cases struck down the City's placement of a cap on certain types of increases, and the City's removal of a class of apartments from eligibility for hardship increases. On the other hand, in the instant case, the City's action did not diminish the landlord's rights under the MBR formula, but merely led to a more accurate valuation of properties. The landlords did not have a vested interest in overvaluation, the court said. City of New York v. DHCR, 97 N.Y.2d 216, 739 N.Y.S.2d 333 (2001).

¶ 6. The New York City Department for the Aging (DFTA) properly denied petitioner's application to transfer her deceased father's Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption (SCRIE) benefits to her, since petitioner had not been listed as a household member on either her father's initial application for SCRIE benefits or on his subsequently filed SCRIE re-certification forms. Those forms contained specific inquiries respecting household constituents. The DATA policy that SCIRE benefits were not transferable unless the person requesting transfer of benefits was listed as a household member on the original application or on subsequent re-certification application was rationally based, since it prevented people who were not members of the household from falsely claiming receipt of another's SCIRE benefits upon termination of the original applicant's benefits. Rebecca v. City of New York, 720 N.Y.S.2d 136 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 2001); 280 A.D.2d 283 and leave to appeal denied, 96 N.Y.2d 722, 733 N.Y.S.2d 374 (2001).

¶ 7. In calculating the Fair Market Rent for the subject apartment, DHCR added in a guidelines increase based upon a claimed increase in the Maximum Base Rent (MBR). The court, however, held that was improper to add in an MBR increase without first determining whether the landlord would have been entitled to such an increase. The court noted that the increase in the MBR would not have been automatic. To obtain an order of eligibility from DHCR, the landlord would have had to, among other things, submit a written certification to DHCR, six months before the effective date of the increase, that it has cleared all rent-impairing violations, as well as 80 percent of all other violations. Schaper & Falck v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., June 5, 2001, page 18, col. 2 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 8. Where a landlord has not removed at least 80 percent of the violations of record on the subject premises within six months of the application for a Maximum Base Rent Increase, the agency will deny the application. Mayflower Devel. Corp. v. Roldan, 298 A.D.2d 291, 748 N.Y.S.2d 746 (1st Dept. 2002).

¶ 9. A landlord who seeks a Maximum Base Rent increase must certify that it is maintaining essential services and that six months prior to the effective date of the MBR increase, it has corrected all of the rent-impairing and at least 80 percent of the non-rent impairing housing code violations. A tenant who wishes to oppose the rent increase must file with DHCR a complaint for reduction in services. A tenant who has not done so will not be able to challenge the owner's certification, and thus will not be able to challenge DHCR's approval of the MBR increase. Drennan v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 30 A.D.3d 281, 818 N.Y.S.2d 24 (1st Dept. 2006).

§ 26-406 Tax abatement for properties subject to rent exemption orders.

a. Tax abatement, pursuant to the provisions of section four hundred sixty-seven-b of the real property tax law, shall be granted with respect to any real property for which a rent exemption order is issued under subdivision m of section 26-405 of this chapter to the tenant of any housing accommodation contained therein. The rent exemption order shall constitute the tax abatement certificate.

b. The real estate tax imposed upon any real property for which a rent exemption order is issued, shall be reduced and abated by an amount equal to the difference between (1) the sum of the maximum rents collectible under such orders, and (2) the sum of rents that would be collectible from the tenants of such housing accommodations if no exemption had been granted pursuant to subdivision m of section 26-405 of this chapter.

c. For any individual housing accommodation, the tax abatement computed pursuant to subdivision b of this section shall be available with respect to a period commencing on the effective date of the initial rent exemption order, or January first, nineteen hundred seventy-two, whichever is later, and ending on the expiration date of such order or on the effective date of an order terminating the rent exemption. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, when a head of a household to whom a then current, valid tax abatement certificate has been issued under this chapter, chapter four or chapter seven of this title moves his or her principal residence to a subsequent dwelling unit subject to regulation under this chapter, the head of the household may apply to the department for the aging or such other agency as the mayor shall designate for a tax abatement certificate relating to the subsequent dwelling unit, and such certificate may provide that the head of the household shall be exempt from paying that portion of the maximum rent for the subsequent dwelling unit which is the least of the following:

(1) the amount by which the rent for the subsequent dwelling unit exceeds the last rent, as reduced, which the head of the household was required to actually pay in the original dwelling unit;

(2) the last amount deducted from the maximum rent or legal regulated rent meaning the most recent monthly deduction for the applicant in the original dwelling unit pursuant to this section, section 26-509 or section 26-605 of this title; or

(3) where the head of the household does not receive a monthly allowance for shelter pursuant to the social services law, the amount by which the maximum rent or legal regulated rent of the subsequent dwelling unit exceeds one-third of the combined income of all members of the household.

Such certificate shall be effective as of the first day of the month in which the tenant applied for such exemption or as of the date the tenant took occupancy of the subsequent dwelling unit, whichever is later, provided both occur after the effective date of this law.

d. Prior to the commencement of each fiscal year, the department for the aging or such other agency as the mayor shall designate shall notify the department of finance of the total amount of taxes to be abated under this section with respect to each property for which rent exemption orders were in effect for all or any part of the preceding calendar year. The commissioner of finance shall make the appropriate adjustment in the real estate tax payable in such fiscal year.

e. Tax abatement pursuant to this section shall be in addition to any other tax abatement authorized by law, but shall not reduce the tax for any fiscal year below zero. In the event that the tax abatement certificate authorizes an amount of deduction in excess of the real estate installment, then the balance may be applied to any subsequent installment until exhausted. In such a case the owner shall submit with his or her real estate tax bill and remittance, a verified statement in such form as prescribed by the commissioner of finance setting forth the carry over amount and the amounts previously applied; provided, however, that at the request of the owner such balance shall be paid to the owner by the commissioner of finance in lieu of being applied to any subsequent installment, except where the owner is in arrears in the payment of real estate taxes on any property. For the purposes of this subdivision, where the owner is a corporation, it shall be deemed to be in arrears when any of the officers, directors or any person holding an interest in more than ten percent of the issued and outstanding stock of such corporation is in arrears in the payment of real estate taxes on any property; where title is held by a nominee, the owner shall be deemed to be in arrears when the person for whose benefit such title is held is in arrears in the payment of real estate taxes on any property.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption Law established by this section is a constitutional exercise of the police power and the housing situation faced by elderly poor persons was a reasonable basis for legislative action. Parrino v. Lindsay, 66 Misc. 2d 342, 321 NYS2d 311 [1971], affirmed, 29 NY2d 30, 323 NYS2d 684, 272 NE2d 67 [1971].

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. A landlord brought a holdover proceeding against the occupant of an apartment, alleging that rent control did not apply to any buildings with one or two residential units that became vacant after April 1, 1953, and that it did not matter that the building also contained a commercial unit on the ground floor. The court, however, held that the one-or-two-family exemption to rent control did not apply where, as here, the building had a commercial unit. In other words, the exemption applied only with respect to buildings that have been used exclusively for residential purposes. 1664 Sheepshead Bay Road Realty Corp. v. Dalton, N.Y.L.J., Dec. 6, 2000, page 29, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 26-407 Labor cost pass-along.

a. Notwithstanding any provisions of this chapter, any labor cost pass-along rent increase requested of, or received from, any tenant on or after July first, nineteen hundred seventy-two, pursuant to the provisions of subparagraph (1) of paragraph one of subdivision g of section 26-405 of this title, shall not exceed the maximum rent adjustment as provided under this chapter after the effective date of this section.

b. All such increases in excess of such maximum rent are hereby declared null and void and of no effect. A tenant who paid any such excess increase shall be repaid by a cash refund or credit, to be applied against future rent, in equal installments for the same number of months for which such increase was actually collected, commencing on January first, nineteen hundred seventy-eight.

a. No tenant, so long as he or she continues to pay the rent to which the landlord is entitled, shall be removed from any housing accommodation which is subject to rent control under this chapter by action to evict or to recover possession, by exclusion from possession, or otherwise, nor shall any person attempt such removal or exclusion from possession notwithstanding the fact that the tenant has no lease or that his or her lease, or other rental agreement, has expired or otherwise terminated, notwithstanding any contract, lease agreement, or obligation heretofore or hereafter entered into which provides for surrender of possession, or which otherwise provides contrary hereto, except on one or more of the following grounds, or unless the landlord has obtained a certificate of eviction pursuant to subdivision b of this section:

(1) The tenant is violating a substantial obligation of his or her tenancy other than the obligation to surrender possession of such housing accommodation and has failed to cure such violation after written notice by the landlord that the violation cease within ten days, or within the three month period immediately prior to the commencement of the proceeding the tenant has wilfully violated such an obligation inflicting serious and substantial injury to the landlord; or

(2) The tenant is committing or permitting a nuisance in such housing accommodation; or is maliciously or by reason of gross negligence substantially damaging the housing accommodation; or his or her conduct is such as to interfere substantially with the comfort and safety of the landlord or of other tenants or occupants of the same or other adjacent building or structure; or

(3) Occupancy of the housing accommodation by the tenant is illegal because of the requirements of law, and the landlord is subject to civil or criminal penalties therefor, or both, provided, however, that such occupancy shall not be considered illegal by reason of violations placed against the housing accommodations or the building in which same are located by any department or agency of the city having jurisdiction unless such department or agency has issued an order requiring the tenants to vacate said accommodation or building or unless such occupancy for such building or such violations relied on by the landlord result from an act, omission or situation caused or created by the tenant; or

(4) The tenant is using or permitting such housing accommodation to be used for an immoral or illegal purpose; or

(5) The tenant who had a written lease or other written rental agreement which terminated or shall terminate on or after May first, nineteen hundred fifty, has refused upon demand of the landlord to execute a written extension or renewal thereof for a further term of like duration not in excess of one year but otherwise on the same terms and conditions as the previous lease except in so far as such terms and conditions are inconsistent with this chapter; or

(6) The tenant has unreasonably refused the landlord access to the housing accommodation for the purpose of making necessary repairs or improvements required by law or for the purpose of inspection or of showing the accommodation to a prospective purchaser, mortgagee or prospective mortgagee, or other person having a legitimate interest therein; provided, however, that in the latter event such refusal shall not be ground for removal or eviction if such inspection or showing of the accommodation is contrary to the provisions of the tenant's lease or other rental agreement.

(7) The eviction is sought by the owner of a dwelling unit or the shares allocated thereto where such dwelling unit is located in a structure owned as a cooperative or as a condominium and an offering prospectus for the conversion of such structure pursuant to an eviction plan shall have been submitted to the attorney general pursuant to section three hundred fifty-two-eeee of the general business law and accepted for filing by the attorney general, and been declared effective in accordance with such law, and any right of continued occupancy granted by such law to a non-purchasing tenant in occupancy of such dwelling unit shall have expired; provided that the owner of the dwelling unit or the shares allocated thereto seeks in good faith to recover possession of a dwelling unit for his or her own personal use and occupancy or for the use and occupancy of his or her immediate family.

b. No tenant shall be removed or evicted on grounds other than those stated in subdivision a of this section unless on application of the landlord the city rent agency shall issue an order granting a certificate of eviction in accordance with its rules and regulations designed to effectuate the purposes of this title, permitting the landlord to pursue his or her remedies at law. The city rent agency shall issue such an order whenever it finds that:

(1) The landlord seeks in good faith to recover possession of a housing accommodation because of immediate and compelling necessity for his or her own personal use and occupancy or for the use and occupancy of his or her immediate family provided, however, that this subdivision shall not apply where a member of the household lawfully occupying the housing accommodation is sixty-two years of age or older, has been a tenant in a housing accommodation in that building for twenty years or more, or has an impairment which results from anatomical, physiological or psychological conditions, other than addiction to alcohol, gambling, or any controlled substance, which are demonstrable by medically acceptable clinical and laboratory diagnostic techniques, and which are expected to be permanent and which prevent the tenant from engaging in any substantial gainful employment; or

(2) The landlord seeks in good faith to recover possession of a housing accommodation for which the tenant's lease or other rental agreement has expired or otherwise terminated, and at the time of termination the occupants of the housing accommodation are subtenants or other persons who occupied under a rental agreement with the tenant, and no part of the accommodation is used by the tenant as his or her dwelling; or

(3) The landlord seeks in good faith to recover possession of a housing accommodation for the immediate purpose of substantially altering or remodeling it, provided that the landlord shall have secured such approval therefor as is required by law and the city rent agency determines that the issuance of the order granting the certificate of eviction is not inconsistent with the purpose of this chapter; or

(4) The landlord seeks in good faith to recover possession of housing accommodations for the immediate purpose of demolishing them, and the city rent agency determines that such demolition is to be effected for the purpose of constructing a new building, provided that:

(a) If the purpose of such demolition is to construct a new building containing housing accommodations, no certificate of eviction shall be granted under this paragraph unless such agency determines that such new building will contain at least twenty per centum more housing accommodations consisting of self-contained family units (as defined by regulations issued by such agency, with due regard for the shortage of housing accommodations suitable for family occupancy and for the purposes of this chapter in relation thereto) than are contained in the structure to be demolished; except, however, that where as a result of conditions detrimental to life or health of the tenants, violations have been placed upon the structure containing the housing accommodations by any agency of the city having jurisdiction over such matters and the cost of removing such violations would be substantially equal to or would exceed the assessed valuation of the structure, the new building shall only be required to make provision for a greater number of housing accommodations consisting of self-contained family units (as so defined by regulation) than are contained in the structure to be demolished; and

(b) The city rent agency shall, by regulation, as a condition to the granting of certificates of eviction under this paragraph , require the relocation of the tenants in other suitable accommodations, provided that the city rent agency may, by regulation, authorize the granting of such certificates as to any tenants or classes of tenants without such requirement of relocation, where such exemption will not result in hardship to such tenants or classes of tenants and will not be inconsistent with the purposes of this chapter; and

(c) The city rent agency may, by regulation, in order to carry out the purposes of this chapter, impose additional conditions to the granting of certificates of eviction under this paragraph , including, but not limited to, the payment of stipends to the tenants by the landlord in such amounts and subject to such variations and classifications as such agency may determine to be reasonably necessary; and

(d) No certificate of eviction shall be issued pursuant to this paragraph unless the landlord shall have secured such approval as is required by law for the construction sought to be effected, and the city rent agency determines that the issuance of such certificate is not inconsistent with the purpose of this chapter.

(5) Notwithstanding any provisions to the contrary contained in this subdivision or in subdivision d of section 26-410 of this chapter or in the local emergency housing rent control act:

(a) no application for a certificate of eviction under paragraph three or four of this subdivision and no application for a certificate of eviction under paragraph one of subdivision j or under subdivision c of this section for the purpose of withdrawing a housing accommodation from the housing market on the grounds that the continued operation of such housing accommodation would impose undue hardship upon the landlord, pending or made on or after the effective date hereof shall be granted by the city rent agency unless the city rent agency finds that there is no reasonable possibility that the landlord can make a net annual return of eight and one-half per centum of the assessed value of the subject property without recourse to the remedy provided in said paragraph three or four or said subdivision c or j and finds that neither the landlord nor his or her immediate predecessor in interest has intentionally or willfully managed the property to impair the landlord's ability to earn such return; and

(b) the effectiveness of any certificate of eviction or of any order granting a certificate of eviction pursuant to paragraphs three and four of this subdivision shall be suspended, and no tenant may be evicted pursuant to any such certificate or order, unless the city rent agency:

(i) finds that there is no reasonable possibility that the landlord can make a net annual return of eight and one-half per centum of the assessed value of the subject property without recourse to the remedy provided in said

paragraphs three and four and finds that neither the landlord nor his or her immediate predecessor in interest has intentionally or willfully managed the property to impair the landlord's ability to earn such return; and

(ii) issues an order reinstating the effectiveness of any certificate of eviction suspended pursuant to this paragraph. The pendency of any judicial proceeding or appeal shall in no way prevent the taking effect of the relief granted in this subparagraph.

(c) the provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to an application for a certificate of eviction from a housing accommodation when the landlord seeks in good faith to recover possession thereof for the immediate purpose of substantially altering or remodelling it or for the immediate purpose of demolishing it for the purpose of constructing a new building when such altering or remodelling or the construction of such new building is to be aided by interest reduction payments under section two hundred thirty-six of the national housing act.

(6) Neither the provisions of subparagraph (a) of paragraph four of this subdivision, which require that the new building contain more than or equal to the number of housing accommodations that are contained in the structure to be demolished or substantially altered or remodeled nor the provisions of paragraph five of this subdivision shall apply with respect to any building in which there remains (A) three or fewer occupied apartments which constitute ten percent or less of the total dwelling units in the building or (B) one occupied apartment if the building contains ten or fewer apartments but only on the condition that the tenant is provided with the relocation, moving expense, stipend and any other benefits provided under the corresponding provisions of the rent stabilization law of nineteen hundred sixty-nine. In the event of a substantial alteration or remodeling of a building falling within the limitations of this paragraph, all of the relocation provisions available to an owner for demolition shall apply.

c. The city rent agency may from time to time, to effectuate the purposes of this chapter, adopt, promulgate, amend or rescind such rules, regulations or orders as it may deem necessary or proper for the control of evictions. Any such rules, regulations or orders may include, in addition to any other provisions authorized by this subdivision , provisions restricting the filing of applications for, or the issuance of orders granting, certificates of eviction where such agency finds that a course of conduct has been engaged in which is proscribed by subdivision d of section 26-412 of this chapter. The agency shall also require, prior to the filing of plans with the department of buildings for a new building or alteration on the site of controlled housing accommodations and prior to the filing of an application for a permit for the demolition or removal of an existing multiple dwelling which contains controlled housing accommodations, that the applicant certify to and file with the agency such information and give such notice to tenants as it deems necessary to prevent evasion of the law and regulations governing evictions. It may also require that an order granting a certificate of eviction be obtained from it prior to the institution of any action or proceeding for the recovery of possession of any housing accommodation subject to rent control under this chapter upon the grounds specified in subdivision b of this section or where it finds that the requested removal or eviction is not inconsistent with the purposes of this chapter and would not be likely to result in circumvention or evasion thereof; provided, however, that no such order shall be required in any action or proceeding brought pursuant to the provisions of subdivision a of this section.

d. (1) The city rent agency, on its own initiative or on application of a tenant, may revoke or cancel an order granting a certificate of eviction at any time prior to the execution of a warrant in a summary proceeding to recover possession of real property by a court whenever it finds that:

(a) The certificate of eviction was obtained by fraud or illegality; or

(b) The landlord's intentions or circumstances have so changed that the premises, possession of which is sought, will not be used for the purpose specified in the certificate.

(2) The commencement of a proceeding by the city rent agency to revoke or cancel an order granting a certificate of eviction shall stay such order until the final determination of the proceeding regardless of whether the waiting period in the order has already expired. In the event the city rent agency cancels or revokes such an order, the court having jurisdiction of any summary proceeding instituted in such case shall take appropriate action to dismiss the application for removal of the tenant from the real property and to vacate and annul any final order or warrant granted or issued by the court in the matter.

e. Notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this section, the state, the city, or the New York city housing authority may recover possession of any housing accommodations operated by it where such action or proceeding is authorized by statute or regulations under which such accommodations are administered.

f. Any order of the city rent agency under this section granting a certificate of eviction shall be subject to judicial review only in the manner prescribed by subdivision eight of section one of the state enabling act and sections 26-410 and 26-411 of this chapter.

g. (1) Where after the city rent agency has granted a certificate of eviction authorizing the landlord to pursue his or her remedies pursuant to law to acquire possession and a tenant voluntarily removes from a housing accommodation or has been removed therefrom by action or proceeding to evict from or recover possession of a housing accommodation upon the ground that the landlord seeks in good faith to recover possession of such accommodation:

(a) For his or her immediate and personal use, or for the immediate and personal use by a member or members of his or her immediate family, and such landlord or members of his or her immediate family shall fail to occupy such accommodation within thirty days after the tenant vacates, or such landlord shall lease or rent such space or permit occupancy thereof by a third person within a period of one year after such removal of the tenant; or

(b) For the immediate purpose of withdrawing such housing accommodation from the rental market and such landlord shall lease or sell the housing accommodation or the space previously occupied thereby, or permit use thereof in a manner other than contemplated in such eviction certificate within a period of one year after such removal of the tenant; or

(c) For the immediate purpose of altering or remodeling such housing accommodation, and the landlord shall fail to start the work of alteration or remodeling of such housing accommodation within ninety days after the removal, on the ground that he or she required possession for the purpose of effecting such alteration or remodeling, of the last tenant whose removal is necessary to enable the landlord to effect such alteration or remodeling of such accommodation, or if after having commenced such work shall fail or neglect to prosecute the work with reasonable diligence; or

(d) For the immediate purpose of demolishing such housing accommodations and constructing a new building in accordance with approved plans, or reasonable amendment thereof, and the landlord has failed to complete the demolition within six months after the removal of the last tenant or, having demolished the premises, has failed or neglected to proceed with the new construction within ninety days after the completion of such demolition, or having commenced such construction work has failed or neglected to prosecute such work with reasonable diligence; or

(e) For some purpose other than those specified above for which the removal of the tenant was sought and the landlord has failed to use the vacated premises for such purpose; such landlord shall, unless for good cause shown, be liable to the tenant for three times the damages sustained on account of such removal plus reasonable attorney's fees and costs as determined by the court. In addition to any other damage, the cost of removal of property shall be a lawful measure of damage. The remedy herein provided for shall be in addition to those provided for in subdivision h of this section, paragraph (a) of subdivision ten of section one of the state enabling act and subdivision a of section 26-413 of this chapter.

(2) The acts and omissions mentioned in subparagraphs (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) of paragraph one of this subdivision , on the part of a landlord after issuance of a certificate of eviction, are hereby declared to be inconsistent with the purposes for which such certificate of eviction was issued.

h. Where after the city rent agency has granted a certificate of eviction authorizing the landlord to pursue his or her remedies pursuant to law to acquire possession for any purpose stated in subdivision b or j of this section or for some other stated purpose, and a tenant voluntarily removes from a housing accommodation or has been removed therefrom by action or proceeding to evict from or recover possession of a housing accommodation and the landlord or any successor landlord of the premises does not use the housing accommodation for the purpose specified in such certificate of eviction, the vacated accommodation or any replacement or subdivision thereof shall, unless the city rent agency approves such different purpose, be deemed a housing accommodation subject to control, notwithstanding any definition of that term in this chapter to the contrary. Such approval shall be granted whenever the city rent agency finds that the failure or omission to use the housing accommodation for the purpose specified in such certificate was not inconsistent with the purpose of this chapter and would not be likely to result in the circumvention or evasion thereof. The remedy herein provided for shall be in addition to those provided for in subdivision g of this section, paragraph (a) of subdivision ten of section one of the state enabling act and subdivision a of section 26-413 of this chapter.

i. Any statutory tenant who vacates a housing accommodation without giving the landlord at least thirty days' written notice by registered or certified mail of his or her intention to vacate, shall be liable to the landlord for the loss of rent suffered by the landlord, but not exceeding one month's rent, except where the tenant has been removed or vacates pursuant to the provisions of this section. Such notice shall be postmarked on or before the last day of the rental period immediately prior to such thirty-day period.

j. (1) Nothing in this chapter shall be construed to require any person to offer any housing accommodations for rent, but housing accommodations already on the rental market may be withdrawn only after prior written approval of the city rent agency, if such withdrawal requires that a tenant be evicted from such accommodations.

(2) The city rent agency, in order to carry out the purposes of this chapter, may issue regulations providing for issuance of certificates of eviction in any case where the landlord seeks such approval in order to use the premises (including the building or land) (a) for the purpose of conducting a business, or (b) where the landlord is a hospital, convent, asylum, public institution, college, school or any institution operated exclusively for charitable, religious or educational purposes on a non profit basis and the landlord seeks such approval in order to use the premises (including the building or land) or any part thereof in connection with the landlord's charitable, religious or educational purposes; such agency, if it grants approval, shall condition same upon compliance by the landlord with designated requirements which may consist of any conditions that such agency would have authority to prescribe by regulation under subparagraphs (b) and (c) of paragraph four of subdivision b of this section with respect to applications for certificates of eviction under such paragraph four provided, however, that such agency shall not condition any such approval granted to a hospital, convent, asylum, public institution, college, school, or any institution operated exclusively for charitable, religious or educational purposes upon compliance with requirements exceeding or less than those applicable to any private owner in similar circumstances. Nothing contained in this paragraph shall be construed as authorizing or requiring such agency to approve the withdrawal of any housing accommodations from the rental market by any landlord for the purpose of using the premises for any business other than one in existence and conducted by such landlord at the time such withdrawal is sought. No certificate of eviction shall be issued to a nonprofit school, college, hospital, or other charitable institution, including without limitation, any organization exempt from taxation under the Federal Internal Revenue Code, which seeks to recover possession of the housing accommodations or to withdraw such accommodations from the rental or non-rental housing market, for immediate and personal use and occupancy as housing accommodations by its employees, students or members of its staff.

k. The city rent agency by order issued pursuant to its regulations may waive the requirements of subdivision b of this section where (1) the housing accommodations were vacant at the time when landlord made application for such waiver, and (2) were vacated by reason of the last tenant's voluntary surrender thereof, and (3) the landlord, in good faith, intends to demolish or substantially rehabilitate the building in which the housing accommodations are located within a period approved by the city rent agency. The failure of the landlord to comply with the conditions established by the city rent agency for the granting of the application shall subject the housing accommodations to all the provisions of this chapter.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. The owner of a building was entitled to a certificate of eviction to permit him and his family to occupy the apartment. Tenant's claim that owner possessed diplomatic immunity and therefore would not be required to respond in damages if subsequent events showed that he had not proceeded in good faith was not sufficient grounds to deny a certificate.-In re Pinner, 148 (25) N.Y.L.J. (8-6-62) 7, Col. 8 T.

¶ 2. A tenant who vacates premises pursuant to a certificate of eviction is not required to give prior notice of his intention to vacate. Petrelli v. Kagel, 37 Misc 2d 246, 235 NYS2d 383 [1962].

¶ 3. The denial of a certificate of eviction was not arbitrary where it was sought by building owner so that the apartment could be used as office-studio by her husband, an industrial designer. Claim that husband worked late and that his office was 10 blocks from his home did not show an immediate and compelling necessity. Besides, eviction is permitted only when the apartment is to be used for living accommodations, not when it is to be used for total commercial purposes. Miscallef v. Gabel, 148 (87) N.Y.L.J. (11-2-62) 15, Col. 6 M.

¶ 4. The first floor of a five-room apartment housed two families; the owner and her unmarried daughter, and the landlord's married daughter, husband and two infant children. The Administrator's finding that each family was entitled to its own separate housekeeping unit and that there was an immediate and compelling necessity for an additional apartment was not arbitrary (234 NYS2d 387). In re DeMartin (Gabel), 150 (57) N.Y.L.J. (9-19-63) 10, Col. 3 M.

¶ 5. Denial of certificate of eviction sought on ground of the subletting of the apartment by the tenants, was not arbitrary where landlord knew of the subletting and had accepted the subtenant's payment of rent while the prime tenant resided in Florida. Deveruth Corp. v. Gabel, 150 (9) N.Y.L.J. (7-12-63) 6, Col. 8 F.

¶ 6. Certificate of eviction to provide an apartment for a married couple to take care of the personal needs of the landlord, who was of advanced age, and to do janitorial chores, was properly denied where landlord's own six-room apartment had been converted in October, 1960, into two units, in May 1961 the landlord rented the apartment immediately above hers to a tenant, and another apartment had become available in July, 1962. Rapport v. Gabel, 149 (87) N.Y.L.J. (5-6-63) 19, Col. 2 T.

¶ 7. Grant of certificate of eviction to landlord who sought possession of two adjoining one-bedroom apartments to take care of the housing needs of his family, including a four-year-old child, held not arbitrary. That a rear building had been rented at several times the rental fixed for the two apartments did not place upon the landlord the burden of first choosing the rear building for his own occupancy. Morelli v. Gabel, 149 (118) N.Y.L.J. (6-19-63) 14, Col. 2 M.

¶ 8. Tenant did not breach a "substantial obligation" of his tenancy by installing a peephole in entrance door of his apartment even though rental agreement provided that tenant would not drill into, disfigure or deface any part of the building nor make any alterations since peephole served a legitimate purpose (i.e. to identify callers). Administrator's Interpretation No. 1, Supp. No. 17 (Nov. 30, 1965) 154 (107, N.Y.L.J. (12-6-65) 1, Col. 1 F.

¶ 9. Landlord of apartment house was entitled to a judgment of eviction on basis of violations of the substantial obligations of the tenancy upon proof that the tenant was feeding a great number of pigeons; that some of them went into the apartment; that pigeon excretions were abundant in area contiguous to the apartment and that there was uneaten pigeon food around the premises. Joyce Properties, Inc. v. Rubi, 157 (27) N.Y.L.J. (2-8-67) 15, Col. 4 M.

¶ 10. Maintenance of a separate residence by a tenant or fact that the tenant allowed his brother to occupy the premises from time to time is not sufficient ground for granting a certificate of eviction. Fread v. Reichman, 162 (55) N.Y.L.J. (9-17-69) 14, Col. 2 M.

¶ 11. Where landlord sought eviction of tenants of two rent controlled apartments on ground that he wanted to combine them into one apartment for his own use the Appellate Division properly reversed an order and judgment annulling the determination of the Commissioner of Rent and Housing Maintenance denying landlord's application for a certificate of eviction since the agency did not have to accept the bare assertion of good faith by the landlord's agent but could require the presentation of objective facts as a basis for its findings. R. Lyons Hickey v. Com'r of Dept. of Rent and Housing Maintenance of the City of NY, 44 NY2d 879 [1978], affirming, 58 AD2d 773.

¶ 12. Subdivision b of this section, which authorizes the agency to grant a certificate of eviction when landlord seeks to recover possession of a housing accommodation for which tenant's lease has expired or otherwise terminated and at the time of termination the occupants are subtenants or other persons who occupied under a rental agreement with the tenant, was not applicable where landlord claimed that statutory tenants of a rent controlled apartment had moved and unlawfully transferred occupancy to their son and his wife when the alleged transfer had occurred years after such lease termination.-Walsh v. Somerville, 75 AD2d 511 [1980].

¶ 13. Where landlord does not reside in a building which consists of 12 or fewer apartments and seeks to evict on ground that he wants to occupy accommodations for personal use he need not show an "immediate and compelling necessity" but only "good faith" as to one unit but must show immediate and compelling necessity as to additional units. Kelly v. Joy, 182 (46) N.Y.L.J. (9-5-79), 10 Col. 2 M.

¶ 14. Prime tenant who sublets a rent-controlled apartment must obtain a certificate of eviction to maintain a holdover summary proceeding against the sublessee on the ground that the prime tenant seeks the apartment for her own personal use and occupancy. Muller v. Stein, 116 Misc 2d 37 [1982].

¶ 15. Tenant may not be evicted except as set forth in this section. Ground that monthly tenancy has expired is not proper ground for eviction. Tenant is a protected tenant even though lease stated that residential occupancy would be only by pres. of corp. tenant, who was individually named, and tenant now is another indiv. who became pres. of corp. following death of previous pres. Stahl Associates Co. v. Candid Productions, Inc., 122 Misc 2d 754 [1984].

¶ 16. Section Y51-6.0(b)(1) as amended effective June 19, 1984 may be applied retroactively where judgment has not yet been entered as of the effective date of the amendment in a summary proceeding commenced prior to the amendment's effective date. Budhu v. Grasso, 125 Misc 2d 284 [1984].

¶ 17. The court declined to vacate a warrant of eviction on the ground that an amendment to this section barring evictions for persons resident over twenty years was retroactive, because the amendment was enacted after the certificate of eviction became final. Pierce v. Hankins, 193 (17) N.Y.L.J. (1-25-85) 15, Col. 5 B

¶ 1. The petitioner filed an application seeking a certificate of eviction under former sec. Y51-6.0[b][1], now subsection [b][1] of this section against a tenant in possession. While the decision on the original application was being reviewed on appeal, the former section, now this subsection [b][1] was amended, which amendment took effect immediately. The amendment applies to any tenant in possession, regardless of whether the landlord's application predated the amendment. Thus the petitioner's application is denied. Lopez v. Mirabel, 127 AD2d 771, [1987].

¶ 2. Tenant qualified for eviction-exempt status pursuant to NYC Ad Cd § Y51-6.0(b)(1) as amended by ch 234/1984 by being in occupancy for 20 years. Certificate of eviction permitting landlord recovery for personal use and occupancy was under appeal when ch 234/1984 took effect. Tenant was in possession when the law took effect and cannot be evicted for this reason. Matter of Lavalle v. Scruggs-Leftwich 133 AD2d 313 [1987].

¶ 3. Evictions of senior citizens in occupancy 20 years when for landlords personal use were bared by NYC Ad Cd § 451-6.0(b)(1) as amended by ch 234/1984. These amendments are not applicable retroactively. Hyo Chung Chi v. Fink, 132 AD2d 647 [1987].

¶ 4. Tenant reaching the 20-year residency milestone is protected from eviction even if an administrative or judicial appeal is pending. The 20-year period in § 26-408(b)(1) is not a statute of limitations but a condition established by the Legislature to protect tenants. Frank McMurray v. State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 135 AD2d 235 [1988].

¶ 5. Landlord seeks an eviction to use premises for occupancy of self and daughter pursuant to § 26-408(b). All owners seeking eviction for their personal use and occupancy must prove immediate and compelling necessity as well as good faith. Tenant's apartment is not substantially larger than landlord's present accommodation. Further basement space of building is being used to house landlord's business and provided ample room for landlord's business files and books now filling her home. Administrative agency has jurisdiction and decision not to evict was rationally based. Buhagier v. DHRC, 138 AD2d 226 [1988].

¶ 6. Museum seeks 10 eviction certificates for rent-controlled apartments it owns in order to use such space for nonresidential institutional purposes pursuant to regulations promulgated pursuant to § 26-408(j)(2). In this case the applications are remitted to DHCR for hearing to determine good faith intention of museum to use apartments and not to rent or sell. Matter of Whitney Museum of American Art, 139 AD2d 444 [1988].

¶ 7. Tenant, a 20-year occupant of the leased premises when administrative proceedings to evict for landlord's personal use were commenced. Tenant claimed protection of Chap. 234/1984 amending § 26-408(b) exempting him from eviction. Landlords contended their rights were frustrated by tenant's dilatory tactics and DHCR three month delay during which time tenant obtained 20-year benchmark. Delay was not ruled to have prejudiced landlords. Matter of Jahn v. DHCR, 140 AD2d 193 [1988].

¶ 8. Section 26-408 of the administrative code is constitutional and does not violate provisions of the United States or New York State constitutions. Court disallows plaintiff's contentions that she has a constitutional right to "go out of business", a physical and regulatory taking of the landlord's private property without just compensation and that a form of involuntary servitude has occurred. Sobel v. Higgins, 151 Misc.2d 876, 573 N.Y.S.2d 1000 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 1991), aff'd 188 A.D.2d 286, 590 N.Y.S.2d 883 (1st Dept. 1992).

¶ 9. The factors which must be met by a landlord in order to demolish and construct new housing, require in § 26-408(b)(5) that the landlord prove that there is no reasonable possibility that it can earn an 8 1/2% net annual return on the assessed value of the property, are valid and constitutional. Kolikow 78/79 Co. v. State, 174 AD2d 7, 577 N.Y.S.2d 624, 577 N.Y.S.2d 624, appeal dismissed 79 N.Y.2d 1040, 584 N.Y.S.2d 448 (1st Dept. 1992).

¶ 10. Protection of long-term tenants in rent-regulated dwellings, §26-408(b)(1), are a legitimate State interest and do not constitute an unconstitutional taking of private property. Owners are not deprived of the economically viable use of their properties. Dawson v. Higgins, 154 Misc.2d 811, 588 N.Y.S.2d 93 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 1992), aff'd 197 A.D.2d 127, 610 N.Y.S.2d 200 (1st Dept. 1994).

¶ 12. In a dispute involving succession rights, administrative proceedings before the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal are not an exclusive remedy, and courts exercise concurrent jurisdiction in such cases. Cox v. J.D. Associates, 217 A.D.2d 179, 637 N.Y.S.2d 27 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1995). Thus, after the death of a rent controlled tenant, the landlord can commence a summary holdover eviction proceeding against the surviving occupant of the apartment, and the occupant can assert succession rights as a defense to the holdover proceeding. Bromer v. Rosenweig, 166 Misc.2d 201, 634 N.Y.S.2d 43 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1995).

¶ 13. The constitutionality of the statutory provision protecting tenants of 20 years or more from owner occupancy eviction was upheld. The court rejected the landlords' claims that the law constituted a physical and regulatory taking of property, a violation of due process and a violation of the prohibition against involuntary servitude. The statutory provision was within the government's police powers. The landlords had purchased the property knowing that it was occupied by rent controlled tenants and that its use was regulated. The landlords need only sell the building to escape the minimal restrictions placed on them by the challenged provisions. Dawson v. Higgins, 197 A.D.2d 127, 610 N.Y.S.2d 200 (1st Dept. 1994).

¶ 14. A real estate industry organization's challenge to the administrative agency's promulgation of family succession regulations proved to be unsuccessful. The court held that the regulations did not constitute a physical occupancy or regulatory taking. Rent Stabilization Association v. Higgins, 83 N.Y.2d 156, 608 N.Y.S.2d 930 (1993).

¶ 15. The State Division of Housing and Community Renewal has exclusive jurisdiction over the landlord's application for permission to demolish a building occupied by rent controlled tenants. Sohn v. Calderon, 78 N.Y.2d 755, 579 N.Y.S.2d 940 (1991).

¶ 16. The court upheld the constitutionality of that portion of the law which protects from eviction those tenants who have resided in the building for 20 years or more. Since the landlord has not been deprived of the economically viable use of the property, the statute does not constitute a taking of property without due process of law. Sourian v. Higgins, 170 A.D.2d 258, 566 N.Y.S.2d 244 (1st Dept. 1991).

¶ 17. A lease provision permitting assignments and subleases is not projected into a statutory tenancy. Hence, a rent controlled tenant cannot assign or sublease. Brooks v. Kenton Associates, 169 A.D.2d 466, 564 N.Y.S.2d 343 (1st Dept. 1991).

¶ 18. An out-of-court agreement to surrender possession of a rent controlled apartment was held to be unenforceable as an impermissible waiver of the protection of the rent control laws. Grasso v. Matarazzo, N.Y.L.J., Apr. 8, 1998, page 32, col. 3 (Civ.Ct. Kings Co.).

¶ 19. A private agreement for surrender of a rent controlled apartment was held unenforceable as a matter of public policy, even though it was supported by consideration including the landlord's forgiveness of eight months of rent arrears. Merwest Realty Corp. v. Prager, 173 Misc.2d 868, 662 N.Y.S.2d 445 (Civ.Ct. New York Co. 1997), aff'd 177 Misc.2d 956, 679 N.Y.S.2d 519 (App.Term 1st Dept. 1998).

¶ 21. Rent controlled tenants who have resided in their apartments for more than 20 years are protected from owner occupancy eviction proceedings brought by landlords. In one case, a tenant rented one apartment and then rented a second apartment to meet the needs of a growing family. Many years later, the owner sought to recover the second apartment for his own use. The tenant had been in the first apartment for more than 20 years, but in the second apartment for less than 20 years. The court held that where, as here, the tenant had acquired the second apartment with the knowledge and acquiescence of the landlord, and had been using both apartments as a bona fide residence, the 20-year rule protected him against eviction from the second apartment. Brioschi v. Armstrong, N.Y.L.J., July 12, 2000, page 28, col. 3 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 22. In one case, a wife had an apartment which was under rent stabilization, and her husband had an apartment which was under rent control. The court found that even though the apartments were non-contiguous, they had been effectively used as one apartment. The landlord attempted to acquire the rent stabilized apartment for his own use under the owner occupancy rules. However, the court held that since the rent controlled husband was protected from eviction because he had resided at the premises for 20 years or more, the landlord could not acquire either the rent controlled or rent stabilized apartment. This is true even though the landlord might otherwise have been eligible to recover the rent stabilized apartment had it not been combined with the rent controlled apartment. Derdiarian v. Lehmann, N.Y.L.J., Aug. 15, 2001, page 18, col. 4 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 23. Where the subject premises are a cooperative, it is the income of the rental building as a whole, rather than the income of the shareholder of an occupied rent stabilized apartment, that will determine whether a hardship increase is permissible. Hertz Co. R.E., Inc. v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., Oct. 31, 2001, page 18, col. 4 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 24. DHCR acted reasonably in deciding a hardship application by using the building's rate of return in the year in which the application was filed. Thus, DHCR did not have to recalculate the rate of return when one of the tenants died shortly after the agency's decision granting the application. Rizzo v. DHCR, 16 A.D.3d 72, 789 N.Y.S.2d 139 (1st Dept. 2005).

¶ 25. A tenant who seeks restoration of the right to possession based on the rent control laws (Sec. 26-408) may file a notice of pendency against the subject property. Lawlor v. 543 Second Avenue LLC, 49 AD3d 449, 854 N.Y.S.2d 125 (1st Dept. 2008).

§ 26-409 Investigation; records; reports.

a. The city rent agency is authorized to make such studies and investigations, to conduct such hearings, and to obtain such information as it deems necessary or proper in prescribing any regulation or order pursuant to this chapter or in administering and enforcing this chapter and the regulations and orders thereunder or the state rent act and the regulations and orders thereunder.

b. The city rent agency is further authorized, by regulation or order, to require any person who rents or offers for rent or acts as broker or agent for the rental of any housing accommodations to furnish any such information under oath or affirmation, or otherwise, to make and keep records and other documents, and to make reports, including, but not limited to, reports with respect to decontrolled or exempt housing accommodations, and the city rent agency may require any such person to permit the inspection and copying of records and other documents and the inspection of housing accommodations. Any officer or agent designated by the city rent agency for such purposes may administer oaths and affirmations and may, whenever necessary, by subpoena, require any such person to appear and testify or to appear and produce documents, or both, at any designated place.

c. For the purpose of obtaining any information under this section, the city rent agency may by subpoena require any other person to appear and testify or to appear and produce documents, or both, at any designated place.

d. The production of a person's documents at any place other than his or her place of business shall not be required under this section in any case in which, prior to the return date specified in the subpoena issued with respect thereto, such person either has furnished the city rent agency with a copy of such documents certified by such person under oath to be a true and correct copy, or has entered into a stipulation with the city rent agency as to the information contained in such documents.

e. In case of contumacy by, or refusal to obey a subpoena served upon, any person referred to in this section, the supreme court in or for any judicial district in which such person is found or resides or transacts business, upon application by the city rent agency, shall have jurisdiction to issue an order requiring such person to appear and give testimony or to appear and produce documents, or both; and any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof. The provisions of this subdivision e shall be in addition to the provisions of paragraph (a) of subdivision nine of section one of the state enabling act and subdivision a of section 26-412 of this chapter.

f. Witnesses subpoenaed under this section shall be paid the same fee and mileage as are paid witnesses pursuant to the civil practice law and rules.

g. Upon any such investigation or hearing, the city rent agency, or an officer duly designated by the city rent agency to conduct such investigation or hearing, may confer immunity in accordance with the provisions of the criminal procedure law.

h. The city rent agency shall not publish or disclose any information obtained under this chapter that the city rent agency deems confidential or with reference to which a request for confidential treatment is made by the person furnishing such information, unless the city rent agency determines that the withholding thereof is contrary to the public interest.

i. Any person subpoenaed under this section shall have the right to make a record of his or her testimony and to be represented by counsel.

j. Without limiting any power granted by this section or any other provision of law, the city rent agency may by regulation require the owner of a building or property containing both housing accommodations subject to this chapter and housing accommodations subject to chapter four of this title to execute and file registration statements with respect to the housing accommodations subject to this chapter along with those filed pursuant to such chapter four. Notwithstanding any other provisions of law, such agency may promulgate regulations, and take other necessary or appropriate actions, pursuant to this subdivision prior to April first, nineteen hundred eighty-four, to take effect on or after such date.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. The provisions of this section that the city rent agency shall not publish or disclose information which it deems confidential does not give the agency absolute discretion, but does authorize it to prohibit disclosure where there is a rational basis for its determination. Though petitioner's attorney was permitted to inspect reports made by agency attorneys he did not have an absolute right to demand certification of such papers. Matter of Bernkrant, 40 Misc 2d 157, 242 NYS2d 753 [1963], aff'd, 246 NYS2d 170 [1964].

¶ 2. A tenant, whose rent was reduced for failure of landlord to properly paint his apartment, was not entitled to deny access to his apartment to landlord so as to exclude painting service and thereby retain the lower rent. Matter of Lonsdale, 40 Misc 2d 120, 242 NYS2d 880 [1963].

¶ 3. Application to compel the Rent Administration to provide petitioner with certified copies of two reports of the Administration's attorneys in connection with a proceeding for a certificate of eviction, was denied, as petitioner had no right to demand certification of papers which the agency was vested with discretion to deem confidential. Moreover, petitioner's attorney had been accorded the privilege of inspecting the entire file of the agency, including such reports. Bernkrant v. City Rent & Rehab. Adm'n., 40 Misc 2d 157, 242 NYS2d 753, aff'd, 246 NYS2d 170 [1964].

a. After the issuance of any regulation or order by the city rent agency, any person subject to any provision of such regulation or order may, in accordance with regulations to be prescribed by such agency, file a protest against such regulation or order specifically setting forth his or her objections to any such provisions and affidavits or other written evidence in support of such objections. Statements in support of any such regulation or order may be received and incorporated in the record of the proceedings at such times and in accordance with such regulations as may be prescribed by such agency.

Within a reasonable time after the filing of any protest under this section, such agency shall either grant or deny such protest in whole or in part, notice such protest for hearing, or provide an opportunity to present further evidence in connection therewith. In the event that such agency denies any such protest in whole or in part, it shall inform the protestant of the grounds upon which such decision is based, and of any economic data and other facts of which it has taken official notice.

b. In the administration of this chapter, the city rent agency may take official notice of economic data and other facts, including facts found by it as a result of action taken under section 26-405 of this chapter.

c. Any proceedings under this section may be limited by the city rent agency to the filing of affidavits, or other written evidence, and the filing of briefs, except that no multiple-tenant initiated proceeding for the reduction of rents in a building may be determined without a hearing.

d. Any protest filed under this section shall be granted or denied by the city rent agency, or granted in part and the remainder of it denied, within a reasonable time after it is filed. If such agency does not act finally within a period of ninety days after the protest is filed, the protest shall be deemed to be denied. However, such agency may grant one extension not to exceed thirty days with the consent of the party filing such protest; any further extension may only be granted with the consent of all parties to the protest. No proceeding may be brought pursuant to article seventy-eight of the civil practice law and rules to challenge any order or determination which is subject to such protest unless such review has been sought and either (1) a determination thereon has been made or (2) the ninety-day period provided for determination of the protest (or any extension thereof) has expired. If such agency does not act finally within a period of ninety days after the entry of an order of remand to such agency by the court in a proceeding instituted pursuant to subdivision eight of section one of the state enabling act or section 26-411 of this chapter, the order previously made by such agency shall be deemed reaffirmed. However, such agency may grant one extension not to exceed thirty days with the consent of the petitioner; any further extension may only be granted with the consent of all parties to the petition.

e. The city rent agency shall compile and make available for public inspection at reasonable hours at its principal office and at each appropriate local office a copy of each decision rendered by it upon granting, or denying, in whole or in part, any protests filed under this section and shall have available at each appropriate local office a register of properties concerning which a vacate order was issued by a city department having jurisdiction or proceedings have been brought to determine whether any housing accommodations therein became vacant as a result of conduct proscribed by subdivision d of section 26-412 of this chapter.

¶ 1. While a protest may be made in a representative capacity, the names and addresses of all parties affected must be stated. In re Jambaru Realty Corp., 148 (98) N.Y.L.J. (11-21-62) 14, Col. 3 F.

¶ 2. A landlord could not restrain the Rent Administrator from holding proceedings to modify or revoke a rent increase allegedly granted because of the landlord's fraudulent acts. The landlord was required to exhaust his administrative remedies under Y41-8.0. St. James Associates v. Gabel, 148 (68) N.Y.L.J. (10-5-62) 14, Col. 7 F.

¶ 3. After an eviction proceeding before the Rent Administrator had been commenced and before a certificate of eviction was issued, the tenants commenced an Article 78 proceeding to challenge the relocation proceedings. Proceeding dismissed. A comprehensive and exclusive system for review of the validity, propriety and reasonableness of any final order of the Rent and Rehabilitation Director is provided in the City Rent and Rehabilitation Law. Only after the City Rent Administrator's order on a protest may the aggrieved party resort to judicial review by an Article 78 proceeding. Matter of Rigg v. Gabel, 37 Misc 2d 1069, 235 NYS2d 49 [1963], aff'd 18 App. Div. 2d 796, 236 NYS2d 1022 [1963].

¶ 4. The issuance of a final order one day after the expiration of the time specified in the order of remand of the court was of no serious consequence, since a time limitation, in any event, for an official act to be performed by a public body will be considered as directory only and not a matter of jurisdiction or a statute of limitations. In re 300 West 154th St. Realty Corp. (Gabel), 149 (119) N.Y.L.J. (6-20-63) 12, Col. 2 M.

¶ 5. Proceeding under which Commissioner of Rent and Housing Maintenance denied petitioner's protest of an order of the district rent director which decontrolled a certain apartment was not rendered improper by fact that no transcript or recording was made by the hearing officer since an evidentiary or quasi-judicial hearing is not rquired in this matter. Lamp v. Joy, 57 App. Div. 2d 547 [1977].

¶ 6. A protest postmarked on the thirty-fourth day after receipt of order was properly dismissed as being filed one day too late under the Rent and Eviction Regulations promulgated under this section and court had no authority to extend protest period. Kawary v. Joy, 104 Misc 2d 690 [1980].

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Petition for administrative review (PAR) in rent overcharge complaint should be acted on within 90 days of its finding, § 26-410. Two years and four months is unreasonable delay. There is absolute obligation to issue determination. However, complaint should not be vacated because of delay. Gianelli v. DHCR, 142 Misc 2d 285 [1989].

¶ 2. The fact that the rent agency fails to decide a Petition for Administrative Review within the statutory ninety day period will not divest the agency of jurisdiction to hear the case. However, where an aggrieved party brings an Article 78 proceeding after the expiration of the ninety day period, the court can issue a mandamus order directing the agency to decide the case within a time period set by the court. Matter of 140 West 57th Street Corp. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 130 A.D.2d 237, 517 N.Y.S.2d 720 (1st Dept. 1987).

a. (1) Any person who is aggrieved by the final determination of the city rent agency in an administrative proceeding protesting a regulation or order of such agency may, in accordance with article seventy-eight of the civil practice law and rules, within sixty days after such determination, commence a proceeding in the supreme court. The petition shall specify his or her objections and pray that the regulation or order protested be enjoined or set aside in whole or in part. Such proceeding may at the option of the petitioner be instituted in the county where the city rent agency has its principal office or where the property is located. The city rent agency shall file with such court the original or a transcript of such portions of the proceedings in connection with its final determination as are material under the petition. Such return shall include a statement setting forth, so far as practicable, the economic data and other facts of which the city rent agency has taken official notice. Upon the filing of such petition the court shall have jurisdiction to set aside the regulation or order protested, in whole or in part, to dismiss the petition, or to remit the proceeding to the city rent agency, provided, however, that the regulation or order may be modified or rescinded by the city rent agency at any time notwithstanding the pendency of such proceeding for review.

(2) No objection to such regulation or order, and no evidence in support of any objection thereto, shall be considered by the court, unless such objection shall have been presented to the city rent agency by the petitioner in the proceedings resulting in the determination or unless such evidence shall be contained in the return. If application is made to the court by either party for leave to introduce additional evidence which was either offered and not admitted or which could not reasonably have been offered or included in such proceedings before the city rent agency, and the court determines that such evidence should be admitted, the court shall order the evidence to be presented to the city rent agency. The city rent agency shall promptly receive the same, and such other evidence as the city rent agency deems necessary or proper, and thereupon the city rent agency shall file with the court the original or a transcript thereof and any modification made in such regulation or order as a result thereof; except that on request by the city rent agency, any such evidence shall be presented directly to the court. Upon final determination of the proceeding before the court, the original record, if filed by the city rent agency with the court, shall be returned to the city rent agency.

b. No regulation or order of the city rent agency shall be enjoined or set aside, in whole or in part, unless the petitioner shall establish to the satisfaction of the court that the regulation or order is not in accordance with law, or is arbitrary or capricious. The effectiveness of an order of the court enjoining or setting aside, in whole or in part, any such regulation or order shall be postponed until the expiration of thirty days from the entry thereof. The jurisdiction of the supreme court shall be exclusive and its order dismissing the petition or enjoining or setting aside such regulation or order, in whole or in part, shall be final, subject to review by the appellate division of the supreme court and the court of appeals in the same manner and form and with the same effect as provided in the civil practice law and rules for appeals from a final order in a special proceeding. Notwithstanding any provision of paragraph one of subdivision (b) of section five thousand seven hundred one of the civil practice law and rules to the contrary, any order of the court remitting the proceeding to the city rent agency may, at the election of the city rent agency, be subject to review by the appellate division of the supreme court and the court of appeals in the same manner and form and with the same effect as provided in the civil practice law and rules for appeals from a final order in a special proceeding. All such proceedings shall be heard and determined by the court and by any appellate court as expeditiously as possible and with lawful precedence over other matters. All such proceedings for review shall be heard on the petition, manuscript and other papers, and on appeal shall be heard on the record, without requirement of printing.

c. Within thirty days after arraignment, or such additional time as the court may allow for good cause shown, in any criminal proceeding, and within five days after judgment in any civil or criminal proceeding, brought pursuant to subdivision ten of section one of the state enabling act or section 26-413 of this chapter involving alleged violation of any provision of any regulation or order of the city rent agency, the defendant may apply to the court in which the proceeding is pending for leave to file in the supreme court a petition setting forth objections to the validity of any provision which the defendant is alleged to have violated or conspired to violate. The court in which the proceeding is pending shall grant such leave with respect to any objection which it finds is made in good faith and with respect to which it finds there is reasonable and substantial excuse for the defendant's failure to present such objection in an administrative proceeding before the city rent agency. Upon the filing of a petition pursuant to and within thirty days from the granting of such leave, the supreme court shall have jurisdiction to enjoin or set aside in whole or in part the provision of the regulation or order complained of or to dismiss the petition. The court may authorize the introduction of evidence, either to the city rent agency or directly to the court, in accordance with subdivision a of this section. The provisions of subdivision b of this section shall be applicable with respect to any proceedings instituted in accordance with this subdivision.

d. In any proceeding brought pursuant to subdivision ten of section one of the state enabling act or section 26-413 of this chapter involving an alleged violation of any provision of any such regulation or order, the court shall stay the proceeding:

(1) During the period within which a petition may be filed in the supreme court pursuant to leave granted under subdivision c of this section with respect to such provision;

(2) During the pendency of any protest properly filed under section 26-410 of this chapter prior to the institution of the proceeding under subdivision ten of section one of the state enabling act or section 26-413 of this chapter, setting forth objections to the validity of such provision which the court finds to have been made in good faith; and

(3) During the pendency of any judicial proceeding instituted by the defendant under this section with respect to such protest or instituted by the defendant under subdivision c of this section with respect to such provision, and until the expiration of the time allowed in this section for the taking of further proceedings with respect thereto.

e. Notwithstanding the provisions of subdivision d of this section, stays shall be granted thereunder in civil proceedings only after judgment and upon application made within five days after judgment. Notwithstanding the provisions of subdivision d of this section, in the case of a proceeding under paragraph (a) of subdivision ten of section one of the state enabling act or subdivision a of section 26-413 of this chapter, the court granting a stay under subdivision d of this section shall issue a temporary injunction or restraining order enjoining or restraining, during the period of the stay, violations by the defendant of any provision of the regulation or order involved in the proceeding. If any provision of a regulation or order is determined to be invalid by judgment of the supreme court which has become effective in accordance with subdivision b of this section, any proceeding pending in any court shall be dismissed, and any judgment in such proceeding vacated, to the extent that such proceeding or judgment is based upon violation of such provision. Except as provided in subdivisions c and d of this section and as heretofore provided in this subdivision e, the pendency of any protest under section 26-410 of this chapter before the city rent agency or judicial proceeding under this section, shall not be grounds for staying any proceeding brought pursuant to subdivision ten of section one of the state enabling act or section 26-413 of this chapter; nor, except as provided in this subdivision e, shall any retroactive effect be given to any judgment setting aside a provision of a regulation or order.

f. The method prescribed herein for the judicial review of a regulation or order of the city rent agency shall be exclusive.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. An order of the Rent and Rehabilitation Administrator denying petitioner's protest of termination of tenancy and affirming an order of the Local Rent Administrator was a final order within the meaning of statutory provisions requiring that review proceedings must be initiated within 30 days from the date of a final order. Matter of Resenblatt, 38 Misc 2d 253, 235 NYS2d 280 [1963].

¶ 2. Subdivision E of Section 54 of the Rent, Eviction and Rehabilitation Regulations is a reasonable exercise of the power to require a landlord to provide for the relocation or relocation expenses of tenants as to whom Certificates of Eviction are about to be granted. Though the tenant may receive only the stipend payments scheduled in the Regulation the Regulation is a practical solution of a difficult problem. Matter of Goldsmith v. Gabel, 42 Misc. 2d 732, 248 NYS2d 807 [1964], aff'd, 21 App. Div. 2d 782, 252 NYS2d 274 [1964].

¶ 3. Petition in Article 78 proceeding to review a final determination of the City Rent Administrator must be filed in the Supreme Court within 30 days of the determination and hence where determination was made and served on petitioner on October 16, 1962 petition filed on November 20, 1962 could not be entertained. The thirtieth day from October 16, 1962, was November 18, 1962 but as this was a Sunday the expiration date was November 19, 1962. Matter of Magid v. Gabel, 25 App. Div. 2d 649, 268 NYS2d 551 [1966].

¶ 4. Cost of transcription of tapes in article 78 proceeding hearings expended by respondent Rent Commission was a taxable item of disbursement and properly part of the bill of costs. Equity Investments v. Joy, 58 AD2d 39 [1977].

¶ 5. Provision of this section which exempts "any order of the court remitting the proceeding to the city rent agency" from the rule against appeal of an intermediate order and which allows that agency, at its election, to review by appeal a determination so made was not applicable where Supreme Court had directed respondent to process petitioner's application for a comparative hardship increase, to the extent of setting the matter down for a hearing to determine whether respondent wilfully and deliberately delayed processing the application. Harper Management v. Conciliation and Appeals Board, 70 AD2d 848 NYS2d 11 [1979].

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. DHCR ordered rent reduction based upon finding of failure to maintain services. Court erred in ordering hearing de novo to determine if DHCR's determination was arbitrary and capricious. § 26-411(b) precludes evidentiary hearing and limits scope of judicial review to questions of law. If, as contended, the conditions were rectified matter is properly remanded to DHCR for further action. Aguayo v. DHCR, 150 AD2d 565, 541 N.Y.S.2d 133 (2nd Dept. 1989).

a. It shall be unlawful, regardless of any contract, lease or other obligation heretofore or hereafter entered into, for any person to demand or receive any rent for any housing accommodations in excess of the applicable maximum rent established therefor by the city rent agency or otherwise to do or omit to do any act, in violation of any regulation, order or requirement of the city rent agency under the state enabling act or under this chapter, or to offer, solicit, attempt or agree to do any of the foregoing.

b. It shall be unlawful for any person to remove or attempt to remove from any housing accommodations the tenant or occupant thereof or to refuse to renew the lease or agreement for the use of said accommodations, because such tenant or occupant has taken, or proposes to take, action authorized or required by the state rent act or by this chapter or any provision of this code, the multiple dwelling law, or the health code of the city of New York, or any regulation, order or requirement thereunder.

c. It shall be unlawful for any officer or employee of the city rent agency or for any official adviser or consultant to the city rent agency to disclose, otherwise than in the course of official duty, any information obtained under this chapter, or to use any such information for personal benefit.

d. It shall be unlawful for any person, with intent to cause any tenant to vacate housing accommodations or to surrender or waive any rights of such tenant under this chapter or the regulations promulgated thereunder, to engage in any course of conduct including, but not limited to, interruption or discontinuance of essential services which interferes with or disturbs or is intended to interfere with or disturb the comfort, repose, peace or quiet of such tenant in his or her use or occupancy of the housing accommodations.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. Application of provisions of the Rent, Eviction and Rehabilitation Regulations which makes decrease or discontinuance of services presumptive evidence of intent and conduct in violation of the prohibition against harassment of tenants after the landlord has shown an intent to cause a building or individual accommodation therein to become or remain vacant or has certified his intent to alter or demolish a structure not unconstitutional in a proceeding to impose a civil penalty for harassment. Sigety v. Leventhal, 42 NY2d 953 [1977].

¶ 2. Determination that landlord who failed to repair water leaks into certain apartment and to repair the damage caused thereby and who abused tenants and suggested that if it was inconvenient for a tenant the tenant should move was guilty of harassment was based on substantial evidence. Belnord Holding Corp. v. Joy, 52 NY2d 945 [1981].

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Plaintiff landlord seeks to demolish his building, to evict his rent-controlled tenants and not offer renewal leases to his rent-stabilized tenants. Supreme Court has no right to direct DHPD to issue "no harassment" certificates based on the court's own findings or grant an injunction to enjoin DHCR to inquire into tenant harassment charges. DHCR has responsibility to adjudicate claimed harassment violations, Ad Cd §26-413(b)(2), 26-412(d), 26-516(c). Sohn v. Calderon, 78 N.Y.2d 755, 579 N.Y.S.2d 940 (1991).

¶ 2. A tenant sued a landlord for harassment, claiming that the landlord had unlawfully attempted to obtain information regarding the rent charged to a roommate. The court, however, dismissed the claim. An allegation that landlord engaged in a deceptive and misleading practice by trying to obtain information from plaintiff to which he was not entitled by law, does not state a cause of action for harassment, which requires a showing that there was an intent to cause the tenant to vacate the premises or to surrender his or her rights by engaging in conduct that disturbed the tenant in the use of the apartment. Martinez v. Classic Realty, N.Y.L.J. 5-21-03, page 18, col. 1 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 3. In contrast to the rent stabilization law, the rent control law does not contain a prohibition against charging roommates more than their proportional share of the legal regulated rent. However, the rent control law does permit the eviction of a tenant who charges a roommate an amount greater than the maximum rent payable for the apartment. 270 Riverside Drive v. Braun, N.Y.L.J., Mar. 2, 2003, page 20, col. 1 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.)

§ 26-413 Enforcement and penalties.

a. Any person who wilfully violates any provision of section 26-412 of this chapter shall be guilty of and punishable for a crime as specified in subdivision ten of section one of the state enabling act, namely such persons shall be subject to a fine of not more than five thousand dollars, or to imprisonment for not more than two years in the case of a violation of subdivision c of section 26-412 of this chapter and for not more than one year in all other cases, or to both such fine and imprisonment. The city rent agency may certify such facts, which in its opinion constitute such violation, to the district attorney having jurisdiction thereof.

b. (1) The city rent agency may, whenever in its judgment any person has engaged in or is about to engage in acts or practices which constitute a violation of any provision of section 26-412 of this chapter, apply to the supreme court for an order (a) enjoining such acts or practices, (b) enforcing compliance with such provision of said section or with an order issued by the city rent agency, or (c) directing the landlord to correct such violation of such provision; and upon sufficient showing, the supreme court may issue a temporary or permanent injunction, restraining order or other order, all of which shall be granted without bond. Jurisdiction shall not be deemed lacking in the supreme court because a defense is based upon an order of an inferior court.

(2) The city rent agency may, whenever in its judgment any person has engaged in acts or practices which constitute a violation of any provision of section 26-412 of this chapter:

(a)* Impose38 by administrative order after hearing, a civil penalty for any violation of said section and bring an action to recover same in any court of competent jurisdiction. Such penalty in the case of a violation of subdivision d of such section shall be in the amount of not less than one thousand dollars nor more than five thousand dollars for each offense or for a violation consisting of conduct directed at the tenants of more than one housing accommodation; and in the case of any other violation of such section in the amount of one hundred dollars for the first such offense and five hundred dollars for each subsequent offense. Such order by the city rent agency shall be deemed a final determination for the purposes of judicial review as provided in section 26-411 of this chapter. Such action shall be brought on behalf of the city and any amount recovered shall be paid into the city treasury. Such right of action may be released, compromised or adjusted by the city rent agency at any item subsequent to the issuance of such administrative order.

(a) Impose39 by administrative order after hearing, a civil penalty for any violation of said section and bring an action to recover same in any court of competent jurisdiction. Such penalty in the case of a violation of subdivision d of such section shall be in the amount of five hundred dollars for a first such offense and one thousand dollars for each subsequent offense or for a violation consisting of conduct directed at the tenants of more than one housing accommodation; and in the case of any other violation of such section in the amount of one hundred dollars for the first such offense and five hundred dollars for each subsequent offense. Such order by the city rent agency shall be deemed a final determination for the purposes of judicial review as provided in section 26-411 of this chapter. Such action shall be brought on behalf of the city and any amount recovered shall be paid into the city treasury. Such right of action may be released, compromised or adjusted by the city rent agency at any item subsequent to the issuance of such administrative order.

(b) Commence an action to recover damages, as provided for in paragraph two of subdivision d of this section in the event that (i) the tenant has not previously commenced such an action as therein provided and (ii) more than six months have elapsed since the occurrence of the violation or issuance of the order. An action instituted by the city rent agency shall constitute a bar to an action by the person aggrieved. The city rent agency shall pay over one-half of the sum recovered in such action to the person aggrieved and one-half to the city treasury, exclusive of costs and disbursements.

(3) (a) Subject to the provisions of subparagraph (b) of this paragraph, make a finding of harassment whenever it determines the existence of a violation of subdivision d of section 26-412 of this chapter in which event the city rent agency may (i) dismiss any pending application for a certificate of eviction and grant any subsequent application for such certificate only upon such terms and conditions as it deems necessary to prevent the circumvention or evasion of provisions of this chapter; (ii) determine that such housing accommodations or any replacement or subdivision thereof (whether or not by demolition, alteration or substantial rehabilitation) shall constitute housing accommodations subject to control under the provisions of this chapter, notwithstanding any definition of that term to the contrary; and (iii) to refuse to credit any adjustments increasing rent mandated by section 26-405 of this chapter and dismiss any applications for an adjustment pursuant to said section for such time and under such terms and conditions as the city rent agency deems necessary to prevent circumvention or evasion of the provisions of this chapter.

(b) No proceeding to determine whether housing accommodations have become vacant as a result of harassment may be commenced later than thirty days after the entire structure shall have been vacated, unless the landlord failed to certify his or her intent to alter or demolish the premises as provided by subdivision c of section 26-408 of this chapter. No proceeding shall be maintained for acts performed in good faith and in a reasonable manner for the purposes of operating, maintaining or repairing any building or part thereof. A finding of harassment shall be attached to and noted upon the registration of the housing accommodations affected by such findings, and a copy thereof shall be filed and docketed in the manner of a notice of mechanic's lien affecting the property. The provisions of this paragraph shall bind all persons or parties who succeed to the landlord's interest in said housing accommodations.

(4) Revoke any order or determination based upon any statement or entry false in any material respect in any document or report submitted in any proceeding before the city rent agency or required to be kept or filed under this chapter or any requirements thereunder.

c. (1) Any court shall advance on the docket or otherwise expedite the disposition of any action or proceeding brought before it pursuant to the provisions of subdivision b of this section.

(2) The provisions of subdivision b of this section are cumulative. The enforcement of one provision thereof shall not constitute a bar to the enforcement by action, proceeding or by making a finding or determination pursuant to other provisions of said subdivision.

(3) The city rent agency may direct that a refund payment to the tenant for rent collected in violation of subdivision a of section 26-412 include interest from the date of each excessive payment of rent. Where the city rent agency has revoked an order or determination premised on a false statement or entry, it may withhold issuance of an order granting increase in maximum rent for such housing accommodations until the landlord has complied with the refund directive, if any, provided for in such order of revocation.

d. (1) Where after the city rent agency has granted a certificate of eviction authorizing the landlord to pursue his or her remedies pursuant to law to acquire possession and a tenant voluntarily removes from a housing accommodation or has been removed therefrom by action or proceeding to evict from or recover possession of a housing accommodation upon the ground that the landlord seeks in good faith to recover possession of such accommodation:

(a) For his or her immediate and personal use, or for the immediate and personal use by a member or members of his or her immediate family, and such landlord or members of his or her immediate family shall fail to occupy such accommodation within thirty days after the tenant vacates; or

(b) For the immediate purpose of withdrawing such housing accommodation from the rental market, and such landlord shall lease or sell the housing accommodation or the space previously occupied thereby, or permit use thereof in a manner other than contemplated in such eviction certificate within a period of one year after such removal of the tenant; or

(c) For the immediate purpose of altering or remodeling such housing accommodation, and the landlord (who required possession for the purpose of effecting such alteration or remodeling) shall fail to start the work of alteration or remodeling of such housing accommodation within ninety days after the removal of the last tenant whose removal is necessary to enable the landlord to effect such alteration or remodeling of such accommodation, or if after having commenced such work shall fail or neglect to prosecute the work with reasonable diligence; or

(d) For the immediate purpose of demolishing such housing accommodations and constructing a new building in accordance with approved plans, or reasonable amendment thereof, and the landlord has failed to complete the demolition within six months after the removal of the last tenant or, having demolished the premises, has failed or neglected to proceed with the new construction within ninety days after the completion of such demolition, or having commenced such construction work, has failed or neglected to prosecute such work with reasonable diligence; or

(e) For some purpose other than those specified above for which the removal of the tenant was sought and the landlord has failed to use the vacated premises for such purposes; such landlord shall, unless for good cause shown be liable to the tenant for three times the damages sustained on account of such removal plus reasonable attorney's fees and costs as determined by the court provided that the tenant commences such action within three years from the expiration of the applicable time period as set forth in this subdivision. The damages sustained by the tenant under this subdivision shall be the difference between the rent paid for the housing accommodation from which such tenant was evicted, and the rental value of a comparable housing accommodation on the open market. In addition to any other damage, the cost of removal of the tenant's property shall be a lawful measure of damages. The remedy herein provided shall be in addition to those provided for in subdivisions a and b of this section. Such acts and omissions on the part of a landlord after issuance of a certificate of eviction are hereby declared to be consistent with the purposes for which such certificate of eviction was issued.

(2) A tenant may bring an action against his or her landlord in any court of competent jurisdiction for a violation of subdivision a of section 26-412 of this chapter within: (a) two years from the date of occurrence of an overcharge, defined to mean the amount by which the consideration paid by a tenant to a landlord exceeds the applicable maximum rent, or (b) within one year after the landlord fails to pay a refund as ordered by the city rent agency, such time to be calculated from thirty-three days after the date of the issuance of the order or when the order becomes final, whichever is later, or (c) in the case of an act proscribed by subdivision e of section 26-412 of this chapter, within two years after knowledge of such statement or omission and consequent violation has been made known to the city agency. The landlord shall be liable for reasonable attorney's fees and costs as determined by the court, plus whichever of the following sums is the greater: (i) such amount not more than three times the amount of the overcharge, or the overcharges, upon which the action is based as the court in its discretion may determine or (ii) an amount not less than twenty-five dollars, provided, however, that such amount shall be the amount of the overcharge or overcharges or twenty-five dollars, whichever is greater, if the defendant proves that the violation of the regulation or order in question was neither wilful nor the result of failure to take practicable precautions against the occurrence of the violation.

(3) A tenant or occupant who is unlawfully removed by a landlord from any housing accommodation may, within two years from the date of occurrence, bring a civil action against the landlord by reason of such unlawful removal. In such action, the landlord shall be liable to the tenant for three times the damages sustained on account of such removal plus reasonable attorney's fees and costs as determined by the court. The damages sustained by the tenant under this paragraph shall be the difference between the rent paid for the housing accommodation from which such tenant was evicted and the rental value of a comparable housing accommodation on the open market. In addition to any other damage the cost of removal of the tenant's property shall be a lawful measure of damage.

e. No person (including, but not limited to any officer or employee of the city rent agency) shall be held liable for damages or penalties in any court, on any grounds for or in respect of anything done or omitted to be done in good faith pursuant to any provision of the state rent act or of this chapter, or any regulation, order, or requirement thereunder, notwithstanding that subsequently such provision, regulation, order or requirement may be modified, rescinded, or determined to be invalid. In any action or proceeding wherein a party relies for ground of relief or defense or raises issue or brings into question the construction or validity of any provision of this chapter or any regulation, order, or requirement thereunder, the court having jurisdiction of such action or proceeding may at any stage certify such fact to the city rent agency. The city rent agency may intervene in any such action or proceeding.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. Provision for treble damages for unlawful eviction being penal in nature should not be applied retroactively to an eviction which occurred prior to its enactment. de Kosenko v. Brandt, 31 AD2d 612, 295, NYS2d 879 [1968].

¶ 2. Action for recovery for rent overcharges allegedly made in violation of the rent control law for rent overcharges received for 1972 was time barred by subdivision d par. 2 cl. a of this section where actions were commenced in February and April, 1975 but amendment of complaint to allege an action within one year after landlord fails to pay a refund as ordered under subdivision d par. 2 cl. b would not be precluded because an action was time barred under cl. a. Mejia v. Dorglad Realty Corp., 85 Misc 2d 192 [1976].

¶ 3. Imposition of $500 fine for harassment where commissioner believed institution of unsuccessful summary dispossess proceeding to be groundless was impermissible interference with right of landlord to apply to court for relief where this was not one of a series of repeated groundless eviction proceedings or a proceeding begun without intention to carry it through to judgment. Equity Investments v. Joy, 58 AD2d 539 [1977].

¶ 4. In action to recover rent overcharges together with treble damages based on landlord's failure to comply with a refund order as to excess rent collected during seven years of plaintiff's tenancy, plaintiff was not limited to overcharges and damages for a two year period preceding the date the action was commenced since landlord neither paid the refund nor instituted an Article 78 proceeding to review the order. Santon v. Rooney, 99 Misc 2d 687, 416 NYS2d 1020 [1979].

¶ 5. Petitioner is not entitled to treble damages under subd. d par. [2] or subd. c, par. [3] because they relate to violations of the NYC Rent and Rehabilitation Law, rather than the Rent Stabilization Law, which was violated herein, which does not provide for treble damages and interest even though they are available under § 12 Emergency Tenant Protection Act of 1974; § 12 subd. b leaves it up to the discretion of the Conciliation and Appeals Bd. whether and how to enforce the provisions of that law. Paul Chessin v. NYC Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 116 Misc. 2d 1003 [1982]; reversed 100 AD2d 297 [1984].

¶ 6. Successor landlords which do not improve the conditions which led to the imposition of sanctions under this section, subdivision (b)(3), are not entitled to a lifting of the sanctions. Matter of Meko Holding v. Joy, 107 AD2d 278 [1985].

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Plaintiff landlord seeks to demolish his building, to evict his rent-controlled tenants and not offer renewal leases to his rent-stabilized tenants. Supreme Court has no right to direct DHPD to issue "no harassment" certificates based on the court's own findings or grant an injunction to enjoin DHCR to inquire into tenant harassment charges. DHCR has responsibility to adjudicate claimed harassment violations, Ad Cd §26-413(b)(2), 26-412(d), 26-516(c). Sohn v. Calderon, 78 N.Y.2d 755, 579 N.Y.S.2d 940 (1991).

¶ 2. A new owner of the premises, who took title with actual knowledge of the pendency before the agency of harassment charges against the prior owner, will not be able to escape liability for the imposition of a lien and civil penalties. 446 Realty Co. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 165 A.D.2d 778, 564 N.Y.S.2d 49 (1st Dept. 1990).

¶ 3. In one case, a tenant filed a rent overcharge complaint with DHCR and then brought a declaratory judgment action in Supreme Court seeking a determination of the lawful rent. The court held that while the administrative proceeding was stayed pending the determination of the declaratory judgment action, DHCR was not completely divested of jurisdiction over the matter. Thus, once the Supreme Court determined the legal rent, DHCR then had jurisdiction to issue an order directing the landlord to refund the overcharge. Christy v. Lynch, 259 A.D.2d 324, 686 N.Y.S.2d 431 (App. Div. 1st Dept. 1999).

¶ 4. A landlord served a notice of termination upon the tenant, stating that he (landlord) sought possession of the apartment for the use of a family member. The tenant, in exchange for a sum of money, signed an agreement in which he surrendered possession of the apartment. Subsequently, however, the tenant discovered that the landlord had never installed a family member in the apartment. At that point, the tenant sued the landlord for common law fraud, and also claimed treble damages under Administrative Code § 26-413 by reason of the landlord's failure to make use of the apartment for a member of his family. The court sustained the cause of action for fraud, since at the time of the making of the agreement, the landlord allegedly had a present intent not to use the apartment for a member of his family. However, the court dismissed the claim for damages under Sec. 26-413; the treble damages provision takes effect only when the landlord actually obtains a certificate of eviction from DHCR and then fails to make personal or family use of the apartment. In other words, the treble damages provision does not apply where a tenant agrees to move and the landlord never obtains a certificate of eviction. Pomranz v. Tauber, 720 N.Y.S.2d 39 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 2001).

¶ 5. A court cannot impose treble damages in a rent overcharge case unless it makes a specific finding that the overcharge was willful. Haberman v. Hawkins, 275 A.D.2d 287, 712 N.Y.S.2d 861 (1st Dept. 2000).

¶ 6. Provisions permitting recovery of treble damages for a rent overcharge are authorized by a penal provision in the state enabling legislation, and clearly reflect the legislative intent that treble damages are to be imposed as a penalty. Cox v. Microsoft Corp., 290 A.D.2d 206, 737 N.Y.S.2d 1 (1st Dept. 2002).

Whenever the city rent agency shall find, after making such studies and investigations as it deems necessary for such purpose, or for processing an application supported by adequate proof filed by an interested party pursuant to regulation that the percentage of vacancies in all or any particular class of housing accommodations in the city, as such class is determined by the city rent agency, is five per centum or more, the controls imposed on rents and evictions by and pursuant to this chapter, with respect to the housing accommodations as to which such finding has been made, shall be forthwith scheduled for orderly decontrol, with due regard to preventing uncertainty, hardship and dislocation, by order of such agency; provided, however, that notwithstanding any provision of this section to the contrary, such agency shall not order the decontrol of any particular class of housing accommodations as to which it shall find that the percentage of vacancies is less than five per centum; provided, further, that no such order shall be made unless such agency shall hold a public hearing on such proposal at which interested persons are given a reasonable opportunity to be heard. Notice of such hearing shall be provided by publication thereof, on at least five days during the period of fifteen days next preceding the date of the commencement of such hearing, in the City Record and in at least two daily newspapers having general circulation in the city.

CHAPTER 4 RENT STABILIZATION

§ 26-501 Findings and declaration of emergency.

The council hereby finds that a serious public emergency continues to exist in the housing of a considerable number of persons within the city of New York and will continue to exist after April first, nineteen hundred seventy-four; that such emergency necessitated the intervention of federal, state and local government in order to prevent speculative, unwarranted and abnormal increases in rents; that there continues to exist an acute shortage of dwellings which creates a special hardship to persons and families occupying rental housing; that the legislation enacted in nineteen hundred seventy-one by the state of New York, removing controls on housing accommodations as they become vacant, has resulted in sharp increases in rent levels in many instances; that the existing and proposed cuts in federal assistance to housing programs threaten a virtual end to the creation of new housing, thus prolonging the present emergency; that unless residential rents and evictions continue to be regulated and controlled, disruptive practices and abnormal conditions will produce serious threats to the public health, safety and general welfare; that to prevent such perils to health, safety and welfare, preventive action by the council continues to be imperative; that such action is necessary in order to prevent exactions of unjust, unreasonable and oppressive rents and rental agreements and to forestall profiteering, speculation and other disruptive practices tending to produce threats to the public health, safety and general welfare; that the transition from regulation to a normal market of free bargaining between landlord and tenant, while still the objective of state and city policy, must be administered with due regard for such emergency; and that the policy herein expressed is now administered locally within the city of New York by an agency of the city itself, pursuant to the authority conferred by chapter twenty-one of the laws of nineteen hundred sixty-two.

The council further finds that, prior to the adoption of local laws sixteen and fifty-one of nineteen hundred sixty-nine, many owners of housing accommodations in multiple dwellings, not subject to the provisions of the city rent and rehabilitation law enacted pursuant to said enabling authority either because they were constructed after nineteen hundred forty-seven or because they were decontrolled due to monthly rental of two hundred fifty dollars or more or for other reasons, were demanding exorbitant and unconscionable rent increases as a result of the aforesaid emergency, which led to a continuing restriction of available housing as evidenced by the nineteen hundred sixty-eight vacancy survey by the United States bureau of the census; that prior to the enactment of said local laws, such increases were being exacted under stress of prevailing conditions of inflation and of an acute housing shortage resulting from a sharp decline in private residential construction brought about by a combination of local and national factors; that such increases and demands were causing severe hardship to tenants of such accommodations and were uprooting long-time city residents from their communities; that recent studies establish that the acute housing shortage continues to exist; that there has been a further decline in private residential construction due to existing and proposed cuts in federal assistance to housing programs; that unless such accommodations are subjected to reasonable rent and eviction limitations, disruptive practices and abnormal conditions will produce serious threats to the public health, safety and general welfare; and that such conditions constitute a grave emergency.

¶ 2. A landlord and tenant entered into an apartment lease for a rent greater than the lawful stabilized rent but still less than the free market rate. The lease had a condition that the apartment not be the tenant's primary residence. The court held that such a lease was void as against public policy, because rent stabilized units, which are in short supply, must be reserved for those who need them as primary residences. The landlord directed the landlord to enter into a new lease with the tenant, at the lawful stabilized rent but subject to the rule that tenant had to maintain the apartment as a primary residence.

§ 26-504 Application.

This law shall apply to:

a. Class A multiple dwellings not owned as a cooperative or as a condominium, except as provided in section three hundred fifty-two-eeee of the general business law, containing six or more dwelling units which:

(1) were completed after February first, nineteen hundred forty-seven, except dwelling units (a) owned or leased by, or financed by loans from, a public agency or public benefit corporation, (b) subject to rent regulation under the private housing finance law or any other state law, (c) aided by government insurance under any provision of the national housing act, to the extent this chapter or any regulation or order issued thereunder is inconsistent therewith, or (d) located in a building for which a certificate of occupancy is obtained after March tenth, nineteen hundred sixty-nine; or (e) any class A multiple dwelling which on June first, nineteen hundred sixty-eight was and still is commonly regarded as a hotel, transient hotel or residential hotel, and which customarily provides hotel service such as maid service, furnishing and laundering of linen, telephone and bell boy service, secretarial or desk service and use and upkeep of furniture and fixtures, or (f) not occupied by the tenant, not including subtenants or occupants, as his primary residence, as determined by a court of competent jurisdiction, provided, however that no action or proceeding shall be commenced seeking to recover possession on the ground that a housing accommodation is not occupied by the tenant as his or her primary residence unless the owner or lessor shall have given thirty days notice to the tenant of his or her intention to commence such action or proceeding on such grounds. For the purposes of this subparagraph where a housing accommodation is rented to a not-for-profit hospital for residential use, affiliated subtenants authorized to use such accommodations by such hospital shall be deemed to be tenants, or (g) became vacant on or after June thirtieth, nineteen hundred seventy-one, or become vacant, provided however, that this exemption shall not apply or become effective with respect to housing accommodations which the commissioner determines or finds became vacant because the landlord or any person acting on his or her behalf, with intent to cause the tenant to vacate, engaged in any course of conduct (including but not limited to, interruption or discontinuance of essential services) which interfered with or disturbed or was intended to interfere with or disturb the comfort, repose, peace or quiet of the tenant in his or her use or occupancy of the housing accommodations and provided further that any housing accommodations exempted by this paragraph shall be subject to this law to the extent provided in subdivision b of this section; or (2) were decontrolled by the city rent agency pursuant to section 26-414 of this title; or (3) are exempt from control by virtue of item one, two, six or seven of subparagraph (i) of paragraph two of subdivision e of section 26-403 of this title; and

b. Other housing accommodations in class A or class B multiple dwellings made subject to this law pursuant to the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen seventy-four.

c. Dwelling units in a building or structure receiving the benefits of section 11-243 or section 11-244 of the code or article eighteen of the private housing finance law, not owned as a cooperative or as a condominium, except as provided in section three hundred fifty-two-eeee of the general business law and not subject to chapter three of this title. Upon the expiration or termination for any reason of the benefits of section 11-243 or section 11-244 of the code or article eighteen of the private housing finance law any such dwelling unit shall be subject to this chapter until the occurrence of the first vacancy of such unit after such benefits are no longer being received or if each lease and renewal thereof for such unit for the tenant in residence at the time of the expiration of the tax benefit period has included a notice in at least twelve point type informing such tenant that the unit shall become subject to deregulation upon the expiration of such tax benefit period and states the approximate date on which such tax benefit period is scheduled to expire, such dwelling unit shall be deregulated as of the end of the tax benefit period; provided, however, that if such dwelling unit would have been subject to this chapter or the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen seventy-four in the absence of this subdivision, such dwelling unit shall, upon the expiration of such benefits, continue to be subject to this chapter or the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen seventy-four to the same extent and in the same manner as if this subdivision had never applied thereto.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. Dwelling units owned by the FHA are exempt from the New York City Rent Stabilization Law.-Federal Housing Commissioner v. Reese, 62 Misc. 2d 522, 309 N.Y.S. 2d 619 (1970).

¶ 2. Rent Stabilization Law held applicable to two decontrolled apartments in multiple dwelling containing seven dwelling units even though five apartments were rent controlled. Schacht v. City of N.Y. Housing and Development Administration, 63 Misc. 2d 1003, 314 N.Y.S. 2d 104 [1970].

¶ 3. Petitioner who owned stock in a cooperative apartment house and a proprietary lease to an apartment was the landlord of the statutory tenant who occupied the apartment and had a right to file an application for a rent increase on the apartment and price which he paid for the leasehold may be considered in determining its value. Tager v. Com'r. of Dept. of Rent., 66 Misc. 2d 452, 320 N.Y.S. 2d 947 [1971].

¶ 4. Premises subject to a first mortgage guaranteed by the Federal Housing Administration are not exempt from the Rent Stabilization Law. Pelham Towers v. Conciliation & Appeals Board, 71 Misc. 2d 814, 337 N.Y.S. 2d 485 [1972].

¶ 5. Federal regulations of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development do not automatically exempt federally insured housing from all local rent laws and hence petitioner improperly pleaded that Rent Stabilization Laws were superseded by increase in rents pursuant to federal regulations by virtue of preemption by federal government.-Sokol Apts. v. Berlenghi, 71 A.D. 2d 622, 418 N.Y.S. 2d 145 [1979].

¶ 6. Landlord's petition in holdover summary proceeding of housing accommodations in a class B multiple dwelling was jurisdictionally defective where it failed to allege that it was subject to the Rent Stabilization Law or the Emergency Tenant Protection Act since all classes of multiple dwellings including class B are rent stabilized and under legislative regulation pursuant to ETRA.-Post v. Reynolds, 101 Misc. 2d 504 [1979].

¶ 7. Where parties agreed that premises would be used for both commercial and residential purposes under lease, 50% as a showroom and 50% as residential, the provisions of the Rent Stabilization Law applied and fact that a corporation enters into a lease for a residential apartment and uses it for both commercial and residential purposes does not place it outside the operation of the Rent Stabilization Law.-Park Towers v. A-Lalan Imports, Inc., 101 Misc. 2d 507 [1979].

¶ 8. Tenants who had rented loft under lease which limited occupation of premises to "artists studios and for no other purposes" but had spent considerable amounts of money to convert space to living quarters with encouragement of landlord and were assured by landlord that he would legalize occupancy were subject to Rent Stabilization Law and entitled to a renewal lease at a stabilization rent to be fixed by the Conciliations and Appeals Board.-Mandel v. Pitkowsky, 102 Misc. 2d 478, 425 N.Y.S. 2d 926 [1979].

¶ 9. Where a commercial building was continuously occupied since 1968 by at least 3 loft tenants living independently of each other it constituted a de facto dwelling and petition in a holdover summary proceeding which failed to allege information required by Civil Court rule regarding filing of registration statement would be dismissed on jurisdictional grounds.-Id.

¶ 10. Although premises constructed in 1976 with §236 National Housing Act subsidy was not subject to rent stabilization, tenant could be evicted only for good cause and is entitled to procedural due process in determination of whether cause exists since joint state and federal government participation in affording housing for the poor placed project within protection of the Fourteenth Amendment.-Hudsonview Terrace, Inc. v. Maury, 100 Misc. 2d 331, 419 N.Y.S. 2d 409 [1979].

¶ 11. A Class B multiple dwelling law apartment occupied by a tenant following a prior post-June 30, 1971 vacancy is subject to Rent Stabilization Law and hence petition in holdover summary proceeding which failed to allege that the premises are subject to such law was jurisdictionally defective.-Post v. Marquez, 421 N.Y.S. 2d 320 [1979].

¶ 12. Landlord's arbitrary rejection after tenant's notice of intent to sublease a rent stabilized apartment gave tenant right to sublease, and the right of release from the lease upon an unreasonable denial of right to sublease belongs to the tenant not the landlord.-Kruger v. Page Management Co., 422 N.Y.S. 2d 295 [1980].

¶ 13. Use of apartment by child care association as a group home for girls with emotional difficulties constituted a residential tenancy which made it subject to rent stabilization law.-Koenig v. Jewish Child Care Asso., 104 Misc. 2d 811, 429 N.Y.S. 348 [1980].

¶ 14. The Emergency Tenant Protection Act did not extend rent stabilization to tenants residing in Class B multiple dwellings.-La Guardia v. Cananaugh, 53 N.Y. 2d 67 [1981].

¶ 15. The maximum rent allowed on a rent stabilized building that converts to a "section 8" tenancy under U.S. Code T. 42, § 1437f is not the fair market rent for the apartment but the rent stabilized amount.-Wiener v. N.Y.C. Housing Authority, 106 Misc. 2d 843 [1981].

¶ 16. When the city becomes the landlord of residential buildings after default by owner in payment of property taxes the tenants are entitled to sufficiently detailed information to enable them to determine whether any rent raises are warranted, the grounds for such proposed increases and the manner in which they are to be calculated.-Matter of Laureano v. Koch, 116 Misc. 2d 287 [1982].

¶ 17. 6 x 15 ft. "maid's room" in 42 year old class A mult. dwelling that is not a legal dwelling unit under city's Housing Maintenance Code (§ D26-1.01 et seq.) due to insufficient space and lack of water closet and bath, is nonetheless a housing accommodation subject to the city's Rent Stabilization Law as a vacancy decontrolled unit subject to rent stabilization by Emergency Tenant Protection Act of 1974 (YY51-3.0(b)).-128 Central Park South Assocs. v. Phylis Cooney, 119 Misc. 2d 1045 [1983].

¶ 18. YMCA housing facilities are exempt from rent stabilization because they are owned and operated by an institution operated exclusively for charitable or educational purposes as excepted by § 5 Emergency Tenant Protection Act.-YMCA of Greater New York v. Brandt, 190 (52) N.Y.L.J. (9-14-83) 12. col. 4T.

¶ 19. Even though lease specifies that premises will be used solely for residential purposes, tenant used them solely as a business office. Premises subject to Rent Stabilization Law (Title YY) are only those actually used for residential purposes. Since these are not actually so used, title YY does not apply, and so tenant is not entitled to a renewal lease pursuant thereto.-Coronet Properties Co. v. Jennie & Co. Film Productions, Inc., 121 Misc. 2d 873 [1983].

¶ 20. The thirty day notice provision of subdivision (a)(1)(f) is applicable to a declaratory judgment action in which the landlord seeks a declaration that the tenant is not occupying the apartment as a primary residence.-Sutton Assoc. v. Bush, 125 Misc. 2d 438 [1984].

¶ 21. Subdivision (a)(1)(f) of this section is to be construed such that a tenant who fails to occupy an apartment as his primary residence is not permitted to cure his nonprimary residence status after a landlord has commenced a summary proceeding against the tenant on the grounds that the tenant does not maintain the premises as his primary residence.-Lufkin v. Drago, 126 Misc. 2d 177 [1984].

¶ 22. Subdivision (a)(1)(g) applies to tenancies commenced in 1983 and petitioner college is therefore not required to give respondent notice of its intention not to renew the lease.-Columbia Univ. v. Lefkowitz, 126 Misc. 2d 319 [1984].

¶ 23. A rent-stabilized tenant who becomes a superintendent and changes apartments retains his status as a rent-stabilized tenant when discharged from the position of superintendent.-Orlando v. Ortiz, 193 (47) N.Y.L.J. (3-23-85) 13, col. 3M.

¶ 24. A tenant who took occupancy in 1972 during the period of "vacancy decontrol" under a lease containing a standard affiliation clause, has never been and is not now a tenant protected by the Rent Stabilization Law of 1969, section YY51-1.0 et seq.-Trustees of Univ. v. James, 127 Misc. 2d 81 [1985].

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. A landlord-tenant dispute in which plaintiff tenant sought declaration that apartment originally let for commercial occupancy was subject to Rent Stabilization Law and recovery of alleged overcharges pursuant to § 54(E)(2) of the Rent Stabilization Association Code and a renewed lease. Tenant alleges that landlord had knowledge of residential purposes and that premises was primary residence and subject to provision of NYC Ad Cd § YY51-3.0(a)(1)(F) that landlord give 30 days notice to commence recovery action. Metzendorf v. 130 W. 57 Co., 132 AD2d 262 [1987].

¶ 2. An apartment located in a building converted to cooperative ownership before the Rent Stabilization Law went into effect on May 12, 1969 was excluded from the coversion plan. Such units are excluded from stabilization if they were offered for sale to tenants prior to May 12, 1969 pursuant to § 2(g)(5) of Rent Stabilization Association Code. This apartment is subject to rent stabilization because no offer for sale was made. McAvity v. Mirabal, 136 Misc. 2d 823 [1987].

¶ 3. Master television antenna service was ordered included in a registration statement as an "ancillary service including . . . recreational facilities". If the service was independently contracted for and the building owner had no ownership interest the charge was not subject to limitations of stabilization. However as of May 1, 1987 a new code provides an ancillary service with a separate charge is not subject to the code under certain circumstances. Mid-State Management Corp. v. State Division of Housing and Community Renewal. 136 AD2d 529 [1988].

¶ 5. Rent-stabilized dwelling unit was being used as a commercial electrolysis studio in violation of zoning laws. The illegality is not one of the grounds for exemption from regulation set forth in § 26-504(a)(1). It is better public policy for landlord to seek recovery of premises through summary proceeding rather than seeking a rent increase to fair market value because of an illegal use. Kace Realty Co. v. DHCR, 139 Misc. 2d 23 [1988].

¶ 6. Horizontal multiple dwellings other than "garden-type maisonette" dwelling may be subject to rent regulation as class A multiple dwellings of 6 or more units. Some criteria used to include in rent regulation are common facilities, common ownership and common operation. Common heating unit is not an adequate basis as sole criteria. Salvati v. Eimicke, 72 N.Y.2d 784, 537 N.Y.S.2d 16 (1988).

¶ 7. A not-for-profit hospital which is named tenant on expired leases for rent-stabilized apartments is not entitled to renewal leases pursuant to L. 1984, ch. 940 which provided that such hospitals are entitled to renewal leases when they sublet to "affiliated" personnel (nurses), § 26-504(a)(1)(f), because that statute constitutes an unconstitutional taking of landlord's property. Rather, ch. 940 shall be interpreted as requiring landlord to offer renewal lease to hospital employees occupying the subject apartments as a primary residence. 520 East 81st St. v. Lenox Hall, 142 Misc 2d 723, reversed, 157 AD2d 138 [1990].

¶ 8. Respondents, the son of the deceased tenant-of-record who failed to establish that he lived in the premises as his primary residence beyond 1986, and the live-in lover of the deceased tenant who established that he had been living with the deceased tenant prior to her death, are not entitled to any succession rights afforded by the rent stabilization laws due to the ownership of the building by the City of NY (Ad Code of the City of NY § 26-504) because petitioner failed to prove compliance with the terms of the lease with the city requiring that it give written notice to the Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development prior to commencing a summary proceeding which constituted a breach of an important term of the lease. Rosenberg Diamond Development Corp. v. Lewis, 146 Misc. 2d 964.

¶ 9. A not-for-profit hospital, which is the named tenant on expired leases for rent-stablized apartments in a building converted to condominium ownership, is not entitled to renewal leases for the subject apartments pursuant to laws of 1984 (ch. 940), which amended the rent stabilization law to provide that such hospitals are entitled to renewal leases where they sublet the apartments to "affiliated" personnel, pursuant to Ad Code of the City of NY § 26-504(a)(1)(b), and permitted such subletting without the consent of the landlord. 520 E. 81st St. Associates v. Lenox Hill Hospital, 157 AD2d 138.

¶ 10. Where the subject apartment was not being used as a primary residence, Ad Cd §26-504(a)(1)(f) may not be used to establish tenancy regarding a cooperative conversion. Bruenn v. Cole, 165 Ad2d 443, 568 N.Y.S.2d 351 [1991].

¶ 11. At issue is whether an apartment described as a "maids room" comprises part of a residence, § 26-504(a)(1)(f). Shareholder of a cooperative corporation seeks renewal lease to space for which no shares have been allocated. DHCR lacks power to decide the controversy or to direct the parties to take any action. It is within the province of the court § 26-504(a)(1)(f). 10 W. 66th St. Corp. v. DHCR, 184 AD2d 143, 591 N.Y.S.2d 148 [1992].

¶ 12. Where an apartment is leased to a corporation, the corporation cannot be deemed a "primary resident" of the apartment. In Manocherian v. Lenox Hill Hospital, 84 N.Y.2d 385, 618 N.Y.S.2d 857, cert denied 514 US 1109, 115 Sup.Ct. 1961, 131 L.Ed.2d 853, the court struck down on constitutional grounds a portion of the statute which would have permitted not-for-profit hospitals to lease rent stabilized units in perpetuity for the purpose of subleasing them to hospital staff members. The court held that the statute called for an impermissible "taking" within the meaning of the due process section of the Constitution. Subsequently, it was held that subtenants of the hospital did not have renewal rights for their apartments. Manocherian v. Lenox Hill Hospital, 229 A.D.2d 197, 654 N.Y.S.2d 339 (1st Dept. 1997), motion for leave to appeal denied, 90 N.Y.2d 835, 660 N.Y.S.2d 710 (1997).

¶ 13. A multiple dwelling exempt from the Rent Stabilization Law because of its cooperative ownership reverts to its former rent-regulated status upon foreclosure and the return of the building to operation as rental housing. The Rent Stabilization Law applies to "Class A multiple dwellings not owned as a cooperative", Administrative Code §26-504. Federal Mtge. Corp. v. DHCR, 87 NY2d 325 [1995].

¶ 14. Where a rent stabilized tenant is a corporation, the notice of non-renewal of lease on the ground of non-primary residence must focus on the residence of the person occupying the apartment. A notice which stated that the "tenant" occupied a residence other than the primary residence, without even naming the actual occupant, who happened to be a principal of the corporation, was insufficient. 169 Beekman Associates v. John-Platt Enterprises, Inc.,

162 Misc.2d 823, 618 N.Y.S.2d 990 (Civ.Ct. New York Co. 1994).

¶ 15. A partitioned semi-enclosed unit described as a "cubicle," which contains a locked entrance door and is furnished with a bed and closet provided by the landlord, was protected under rent stabilization. The cubicle was intended to and had in fact been the tenant's residence for a period of years. Neither the absence of on-premises kitchen or bathroom facilities nor the unit's small size changed the result. Gracecor Realty Co., Inc. v. Hargrove, 160 Misc.2d 963, 615 N.Y.S.2d 213 (App.Term 1st Dept. 1994).

¶ 16. A previously rent stabilized building was the subject of a cooperative conversion. Where a foreclosure of the building mortgage occurred, the shareholders lost their investments but became rent stabilized tenants. The court held that the re-imposition of rent stabilization on previously exempt cooperative buildings upon foreclosure was not an unconstitutional physical taking. The rent laws merely regulated the terms on which the landlord could use property. The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation had voluntarily purchased a building containing residential tenants, and the law simply regulated the amount of rent that could be charged to the tenant. The mere fact that the rent regulation laws made the operation of the building less profitable did not make them unconstitutional. The landlord still had the use of the property. Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 83 F.3d 45 (2nd Cir. 1996).

¶ 17. Where the building's certificate of occupancy reflected the existence of six residential units, the illegal conversion in 1970 of two units into one, leaving five residential units, will not result in an exemption of the premises from rent stabilization coverage. Loventhal Management v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 183 A.D.2d 415, 583 N.Y.S.2d 270 (1st Dept. 1992).

¶ 18. Pursuant to the Financial Institution Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989 (FIRREA), the Resolution Trust Corp. (RTC), was created for the purpose of managing the assets of failed financial institutions. The court held that under federal law, the RTC had the power to repudiate contracts which it considered burdensome. Rent stabilized leases came within this definition. Although tenants and the State of New York argued that the tenancies were statutory rather than contractual in nature, the court found that the federal law pre-empted the state rent regulatory scheme. Thus, the RTC could refuse to renew rent stabilized leases when they expired. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Diamond, 45 F.3d 665 (2nd Cir. 1995).

¶ 19. The application of rent stabilization to a former cooperative building after foreclosure of the building mortgage, was not an unconsitutional taking of property. Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 83 F.3d 45 (2nd Cir. 1996).

¶ 20. A notice of renewal which merely stated that the tenant did not occupy the premises as a primary residence was insufficient, where it failed to set forth the underlying facts regarding non-primary residence. Berkley Associates v. Camlakides, 173 A.D.2d 193, 569 N.Y.S.2d 629 (1st Dept. 1991). However, the notice does not have to state a specific address for the tenant at a location other than the subject apartment; a notice was held to be sufficient where it stated that in the past two years the tenant had not occupied the apartment for more than a few days, that the tenant had permitted at least twelve "roommates" to occupy the apartment and that certified mail sent to the tenant at the apartment had been returned as undelivered. See Price v. Chelsimore Apartment, N.Y.L.J., Mar. 8, 1996, page 25, col. 3 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 21. The mere fact that the tenant's subleasing of the apartment was lawful does not preclude the landlord from attempting to evict the tenant on the ground of non-primary residence. Corliss Estates v. Yulin, N.Y.L.J., Apr. 10, 1996, page 26, col. 5 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 22. The court dismissed a non-primary residence case even though the tenant had a Wyoming driver's license and automobile registration. The tenant submitted evidence of long distance telephone bills and frequent cash withdrawals from automatic teller machines in New York, all of which tended to show that he spent most of his time in this state. Delmonico Hotel Co. v. Rumsey, N.Y.L.J., Oct. 29, 1996, page 25, col. 1 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 23. A landlord's unilateral action in combining apartments, thereby reducing the number of residential units from seven to five subsequent to the base date for rent stabilization purposes, cannot effect an exemption from the rent regulation statutes. Shubert v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 162 A.D.2d 261, 556 N.Y.S.2d 618 (1st Dept. 1990).

¶ 24. A tenant moved into an apartment and, two years later, married a man who had his own apartment in the building. The court held that even though she had married, she could still retain her own apartment as a primary residence, where she actually spent part of her time in the subject apartment. 224 East 18th Street v. Sijacki, 138 Misc.2d 494, 524 N.Y.S.2d 964 (Civ. Ct. New York Co. 1987). Several other cases have held that a single tenant can have maintain primary residence of a two or more non-contiguous apartments. See Page Associates v. Dolan, N.Y.L.J., Nov. 8, 1984, page 4, col. 2 (App.Term 1st Dept.) (second apartment rented on the same floor so tenant's nephew, who was being raised by tenant, can have his own bedroom); Burgess v. Campbell, N.Y.L.J., July 29, 1981, page 7, col. 4 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.) (three additional apartments in the building rented over several years to accomodate growing family needs); Bill Tracy Associates v. Faust, N.Y.L.J., Apr. 15, 1987 (Civ. Ct. New York Co.) (tenant of two bedroom apartment renting additional one bedroom apartment used as study, guest room and storage area, spenind a fair amount of time there). However, where a tenant once used the subject apartment for residential purposes but now uses the that apartment solely for commercial purposes and resides elsewhere in the building, the tenant no longer can maintain primary residence status for the apartment. Ter Arutunian v. Stahl Associates, N.Y.L.J., Jan. 23, 1987, page 13, col. 1 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 25. The fact that the premises have been coverted to cooperative or condominium ownership will not preclude the landlord from maintaining a non-primary residence proceeding against a tenant who elected not to purchase the apartment. West End Associates v. Lasky, N.Y.L.J., July 23, 1997, page 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. New York Co.). See also, Rosenberg v. Field, N.Y.L.J., May 16, 1994, page 27, col. 4 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 26. A loft building covered as an Interim Multiple Dwelling under Article 7C of the Multiple Dwelling Law contained at least three but less than six units. The court held that even after the building was brought into compliance with the applicable building codes, and a residential certificate had been issued for the building, the tenants still retained their rent stabilization status. Eastlite Corp v. Barth, N.Y.L.J., May 16, 1997, page 25, col. 2 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 27. Premises which are used primarily for commercial purposes will not qualify for rent stabilization protection. Gallin v. Mendelson, 151 A.D.2d 228, Power v. Powers, N.Y.L.J., July 29, 1997, page 21, col. 3 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 28. A tenant who uses the apartment for commercial or professional purposes (in this case, a physician's office) rather than residential purposes will not have the right to purchase the apartment as an "insider" when the building undergoes a cooperative conversion. Gluck v. Jackson Management Corp., 143 A.D.2d 629, 532 N.Y.S.2d 914 (2nd Dept. 1988).

¶ 29. In deciding a primary residence case, the court can consider the entire history of the tenancy. Thus, even if the tenant allegedly was in occupancy at the time that the landlord served the notice of non-renewal, where the tenant did not reside at the premises at any time between 1974 and September 1993 and did not reside in the premises for the first 16 months of the most recent 24 month renewal, the tenant did not have any ongoing, substantial physical nexus with the premises for actual living purposes. Thus, the court granted a holdover proceeding seeking eviction of the tenant on the ground of non-primary residence. The fact that the tenant's family members occupied the apartment in his absence (they have since vacated) may not be imputed to the tenant. The apartment may not be transferred from one family member to another where there has been no contemporaneous occupancy and no claim of succession rights. Berwick Land Corp. v. Mucelli, 656 N.Y.S.2d 88 (App.Term 1st Dept. 1996).

¶ 30. Although an apartment used entirely for commercial purposes will not qualify for rent stabilization coverage, an apartment which used used partly for residential purposes and partly for professional purposes is covered by the rent stabilization law. Kace Realty Co. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 139 Misc.2d 23, 526 N.Y.S.2d 337 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 1988), citing Matter of Zeitlin v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Board, 46 N.Y.2d 992, 416 N.Y.S. 233 (1979). The fact that the commercial use may have been illegal under the zoning law will not affect the rent stabilization status of the premises. Kace Realty, supra.

¶ 31. A court found that a tenant was not occupying the apartment as a primary residence, where had a Connecticut driver's license and had not filed New York City resident income tax returns. Pendias v. 3 East 69th Street Associates, 119 A.D.2d 467, 500 N.Y.S.2d 679 (1st Dept. 1986).

¶ 32. The tenant is entitled to a renewal lease where the landlord failed to serve the tenant with a notice of non-renewal (in this case, on the ground of non-primary residence) within the period of 150 days to 120 days before the expiration of the lease. Crow v. 83rd Street Associates, 68 N.Y.2d 796, 506 N.Y.S.2d 858 (1986).

¶ 33. Nurses who sublease their apartments from non-profit hospitals (which in turn leased the apartments from the landlord) are not entitled to renewal leases under rent stabilization. Manocherian v. Lenox Hill Hospital, 654 N.Y.S.2d 339 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1997).

¶ 34. In Avon Bard Co. v. Aquarian Foundation, 260 A.D.2d 207, 688 N.Y.S.2d 514 (1st Dept. 1999), motion to dismiss appeal granted, 93 N.Y.2d 998, 695 N.Y.S.2d 743 (1999), a minister, who was the leader of a non-profit religious foundation, had resided in the subject apartment for many years. The court held that since the lease did not designate any particular individual who could occupy the apartment, the minister could not achieve rent stabilization protection for the apartment. The court said that since no individuals were named in the lease as occupants of the apartment, there were no assurances that the apartment would not be occupied at a future time by other members of the church. In other words, a court would not permit a corporate tenant to obtain occupancy of the apartment in perpetuity. The Avon court referred to the earlier case of Cale Dev. Co. v. Conciliation and Appeals Board, 94 A.D.2d 229, 463 N.Y.S.2d 814 (1st Dept. 1983), aff'd 61 N.Y.2d 976, 475 N.Y.S.2d 278 (1984) and stated the Cale rule as follows: an occupant of a corporate apartment has the right to continuous occupancy if and only if that individual is named in the lease.

¶ 35. In one case, where the tenant named in the lease was absent from the apartment, the court did not permit the tenant to use the occupancy of family members to meet the primary residence test. The court also pointed out that succession rights could not be transferred from one family member to another where there had been no contemporaneous occupancy. Berwick Land Corp. v. Mucelli, 249 A.D.2d 18, 671 N.Y.S.2d 44 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1998).

¶ 36. It is possible for a tenant to establish a primary residence in two non-adjacent units in the building. The court considers intent of the tenant, and the landlord's knowledge or acquiescence in such use. In one case, the landlord attempted to recover the second of two apartments, contending that the tenant had used it for storage rather than for residence. Where the tenant offered unrebutted proof that she had used both apartments on a regular basis for more than 40 years, and that many years ago the landlord had performed renovations to the second apartment, removing fixtures and changing the configuration in order to accommodate the tenant and her family, the court held that the tenant had shown an ongoing physical nexus to both apartments. Accordingly, the court dismissed a holdover proceeding based on non-primary residence. East 53 Co. v. Tarwid, N.Y.L.J., July 15, 1998, page 23, col. 1 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 37. A lodging house will be subject to rent stabilization. The Rent Stabilization Law does not contain any minimum requirement as to square footage. The court can consider the length of time that the occupant has lived at the premises, and whether the occupant has any other residence. In the instant case, the landlord had rented space to the occupant for a continuous period of two years, and the tenant had no other residence during that time. Although the landlord could have limited length of stay in same living area to less than one week at a time (Multiple Dwelling Law § 4(14) defines a lodging house as a multiple dwelling in which persons are housed for hire for a single night or for less than a week, or any part of which is let for any person for any term less than a week); that provision of the Multiple Dwelling Law is irrelevant since the actual length of continuous occupancy was considerably longer. Moreover, the landlord allowed the tenant to retain a key over an extended period, which enabled the tenant to exclude others from the designated space. The landlord here allowed the tenant to store personal possessions inside a locker within the enclosed confines. Gracecor Realty Co., Inc. v. Hargrove, 90 N.Y.2d 350, 660 N.Y.S.2d 704 (1997).

¶ 38. Horizontal multiple dwellings may be covered by rent stabilization where they share common ownership, management, operation and facilities so as to warrant treating the housing as an integral unit. Walljoy Realty Co. v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., Sept. 26, 1997, paget 30, col. 4 (App.Div. 1st Dept.).

¶ 39. In U.B.O. Realty Corp. v. Mollica, 175 Misc.2d 897, 673 N.Y.S.2d 507 (App.Term 1st Dept. 1997), aff'd 683 N.Y.S.2d 532 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1999), the premises were equipped with a loft bed, kitchen and bathroom when the tenant began occupancy. The tenant originally lived in the entire space for three years and then began to use front half for a copy shop business. Although the tenant signed series of commercial leases which limited use of premises for photocopy shop "and for no other purpose," that last phrase was deleted and the deletion was initialed in last lease. The court held that the landlord's acquiescence in the long-term use of mixed living/working space created rent stabilization status in favor of the tenant. Thus, a holdover proceeding which alleged commercial use, was dismissed.

¶ 40. In one non-primary residence case in which the tenant prevailed, the tenant had a cooperative apartment elsewhere in Manhattan, but adequately explained the need for a second apartment. Both the doorman and tenant's neighbors agreed that they frequently saw the tenant in the building. Although the tenant was having marital difficulties which caused him to obtain a separate residence, that fact alone did not divest the tenant of his primary residence. The testimony was that either the tenant or his wife slept at the apartment on almost any given night. Polymenopoulos v. Sadoff, N.Y.L.J., July 27, 1998, page 27, col. 6 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 41. The landlord prevailed in a non-primary residence case, where the tenant listed a Queens address on his motor vehicle registration, and the Queens apartment was considerably larger than the disputed apartment. The fact that the Manhattan apartment was smaller showed that it was most likely subject to only incidental use, the court said. Golden Blossom Realty, Inc. v. Chen, N.Y.L.J., Sept. 18, 1998, page 25, col. 2 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 42. In one primary residence case, a tenant owned a condominium in Florida and registered her car there and held a Florida driver's license. However, she voted in New York, paid New York City income taxes, had a New York driver's license, obtained medical care in New York and kept much of her clothes at the subject apartment. The court held that the tenant had a primary residence in New York. One factor was that although the tenant had obtained a Florida homestead exemption (an indication of Florida residence), she had withdrawn her claim for that exemption, which was an indication that she considered New York to be her primary residence. Four Winds Assocs. v. Rachlin, 248 A.D.2d 352, 669 N.Y.S.2d 650 (2d Dept. 1998).

¶ 43. In non-primary residence cases, courts give landlords fairly wide latitude in terms of discovery. However, in one case, a court held that a tenant was not entitled to discovery regarding the landlord's knowledge of the tenant's primary residence. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Durcekova, N.Y.L.J., Dec. 1, 1998, page 25, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 44. Apparently, where a building was under rent control by reason of the "J-51" program (Admin. Code § 11-243) and became decontrolled when the J-51 benefits expired, an apartment in the building will be rent stabilized until the first vacancy occurs. Thus, even though the building has less than six units, the apartment will be rent stabilized so long as the current tenant (who has been in occupancy since 1973) chooses to remain there. Sack v. DHCR, 250 A.D.2d 537, 673 N.Y.S.2d 420 (1st Dept. 1998), leave to appeal denied, 93 N.Y.2d 802, 687 N.Y.S.2d 626 (1999).

¶ 45. In one case, a lease provided that the apartment was to be used only for medical practice but the tenant actually used it as a residence. The court held that the apartment was not rent stabilized. The fact that the landlord mistakenly registered the premises as rent stabilized did not change the result, because coverage cannot be created by waiver or estoppel. Ruiz v. Chwatt Associates, 247 A.D.2d 308, 669 N.Y.S.2d 47 (1st Dept. 1998).

¶ 46. A landlord cannot lawfully compel a tenant to agree, as a condition of renting an apartment, that the apartment will not be used as a primary residence. Draper v. Georgia Properties, 94 N.Y.2d 809, 701 N.Y.S.2d 322 (1999).

¶ 47. The primary residence rule exists as a matter of public policy, and cannot be waived by agreement between the landlord and tenant. Rima 106 L.P. v. Alvarez & Clark, 690 N.Y.S.2d 40 (1st Dept. 1999).

¶ 48. It is possible for a tenant to use two non-contiguous apartments as a primary residence. In deciding the case, the court looks to the tenant's intent, as shown by the use of the apartments. Another factor is whether the owner knew of and acquiesced in the tenant's living arrangements. If a prior owner has found to have "waived" the tenant's non-primary residence by reason of its knowledge of and acquiescence in the tenant's activities, such waiver will be binding upon the subsequent owners. In one case, an artist who used one of the apartments ("5N") solely for residential purposes and the other apartment ("5S") partly for residential purposes and partly as an artist studio, was able to prevail in a primary residence proceeding. The landlord pointed out that the tenant had taken a business tax deduction for Apartment 5S. The court, however, said that although the deduction was questionable from the tax point of view, it did not destroy the tenant's primary residence. Moreover, although a substantial amount of space in Apartment 5S was devoted to art work and storage of art supplies, the apartment had some residential use. Specifically, although the tenant's bedroom was at Apartment 5N, Apartment 5S contained most of the tenant's clothes (he did not have sufficient room for them at 5N) and some exercise equipment. The court stated that even though each apartment was an incomplete residence in itself, they could be combined to constitute a single primary residence. 9554 NY Apt. Assocs. v. Hennessy, 184 Misc.2d 527, N.Y.L.J. 707 N.Y.S.2d 794 (Civ.Ct. New York Co. 2000).

¶ 49. Where the lease contains a clause in which both parties waive a jury trial in any proceeding brought by either party against the other (except for personal injury cases), the jury waiver will apply to a non-primary residence case brought by the landlord against the tenant. Stribula v. Quinn, N.Y.L.J., June 21, 2000, page 30, col. 4 (Civ.Ct. New York Co).

¶ 50. The statute states that buildings receiving the benefits of Admin. Code Secs. 26-243 and 26-244 remain stabilized until the first vacancy following the expiration of tax benefits, except that if the lease and renewal leases, of the tenant in occupancy at the time of expiration of benefits, provides notice, in at least 12 point type, that the apartment is subject to deregulation upon expiration of tax benefits and states the approximate date on which deregulation will occur, the apartment can be deregulated. In one case, however, the tenant took occupancy of the premises at a time when they were not subject to rent regulation at all, because the owner had not yet applied for tax benefits. Thus, the original lease did not give notice that the unit would become deregulated upon expiration of tax benefits, and the owner was, of course, not required to give such notice. However, even after the owner applied for tax benefits, the subsequent leases did not give the tenant notice that the apartment would become deregulated upon expiration of tax benefits. The court had to decide whether the apartment was now subject to deregulation, and answered the question in the negative. The landlord unsuccessfully argued that under the rules governing renewal leases, it could not lawfully insert the 12-point notice, because this would run afoul of rules prohibiting changes in the terms and conditions of the tenancy. The Rent Stabilization Code permits the owner to change the terms of a lease in order to comply with a specific law or regulation. The purpose of the "same terms and conditions" rule was to protect the tenants, the court said. The insertion of the notice actually provided more protection for the tenant, since the tenant was warned that the tax benefits would eventually expire and that the apartment would then become deregulated. Spaeda v. Bakirtjy, N.Y.L.J., Apr. 19, 2000, page 27, col. 6 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 51. A court refused to enforce an agreement between a landlord and tenant under which the landlord waived the right to object to the tenant's occupancy on the grounds of non-primary residence. A tenant who does not in fact maintain the apartment as a primary residence is not entitled to protection under the rent regulation laws. Rocky 116,

¶ 52. In one case, a tenant moved into the apartment in 1973. At that time, the apartment was under vacancy decontrol. It later came under rent stabilization by virtue of the Emergency Tenant Protection Act of 1974. In 1999, the owner served a notice of intention not to renew the lease on the ground that the landlord sought the apartment for use by himself or by a member of his immediate family. The tenant contended that because he had occupied the apartment for twenty years or more, he could not be evicted on the grounds of owner occupancy. The landlord sought to invoke the Rent Stabilization Code, which does not prohibit the eviction on owner occupancy grounds of tenants who have been on the premises for twenty years. The tenant, on the other hand, sought to invoke the Emergency Tenant Protection Regulations, which did contain a twenty-year rule. The court held that in this case, the Rent Stabilization Code and Tenant Protection Regulations could both be applicable to the tenancy, and that the tenant could properly invoke the twenty year rule contained in the Emergency Tenant Regulations. Thus, the tenant obtained the additional protection and avoided the owner occupancy eviction. Rosenfeld v. Hall, N.Y.L.J., Aug. 16, 2000, page 23, col. 3 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 53. A landlord presented a tenant with a notice of intention not to renew the lease, claiming that the tenant did not occupy the apartment as a primary residence. In response, the tenant complained to DHCR about the landlord's failure to offer a renewal lease. DHCR then issued an order giving the landlord 30 days to commence a non-primary residence proceeding in court, and providing that if the proceeding was not commenced within this period of time, the landlord was required to offer the tenant a renewal lease. When the landlord later brought a non-primary residence in court, the tenant sought dismissal on the ground that the proceeding had been brought past the 30-day deadline imposed by DHCR. The court, however, held that since the statute provides that questions of primary residence are to be decided by a court of competent jurisdiction, DHCR had no jurisdiction to issue orders relating to primary residence questions. Thus, so long as the landlord otherwise complied with procedures governing non-primary residence, the failure to meet DHCR's 30-day deadline did not require dismissal of the non-primary residence proceeding. Central Living LLC v. Payton, N.Y.L.J., Mar. 21, 2001, page 19, col. 3 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 54. A landlord brought a holdover proceeding to acquire possession of an apartment on the ground that he needed the apartment for a member of his family. Under Rent Stabilization Code Sec. 2524.4(a)(2), where a tenant or the spouse of a tenant is disabled, the owner must, in order to recover possession, offer the tenant an equivalent or superior housing accommodation to the unit being recovered. A court has held where the tenant's gay life partner is suffering from a disabling disease (in this case, amyotrohic lateral sclerosis, or Lou Gehrig Disease), the gay life partner is the equivalent of a "spouse," so that the landlord cannot evict the tenant and his partner without offering substitute accommodations. Knafo v. Ching, N.Y.L.J., Dec. 6, 2000, page 28, col. 2 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 55. LL cannot contract away right to claim non-primary residence. Tenants who retain rent stabilized apts even though live elsewhere are not within the class of people that RS laws were designed to protect. Park Towers Co. v. Universal Attractions, 274 A.D.2d 312, 710 N.Y.S.2d 571 (1st Dept. 2000).

¶ 56. A landlord prevailed in a primary residence proceeding by virtue of evidence obtained through a video surveillance camera which had been installed opposite the entry door of the tenant's apartment. The tapes showed that the tenant visited the apartment only sporadically, and stayed overnight only seven times in a fifteen month period. Moreover, for much of that time, the apartment was occupied by another person. In addition, the evidence showed that the tenant spent large amounts of time with her parents in Florida, where she worked as a musician, and that when she was in New York, she often stayed with a friend and had luggage and dry cleaning delivered to her friend's address. Emel Realty v. Carey, aff'd 288 A.D.2d 163, 733 N.Y.S.2d 188 (1st Dept. 2001).

¶ 57. A lease clause under which the landlord waives the right to claim that the tenant does not maintain the apartment as a primary residence, is legally unenforceable. The rationale is that tenants who retain rent stabilized apartments even though they live elsewhere are not within the class of people that the rent stabilization laws were designed to protect. Park Towers Co. v. Universal Attractions, 274 A.D.2d 312, 710 N.Y.S.2d 571 (1st Dept. 2000). See also, Rima 106 L.P. v. Alvarez, 257 A.D.2d 201, 690 N.Y.S.2d 40 (1st Dept. 1999).

¶ 58. Apparently, the tenant's failure to produce income tax returns in a primary residence case may result in a negative inference that the tax returns would have shown an address other than the subject's apartment. See e.g., 89 East 3rd Street Tenants Assn v. Lamotta, 2001 WL 1682424 (App.Term 1st Dept.). On the other hand, it is still the law that the filing of an income tax return listing the subject apartment as the address is not an absolute prerequisite to a finding of primary residence. The tenant may prevail if the other factor (e.g. voter registration and utility bills) support the tenant's claim of primary residence. 812 Realty v. Otero, 2001 WL 1470305 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 59. In one case, the court had to decide whether the tenant, who occupied a second floor loft unit, also utilized the third floor as his primary residence. The tenant unlawfully subleased the self-contained third floor space to a friend/business associate for several years without the landlord's prior written consent. The tenant resided in the second floor unit, from which he and his friend also conducted a real estate business. The loft units were divided by an interior circular stairway and hatch door installed by the tenant. Each unit had a separate entrance, kitchen, bathroom, and electric metering. Moreover, each unit had a separate lease. Furthermore, the friend's driver's license listed only the third floor unit as his residence. Under these facts, the court held that the tenant and his friend were not roommates of the third floor unit, and that the tenant did not maintain the third floor unit as a primary residence. Florencia Properties NV, Inc. v. Wertheim, 2002 WL 221073 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 60. Where a lease to a corporate tenant does not name the individual who is to occupy the apartment, the corporation is not deemed to hold the apartment as a primary residence. 501 East 87th Street Realty Co. LLC v. Ole Pa Enterprises, N.Y.L.J., May 22, 2002, page 19, col. 2 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.); Herald Towers v. Jeet International, N.Y.L.J., Jan 24, 2002, page 19, col. 4 (App.Term 1st Dept.). Moreover, a person who subleases the apartment from the corporation fares no better than the corporation would have fared, and will not prevail in a primary residence proceeding. See 501 East 87th Street, supra.

¶ 61. In one case involving a "snowbird" tenant (the word "snowbird" appears in the opinion), the tenant prevailed in a primary residence proceeding where she voted in New York, kept many of her possessions in the apartment, even though she did not file New York City income taxes and obtained a Florida homestead exemption. Glenbriar Co. v. Lipsman, N.Y.L.J., May 5, 2002, page 21, col. 4 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 62. A tenant who spent considerable time in Michigan to care for his ailing mother (who is now deceased) did not lose his primary residence in the Manhattan apartment. The court noted that the tenant visited New York frequently, maintained a bank account in New York, maintained furnishings in the apartment, and voted in New York by means of an absentee ballot. Kalimian v. Holmberg, N.Y.L.J., Sept. 20, 2001, page 19, col. 5 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 63. The pendency of a holdover proceeding based upon an unlawful sublease, is not a bar to the commencement of a non-primary residence proceeding. Pagano v. Cohen, N.Y.L.J., Nov. 29, 2001, page 23, col. 4 (App.Term 2d & 11th Judic. Dists.).

¶ 64. A tenant successfully defended a non-primary residence proceeding even though she had spent considerable time at her (now estranged) husband's home in England. The tenant had listed the apartment on important documents such as drivers' licenses, credit card statements and voter registrations. The Civil Court was justified in finding that the couple maintained separate primary residences, particularly because the tenant visited the English residence with only a single suitcase, and kept all her furniture and personal belongings in and regularly returned to the subject's apartment. W.S.L.D.J. & I. Weinreb v. Martin, N.Y.L.J., Nov. 20, 2002, page 21, col. 1 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 65. An application for recovery of a unit for personal use must be made on good faith. This requires a showing that the owner or a member of the immediate family has an actual intent to take occupancy of the unit. In one case, where a tenant successfully defended an owner occupancy, the court cited the landlord's misrepresentations to the court regarding the nature of his current living space, the landlord's prior unsuccessful owner occupancy proceedings against other tenants (an administrative agency had found that the landlord was not in good faith), the landlord's prior unsuccessful attempt to remove this tenant based on a frivolous claim that the apartment was not rent regulated, and the long history of animosity between the landlord and the tenant. Garner v. Berger, N.Y.L.J., July 15, 2002, page 20, col. 3 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 66. In order for the landlord to acquire the a loft unit for his own use or the use of an immediate family member, the proposed occupant must be one who would legally be permitted to occupy the apartment. Thus, if the zoning regulations on lofts permit residential use only by certified artists, and the landlord's brother and nephew (the proposed occupants) are not certified artists, the landlord may not maintain the owner occupancy proceeding. Schwartz v. Seidman Oct. 1, 2003, at 18, col. 1 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 67. In one owner occupancy case, the tenants prevailed because the landlord was unable to demonstrate a good faith need for the apartment. The landlord had claimed that he needed the subject apartment in order to provide room for his elderly parents. The landlord's claim failed for several reasons. First, the parents already had an apartment in the building, about the same size as that of the tenant. Second, the landlord's claim that a second bedroom was required to provide for a "live in" caretaker for the parents was negated by evidence that a back room in the parents' own apartment-of the same or larger dimension-was equally adaptable or suitable for that purpose. Third, given the physical configuration of the tenants' apartment, with its network of interior steps separating the various rooms, and the nature of the parents' disabilities, the court found that it would not have made sense to relocate the parents to the tenants' space. Raffo v. McIntosh, 2004 WL 906582 (Apr.12, 2004) (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 68. In one case, the tenant and her family of ten were forced to vacate the subject apartment due to a fire. After spending some months in a shelter, the tenants resolved the situation, at least temporarily, by purchasing a one-family home in the area under U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) guidelines. Approval of her mortgage was contingent upon her occupying the premises as her primary residence for at least one year. During that year period, the landlord of the subject apartment brought a holdover proceeding against her, claiming that the tenant no longer occupied the apartment as a primary residence. The tenant maintained that her intention was to return to the apartment once it was habitable. The court dismissed the holdover proceeding as premature. The fact of tenant's temporary relocation to another dwelling place, and the tenant's purchase of a house under conditions requiring primary residence there for a limited period, do not in themselves require a finding of primary residence. Since the subject apartment had not yet been restored to a habitable condition, the court dismissed held that the commencement of a summary holdover proceeding was premature. Corona Apts. v. Benitez, 1 Misc.3d 79, 769 N.Y.S.2d 349 (App.Term 2d & 11th Judic. Dists. 2003)

¶ 69. The fact that an apartment was rent regulated by reason of the "J-51" program (now contained in Admin. Code §11-243) does not preclude the landlord from commencing an owner occupancy proceeding. Ellis v. Epstein, N.Y.L.J., July 17, 2003, at 18, col. 1 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 70. The so-called snowbirds, who travel to Florida (or other states with warm climates) for the coldest months of the year, have, in some cases, been successful in defeating primary residence proceedings, so long as they retain a substantial nexus with the City and with the subject apartment. In one case, the court considered the following factors in the tenants' favor: (1) the tenants have resided at the subject apartment since 1959; (2) the tenants have never subleased; (3) all year long, the apartment contains important personal items such as clothing, china and photograph albums; (4) the wife uses the apartment as her address for purposes of receiving Social Security benefits; the couple has several bank accounts in New York; (5) the couple uses the subject apartment for voting purposes. Thus, even though the couple spends six months a year in Florida due to the husband's health problems, and even though the couple filed tax returns from Florida, and even though they had a telephone and cable television service only in Florida, they were found to have maintained the apartment as a primary residence. The court considered the total history of the occupancy, and stated that a finding of non-primary residence would have had a devastating effect upon the tenants and members of their family. Glenbriar Co. v. Lipsman, 11 A.D.3d 352, 783 N.Y.S.2d 546 (1st Dept. 2004).

In another case in which the tenant prevailed, the fact that the tenant spent considerable time in Florida caring for his ailing mother did not cause the tenant to lose the primary residence in the New York apartment. The tenant had no ownership interest in his mother's Florida apartment, and slept on a sofa bed in the living room during his stays there.

On the other hand, in 85th St. Columbus Corp. v. Furmansky, 7-21-04, page 18, col. 1 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.), the landlord prevailed. The tenant spent most of the year, and not just the winter months, in Florida. Moreover, the tenant's claim that he was present in Florida to assist his ailing mother was not credible, where the tenant's Florida residence was about 25 miles from his mother's home in Florida, the mother lived in a community that has a physician on site, and the tenant was vague as to what he did to assist his mother.

¶ 71. In an owner occupancy case, the tenant prevailed, where the applicable only persons who could lawfully occupy the premises no go because landlord was not certified artist and occupancy would be illegal. Kamen v. Buchanan, 5 Misc.3d 252, 783 N.Y.S.2d 252 (Civ.Ct. New York Co. 2004).

¶ 72. In Croman v. Leighton, N.Y.L.J., 7-21-04, page 18, col. 3 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.). A landlord sent a notice of intention not to renew the lease, in order to acquire the premises for his own use. The tenant responded that he is a senior citizen. Once the landlord is aware of senior citizen status, the landlord has an obligation to offer the tenant alternative housing before the litigation is commenced. The landlord must plead and prove that such alternative housing was offered. The landlord cannot belatedly, during the litigation, offer alternative housing. Thus, the tenant was able to retain the apartment, at least until the next lease expired.

¶ 73. An occupant who has never been a named tenant can, under certain circumstances, qualify as a "tenant" for purposes of the primary residence rule. The occupant showed, by the tenant's unrebutted testimony, that a prior owner or managing agent affirmatively recognized the occupant as the tenant about ten years before the time of trial. Moreover, the court found that the continued use of the name of the tenant of record was for the administrative convenience of the prior landlord, and that the landlord knew that the named tenant was moving out of the premises and that the occupant would remain. Johny v. Tolbert, 2005 WL 1592939 (App.Term 2d & 11th Judicial Dists.).

¶ 74. Where a tenant's own mental and substance abuse problems caused him to develop a dislike for the apartment and to live outside the apartment as a de facto homeless person (he even filed an application for public housing claiming that he was homeless), the court held that the tenant ceased to maintain the apartment as a primary residence. So long as the landlord proved that the tenant did not maintain the subject apartment as a primary residence, it was not necessary for the landlord to prove that the tenant lived at any other particular residence. Toa Construction v. Tsitseres, 9 Misc.3d 469, 798 N.Y.S.2d 674 (Civ.Ct. New York Co. 2005).

¶ 75. A tenant prevailed in a primary residence case even though certain tax-related documents showed an upstate residence as being the tenant's home. The New York state tax returns, even though they contained an upstate address for the tenant, also indicated that the tenant was a full-year resident of New York City and paid New York City income tax on all of her income. 310 East 23rd LLC v. Colvin, 41 A.D.3d 149, 837 N.Y.S.2d 134 (1st Dept. 2007).

¶ 76. In one primary residence case, the landlord prevailed. The subject apartment, in Greenwich Village, was only 450 square feet. The tenant moved in when she was single. She later married and had a son. The tenant's husband worked for Metropolitan Life and obtained an apartment in Stuyvesant Town through a Met Life executive (Met Life owned Stuyvesant Town at that time). The husband wrote a letter to the Met life executive thanking him for his efforts, and said that he had gone to Stuyvesant Town to obtain a better quality of life. The letter also said that his prior living in a small Village apartment with a two-year-old son was "very interesting." More than 10 years later, when confronted by the landlord, the wife claimed that her primary residence was at the Village apartment even though her husband and son lived in Stuyvesant Town. The husband and wife claimed that they had been separate and apart due to marital problems, but there was no separation agreement or divorce action. The wife admitted that she had often stayed at the Stuyvesant Town apartment to be with her son, or during periods of "reconciliation" with her husband. The court did not accept the wife's depiction of a "rocky relationship." Husband and wife had a joint account in which both their paychecks were deposited. The husband paid all the couple's bills, including rent and utilities for both apartments. Moreover, credit card bills for both parties were mailed to the husband at the Stuyvesant Town address. Furthermore, the utility bills for the Village apartment were negligible. Finally, the court noted that the tenant had failed to call her son as a witness (he was now 15 years old) as to where he resided, and made an adverse inference against the tenant. Carmine, Ltd. v. Gordon, 41 A.D.3d 196, 837 N.Y.S.2d 146 (1st Dept. 2007).

¶ 77. Rent stabilization coverage is a matter of statute, and the parties cannot, by agreement, create rent stabilization coverage where no coverage exists. Thus, a stipulation entered into between landlord and tenant to treat the apartment as rent stabilized does not confer protection under the Rent Stabilization Laws for accommodations occupied as a cooperative corporation or occupied for charitable purposes. The stipulation is enforceable only to the extent that it sets the rental amount and only for the duration of any lease signed by the parties. 546 West 156th St. HDFC v. Smalls, 43 A.D.3d 7, 839 N.Y.S.2d 62 (1st Dept. 2007).

¶ 78. A British citizen who is in the United States on a B-2 tourist visa must maintain a permanent residence in the United Kingdom and cannot possibly use an apartment as a primary residence. Katz Park Avenue Corp. v. Jagger, 46 AD2d 186, 843 N.Y.S.2d 329 (1st Dept. 2007)(point of interest-tenant is the former wife of rocker Mick Jagger of the Rolling Stones).

¶ 79. A tenant cannot "cure" non-primary residency, by belatedly establishing residence in the apartment and paying New York City Income Tax, after the landlord's service upon him or her of a notice of renewal on the ground of non-primary residency. 1234 Broadway, LLC v. Jing Wu Chen, 2008 NY Slip Op. 51249U, 2008 N.Y. Misc. Lexis 3562 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 80. Although the owner occupancy law permits only one owner to recover possession of the apartment for his or her own use, a petition which recites more than one owner seeking possession may be amended to allege a single owner seeking possession. Lu v. Alian, 2008 N.Y. Misc. Lexis 4005, 239 N.Y.L.J. 122 (Sup.Ct. Kings Co.).

¶ 81. An owner occupancy proceeding was brought by a purported owner who held an unrecorded deed (she was involved in a divorce proceeding, and for some reason, her accountant or attorney advised her not to record the deed). Moreover, although petitioner claimed that she intended to move from a house in Tuxedo, New York to the subject apartment in Brooklyn, she had made no effort to sell the Tuxedo house. As a result, the court held that she had not established the good faith required to maintain an owner occupancy proceeding. Accordingly, the owner occupancy proceeding was dismissed. Nealis v. Szpilowski, 2008 N.Y. Slip Op. 51311U, 2008 N.Y. Misc. Lexis 3844 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

¶ 82. In Norfolk Development LLC v. Kee, 23 Misc.3d 136(A), 2009 WL 1212273 (App.Term 1st Dept.), a primary residence case, the Appellate Term reversed an order granting summary judgment to the tenant, and found that there were triable issues of fact. The evidence showed that the tenant spent at least three days a week at another apartment (where her then boy friend resided), maintained a "study space" or studio at the other apartment and at times received her mail and kept her dog there. Furthermore, the tenant allowed a friend to stay at the subject apartment at least occasionally.

§ 26-504.1 Exclusion of accommodations of high income renters.

Upon the issuance of an order by the division, "housing accommodations" shall not include housing accommodations which: (1) are occupied by persons who have a total annual income in excess of one hundred seventy-five thousand dollars per annum for each of the two preceding calendar years, as defined in and subject to the limitations and process set forth in section 26-504.3 of this chapter; and (2) have a legal regulated rent of two thousand dollars or more per month. Provided, however, that this exclusion shall not apply to housing accommodations which became or become subject to this law (a) by virtue of receiving tax benefits pursuant to section four hundred twenty-one-a or four hundred eighty-nine of the real property tax law, except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (i) of paragraph (f) of subdivision two of section four hundred twenty-one-a of the real property tax law, or (b) by virtue of article seven-C of the multiple dwelling law.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Classic Residences v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 212 A.D.2d 418, 622

N.Y.S.2d 693 (1st Dept. 1995). A widowed tenant who was uncertain whether the income of her recently deceased husband's estate should be included in her income as tenant, was permitted to submit a corrected form. Since the corrected form did not concede that the tenant's income was in excess of the threshold amount for an administrative order of deregulation, DHCR was not required to issue an order of deregulation, or do so within the statutory 30 days for uncontested certifications, and was therefore not subject to mandamus to compel issuance of a deregulation order.

¶ 2. Where a formerly rent controlled apartment comes under rent stabilization but the intial legal regulated rent under rent stabilization is over $2,000 per month, the apartment will be deregulated. Central Park South Associates v. Haynes, 654 N.Y.S.2d 967 (Civ.Ct. New York Co. 1996).

¶ 3. See Katz 737 Corp. v. Bernstein, N.Y.L.J., May 18, 2001, page 18, col. 2 (App.Term 1st Dept.), reported under Administrative Code § 26-504.3.

¶ 4. Tribeca M. Corp. v. Haller, N.Y.L.J., Sept. 17, 2003, at 20, col. 3 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.). The landlord sought luxury deregulation of several units whose rents were over $2,000 per month. For an apartment to be deregulated, the tenant must have moved into a previously regulated and now vacant unit (after July 7, 1993) and must have been paying legal regulated rent of $2,000 or more. The three tenants moved in after that date and were each paying rents over $2,000 per month. However, since none of the apartments were ever registered with DHCR, the court held that there were no legal regulated rents. Thus, there could be no vacancy deregulation.

¶ 5. In a luxury, decontrol proceeding, the landlord sought to obtain the tenant's social security number. However, the court held that, since the tax law prohibits the use of tax information for non-tax purposes, the landlord cannot obtain the tenant's social security number. Meyerson v. Prime Realty Services, LLC, 2005 WL 497266 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 6. The operative date for considering whose income will be included when determining the total annual income is the date when the income certification form is served on the tenant. Thus, even if the tenant's husband did not reside in the apartment during the two years prior to the service of the income certification form, the husband's income is includible where he did reside in the apartment as of the time of service of the form. In re Doyle v. Calogero 2008 NY Slip Op. 5013, 2008 NY App. Div. Lexis 4860, 859 N.Y.S.2d 178 (App. Div. 1st Dept.).

¶ 7. Where a landlord chooses to take advantage of the J-51 tax abatement program (Admin. Code §11-243, all rent stabilized apartments in the building are exempt from luxury decontrol. The landlord unsuccessfully argued that the exemption from luxury decontrol applied only to those apartments which became stabilized solely by reason of the landlord's participation in the J-51 plan. Roberts v. Tishman Speyer Properties, 62 A.D.3d 71, 874 N.Y.S.2d 97 (1st Dept. 2009).

§ 26-504.2 Exclusion of high rent accommodations.

a. "Housing accommodations" shall not include any housing accommodation which becomes vacant on or after April first, nineteen hundred ninety-seven and where at the time the tenant vacated such housing accommodation the legal regulated rent was two thousand dollars or more per month, or any housing accommodation which is or becomes vacant on or after the effective date of the rent regulation reform act of 1997 with a legal regulated rent of two thousand dollars or more per month. This exclusion shall apply regardless of whether the next tenant in occupancy or any subsequent tenant in occupancy actually is charged or pays less than two thousand dollars a month. Provided however, that this exclusion shall not apply to housing accommodations which became or become subject to this law (a) by virtue of receiving tax benefits pursuant to section four hundred twenty-one-a or four hundred eighty-nine of the real property tax law, except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (i) of paragraph (f) of subdivision two of section four hundred twenty-one-a of the real property tax law, or (b) by virtue of article seven-C of the multiple dwelling law. This section shall not apply, however, to or become effective with respect to housing accommodations which the commissioner determines or finds that the landlord or any person acting on his or her behalf, with intent to cause the tenant to vacate, engaged in any course of conduct (including, but not limited to, interruption or discontinuance of required services) which interfered with or disturbed or was intended to interfere with or disturb the comfort, repose, peace or quiet of the tenant in his or her use or occupancy of the housing accommodations and in connection with such course of conduct, any other general enforcement provision of this law shall also apply.

b. The owner of any housing accommodation that is not subject to this law pursuant to the provisions of subdivision a of this section or subparagraph k of paragraph 2 of subdivision e of section 26-403 of this code shall give written notice certified by such owner to the first tenant of that housing accommodation after such housing accommodation becomes exempt from the provisions of this law or the city rent and rehabilitation law. Such notice shall contain the last regulated rent, the reason that such housing accommodation is not subject to this law or the city rent and rehabilitation law, a calculation of how either the rental amount charged when there is no lease or the rental amount provided for in the lease has been derived so as to reach two thousand dollars or more per month, a statement that the last legal regulated rent or the maximum rent may be verified by the tenant by contacting the state division of housing and community renewal, or any successor thereto, and the address and telephone number of such agency, or any successor thereto. Such notice shall be sent by certified mail within thirty days after the tenancy commences or after the signing of the lease by both parties, whichever occurs first or shall be delivered to the tenant at the signing of the lease. In addition, the owner shall send and certify to the tenant a copy of the registration statement for such housing accommodation filed with the state division of housing and community renewal indicating that such housing accommodation became exempt from the provisions of this law or the city rent and rehabilitation law, which form shall include the last regulated rent, and shall be sent to the tenant within thirty days after the tenancy commences or the filing of such registration, whichever occurs later.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. A hotel unit becomes deregulated where there has been no permanent tenant of the unit for four years prior to the present tenant's filing of a rent overcharge, and the last rent paid by the prior occupant was more than $2000 per month. Martha Washington Hotel v. Prince, N.Y.L.J., May 5, 1999, page 29, col. 6 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 2. If the "first rent," i.e. the legal regulated rent, for the first rent stabilized tenant is $2,000 or more, that tenant is still protected by rent stabilization. Assuming that the tenant does not reach the $175,000 income threshold, the apartment will continue to be stabilized until he or she vacates the apartment. A landlord unsuccessfully argued that under the words of the statute, an apartment was not covered by rent stabilization where the "legal regulated rent" was more than $2,000. The court interpreted the phrase "legal regulated rent" to mean an apartment already covered by stabilization when the tenant moved in. Thus, since the prior tenant (who had been under rent control) had a rent far less than $2,000 per month, the new tenant was entitled to rent stabilization protection. 111 on 11 Realty Corp. v. Norton, 189 Misc.2d 389 (Civ.Ct. Kings Co. 2001).

Administrative Code of the City of New York

Title 26 Housing and Building

CHAPTER 4 RENT STABILIZATION

§ 26-504.3 High income rent decontrol.

(a) For purposes of this section, annual income shall mean the federal adjusted gross income as reported on the New York state income tax return. Total annual income means the sum of the annual incomes of all persons whose names are recited as the tenant or co-tenant on a lease who occupy the housing accommodation and all other persons that occupy the housing accommodation as their primary residence on other than a temporary basis, excluding bona fide employees of such occupants residing therein in connection with such employment and excluding bona fide subtenants in occupancy pursuant to the provisions of section two hundred twenty-six-b of the real property law. In the case where a housing accommodation is sublet, the annual income of the tenant or co-tenant recited on the lease who will reoccupy the housing accommodation upon the expiration of the sublease shall be considered.

(b) On or before the first day of May in each calendar year, the owner of each housing accommodation for which the legal regulated rent is two thousand dollars or more per month may provide the tenant or tenants residing therein with an income certification form prepared by the division of housing and community renewal on which such tenant or tenants shall identify all persons referred to in subdivision (a) of this section and shall certify whether the total annual income is in excess of one hundred seventy-five thousand dollars in each of the two preceding calendar years. Such income certification form shall state that the income level certified to by the tenant may be subject to verification by the department of taxation and finance pursuant to section one hundred seventy-one-b of the tax law and shall not require disclosure of any income information other than whether the aforementioned threshold has been exceeded. Such income certification form shall clearly state that: (i) only tenants residing in housing accommodations which have a legal regulated rent of two thousand dollars or more per month are required to complete the certification form; (ii) that tenants have protections available to them which are designed to prevent harassment; (iii) that tenants are not required to provide any information regarding their income except that which is requested on the form and may contain such other information the division deems appropriate. The tenant or tenants shall return the completed certification to the owner within thirty days after service upon the tenant or tenants. In the event that the total annual income as certified is in excess of one hundred seventy-five thousand dollars in each such year, the owner may file the certification with the state division of housing and community renewal on or before June thirtieth of such year. Upon filing such certification with the division, the division shall, within thirty days after the filing, issue an order providing that such housing accommodation shall not be subject to the provisions of this act upon the expiration of the existing lease. A copy of such order shall be mailed by regular and certified mail, return receipt requested, to the tenant or tenants and a copy thereof shall be mailed to the owner.

(c) 1. In the event that the tenant or tenants either fail to return the completed certification to the owner on or before the date required by subdivision (b) of this section or the owner disputes the certification returned by the tenant or tenants, the owner may, on or before June thirtieth of such year, petition the state division of housing and community renewal to verify, pursuant to section one hundred seventy-one-b of the tax law, whether the total annual income exceeds one hundred seventy-five thousand dollars in each of the two preceding calendar years. Within twenty days after the filing of such request with the division, the division shall notify the tenant or tenants named on the lease that such tenant or tenants must provide the division with such information as the division and the department of taxation and finance shall require to verify whether the total annual income exceeds one hundred seventy-five thousand dollars in each such year. The division's notification shall require the tenant or tenants to provide the information to the division within sixty days of service upon such tenant or tenants and shall include a warning in bold faced type that failure to respond will result in an order being issued by the division providing that such housing accommodation shall not be subject to the provisions of this law.

2. If the department of taxation and finance determines that the total annual income is in excess of one hundred seventy-five thousand dollars in each of the two preceding calendar years, the division shall, on or before November fifteenth of such year, notify the owner and tenants of the results of such verification. Both the owner and the tenants shall have thirty days within which to comment on such verification results. Within forty-five days after the expiration of the comment period, the division shall, where appropriate, issue an order providing that such housing accommodation shall not be subject to the provisions of this law upon the expiration of the existing lease. A copy of such order shall be mailed by regular and certified mail, return receipt requested, to the tenant or tenants and a copy thereof shall be sent to the owner.

3. In the event the tenant or tenants fail to provide the information required pursuant to paragraph one of this subdivision, the division shall issue, on or before December first of such year, an order providing that such housing accommodation shall not be subject to the provisions of this law upon the expiration of the current lease. A copy of such order shall be mailed by regular and certified mail, return receipt requested, to the tenant or tenants and a copy thereof shall be sent to the owner.

4. The provisions of the state freedom of information act shall not apply to any income information obtained by the division pursuant to this section.

(d) This section shall apply only to section 26-504.1 of this code.

(e) Upon receipt of such order of decontrol pursuant to this section, an owner shall offer the housing accommodation subject to such order to the tenant at a rent not in excess of the market rent, which for the purposes of this section means a rent obtainable in an arm's length transaction. Such rental offer shall be made by the owner in writing to the tenant by certified and regular mail and shall inform the tenant that such offer must be accepted in writing within ten days of receipt. The tenant shall respond within ten days after receipt of such offer. If the tenant declines the offer or fails to respond within such period, the owner may commence an action or proceeding for the eviction of such tenant.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. The court rejected a constitutional challenge to the statute. The the $250,000 income threshold set forth in the law is based on the federal adjusted gross income. Petitioner contended that the law improperly favored persons who had income from such items as tax free municipal bonds, which are not includible in federal adjusted gross income, whereas persons with other types of income were not entitled to the same exclusion. The court, however, held that the statute had a rational basis and was not arbitrary. Leepson v. Holland, N.Y.L.J., Dec. 18, 1996, page 26, col. 6 (Sup. Ct. New York Co).

¶ 2. A stipulation of settlement which gives the tenant rights under rent stabilization does not create a life estate in the premises. The right to rent stabilized renewal leases is not absolute, and the landlord can still seek high income vacancy deregulation of the apartment. Blum v. Graceton Estates, 228 A.D.2d 274, 644 N.Y.S.2d 35 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1996).

¶ 3. Where a tenant fails to respond to the landlord's petition for high income deregulation of the apartment within the statutory 60 day period, the court can nevertheless excuse the tenant's default and direct the rent agency to determine, on the merits, the question of whether the tenant's income meets the threshold for deregulation. Matter of Elkin v. Roldan, N.Y.L.J., Sept. 12, 1997, page 26, col. 4 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.). See also Dinnerstein v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, Sup.Ct. New York Co., Justice Parness, 114671-96.

¶ 4. If a tenant sends the required forms to his attorney within the 60 days specified in the statute, but the attorney neglects to send the documents to DHCR before the deadline, the tenant will face deregulation of the apartment, and his remedy is a malpractice action against the attorney who made the mistake. Helman v. DHCR., N.Y.L.J., Mar. 24, 1999, page 27, col. 5 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 5. The courts originally appeared to be strict in enforcing the 60 day deadline for presenting the required income information to DHCR. In recent cases, however, the courts have saved some tenants from deregulation of their apartments even though they were somewhat late in sending back the required information. Where a tenant fails to respond at all to DHCR's notice, and DHCR issues an order deregulating the apartment before the tenant has taken any action, then the apartment will be deregulated. Sudarsky v. DHCR, 685 N.Y.S.2d 704 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1999); Pledge v. DHCR, 683 N.Y.S.2d 76 (1st Dept. 1999); Londin v. DHCR, 687 N.Y.S.2d 111 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1999); Nick v. DHCR, 244 A.D.2d 299, 664 N.Y.S.2d 777 (1st Dept. 1997), Dowling v. Holland, 666 N.Y.S.2d 585 (1st Dept. 1997) and Barbaz v. DHCR 246 A.D.2d 388, 667 N.Y.S.2d 720 (1st Dept. 1998). However, in Elkin v. Roldan, 688 N.Y.S.2d 61 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1999), where the tenant sent back form only 10 days late, and DHCR did not come up with order of deregulation until ten months later, and the tenant in fact had income below the threshold level, the court held that the tenant's default was excusable, and his response was deemed to be timely. See Seymour v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., May 13, 1999, page 27, col. 5 (App.Div. 1st Dept.), which is in accord with Elkin. In Shapiro v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., June 7, 1999, page 26, col. 2 (App.Div. 1st Dept.), where the tenant issued timely responses in connection with the landlord's first year proceeding, but during the second year allegedly missed the mailing deadline on the form by three days, the court found for the tenant and directed DHCR to dispose of the case based on actual verification of income.

¶ 6. Where DHCR income certification forms stated that service of forms by ordinary mail was permitted. When the agency declared an apartment to be deregulated by reason of the tenant's failure to return the form within the statutory 60 day period, the tenant brought an Article 78 proceeding. The court found for the tenant, holding that it was unreasonable for the agency to belatedly impose a requirement that the tenant submit documentary proof of mailing such as a Post Office certificate of mailing of certified mail. Thus, the agency had to give fair consideration to the tenant's affidavit, which indicated that the form had been filed on a timely basis. Alshooler v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, N.Y.L.J., Nov. 12, 1998, page 26, col. 2 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 7. The deregulation law applies where two units were combined to form one integrated unit and the occupants of that unit had an aggregate monthly rental in excess of the threshold amount. Since petitioners failed to timely submit a proper verification statement of their total adjusted gross income for the subject period, DHCR was mandated to isse the deregulation order. This practice does not violate due process or equal protection. It was not a due process violation because there was notice and a reasonable opportunity to be heard. Moreover, there was no violation of equal protection because the Code provision was reasonably related to the legislative scheme underlying rent regulation. Nick v. DHCR, 244 A.D.2d 299, 664 N.Y.S.2d 777 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1997).

¶ 8. The high income deregulation provisions appear to have a major loophole. It has been held that the law will not apply to corporate tenants. Thus, even if a corporation owned by a tenant (rather than the tenant individually) makes more than the threshold amount, the individual tenant cannot be evicted. Nestor v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., Jan. 15, 1998, at 28, col. 6 (Sny, Mc Mahon), aff'd N.Y.L.J., Jan. 11, 1999, page 28, col. 2 (App.Div. 1st Dept.), aff'd 257 A.D.2d 395, 683 N.Y.S.2d 74, motion for leave to appeal denied, 93 N.Y.2d 982, 695 N.Y.S.2d 740 (1999). Apparently, even if an individual uses a corporation as his alter ego, the income cannot be considered for purposes of the regulation law.

¶ 9. In one case, a tenant responded in a timely manner to the landlord's demand for income figures by filling out an income certification form. DHCR then sent a notice for income verification, informing the tenant that a response was due within 60 days. The court held that where the tenant was 11 days late in responding to the DHCR notice but served the response before DHCR issued a decision deregulating the apartment, and the landlord did not suffer any prejudice by reason of the delay, the tenant was entitled to retain the rent stabilized apartment. In other words, if the tenant never responds at all to the DHCR notice before DHCR deregulates the apartment, DHCR's order of deregulation will be sustained, but if the tenant is slightly late but acts before DHCR deregulates the apartment, the tenant will not lose rent stabilization status. Dworman v. DHCR, 99 Westlaw 276234 (App.Div. 1st Dept.).

¶ 10. In several cases, the courts had to deal with situations in which the tenant failed to return the required income verification information within the 60-day period set forth in the statute. Some courts allowed tenants to submit the information past the deadline while other cases held the tenants strictly to the statutory deadline. A series on consolidated cases (Dworman v. DHCR, Sudarsky v. DHCR and Seymour v. DHCR) reached the Court of Appeals, which held that under certain circumstances, a tenant's late filing can be excused. In Dworman, the tenant filed the required information only 11 days late and had been on a long vacation in Europe when the agency's request for income verification reached his residence. In Sudarsky, the tenant allegedly was suffering from a clinical depression at the time in question, and the tenant's wife, a concert pianist, was on tour; the tenant did respond, although he mistakenly sent the information to the landlord rather than to DHCR. In Dworman and Sudarsky, the court remanded the cases to DHCR for a hearing as to whether there was good cause for the tenants' lateness; if so, then DHCR had discretion to excuse the tenant's lateness. However, in Seymour, where the tenant failed to respond for five months and had no excuse, the court upheld DHCR's determination that the subject apartment had become deregulated. Dworman v. DHCR, 94 N.Y.2d 359, 704 N.Y.S.2d 192 (1999).

¶ 11. In Elkin v. Roldan 94 N.Y.2d 853, 704 N.Y.S.2d 201 (1999), the court heard the consolidated appeals in Elkin and Shapiro v. DHCR. In Elkin, postmarks showed that the required information was mailed 10 days late, although the tenant's office manager insisted that she mailed the item four days before the deadline. In Shapiro, the response was metered four days before the deadline but postmarked three days after the deadline. The court remanded these cases to DHCR for a determination as to whether the delays were de minimis and thus excusable.

¶ 12. A landlord and tenant entered into a lease for professional purposes only, and agreed to a rental ($2,600 per month) which was substantially above the then applicable legal regulated rent. During the term of that lease, the landlord obtained an order of deregulation from DHCR upon tenant's default in a high income rent deregulation proceeding. The landlord subsequently commenced a holdover proceeding based on the order of deregulation and upon the tenant's refusal to execute a free market renewal lease at a monthly rent of $8,000. The court, however, held that since at the time of the landlord's application to DHCR for an order of deregulation, the premises were rented solely for commercial purposes, there was no legal basis for the application. Hence, the court dismissed the landlord's petition, holding that the landlord's rights, if any, arose out of the prior commercial lease, not out of the order of deregulation. Katz 737 Corp. v. Bernstein, N.Y.L.J., May 18, 2001, page 18, col. 2 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 13. In one case, when DHCR sent a request to the Department of Taxation and Finance (DTF) for income verification, DTF sent back a statement that there was "no match" under the tenant's name. The court, however, held that DHCR had an affirmative obligation to request a recheck of the tax records and should not have issued a summary denial of the application for deregulation. A recheck was certainly in order here, where the tenant had filed taxes late due to health problems. 190 Riverside Drive v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., Sept. 27, 2000, page 27, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 14. DHCR is limited by law in terms of the type of financial information it may obtain. Although the Department of Taxation and Finance (DTF) sends DHCR a "yes" or "no" answer as to whether the tenant's income exceeds the threshold level of $175,000, DHCR is not permitted to demand an actual income tax return from a tenant. Giffuni Brothers v. DHCR, 293 A.D.2d 402, 742 N.Y.S.2d 205, leave to appeal denied, 99 N.Y.2d 505, 785 N.Y.S.2d 733, 785 N.E.2d 733 (2003).

¶ 15. In connection with the landlord's 1999 deregulation application, DHCR ascertained from the Department of Taxation that the income of the tenants did not exceed the $175,000 threshold in 1998. Based on this information, the 1999 deregulation application was denied, since high income deregulation is conditioned on tenant income exceeding the deregulation threshold in each of the two calendar years preceding the deregulation application. In 2000, the landlord applied again for deregulation. That application was denied based upon the above described information obtained in connection with the 1999 application, i.e. that in 1998 (one of the two years placed in issue by the 2000 application), the tenant's income had not exceeded the deregulation threshold. The court held that since DHCR previously verified the tenant's income during the 1999 deregulation proceeding, the agency did not have to verify it again in connection with the 2000 deregulation application. Broadway 95th Street, LLC. v. DHCR, 297 A.D.2d 616, 747 N.Y.S.2d 226 (1st Dept. 2002).

¶ 16. In one case, the landlord filed with DHCR a petition for high-income regulation of the subject apartment. Thereafter, the Department of Taxation and Finance (DTF) reported that the household income was over $175,000 for both 1996 and 1997. As a result, in February 1999, DHCR issued a notice of proposed deregulation and gave each side the opportunity to comment on the results of the verification. The tenant responded that the total annual income for the household was not in excess of $175,000 in 1996 or 1997, and exhibited amended tax returns reflect household income under $175,000. DHCR then asked DTF to verify the income a second time. The second time, DTF responded that the household income was below the $175,000 limit in one or both of the two years in question. DHCR then denied the landlord's petition for high income deregulation, whereupon the landlord brought an Article 78 proceeding. The court granted the Article 78 petition. The court noted that, instead of challenging the accuracy or validity of the original verification, the tenant simply amended the tax return and showed the amended tax return reflecting income below the $175,000 threshold. She did not provide an explanation as to why an amended return had been filed or how the amended return differed from the return on file at the time of DTF's original verification. According to the court, the tenant answer "essentially amounted to a request for a do-over, rather than a comment on DHCR's proposed order." The court found that DHCR's ruling was improper because it invited abuse of the luxury decontrol procedures, which contemplate a single verification, the result of which is binding on all parties unless it can be shown that DTF made an error. Since there was no showing that DHCR made an error in its initial verification, the landlord was entitled to deregulation of the apartment. The Court of Appeals agreed with the two dissenting judges at the Appellate Division level, who had said that DHCR's "blind acceptance" of the amended return was irrational. Classic Realty LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 2 N.Y.3d 142, 777 N.Y.S.2d 1, 808 N.E.2d 1260 (2004).

¶ 17. DHCR cannot summarily deny the landlord's application for luxury decontrol merely because DTFis unable to locate the tenant's tax return. DHCR must make more of an effort to obtain the needed information. For example, the tenant should be asked to provide additional information, from which DHCR can formulate a request to DTF that will produce the necessary information. If that is not possible, the tenant can be asked to produce a copy of his or her entire return. Zimak v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., May 26, 2004, at 18, col. 1 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 18. In Matter of London Terrace Gardens v. DHCR, 6 Misc 3d 1020(A), 2005 WL 310876, N.Y.L.J., Jan. 19, 2005, at 18, col. 3 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.), the court provided a useful description of the workings of the luxury decontrol law. The Rent Stabilization Law (RSL) provides a means for owners to petition for deregulation of rent stabilized apartments. A rent stabilized apartment with a legal regulated rent of $2,000 per month or more may be deregulated if the occupants' combined threshold income exceeds $175,000 for each of the two years preceding the owner's petition (26-504.3(b)). An owner seeking deregulation must furnish the tenant with an Income Certification Form (ICF) and the tenant is then required to certify whether the occupants' combined income exceeds $175,000 (id.). If the tenant certifies that the income was below the threshold amount, the owner may contest the certification and request that DHCR verify the household income (26-504.3(c)(1)). DHCR then requests that the tenant provide any necessary information to permit the State Department of Taxation and Finance (DTF) to verify the household income (id.). If the DTF determines that the income surpasses the threshold amount for the relevant two-year period, DHCR must permit the parties thirty days to comment on the results (26-504.3(c)(2)). Thereafter, where DHCR finds that the tenant's income exceeded the threshold amount during the relevant time period, it must issue an order providing that the apartment will be deregulated after the expiration of the existing lease (26-504.3(c)(2)). The London Terrace landlord, in April 2003, served the ICF on the tenants, who returned the form 5 days later, certifying an income of less than $175,000 for the relevant time period. Next month, the owner served a Luxury Deregulation Petition on DHCR, seeking verification of the tenant's income. Then, DHCR in October 2003 served the parties with a Notice of Opportunity to Comment or Rebut for the 2003 Filing Period. In March 2004, DHCR sent the parties a Notice of Verification of Income Tax Information, by which the Rent Administrator notified the parties that DTF had matched the tenants and their address with income tax returns for both 2001 and 2002 and that the income reported was $175,000 or less in both years. The parties were given an opportunity to comment. The owner argued that, since at the inception of the tenancy in 1998, the tenants filed an application setting forth their income as $140,000 per year, it was likely that by now, their income was over $175,000 per year. DHCR, however, declined the owner's request that the agency conduct an investigation to determine the tenants' income, and held that it was entitled to rely upon the DTF figure. The court upheld this. Court distinguished 190 Riverside Drive v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., Sept. 27, 2000, at 27, col. 1 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.), where DTF could not find a matching tax return at all, since none had been filed, the agency has to do an investigation. However, where there is a tax return filed and DHCR finds a match, the owner will not be able to get DHCR to act as a tax auditor. The owner argued that this practice encourages the filing of fraudulent tax returns, but the court said that it was not the role of DHCR to determine compliance with tax laws. Although deciding the case on the basis that DHCR can rely on DTF, the court also noted that the landlord's contention that income had gone over the threshold amount from 1998 to 2001 was based on pure speculation. ¶ 19. The operative date for purposes of establishing whose income will be included in the total annual income is the date on which the certification form is served on the tenant. Thus, where the tenant's husband vacated the apartment prior to the service of the certification form, the husband's income is not counted. 103 East 86th St. Realty Corp. v. DHCR, 12 A.D.3d 289, 785 N.Y.S.2d 65 (1st Dept. 2004).

¶ 20. The mere filing by the landlord of a luxury decontrol application does not constitute abuse of process. Britt v. Nestor, 17 A.D.3d 144, 791 N.Y.S.2d 829 (1st Dept. 2005).

¶ 21. DHCR has jurisdiction to adjudicate luxury deregulation petitioners and to request that the Department of Taxation and Finance verify the total annual income of all persons residing in the housing accommodation as their primary residence. Moreover, in determining household income for purposes of luxury deregulation, DHCR may take into consideration the income of occupants who reside in the apartment on the date the income certification form is served, even if the occupant did not occupy the apartment during the two years preceding service thereof. Power v. DHCR, 61 A.D.3d 544, 878 N.Y.S.2d 682 (1st Dept. 2009). See also, Matter of Doyle v. Calogero, 52 A.D.3d 252, 859 N.Y.S.2d 178 (1st Dept. 2009), leave to appeal denied, 11 N.Y.3d 716, 874 N.Y.S.2d 5 (2009).

§ 26-506 Application to hotels.

a. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 26-504 of this chapter to the contrary, and irrespective of any decontrol pursuant to subparagraph (c) of paragraph two of subdivision e of section 26-403 of the city rent and rehabilitation law, this law shall apply to dwelling units in all hotels except hotels erected after July first, nineteen hundred sixty-nine, whether classified as a class A or a class B multiple dwelling, containing six or more dwelling units, provided that the rent charged for the individual dwelling units on May thirty-first, nineteen hundred sixty-eight was not more than three hundred fifty dollars per month or eighty-eight dollars per week; and further provided that, notwithstanding the foregoing, this law shall apply to dwelling units in any hotel, whether classified as a class A or a class B multiple dwelling, eligible for benefits pursuant to the provisions of section 11-244 of the code.

b. Upon application by a tenant or owner, the division of housing and community renewal, shall determine if such building is a hotel covered by this law, based upon the services provided and other relevant factors. If it is determined that such building is not a hotel, it shall thereafter be subject to this law pursuant to subdivision b of section 26-504 of this chapter.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. Issue as to what minimal hotel services, if any, or minimum percentage of hotel services are mandated in order for building to be "hotel" under code is left to conciliation and appeals board [before April 1, 1984] pursuant to YY51-3.1, subd. b.-Whitehall Hotel v. Nicholas Gaynor, 121 Misc. 2d 736 [1983].

¶ 2. Garden Apts. were subject to rent stabilization because they fit within the definition set forth in this section for dwellings on May 6, 1969. Subsequent changes to the building should not change the rent stabilized status of tenants previously protected. Conciliation and Appeals Board interpretation of § YY51-3.1 was proper and not arbitrary and capricious.-Orin Management Corp. v. N.Y.C. Conciliation and Appeals Board, 191 (45) N.Y.L.J. (3-7-84) 6, col. 1B.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. In order to establish an exemption from hotel stabilization, the landlord must establish that the rent charged on May 1, 1968 was more than $350 per month or $88 per week. In one case, the court determined that the landlord had failed to meet its burden of proof; no rent records were produced and there was no proof that the apartment was even occupied at the time. The court refused to credit the testimony of the hotel's managing director, who had no independent recollection of rentals, and merely testified that had the apartment been stabilized, it would have been registered with the then existing hotel stabilization association. ¶ 2. Upon reclassifying a hotel to an apartment building, DHCR can retroactively roll back rents to June 30, 1983, the effective date of Adm. Code §26-506, subject to the four-year limit on rent overcharge cases. Benjamin Shapiro Realty Co. v. CHAPTER 4 RENT STABILIZATION

§ 26-509 Application to department for the aging for rent increase exemptions and equivalent tax abatement for rent regulated property occupied by certain senior citizens.

a. Commencement of agency jurisdiction.

(1) (i) Notwithstanding any provisions of this chapter to the contrary, on and after July first, nineteen hundred ninety-two, the department for the aging shall grant rent increase exemption orders or tax abatement certificates to senior citizens pursuant to this section and applications for such orders and certificates and renewal applications shall be made to the department for the aging.

(ii) Notwithstanding any provisions of this chapter to the contrary, such agency as the mayor shall designate shall grant rent increase exemption orders or tax abatement certificates to persons with disabilities pursuant to this section and applications for such orders and certificates and renewal applications shall be made to such agency.

(2) The department for the aging and such other agency as the mayor shall designate shall have the power, in relation to any application for a rent increase exemption order or tax abatement certificate under such department or agency's jurisdiction, to determine the lawful stabilization rent, but shall not receive applications for adjustment of the initial legal regulated rent pursuant to section 26-513 of this chapter.

(3) The department of finance, the department for the aging and such other agency as the mayor shall designate may promulgate such rules and regulations as may be necessary to effectively carry out the provisions of this section.

b. Rent increase exemptions for certain senior citizens and persons with disabilities.

(1) No increase in the legal regulated rent shall be collectible from a tenant to whom there has been issued a currently valid rent exemption order pursuant to this subdivision, except as provided in such order, if such increase is a lawful increase in the monthly legal regulated rent over the rent legally payable on the eligibility date which is provided under a two year lease, or under such other term as regards dwelling units subject to the hotel stabilization provisions of this chapter, for an increase in rent:

(i) pursuant to an order of the New York city rent guidelines board, or

(ii) based upon an owner hardship rent increase order issued by the state division of housing and community renewal.

(2) A tenant is eligible for a rent exemption order pursuant to this section if:

(i) the head of the household residing in the housing accommodation is sixty-two years of age or older or is a person with a disability, and is entitled to the possession or to the use or occupancy of a dwelling unit. To qualify as a person with a disability for the purposes of this section, an individual shall submit to such agency as the mayor shall designate proof (as specified by regulation of such agency as the mayor shall designate) showing that such individual is currently receiving social security disability insurance (SSDI) or supplemental security income (SSI) benefits under the federal social security act or disability pension or disability compensation benefits provided by the United States department of veterans affairs, or was previously eligible by virtue of receiving disability benefits under the supplemental security income program or the social security disability program and is currently receiving medical assistance benefits based on determination of disability as provided in section three hundred sixty-six of the social services law.

(ii) the aggregate disposable income (as defined by regulation of the department for the aging) of all members of the household residing in the housing accommodation whose head of the household is sixty-two years of age or older does not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand five, twenty-six thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand six, twenty-seven thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand seven, twenty-eight thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand eight, and twenty-nine thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand nine, per year, after deduction of federal, state and city income and social security taxes. For purposes of this subparagraph, "aggregate disposable income" shall not include gifts or inheritances, payments made to individuals because of their status as victims of Nazi persecution, as defined in P.L. 103-286, or increases in benefits accorded pursuant to the social security act or a public or private pension paid to any member of the household which increase, in any given year, does not exceed the consumer price index (all items United States city average) for such year which take effect after the eligibility date of the head of the household receiving benefits under this section whether received by the head of the household or any other member of the household;

(iii) the aggregate disposable income (as defined by regulation of such agency as the mayor shall designate) for the current income tax year of all members of the household residing in the housing accommodation whose head of the household is a person with a disability does not exceed the maximum income above which such head of the household would not be eligible to receive cash supplemental security income benefits under federal law during such tax year. For purposes of this subparagraph, "aggregate disposable income" shall not include gifts or inheritances, payments made to individuals because of their status as victims of Nazi persecution, as defined in P.L. 103-286, or increases in benefits accorded pursuant to the social security act or a public or private pension paid to any member of the household which increase, in any given year, does not exceed the consumer price index (all items United States city average) for such year which take effect after the eligibility date of the head of the household receiving benefits under this section, whether received by the head of the household or any other member of the household.

(iv) (a) in the case of a head of the household who does not receive a monthly allowance for shelter pursuant to the social services law, the maximum rent for the housing accommodation exceeds one-third of the aggregate disposable income, or subject to the limitations contained within item (c) of subparagraph (i) of paragraph three of this subdivision, if any expected lawful increase in the maximum rent would cause such maximum rent to exceed one-third of the aggregate disposable income; or

(b) in the case of a head of the household who receives a monthly allowance for shelter pursuant to the social services law, the maximum rent for the housing accommodation exceeds the maximum allowance for shelter which the head of the household is entitled to receive pursuant to the social services law, or subject to the limitations contained within item (c) of subparagraph (i) of paragraph three of this subdivision, if any expected lawful increase in the maximum rent would cause such maximum rent to exceed the maximum allowance for shelter which the head of the household is entitled to receive.

(3) (i) A rent exemption order pursuant to this subdivision shall provide:

(a) in the case of a head of the household who does not receive a monthly allowance for shelter pursuant to the social services law, that the landlord may not collect from the tenant to whom it is issued rent at a rate in excess of either one-third of the aggregate disposable income, or the rent in effect immediately preceding the eligibility date, whichever is greater; or

(b) in the case of a head of the household who receives a monthly allowance for shelter pursuant to the social services law, that the landlord may not collect from the tenant to whom it is issued rent at a rate in excess of either the maximum allowance for shelter which the head of the household is entitled to receive, or the rent in effect immediately preceding the eligibility date, whichever is greater; and

(c) that the landlord may collect from the tenant increases in rent based on an electrical inclusion adjustment or an increase in dwelling space, services or equipment.

(ii) Each such order shall expire upon termination of occupancy of the housing accommodation by the tenant to whom it is issued. The landlord shall notify the department for the aging in the case of a household whose eligibility for such order is based on the fact that the head of such household is sixty-two years of age or older, or such agency as the mayor shall designate in the case of a household whose eligibility for such order is based on the fact that the head of such household is a person with a disability, on a form to be prescribed by such department or agency, within thirty days of each such termination of occupancy.

(iii) When a rent reduction order is issued by the state division of housing and community renewal, the amount of the reduction shall be subtracted from the rent payable by the tenant specified in a currently valid rent exemption order issued pursuant to this subdivision. The landlord may not collect from the tenant a sum of rent exceeding the adjusted amount while the rent reduction order is in effect.

(4) Any landlord who collects, or seeks to collect or enforce, rent from a tenant in violation of the terms of a rent exemption order shall, for the purposes of all remedies, sanctions and penalties provided in this chapter, be deemed to have collected or attempted to collect or enforce, a rent in excess of the legal regulated rent.

(5) A rent exemption order shall be issued to each tenant who applies to the department for the aging in the case of a tenant who is sixty-two years of age or older or to such agency as the mayor shall designate in the case of a tenant who is a person with a disability, in accordance with such department or agency's applicable regulations and who is found to be eligible under this subdivision. Such order shall take effect on the first day of the first month after receipt of such application by the department for the aging or such agency as the mayor shall designate, except that where there is any other increase in the legal regulated rent within ninety days of the issuance of the order increasing the tenant's maximum rent which a tenant is not exempted from paying, the rent exemption order shall without further order of the department for the aging or such agency as the mayor shall designate take effect as of the effective date of said order increasing the tenant's rent including any retroactive increments collectible pursuant to such order.

(6) A rent exemption order shall be valid for the period of the lease or renewal thereof upon application by the tenant; provided, that upon any such renewal application being made by the tenant, any rent exemption order then in effect with respect to such tenant shall be deemed renewed until such time as the department for the aging or such agency as the mayor shall designate shall have found such tenant to be either eligible or ineligible for a rent exemption order but in no event for more than six additional months. If such tenant is found eligible, the order shall be deemed to have taken effect upon expiration of the exemption. In the event that any such tenant shall, subsequent to any such automatic renewal, not be granted a rent exemption order, such tenant shall be liable to the owner for the difference between the amounts the tenant has paid under the provisions of the automatically renewed order and the amounts which the tenant would have been required to pay in the absence of such order. Any rent exemption order issued pursuant to this subdivision shall include provisions giving notice as to the contents of this paragraph relating to automatic renewals of rent exemption orders and shall include provisions giving notice that the tenant must enter into either a one or two year renewal lease in order to be eligible for a rent exemption. The notice that each tenant receives from the owner relating to the right to a renewal lease shall contain similar information. Any application or renewal application for a rent exemption order shall also constitute an application for a tax abatement under such section. The department for the aging and such other agency as the mayor shall designate may, with respect to renewal applications by the tenants who have been found eligible for rent exemption orders, prescribe a simplified form including a certification of the applicant's continued eligibility in lieu of a detailed statement of income and other qualifications.

(7) Notwithstanding any other provisions of law, when a head of a household to whom a then current, valid rent exemption order has been issued under this chapter, chapter three or chapter seven of this title moves his or her principal residence to a subsequent dwelling unit subject to regulation under this chapter, the head of the household may apply to the department for the aging or such other agency as the mayor shall designate for a rent exemption order relating to the subsequent dwelling unit, and such order may provide that the head of the household shall be exempt from paying that portion of the legal regulated rent for the subsequent dwelling unit which is the least of the following:

(i) the amount by which the rent for the subsequent dwelling unit exceeds the last rent, as reduced, which the head of the household was required to actually pay in the original dwelling unit;

(ii) the last amount deducted from the maximum rent or legal regulated rent meaning the most recent monthly deduction for the applicant in the original dwelling unit pursuant to this section or section 26-605 of this title; or

(iii) where the head of the household does not receive a monthly allowance for shelter pursuant to the social services law, the amount by which the legal regulated rent of the subsequent dwelling unit exceeds one-third of the combined income of all members of the household.

Such certificate shall be effective as of the first day of the month in which the tenant applied for such exemption or as of the date the tenant took occupancy of the subsequent dwelling unit, whichever is later provided both occur after the effective date of this section.

(8) (i) When a dwelling unit subject to regulation under this chapter is later reclassified to a dwelling unit subject to regulation under chapter three of this title, the eligibility of a head of the household to receive a rent increase exemption order upon such reclassification shall be governed by paragraph eight of subdivision m of section 26-405 of this title.

(ii) When a dwelling unit subject to regulation under this chapter is later reclassified to a dwelling unit subject to the provisions of article II, IV, V or XI of the private housing finance law or subject to a mortgage insured or initially insured by the federal government pursuant to section two hundred thirteen of the national housing act, as amended, the eligibility of a head of the household to receive a rent increase exemption order upon such reclassification shall be governed by section 26-605.1 of this title.

(9) Notwithstanding any other provision or law to the contrary, where a head of household holds a current, valid rent exemption order and, after the effective date of this paragraph, there is a permanent decrease in aggregate disposable income in an amount which exceeds twenty percent of such aggregate disposable income as represented in such head of the household's last approved application for a rent exemption order or for renewal thereof, such head of the household may apply for a redetermination of the amount set forth therein. Upon application, such amount shall be redetermined so as to reestablish the ratio of adjusted rent to aggregate disposable income which existed at the time of approval of such head of the household's last application for a rent exemption order or for renewal thereof; provided, however, that in no event shall the amount of adjusted rent be redetermined to be (i) in the case of a head of the household who does not receive a monthly allowance for shelter pursuant to the social services law, less than one-third of the aggregate disposable income; or (ii) in the case of a head of the household who receives a monthly allowance for shelter pursuant to such law, less than the maximum allowance for shelter which such head of the household is entitled to receive pursuant to the social services law. For purposes of this paragraph, a decrease in aggregate disposable income shall not include any decrease in such income resulting from the manner in which such income is calculated pursuant to any amendment to paragraph c of subdivision one of section four hundred sixty-seven-b of the real property tax law, any amendment to the regulations of the department for the aging made on or after April first, nineteen hundred eighty-seven or any amendment to the regulations of such agency as the mayor shall designate made on or after the effective date of the local law that amended this section. For purposes of this paragraph, "adjusted rent" shall mean legal regulated rent less the amount set forth in a rent exemption order.

c. Tax abatement for properties subject to rent exemption order.

(1) Tax abatement, pursuant to the provisions of section four hundred sixty-seven-b of the real property tax law, shall be granted with respect to any real property for which a rent exemption order is issued under subdivision b of this section to the tenant of any housing accommodation contained therein. The rent exemption order shall also constitute the tax abatement certificate.

(2) The real estate tax imposed upon any real property for which a rent exemption is issued, shall be reduced and abated by an amount equal to the difference between:

(i) the sum of the maximum rents collectible under such orders, and

(ii) the sum of rents that would be collectible from the tenants of such housing accommodations if no exemption had been granted pursuant to subdivision b of this section.

(3) For any individual housing accommodation, the tax abatement computed pursuant to this subdivision shall be available with respect to a period commencing on the effective date of the initial rent exemption order, and ending on the expiration date of such order or on the effective date of an order terminating the rent exemption.

(4) Prior to the commencement of each fiscal year, the department for the aging shall notify the department of finance of the total amount of taxes to be abated under this section with respect to each property for which rent exemption orders granted to persons sixty-two years of age or older were in effect for all or any part of the preceding calendar year. Prior to the commencement of each fiscal year, such agency as the mayor shall designate shall notify the department of finance of the total amount of taxes to be abated under this section with respect to each property for which rent exemption orders granted to persons with disabilities were in effect for all or any part of the preceding calendar year. The commissioner of finance shall make the appropriate adjustment in the real estate tax payable in such fiscal year.

(5) Tax abatement pursuant to this section shall be in addition to any other tax abatement authorized by law, but shall not reduce the tax for any fiscal year below zero. In the event that the tax abatement certificate authorizes an amount of deduction in excess of the real estate installment, then the balance may be applied to any subsequent installment until exhausted. In such a case the owner shall submit with his or her real estate tax bill and remittance, a verified statement in such form as prescribed by the commissioner of finance setting forth the carry over amount and the amounts previously applied; provided, however, that at the request of the owner such balance shall be paid to the owner by the commissioner of finance in lieu of being applied to any subsequent installment, except where the owner is in arrears in the payment of real estate taxes on any property. For the purposes of this paragraph, where the owner is a corporation, it shall be deemed to be in arrears when any of the officers, directors or any person holding an interest in more than ten percent of the issued and outstanding stock of such corporation is in arrears in the payment of real estate taxes on any property; where title is held by a nominee, the owner shall be deemed to be in arrears when the person for whose benefit such title is held is in arrears in the payment of real estate taxes on any property.

d. Notwithstanding the provisions of this chapter, a tenant who resides in a dwelling unit which becomes subject to this chapter upon the sale by the city of New York of the building in which such dwelling unit is situated may be issued a rent increase exemption order for increases in rent which occurred during ownership of such building by the city of New York provided that such tenant would have been otherwise eligible to receive a rent increase exemption order at the time of such increase but for the fact that such tenant occupied a dwelling unit owned by the city of New York and was therefore not subject to this chapter. Application for such rent increase exemption orders shall be made within one year from the date such building is sold by the city of New York or within one year of the effective date of this provision, whichever is later.

§ 5. This local law shall take effect immediately and shall be retroactive to and shall be deemed to have been in full force and effect on and after the effective date of a state law authorizing such exemption. Notwithstanding any inconsistent provisions of the administrative code, any person who on the effective date of such state law would have been eligible for a rent increase exemption order pursuant to such code but for the fact that his or her income exceeded the twelve thousand twenty-five dollar income limitation in effect before the enactment of this local law, and who as a result of the enactment of this local law increasing the maximum income limitation to fifteen thousand dollars is eligible as of the effective date of a state law authorizing such exemption, for such order, may file an application for such order within ninety days of the enactment of this local law, and any such order issued to such applicant shall be effective as of the effective date of such state law.

Provisions of ch. 366/1988

§ 4. If any provision of this act or the application thereof to any person or cirumstances is held invalid, the remainder of this act and the application of such provisions to other persons and circumstances shall not be rendered invalid thereby.

§ 5. This act shall take effect immediately, provided, however, that with respect to any person who on the effective date of this act holds a current, valid rent increase exemption order issued by the department of housing preservation and development of the city of New York pursuant to section 26-405 or section 26-509 of the administrative code of the city of New York, this act shall be retroactive to and shall be deemed to have been in full force and effect as of the effective date of the initial rent increase exemption order issued to such person pursuant to such section 26-405 or section 26-509, provided, however, for purposes of this section, "initial rent increase exemption orders" shall include only those rent increase exemption orders issued pursuant to such section 26-405 or section 26-509 which have been renewed each year subsequent to the date originally issued and are in effect on the effective date of this act.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Nunez v. Dinkins, 641 N.Y.S.2d 983 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 1996). Senior citizens were entitled to have their Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemptions (SCRIE) calculated from the time they first became eligible for SCRIE, not on later date they first applied for SCRIE orders. The eligibility date, for purposes of the statute, is the date on which the tenant first met the stipulated requirements (age, income level, etc.) for a SCRIE.

¶ 2. Tindell v. Koch, 164 A.D.2d 689, 565 N.Y.S.2d 789 (1st Dept. 1991). The court permitted a class action for a declaratory judgment regarding the administration (check) of the SCRIE program. The class was defined as all senior citizens residing in rent stabilized apartments within the City of New York who presently are eligible, or in the future will be eligible, to receive a SCRIE order and who because they applied, or will apply, for the benefits after the date they first met the SCRIE eligibility criteria, received, or will receive, a smaller benefit than they would have received if the SCRIE application had been received on the date they first met the SCRIE eligibility criteria.

¶ 3. Coccaro v. Stupp, 170 Misc.2d 196, 166 Misc.2d 948, 635 N.Y.S.2d 924 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.). Where the City had intended to revoke SCRIE benefit because the tenant was no longer met the income requirements of the law, but the tenant never received notice until years later, the court refused to compel the tenant to return the overpayment. The tenant had relied upon the benefits over the years, and payment of the sum demanded by the City would have created substantial hardship for the tenant.

¶ 4. A landlord who was required to give senior citizen rent exemptions to tenants alleged that the SCRIE program was so mismanaged that it took an unreasonable length of time for tax abatements or cash reimbursement (the latter in cases where SCRIE benefits exceeded the landlord's real estate tax liability) to come through for the landlord. The court rejected the landlord's claim that the delays constituted an illegal taking of property without just compensation. However, the court held that the landlord had a recognizable property interest in the right to reimbursement from the City and if it were shown that the delays were sufficiently severe, this would constitute an unlawful deprivation of due process. Kraebel v. New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development, 959 F.2d 395 (2nd Cir. 1992).

¶ 5. A tenant eligible for Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemptions will still have to pay rent increases based on new equipment or services to which the tenant had consented. Ironton Realty Co. v. Lagrule, 150 Misc.2d 973, 571 N.Y.S.2d 181 (Civ.Ct. New York Co. 1991).

¶ 6. In calculating the tenant's income for SCRIE purposes, the tenant is not entitled to a deduction for long term capital losses. Coccaro v. Stupp, 650 N.Y.S.2d 500 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 1996).

¶ 7. The tenants' SCRIE benefits lapsed due to the their failure to reapply for benefits within the required time. The landlord, who was unaware that the benefits had lapsed, continued to charge the tenant the lower rents and expected to recoup the money through a tax abatement. The court, however, held that the landlord was not entitled to the tax abatement. Matter of Sacchetti v. City of New York Department of the Aging, N.Y.L.J., Apr. 17, 1996, page 25, col. 5 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 8. A person applying for SCRIE benefits need not have reached age 62 at the time of the effective date of the rent increase for which the exemption is sought, so long as he or she has reached the age of 62 at the time of the filing of the application for benefits. Lee v. Biderman, 169 A.D.2d 523, 564 N.Y.S.2d 174 (1st Dept. 1991).

¶ 9. A tenant eligible for Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemptions (SCRIE) will not be exempted from paying rent increases based on new equipment or services to which the tenant had consented. Ironton Realty Co. v. Lagrule, 150 Misc.2d 973, 571 N.Y.S.2d 181 (Civ.Ct. New York Co. 1991).

¶ 10. Nunez v. Dinkins, 641 N.Y.S.2d 983 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 1996), previously annoted, has been reversed by the Appellate Division, N.Y.L.J., Feb. 24, 1997, p. 25, col. 1. The successful SCRIE applicant may be charged the rent in effect on the date of actual application, even if that figure includes rent increases that might have been avoided if the applicant had applied for SCRIE benefits (earlier) immediately upon meeting the age and financial requirements.

¶ 11. The opinion at 653 N.Y.S.2d 351 was vacated. Now,, the court vacated its prior determination and held that senior citizens were entitled to have their rent frozen on the date at which they first became eligible for SCRIE, not the date that they first applied for SCRIE benefits. Nunez v. Guiliani, 657 N.Y.S.2d 168 (1st Dept. 1997).

¶ 12. A tenant's effective date for SCRIE benefits is the date prior to the effective date for the most recent lease for the unit, rather than on any earlier date that the tenant first became eligible for SCRIE benefits. Thus, a tenant who waits several years before claiming SCRIE benefits will have lost the opportunity to have obtained the benefits for the past years. Nunez v. Giuliani, 91 N.Y.2d 935, 670 N.Y.S.2d 399 (1998).

¶ 13. In one case, where a Senior Citizen Rent Income Exemption was denied, a landlord was required to pay real estate taxes. The landlord then sought to recover the payments from the tenant's daughter, who had succeeded to the rights to the apartment. The court, however, held that in the absence of evidence that the daughter had participated in an improper application for SCRIE benefits, the landlord could not recover the taxes from the daughter. Levine v. Fanelli, N.Y.L.J., Apr. 1, 1998.

¶ 14. A landlord who had mistakenly been billed for a reduced rent discovered that the SCRIE had long since expired and brought a summary proceeding to recover the difference between the lawful stabilized rent and the lesser amount that had been charged to the tenant. The court held that the landlord could recover a possessory judgment for the last six months' rent, but would have to use an ordinary money judgment with respect to the balance of the rent. 1560-80 Pelham Parkway v. Errico, N.Y.L.J., July 13, 1998, page 28, col. 6 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 15. A landlord is not authorized to take a tax abatement unless the agency issues a valid SCRIE (senior citizen rent increase exemption) order covering the tenant for the year for which abatement is sought. It is the responsibility of the landlord to take reasonable steps to determine whether the tenant has been certified as eligible to receive tax benefits, and this must be done before claiming the benefits. If the landlord has claimed amounts in excess of that to which it was entitled, the city can recoup the overage. 48 West 138th Limited Partnership v. Stupp, 270 A.D.2d 132, 706 N.Y.S.2d 312 (1st Dept. 2000).

¶ 16. Where a tenant fails to obtain recertification for Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption (SCRIE) benefits, the landlord is forced to pay back the tax benefits received by it. The landlord may then sue the tenant to recover back rent, on an unjust enrichment theory. That suit will be subject to a six-year Statute of Limitations. Seventh FGP, Inc. v. Yee, N.Y.L.J., Aug. 16, 2000, page 22, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 17. A tenant who meets the eligibility requirements for SCRIE will get the exemption even where there has been no recent increase in the tenant's legal regulated rent. Gentile v. New York City Department for the Aging, 290 A.D.2d 395, 736 N.Y.S.2d 674 (1st Dept. 2002).

Administrative Code of the City of New York

 Current through December 2009 ****

NYC Administrative Code 26-510

Administrative Code of the City of New York

Title 26 Housing and Building

CHAPTER 4 RENT STABILIZATION

§ 26-510 Rent guidelines board.

a. There shall be a rent guidelines board to consist of nine members, appointed by the mayor. Two members shall be representative of tenants, two shall be representative of owners of property, and five shall be public members each of whom shall have had at least five years experience in either finance, economics or housing. One public member shall be designated by the mayor to serve as chairman and shall hold no other public office. No member, officer or employee of any municipal rent regulation agency or the state division of housing and community renewal and no person who owns or manages real estate covered by this law or who is an officer of any owner or tenant organization shall serve on a rent guidelines board. One public member, one member representative of tenants and one member representative of owners shall serve for a term ending two years from January first next succeeding the date of their appointment; one public member, one member representative of tenants and one member representative of owners shall serve for terms ending three years from the January first next succeeding the date of their appointment and two public members shall serve for terms ending four years from January first next succeeding the dates of their appointment. The chairman shall serve at the pleasure of the mayor. Thereafter, all members shall continue in office until their successors have been appointed and qualified. The mayor shall fill any vacancy which may occur by reason of death, resignation or otherwise in a manner consistent with the original appointment. A member may be removed by the mayor for cause, but not without an opportunity to be heard in person or by counsel, in his or her defense, upon not less than ten days notice.

b. The rent guidelines board shall establish annually guidelines for rent adjustments, and in determining whether rents for housing accommodations subject to the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen seventy-four or this law shall be adjusted shall consider, among other things (1) the economic condition of the residential real estate industry in the affected area including such factors as the prevailing and projected (i) real estate taxes and sewer and water rates,

(ii) gross operating maintenance costs (including insurance rates, governmental fees, cost of fuel and labor costs), (iii) costs and availability of financing (including effective rates of interest), (iv) over-all supply of housing accommodations and over-all vacancy rates, (2) relevant data from the current and projected cost of living indices for the affected area, (3) such other data as may be made available to it. Not later than July first of each year, the rent guidelines board shall file with the city clerk its findings for the preceding calendar year, and shall accompany such findings with a statement of the maximum rate or rates of rent adjustment, if any, for one or more classes of accommodations subject to this law, authorized for leases or other rental agreements commencing on the next succeeding October first or within the twelve months thereafter. Such findings and statement shall be published in the City Record.

c. Such members shall be compensated on a per diem basis of one hundred dollars per day for no more than twenty-five days a year except that the chairman shall be compensated at one hundred twenty-five dollars a day for no more than fifty days a year. The chairman shall be chief administrative officer of the rent guidelines board and among his or her powers and duties he or she shall have the authority to employ, assign and supervise the employees of the rent guidelines board and enter into contracts for consultant services. The department of housing preservation and development shall cooperate with the rent guidelines board and may assign personnel and perform such services in connection with the duties of the rent guidelines board as may reasonably be required by the chairman.

d. Any housing accommodation covered by this law owned by a member in good standing of an association registered with the department of housing preservation and development pursuant to section 26-511 of this chapter which becomes vacant for any reason, other than harassment of the prior tenant, may be offered for rental at any price notwithstanding any guideline level established by the guidelines board for renewal leases, provided the offering price does not exceed the rental then authorized by the guidelines board for such dwelling unit plus five percent for a new lease not exceeding two years and a further five percent for a new lease having a minimum term of three years, until July first, nineteen hundred seventy, at which time the guidelines board shall determine what the rental for a vacancy shall be.

e. With respect to hotel dwelling units, covered by this law pursuant to section 26-506 of this chapter, the council, after receipt of a study from the rent guidelines board, shall establish a guideline for rent increases, irrespective of the limitations on amount of increase in subdivision d hereof, which guideline shall apply only to permanent tenants. A permanent tenant is an individual or family who at any time since May thirty-first, nineteen hundred sixty-eight, or hereafter, has continuously resided in the same hotel as a principal residence for a period of at least six months. On January first, nineteen hundred seventy-one and once annually each succeeding year the rent guidelines board shall cause a review to be made of the levels of fair rent increases provided under this subdivision and may establish different levels of fair rent increases for hotel dwelling units renting within different rental ranges based upon the board's consideration of conditions in the market for hotel accommodations and the economics of hotel real estate. Any hotel dwelling unit which is voluntarily vacated by the tenant thereof may be offered for rental at the guideline level for vacancies established by the rent guidelines board. If a hotel dwelling unit becomes vacant because the prior tenant was evicted therefrom, there shall be no increase in the rental thereof except for such increases in rental that the prior tenant would have had to pay had he or she continued in occupancy.

g. From September twenty-fifth, nineteen hundred sixty-nine until the rate of permissible increase is established by the council pursuant to subdivision e of this section, there shall not be collected from any permanent hotel tenant any rent increase in excess of ten percent over the rent payable for his or her dwelling unit on May thirty-first, nineteen hundred sixty-eight, except for hardship increases authorized by the conciliation and appeals board. Any owner who collects or permits any rent to be collected in excess of the amount authorized by this subdivision shall not be eligible to be a member in good standing of a hotel industry stabilization association.

h. The rent guidelines board prior to the annual adjustment of the level of fair rents provided for under subdivision b of this section for dwelling units and hotel dwelling units covered by this law, shall hold a public hearing or hearings for the purpose of collecting information relating to all factors set forth in subdivision b of this section. Notice of the date, time, location and summary of subject matter for the public hearing or hearings shall be published in the City Record daily for a period of not less than eight days and at least once in one or more newspapers of general circulation at least eight days immediately preceding each hearing date, at the expense of the city of New York, and the hearing shall be open for testimony from any individual, group, association or representative thereof who wants to testify.

i. Maximum rates of rent adjustment shall not be established more than once annually for any housing accommodation within the board's jurisdiction. Once established, no such rate shall, within the one-year period, be adjusted by any surcharge, supplementary adjustment or other modification.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Defendant Ellen Gesmer, appointed as a "public member" of the Rent Guidelines Board, met the requirements to "have had at least five years experience in either finance, economics or housing" (Ad Cd §26-510(a)) because defendant's 11 years as a lawyer included substantial tenant advocacy. ¶ 3. A landlord who ignored for nine years an administrative agency directive that the tenant be given a renewal lease, cannot be heard to complain that it was denied rent guidelines increases it would have realized had it complied nine years ago. Ansonia Associates v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 194 A.D.2d 446, 599 N.Y.S.2d 275 (1st Dept. 1993).

¶ 4. The New York City Rent Guidelines Board conducted surveys of rents in order to determine the effect of the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 on rents. Plaintiff board members sought copies of a Recent Renters and/or Recent Movers Report before the board took a vote on the rent guidelines increases which would be effective for the following year, but the chairman of the board refused to furnish them with copies of the report. Under the circumstances, the court held that since the statute required the board to consider relevant data before it took a vote, the vote was flawed. Accordingly, the court enjoined the board from implementing the rent guidelines increases until further order of the court. Rosenfeld v. New York City Rent Guidelines Board, N.Y.L.J., July 15, 1998, page 21, col. 2 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 5. The rent guidelines statute requires that prior to July 1 in every calendar year, the Rent Guidelines Board file with the City Clerk an Explanatory Statement of its findings for the preceding calendar regarding such matters as economic conditions in the real estate industry and projected costs. It is not permissible for the Board to file a generic list of items which are so broad as to be virtually unchanged from year to year. However, the court found the filed Explanatory Statement to be sufficient where it contained summaries on: (1) the price index for operating costs covering items used in maintaining rent stabilized buildings; (2) an income and expense review using a sample size of 12,000 buildings; (3) mortgage interest surveys; and (4) Consumer Price Index for the New York, Northeastern New Jersey Metropolitan area for a seven-year period. Thus, the court dismissed an Article 78 proceeding which had challenged the adequacy of the Explanatory Statement. Rent Stabilization Association v. N.Y.C. Rent Guidelines Board, 12 Misc.3d 1174(A), 820 N.Y.S.2d 845, 2006 WL 1789116 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

§ 26-511 Real estate industry stabilization association.

a. The real estate industry stabilization association registered with the department of housing preservation and development is hereby divested of all its powers and authority under this law.

b. The stabilization code heretofore promulgated by such association, as approved by the department of housing preservation and development, is hereby continued to the extent that it is not inconsistent with law. Such code may be amended from time to time, provided, however, that no such amendments shall be promulgated except by action of the commissioner of the division of housing and community renewal and provided further, that prior to the adoption of any such amendments, the commissioner shall (i) submit the proposed amendments to the commissioner of the department of housing preservation and development and allow such commissioner thirty days to make comments or recommendations on the proposed amendments, (ii) review the comments or recommendations, if any, made pursuant to clause (i) of this subdivision and make any revisions to the proposed amendments which the commissioner of the division of housing and community renewal deems appropriate provided that any such review and revision shall be completed within thirty days of receipt of such comments or recommendations and (iii) thereafter hold a public hearing on the proposed amendments. No provision of such code shall impair or diminish any right or remedy granted to any party by this law or any other provision of law.

c. A code shall not be adopted hereunder unless it appears to the division of housing and community renewal that such code:

(1) provides safeguards against unreasonably high rent increases and, in general, protects tenants and the public interest, and does not impose any industry wide schedule of rents or minimum rentals;

(2) requires owners not to exceed the level of lawful rents as provided by this law;

(3) provides for a cash refund or a credit, to be applied against future rent, in the amount of any rent overcharge collected by an owner and any penalties, costs, attorneys' fees and interest from the date of the overcharge at the rate of interest payable on a judgment pursuant to section five thousand four of the civil practice law and rules for which the owner is assessed;

(4) includes provisions requiring owners to grant a one or two year vacancy or renewal lease at the option of the tenant except where a mortgage or mortgage commitment existing as of April first, nineteen hundred sixty-nine, provides that the mortgagor shall not grant a one year lease;

(5) includes guidelines with respect to such additional rent and related matters as, for example, security deposits, advance rental payments, the use of escalator clauses in leases and provision for increase in rentals for garages and other ancillary facilities, so as to insure that the level of fair rent increase established under this law will not be subverted and made ineffective, provided further that notwithstanding any inconsistent provision of law, rule, regulation, contract, agreement, lease or other obligation, no owner, in addition to the authorized collection of rent, shall demand, receive or retain a security deposit or advance payment which exceeds the rent of one month for or in connection with the use or occupancy of a housing accommodation by (a) any tenant who is sixty-five years of age or older or (b) any tenant who is receiving disability retirement benefit or supplemental security income pursuant to the federal social security act for any lease or lease renewal entered into after July 1, 2002;

(5-a) provides that, notwithstanding any provision of this chapter, the legal regulated rent for any vacancy lease entered into after the effective date of this paragraph shall be as hereinafter provided in this paragraph. The previous legal regulated rent for such housing accommodation shall be increased by the following: (i) if the vacancy lease is for a term of two years, twenty percent of the previous legal regulated rent; or (ii) if the vacancy lease is for a term of one year the increase shall be twenty percent of the previous legal regulated rent less an amount equal to the difference between (a) the two year renewal lease guideline promulgated by the guidelines board of the city of New York applied to the previous legal regulated rent and (b) the one year renewal lease guideline promulgated by the guidelines board of the city of New York applied to the previous legal regulated rent. In addition, if the legal regulated rent was not increased with respect to such housing accommodation by a permanent vacancy allowance within eight years prior to a vacancy lease executed on or after the effective date of this paragraph, the legal regulated rent may be further increased by an amount equal to the product resulting from multiplying such previous legal regulated rent by six-tenths of one percent and further multiplying the amount of rent increase resulting therefrom by the greater of (A) the number of years since the imposition of the last permanent vacancy allowance, or (B) if the rent was not increased by a permanent vacancy allowance since the housing accommodation became subject to this chapter, the number of years that such housing accommodation has been subject to this chapter. Provided that if the previous legal regulated rent was less than three hundred dollars the total increase shall be as calculated above plus one hundred dollars per month. Provided, further, that if the previous legal regulated rent was at least three hundred dollars and no more than five hundred dollars in no event shall the total increase pursuant to this paragraph be less than one hundred dollars per month. Such increase shall be in lieu of any allowance authorized for the one or two year renewal component thereof, but shall be in addition to any other increases authorized pursuant to this chapter including an adjustment based upon a major capital improvement, or a substantial modification or increase of dwelling space or services, or installation of new equipment or improvements or new furniture or furnishings provided in or to the housing accommodation pursuant to this section.

(6) provides criteria whereby the commissioner may act upon applications by owners for increases in excess of the level of fair rent increase established under this law provided, however, that such criteria shall provide (a) as to hardship applications, for a finding that the level of fair rent increase is not sufficient to enable the owner to maintain approximately the same average annual net income (which shall be computed without regard to debt service, financing costs or management fees) for the three year period ending on or within six months of the date of an application pursuant to such criteria as compared with annual net income, which prevailed on the average over the period nineteen hundred sixty-eight through nineteen hundred seventy, or for the first three years of operation if the building was completed since nineteen hundred sixty-eight or for the first three fiscal years after a transfer of title to a new owner provided the new owner can establish to the satisfaction of the commissioner that he or she acquired title to the building as a result of a bona fide sale of the entire building and that the new owner is unable to obtain requisite records for the fiscal years nineteen hundred sixty-eight through nineteen hundred seventy despite diligent efforts to obtain same from predecessors in title and further provided that the new owner can provide financial data covering a minimum of six years under his or her continuous and uninterrupted operation of the building to meet the three year to three year comparative test periods herein provided; and (b) as to completed building-wide major capital improvements, for a finding that such improvements are deemed depreciable under the Internal Revenue Code and that the cost is to be amortized over a seven-year period, based upon cash purchase price exclusive of interest or service charges. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained herein, no hardship increase granted pursuant to this paragraph shall, when added to the annual gross rents, as determined by the commissioner, exceed the sum of, (i) the annual operating expenses, (ii) an allowance for management services as determined by the commissioner, (iii) actual annual mortgage debt service (interest and amortization) on its indebtedness to a lending institution, an insurance company, a retirement fund or welfare fund which is operated under the supervision of the banking or insurance laws of the state of New York or the United States, and (iv) eight and one-half percent of that portion of the fair market value of the property which exceeds the unpaid principal amount of the mortgage indebtedness referred to in subparagraph (iii) of this paragraph. Fair market value for the purposes of this paragraph shall be six times the annual gross rent. The collection of any increase in the stabilized rent for any apartment pursuant to this paragraph shall not exceed six percent in any year from the effective date of the order granting the increase over the rent set forth in the schedule of gross rents, with collectability of any dollar excess above said sum to be spread forward in similar increments and added to the stabilized rent as established or set in future years;

(6-a) provides criteria whereby as an alternative to the hardship application provided under paragraph six of this subdivision owners of buildings acquired by the same owner or a related entity owned by the same principals three years prior to the date of application may apply to the division for increases in excess of the level of applicable guideline increases established under this law based on a finding by the commissioner that such guideline increases are not sufficient to enable the owner to maintain an annual gross rent income for such building which exceeds the annual operating expenses of such building by a sum equal to at least five percent of such gross rent. For the purposes of this paragraph, operating expenses shall consist of the actual, reasonable, costs of fuel, labor, utilities, taxes, other than income or corporate franchise taxes, fees, permits, necessary contracted services and noncapital repairs, insurance, parts and supplies, management fees and other administrative costs and mortgage interest. For the purposes of this paragraph, mortgage interest shall be deemed to mean interest on a bona fide mortgage including an allocable portion of charges related thereto. Criteria to be considered in determining a bona fide mortgage other than an institutional mortgage shall include; condition of the property, location of the property, the existing mortgage market at the time the mortgage is placed, the term of the mortgage, the amortization rate, the principal amount of the mortgage, security and other terms and conditions of the mortgage. The commissioner shall set a rental value for any unit occupied by the owner or a person related to the owner or unoccupied at the owner's choice for more than one month at the last regulated rent plus the minimum number of guidelines increases or, if no such regulated rent existed or is known, the commissioner shall impute a rent consistent with other rents in the building. The amount of hardship increase shall be such as may be required to maintain the annual gross rent income as provided by this paragraph. The division shall not grant a hardship application under this paragraph or paragraph six of this subdivision for a period of three years subsequent to granting a hardship application under the provisions of this paragraph. The collection of any increase in the rent for any housing accommodation pursuant to this paragraph shall not exceed six percent in any year from the effective date of the order granting the increase over the rent set forth in the schedule of gross rents, with collectability of any dollar excess above said sum to be spread forward in similar increments and added to the rent as established or set in future years. No application shall be approved unless the owner's equity in such building exceeds five percent of: (i) the arms length purchase price of the property; (ii) the cost of any capital improvements for which the owner has not collected a surcharge; (iii) any repayment of principal of any mortgage or loan used to finance the purchase of the property or any capital improvements for which the owner has not collected a surcharge and (iv) any increase in the equalized assessed value of the property which occurred subsequent to the first valuation of the property after purchase by the owner. For the purposes of this paragraph, owner's equity shall mean the sum of (i) the purchase price of the property less the principal of any mortgage or loan used to finance the purchase of the property, (ii) the cost of any capital improvement for which the owner has not collected a surcharge less the principal of any mortgage or loan used to finance said improvement, (iii) any repayment of the principal of any mortgage or loan used to finance the purchase of the property or any capital improvement for which the owner has not collected a surcharge, and (iv) any increase in the equalized assessed value of the property which occurred subsequent to the first valuation of the property after purchase by the owner.

(7) establishes a fair and consistent formula for allocation of rental adjustment to be made upon granting of an increase by the commissioner;

(8) requires owners to maintain all services furnished by them on May thirty-first, nineteen hundred sixty-eight, or as otherwise provided by law, in connection with the leasing of the dwelling units covered by this law;

(9) provides that an owner shall not refuse to renew a lease except:

(a) where he or she intends in good faith to demolish the building and has obtained a permit therefor from the department of buildings; or

(b) where he or she seeks to recover possession of one or more dwelling units for his or her own personal use and occupancy as his or her primary residence in the city of New York and/or for the use and occupancy of a member of his or her immediate family as his or her primary residence in the city of New York, provided however, that this subparagraph shall not apply where a tenant or the spouse of a tenant lawfully occupying the dwelling unit is sixty-two years of age or older, or has an impairment which results from anatomical, physiological or psychological conditions, other than addiction to alcohol, gambling, or any controlled substance, which are demonstrable by medically acceptable clinical and laboratory diagnostic techniques, and which are expected to be permanent and which prevent the tenant from engaging in any substantial gainful employment, unless such owner offers to provide and if requested, provides an equivalent or superior housing accommodation at the same or lower stabilized rent in a closely proximate area. The provisions of this subparagraph shall only permit one of the individual owners of any building to recover possession of one or more dwelling units for his or her own personal use and/or for that of his or her immediate family. Any dwelling unit recovered by an owner pursuant to this subparagraph shall not for a period of three years be rented, leased, subleased or assigned to any person other than a person for whose benefit recovery of the dwelling unit is permitted pursuant to this subparagraph or to the tenant in occupancy at the time of recovery under the same terms as the original lease. This subparagraph shall not be deemed to establish or eliminate any claim that the former tenant of the dwelling unit may otherwise have against the owner. Any such rental, lease, sublease or assignment during such period to any other person may be subject to a penalty of a forfeiture of the right to any increases in residential rents in such building for a period of three years; or

(c) where the housing accommodation is owned by a hospital, convent, monastery, asylum, public institution, college, school dormitory or any institution operated exclusively for charitable or educational purposes on a non-profit basis and either:

(i) the tenant's initial tenancy commenced after the owner acquired the property and the owner requires the unit in connection with its charitable or educational purposes including, but not limited to, housing for affiliated persons; provided that with respect to any tenant whose right to occupancy commenced prior to July first, nineteen hundred seventy-eight pursuant to a written lease or written rental agreement and who did not receive notice at the time of the execution of the lease that his or her tenancy was subject to non-renewal, the institution shall not have the right to refuse to renew pursuant to this subparagraph; provided further that a tenant who was affiliated with the institution at the commencement of his or her tenancy and whose affiliation terminates during such tenancy shall not have the right to a renewal lease; or

(ii) the owner requires the unit for a non-residential use in connection with its charitable or educational purposes; or

(d) on specified grounds set forth in the code consistent with the purposes of this law; or

(e) where a tenant violates the provisions of paragraph twelve of this subdivision.

(9-a) provides that where an owner has submitted to and the attorney general has accepted for filing an offering plan to convert the building to cooperative or condominium ownership and the owner has presented the offering plan to the tenants in occupancy, any renewal or vacancy lease may contain a provision that if a building is converted to cooperative or condominium ownership pursuant to an eviction plan, as provided in section three hundred fifty-two-eeee of the general business law, the lease may only be cancelled upon the expiration of three years after the plan has been declared effective, and upon ninety days notice to the tenant that such period has expired or will be expiring.

(10) specifically provides that if an owner fails to comply with any order of the commissioner or is found by the commissioner to have harassed a tenant to obtain vacancy of his or her housing accommodation, he or she shall, in addition to being subject to any other penalties or remedies permitted by law, be barred thereafter from applying for or collecting any further rent increase. The compliance by the owner with the order of the commissioner or the restoration of the tenant subject to harassment to the housing accommodation or compliance with such other remedy as shall be determined by the commissioner to be appropriate shall result in the prospective elimination of such sanctions;

(11) includes provisions which may be peculiarly applicable to hotels including specifically that no owner shall refuse to extend or renew a tenancy for the purpose of preventing a hotel tenant from becoming a permanent tenant; and

(12) permits subletting of units subject to this law pursuant to section two hundred twenty-six-b of the real property law provided that (a) the rental charged to the subtenant does not exceed the stabilized rent plus a ten percent surcharge payable to the tenant if the unit sublet was furnished with the tenant's furniture; (b) the tenant can establish that at all times he or she has maintained the unit as his or her primary residence and intends to occupy it as such at the expiration of the sublease; (c) an owner may terminate the tenancy of a tenant who sublets or assigns contrary to the terms of this paragraph but no action or proceeding based on the non-primary residence of a tenant may be commenced prior to the expiration date of his or her lease; (d) where an apartment is sublet the prime tenant shall retain the right to a renewal lease and the rights and status of a tenant in occupancy as they relate to conversion to condominium or cooperative ownership; (e) where a tenant violates the provisions of subparagraph (a) of this paragraph the subtenant shall be entitled to damages of three times the overcharge and may also be awarded attorneys fees and interest from the date of the overcharge at the rate of interest payable on a judgment pursuant to section five thousand four of the civil practice law and rules; (f) the tenant may not sublet the unit for more than a total of two years, including the term of the proposed sublease, out of the four-year period preceding the termination date of the proposed sublease. The provisions of this subparagraph shall only apply to subleases commencing on and after July first, nineteen hundred eighty-three; (g) for the purposes of this paragraph only, the term of the proposed sublease may extend beyond the term of the tenant's lease. In such event, such sublease shall be subject to the tenant's right to a renewal lease. The subtenant shall have no right to a renewal lease. It shall be unreasonable for an owner to refuse to consent to a sublease solely because such sublease extends beyond the tenant's lease; and (h) notwithstanding the provisions of section two hundred twenty-six-b of the real property law, a not-for-profit hospital shall have the right to sublet any housing accommodation leased by it to its affiliated personnel without requiring the landlord's consent to any such sublease and without being bound by the provisions of subparagraphs (b), (c) and (f) of this paragraph. Commencing with the effective date of this subparagraph, whenever a not-for-profit hospital executes a renewal lease for a housing accommodation, the legal regulated rent shall be increased by a sum equal to fifteen percent of the previous lease rental for such housing accommodation, hereinafter referred to as a vacancy surcharge, unless the landlord shall have received within the seven year period prior to the commencement date of such renewal lease any vacancy increases or vacancy surcharges allocable to the said housing accommodation. In the event the landlord shall have received any such vacancy increases or vacancy surcharges during such seven year period, the vacancy surcharge shall be reduced by the amount received by any such vacancy increase or vacancy surcharges.

(13) provides that an owner is entitled to a rent increase where there has been a substantial modification or increase of dwelling space or an increase in the services, or installation of new equipment or improvements or new furniture or furnishings provided in or to a tenant's housing accommodation, on written tenant consent to the rent increase. In the case of a vacant housing accommodation, tenant consent shall not be required. The permanent increase in the legal regulated rent for the affected housing accommodation shall be one-fortieth of the total cost incurred by the landlord in providing such modification or increase in dwelling space, services, furniture, furnishings or equipment, including the cost off installation, but excluding finance charges. Provided further that an owner who is entitled to a rent increase pursuant to this paragraph shall not be entitled to a further rent increase based upon the installation of similar equipment, or new furniture or furnishings within the useful life of such new equipment, or new furniture or furnishings.

(14) provides that where the amount of rent charged to and paid by the tenant is less than the legal regulated rent for the housing accommodation, the amount of rent for such housing accommodation which may be charged upon renewal or upon vacancy thereof may, at the option of the owner, be based upon such previously established legal regulated rent, as adjusted by the most recent applicable guidelines increases and any other increases authorized by law. Where, subsequent to vacancy, such legal regulated rent, as adjusted by the most recent applicable guidelines increases and any other increases authorized by law is two thousand dollars or more per month, such housing accommodation shall be excluded from the provisions of this law pursuant to section 26-504.2 of this chapter.

d. (1) Each owner subject to the rent stabilization law shall furnish to each tenant signing a new or renewal lease, a rider describing the rights and duties of owners and tenants as provided for under the rent stabilization law of nineteen hundred sixty-nine. Such publication shall conform to the intent of section 5-702 of the general obligations law and shall be attached as an addendum to the lease. Upon the face of each lease, in bold print, shall appear the following: "Attached to this lease are the pertinent rules and regulations governing tenants and landlords' rights under the rent stabilization law of nineteen hundred sixty-nine".

(2) The rider shall be in a form promulgated by the commissioner in larger type than the lease and shall be utilized as provided in paragraph one of this subdivision.

e. Each owner of premises subject to the rent stabilization law shall furnish to each tenant signing a new or renewal lease, a copy of the fully executed new or renewal lease bearing the signatures of owner and tenant and the beginning and ending dates of the lease term, within thirty days from the owner's receipt of the new or renewal lease signed by the tenant.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. Landlord, who following enactment of the Rent Stabilization Law of 1969 tendered tenant an extension of his former two year lease to three years at a monthly increase of 25% with an option to the tenant to cancel after two years, could not succeed in a nonpayment proceeding when tenant refused the offer on the ground that landlord was bound by the two year term of the original lease and was only entitled to an increase of 15%. Contention of landlord that he could unilaterally tender a three year was contrary to the express requirements of this section. Berfont v. Hoffman, 65 Misc. 2d 506, 319 N.Y.S. 2d 44 [1970]. aff'g, 61 Misc. 2d 330, 305 N.Y.S. 2d 200 [1969].

¶ 2. Under this section an owner need not offer a tenant a renewal lease for his own use and a decision of the Conciliation and Appeals Board will not bind the court on that issue when the owner begins a proceeding to remove the tenant from possession. Alden v. Callahan, 65 Misc. 2d 183, 317 N.Y.S. 2d 560 [1970].

¶ 3. Tenant in rent controlled premises did not have a cause of action for treble damages when evicted from his apartment so that landlord could construct a new building with 20% more housing accommodations because landlord personally failed to complete demolition and construct new building when such work was done by purchaser. Finkel v. Carol Management Corp., 66 Misc. 2d 593, 321 N.Y.S. 2d 978 [1971].

¶ 4. Where owner of apartment building seeking to convert it into cooperative ownership induced the required number of tenants to sign purchase agreements by fraudulently representing that he had already obtained the requisite percentage, the cooperative corporation which was the present owner of the building was required to enter into leases with nonpurchasing tenants granting them their present rights under the Rent Stabilization Law. Richards v. Kaskel, 32 N.Y. 2d 679, 343, N.Y.S. 2d 360, 296 N.E. 2d 256 [1973].

¶ 5. Plan of co-operative organization became effective when 35% of tenants in building purchased shares prior to expiration of 18 months from first filing of plan and plan was not rendered ineffective by filing by attorney general after the 18 month period of an amendment to the plan which announced the declaration of effectiveness. Smit v. 114 Tenants Corp., 72 Misc. 2d 522, 339 N.Y.S. 2d 706 [1972].

¶ 6. Where the required 35% of tenants "then in occupancy" included four tenants who agreed to purchase apartments which became vacant after the plan was offered, but whose occupancy had not yet begun at the time the plan was declared effective, acceptance of plan by attorney general was in violation of law.-Ten Forty-Five Fifth Avenue Tenants Asso. v. Attorney General, 73 Misc. 2d 600, 342 N.Y.S. 2d 769 [1973].

¶ 7. Where landlord filed application for hardship rental increases with N.Y.C. Conciliation and Appeals Board the board must conduct a meaningful review of the application and cannot delegate its duties to the tenants by assuming that information submitted by landlord is true unless tenants submit contrary information while at the same time refusing the tenants the right to audit landlord's account.-Matter of Windsor Park Tenants' Association v. N.Y.C. Concilation and Appeals Board, 59 App. Div. 2d 121 [1977].

¶ 8. Landlord who seeks to recover possession of a dwelling unit for his own personal use and occupancy must be a natural person and cannot be a corporation.-Henrock Realty Corp. v. Tuck, 52 App. Div. 2d 872 [1976].

¶ 9. The Plain English Law applies to renewal leases of stabilized tenant and upon request of tenant renewal leases must be rewritten in a clear and coherent manner using words with common and every day meanings and appropriately divided and captioned by its various sections.-Francis Apts. v. McKittrick, 104 Misc. 2d 693, 429 N.Y.S. 2d 516 [1979].

¶ 10. When primary tenant of an unfurnished rent stabilized apartment sublet it furnished for a period of 18 months determination of Conciliation and Appeals Board that lessor is entitled to an increase in the stabilized rent of not over 10% was not arbitrary.-Krantz v. Conciliation and Appeals Board of City of New York, 86 App. Div. 2d 801 [1982].

¶ 11. Tenant who does not purchase under a "noneviction" cooperative conversion plan has a right to continue occupancy as against a purchaser of his apartment.-Tarman v. Rowe, 112 Misc. 2d 708 [1982].

¶ 12. On Feb. 28, 1983, petitioners failed to renew tenant's lease on grounds that they seek possession for use or occupancy of their immediate family and themselves pursuant to § YY51-6.0(c)(9)(b). Such provisions did not become effective until June 30, 1983. Prior law required renewal of lease. Amendment by legisl. was not retroactive and so is hardly applicable to renewals on or after effective date. Petitioner violated law in effect at time, tenant is entitled to renewal of lease.-Deniel Reilly et al. v. Steven Labovsky, 120 Misc. 2d 478 [1983].

¶ 13. Educational institution that owns apt. building must offer tenant whose right to occupancy commenced prior to July 1, 1978 under written lease or rental agreement who did not receive notice at time of execution of lease that his tenancy was subject to nonrenewal. [See § YY51-6.0(c)(9)(c)(i)]. In spite of the fact that apt. and educational institution were originally exempt from rent stabilization.-Browning School v. N.Y.C. Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 122 Misc. 2d 124 [1983].

¶ 14. § YY51-6.0(c)(9) authorized adoption of § 54(b) of the rent stabilization code. As amended by L. 1983, ch. 555, § 6, that paragraph (c)(9) is repealed. Therefore so is § 54(b) of the rent stabilization code which authorized owners to recover possession of an apt. for the use of themselves or immediate family.-Kamm v. Drake, 189 (32) N.Y.L.J. (2-16-83) 13, col. 2B. See also Kamm v. Cotton, 189 (61) N.Y.L.J. (3-30-83) 13, col. 4B. See also Bauer v. Zafirau, 189 (80) N.Y.L.J. (4-26-83) 12, col. 1M.

¶ 15. Subdivision (c)(14)(g) specifically provides that an owners refusal to consent to a sublease, on the ground that the tenant was seeking to sublet for a period subsequent to the expiration of the current lease, shall be unreasonable since the estate of a stabilized tenant will automatically extend beyond the expiration of any given lease when the renewal option is exercised.-72nd St. Assoc. v. Pyle, 124 Misc. 2d 1087 [1984].

¶ 16. Subdivision (c)(14) is applicable to actions pending at the effective date of the amendments thereto.-Tagert v. 211 East 70th St. Co., 63 NY2d 818 [1984].

¶ 17. Subdivision (c)(9)(b) provides that a landlord who seeks to recover a rent-stabilized apartment for his primary residence from a tenant who is 62 years of age or older must make an offer to the tenant of comparable housing at the same or lower rent in a closely proximate area and a petition failing to allege such offer is defective.-Schreier v. Albrecht, 126 Misc. 2d 336 [1984].

¶ 18. An apartment in a building which has been substantially rehabilitated in that it was converted from a Class B boarding house with 17 apartments to a Class A apartment with 5 units, is not subject to rent stabilization.-Nelson v. Yates, 193 (47) N.Y.L.J. (3-12-85) 7, Col. 2 T.

¶ 19. Rent increases exceeding 6 per cent per year are excessive and in violation of the rent stabilization law provisions.-Bryant Ave. Tenants' Assoc. v. Koch, 193 (61) N.Y.L.J. (4-1-85) 14, Col. 4 B.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. In a cooperative conversion a husband in the process of divorce retained a sufficient connection to apartment to qualify as a tenant in occupancy. The critical date is when the offering plan is accepted by the Attorney-General per NYC Ad Cd § YY51-6.0(c)(9-a)[§ 26-511(c)(9-a)], Rent Stabilization Association Code § 61(4)(b). Manolovici v. 136 E.64th St. Assocs., 122 AD2d 649, 70 NY2d 785 [1987].

¶ 2. Eight rent stabilized tenants bring class action challenging the legality of certain rent increases for major capital improvements. Two classes defined-tenants and landlords. Bryant Ave Tenants' Assoc. v. Koch, 131 AD2d 318 [1987].

¶ 3. Petitioner's membership in Rent Stabilization Association was terminated because of failure to produce documentation of rental history to CAB to determine lawful rent. They did produce some evidence but left a one year gap. Former § YY51-6.0(c)(10)(11)[§ 26-511], such paragraph having been repealed by ch 403 of 1983, provided for expulsion of owner who did not comply with "order" of CAB. But no formal "order" was issued in this case and the expulsion of an entire building was excessive. Matter of Milevoi v. Conciliations and Appeals Board, 137 AD2d 533 [1988].

¶ 4. Under rent stabilization law a renewal lease must be offered to a "tenant", § YY51-6.0(c)(4)[§ 26-511(c)(4)]. There is no definition of the term "tenant" forcing use of lease definition. "Gay life partner" of deceased tenant does not qualify as a "family member". Collins v. Next West Mgt. 137 Misc. 2d 632 [1987].

¶ 5. In holdover summary proceeding a granddaughter moved into subject premises over 2 years prior to death of "tenant" and grandson, a disabled person, moved in over 1 year prior to tenants' death. They have right to renewal lease. Rent Stabilization Code § 2523.5(b)(2) which rules here superseded a contradiction court ruling and remedial statute should be applied broadly to avoid hardship. N.Y. Life v. Estate of Haelen, 137 Misc. 2d 639 [1987].

¶ 6. While the Rent Control Law contains succession rights in rent controlled apartments the Rent Stabilization Law provides no such succession rights. The Legislature did this purposely to make them less onerous. The new Rent Stabilization Code, eff. May 1, 1987, violates § 26-511(b) by granting "succession rights" to family members representing an unconstitutional intrusion of Legislative domain by an administrative agency. East Four-Forty Associates v. Ewell, 138 Misc. 2d 235 [1988].

¶ 7. Rent increases for major capital improvements should not be permanently incorporated into the base rent of each apartment unit. Cost of such improvements should be "amortized over a five-year period" per § 26-511(c)(6)(b), that is payments should last a definite period and stop after costs have been recovered by landlord. In this case major capital improvement includes trash compactor, heating and elevator work. Ansonia Residents v. DHCR, 141 Misc. 2d 224 [1988], affirmed 75 NY2d 206.

¶ 8. Attempting to recover possession owner wrote "I am not able to renew your lease as I want Apt. 1A for my own use." In this case owner wanted possession for his fathers use. Notice provision was violated because the phrase "for my own personal use" is not the same as "my immediate family use". Powers v. Babic, 141 Misc. 2d 344 [1988].

¶ 9. Sublessee is protected by rent overcharge provisions of the code. Prime tenant may not charge rent that exceeds the legal stabilized rent, § 26-511(c)(12). If prime tenant and sublessee cohabit the proper rent charged to sublessee should be negotiated as in any contract. Diamond v. Menasche, 141 Misc. 2d 899 [1988].

¶ 10. Landlord may not create a self-executing rent increase without the approval of the commissioner of housing and community renewal pursuant to § 26-511(c)(7). Court has no authority to order rent increase when statute is so clear. Aron Assocs. v. DeLaCruz, 141 Misc. 2d 1044 [1988].

¶ 11. Division of Housing and Community Renewal in a proper exercise of statutory authority acted rationally in furtherance of its duty regarding the critical housing shortage in the city by amending the Rent Stabilization Code allowing relatives residing with a tenant to have succession rights to lease. Festa v. Leshin, 138 Misc. 2d 399 reversed, Festa v. Leshen, 145 AD2d 49 [1989].

¶ 12. Tenant reached age 62 years during pendency of owner occupancy proceeding claiming personal use exception and is protected by § 26-511(c)(9)(b) unless owner proves personal use contention and provides equivalent or superior alternate accommodations. Prior appeals of an intermediate nature do not equate with bad faith on tenants part. Blane v. Isles, 142 Misc. 2d 1 [1988].

¶ 13. Hospital is entitled to renewal lease because it is the named tenant on the expired lease. Nurses who sublease from hospital are not entitled to renewal leases pursuant to § 26-511(c)(12)(g) as that is not their primary residences. 520 E. St. v. Lenox Hill Hosp., 142 Misc. 2d 723 [1988] reversed, 157 AD2d 138 [1990].

¶ 14. Cooperatives do not qualify for alternative hardship rent increases pursuant to § 26-511(c)(6-a). This section applies to "owners of buildings" and cooperatives don't qualify. Grand Leasing v. DHCR, 147 AD2d 562 [1989].

¶ 15. Plaintiffs, as low-income, rent-stabilized tenants may commence a class action for a declaratory judgement to challenge the validity of section 41 of the Code of the Rent Stabilization Association of New York City as violative of section YY51-6.0(c)(6) (26-511) of the Ad Code. Bryant Ave. Tenants' Assn. v. Koch, 127 AD2d 470, affirmed, 71 NY2d 856 [1988].

¶ 16. When owner has an equity relationship with contractor a rent increase based on major capital improvement may not be based on the "J-51" cost schedule. Court found the schedule violates § 26-511(c)(6)(b) which requires that rent increases be based on the actual cost of the MCI, which is not the measure used in HPD's J-51 schedule. Matter remanded for determination of actual cost. Artha MGT v. DHCR, 143 Misc. 2d 717 [1989].

¶ 17. DHCR was given the authority to amend the Rent Stabilization Code and to adopt provisions which "in general, protects tenants and the public interest" (§ 26-511 (c)(1)). It was an exercise of this authority in promulgating 9 NYCRR 2523.5.(b)(2) allowing family member of deceased tenant a renewal lease. Cohen v. Berger, 153 AD2d 920 [1989].

¶ 18. Plaintiffs challenged validity of certain sections of the Rent Stabilization Code on ground their promulgation is beyond scope of defendant's legislative authorization, which specifies "no provision of such code shall impair or diminish any right or remedy granted to any party by this law or any other provision of law," §26-511(b). The gravemen of plaintiff's challenges are "purely legal" and are directed at defendant's authority to promulgate particular regulations does not require examination of facts not yet developed. Complaint is reinstated. Community Hous. Imp. Program v. NYS DHCR, 175 AD2d 905, 573 N.Y.S.2d 522 [1991].

¶ 19. Tenant in occupancy and not an "illusory tenant" has right to purchase shares when building is under cooperative conversion, pursuant to former Ad Cd §YY51-6.0(c)(9)(b). There is common-law distinction between subletting, which Ad Cd §26-511(c)(12) permits and assignment which it does not. Animus revertendi, the intention to return to the prremises is the criteria which a tenant is judged to have conveyed a sublease and length of time the tenant has relinquished occupancy remains a salient consideration. Bruenn v. Cole, 165 AD2d 443, 568 N.Y.S.2d 351 [1991].

¶ 20. Rent Stabilization Law, Ad Cd §26-511(c)(7), does not specifically require a DHCR "order" for rent increases based on improvements to the premises but only that DHCR approve such increases, which it has done by setting forth the formula for rent increases contained in the code. Trio Realty Co. v. Cofield, 161 Misc.2d 244, 573 N.Y.S.2d 228 [1991].

¶ 21. In Manocherian v. Lenox Hill Hospital, 84 N.Y.2d 385, 618 N.Y.S.2d 857, cert denied 514 US 1109, 115 S.Ct. 1961, 131 L.Ed.2d 853, the court struck down on constitutional grounds a portion of the statute which would have permitted not-for-profit hospitals to lease rent stabilized units in perpetuity for the purpose of subleasing them to hospital staff members. The court held that the statute called for an impermissible "taking" within the meaning of the due process section of the Constitution. Subsequently, the court held that subtenants of the hospital did not have renewal rights for their apartments. Manocherian v. Lenox Hill Hospital, 229 A.D.2d 197, 654 N.Y.S.2d 339 (1st Dept. 1997), motion for leave to appeal denied, 90 N.Y.2d 835, 660 N.Y.S.2d 710 (1997).

¶ 22. The collection of a temporary retroactive rent increase of up to 6% annually (9 NYCRR 2522.4(a)(8)) in addition to collection of permanent rent increase of up to 6% for major capital improvements (MCI) violates Ad Cd §26-511(c)(6) because it permits the collection of an aggregate rent increase in excess of 6% in a year. The court also ruled that the merger of MCI rent increases into base rent of stabilized tenants and any resulting compounding effect caused by the application of rent guideline increases to the increased base rent is proper under Ad Cd §26-511(c) and condoned by Ansonia Residents Assn. v. DHCR, 75 NY2d 206. Bryant Ave. Tenants Assn. v. Koch, 196 AD2d 766 modified 84 NY2d 960 [1994].

¶ 23. Bryant Avenue Tenants Association v. Koch, 84 N.Y.2d 960, 620 N.Y.S.2d 825 (1994). A rent increase attributable to a Major Capital Improvement (MCI) is merged into the base rent, for purposes of calculating rent guidelines increases. In other words, the MCI increase becomes a permanent part of the rent. However, the court held that the maximum MCI increase which can be collected in one year is six percent.

¶ 24. The statute provides that if a building is converted to cooperative ownership pursuant to an eviction plan, a non-purchasing tenant may remain in occupancy for up to three years after the conversion plan has been declared effective. However, where a prospective purchaser of a vacant apartment signs a subscription agreement to purchase the shares allocated to the apartment and then takes occupancy pursuant to an interim lease, the three year rule does not apply.

¶ 25. Normally, where there is an eviction plan, non-purchasing tenants may remain in occupancy for up to three years after the plan is declared effective. However, this rule does not apply where a prospective purchaser of a vacant apartment signs a subscription agreement to purchase the shares representing ownership in that apartment and takes possession under an interim lease. Goodman v. 303 Beverly Owners Corp., 184 A.D.2d 748, 585 N.Y.S.2d 774 (2nd Dept. 1992).

¶ 26. The State Division of Housing and Community Renewal has exclusive jurisdiction over the landlord's application for permission to demolish a building occupied by rent stabilized tenants. Sohn v. Calderon, 78 N.Y.2d 755,

579 N.Y.S.2d 940 (1991).

¶ 27. The landlord is not required to obtain approval of the State Division and Community Renewal before collecting a rent increase by reason of improvement and new equipment installed in an individual apartment. Global Management v. Richards, 152 Misc.2d 759, 587 N.Y.S.2d. 473 (App.Term 2nd & 11th Judic. Dists. 1992), ¶ 28. Where the statute governing Major Capital Improvements (MCI) permits the owner to obtain an MCI based on the actual cash costs of the improvements, the state agency cannot substitute a schedule of costs used by the New York City Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development in "J-51" tax abatement cases (see Admin. Code § 11-243) which would provide significantly lower increases for the owner. Artha Management, Inc. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 143 Misc.2d 717, 541 N.Y.S.2d 722.

¶ 29. Even where an item is depreciable under the Internal Revenue Code, it will not qualify for MCI treatment unless it is building wide and constitutes an improvement to the building. Garden Bay Manor Associates v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 150 A.D.2d 378, 540 N.Y.S.2d 665 (2nd Dept. 1989).

¶ 30. The application of waterproof covering, accompanied by a minimal amount of pointing, does not qualify for MCI treatment. Poseidon Realty Holding Corp. V. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 650 N.Y.S.2d 241 (App.Div. 2nd Dept. 1996).

¶ 31. Apparently, the tenant's failure to timely exercise a renewal lease can be cured, so as to save the tenancy. See Fairbanks Gardens Co. v. Ghandi, N.Y.L.J., Apr. 9, 1996, page 33, col. 3 (App.Term 2nd & 11th Judic. Dists); 923 Fifth Avenue Associates v. Eisenberg, 191 A.D.2d 396 (1st Dept.).

¶ 32. The State Division of Housing and Community Renewal reasonable interpreted the law to mean that an owner must file a major capital improvement rent increase application within two years of the physical completion of the MCI work. Metropolitatn Life Ins. Co. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 653 N.Y.S.2d 318 (1st Dept. 1997).

¶ 33. Although a Major Capital Improvement generally must be building-wide in order for a landlord to qualify for a rent increase, the landlord was given an increase where only one out of 204 apartments was not improved. Carol Management Corp. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 140 Misc.2d 673, 531 N.Y.S.2d 839 (Sup.Ct. Queens Co. 1988).

¶ 34. A corporation, North Star Graphics, leased a rent stabilized apartment in the corporate name, but the apartment was, with the landlord's consent, occupied by an individual, Cohen, who was designated by the corporation but who was not a shareholder. The lease stated that the tenant agreed that during the term of the lease, the apartment would be occupied by the Cohen or such corporate officials as North Star might designate. Subsequently, the building underwent a cooperative conversion and Spitzer, formerly a principal of the landlord, now held the shares representing ownership of the apartment. When the Spitzer later claimed that North Star was violating its lease by permitting a non-shareholder to occupy the apartment, the court held that North Star now had the right to renew the lease as tenant of record, with Cohen as a designated occupant. Thus, a corporation has the power to designate persons, who are not corporate officers or employees, to occupy rent stabilized apartments leased by the corporation. North Star Graphics, Inc. v. Spitzer, 135 A.D.2d 401, 521 N.Y.S.2d 699 (1st Dept. 1987). See also, Cale Dev. v. Conciliation and Appeals Board, 94 A.D.2d 229, 463 N.Y.S.2d 814 (1st Dept. 1983), aff'd 61 N.Y.2d 976, 475 N.Y.S.2d 278 (1984).

¶ 35. The court upheld the rent agency interpretation of the major capital improvement (MCI) law to mean that an owner must file an MCI increase application within two years of the physical completion of the work, rather than within two years of the subsequent procurement of the required governmental approval of the work. The court indicated that DCHR was not inflexible in the application of the rule and that the instant MCI's were denied in part because even after the needed governmental approvals were obtained, and a substantial time remained on the two year period, landlord had failed to act complete the MCI. Metropolitan Life Ins. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community

¶ 37. Where a cooperative conversion plan has been presented to tenants, but a tenant dies before exercising the right to purchase, the estate of the deceased tenant cannot exercise the right to purchase. An offeree's power of acceptance terminates when the offeree dies. DeKovessey v. Coronet Properties Co., 69 N.Y.2d 448, 515 N.Y.S.2d 740 (1987). Note, however, that if a tenant dies after having tendered a subscription agreement for the shares, the estate of the tenant can exercise the right to purchase. See Weinstein v. Hohenstein, 69 N.Y.2d 1017, 517 N.Y.S.2d 907 (1987), which involved a rent controlled tenancy, but the same principles are applicable to a rent stabilized tenancy.

¶ 38. A Major Capital Improvement (MCI) must inure to the benefit of all tenants. Where DHCR found that 18 percent of the newly installed apartment windows had substantial defects, and there was no evidence showing that the defects were due to wear and tear or vandalism rather than poor installation, the agency had a rational basis for denying an MCI. Simkowitz v. DHCR, 256 A.D.2d 51, 680 N.Y.S.2d 525 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1998).

¶ 39. DHCR had a rational basis for denying an MCI increase where there were tenant complaints of continuing leaks and water damage, the contractor submitted a statement indicating that it had worked on only part of the building, and the contractor was subsequently required to do additional pointing work on the building. Cenpark Realty Co. v. DHCR, 257 A.D.2d 543, 685 N.Y.S.2d 26 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1999).

¶ 40. In one case, improvements made to an individual apartment were completed prior to the effective date of the lease, when the apartment was still vacant. The court held that even though the tenant had actually executed the lease before work on the improvement began, the tenant's consent to the work was not needed. Elisofon v. DHCR, 262 A.D.2d 40, 691 N.Y.S.2d 434 (1st Dept. 1999), leave to appeal denied, 94 N.Y.2d 757, 704 N.Y.S.2d 532 (1999).

¶ 41. A court held that state housing agency did not act arbitrarily in promulgating Rent Stabilization Code § 2522.4(a)(8), which requires that applications for Major Capital Improvement (MCI) rent increases be filed within two years after completion of the MCI. Hampton Mgmt. v. DHCR, 255 A.D.2d 261, 680 N.Y.S.2d 245 (1st Dept. 1998), appeal denied 93 N.Y.2d 806, 691 N.Y.S.2d (1999).

¶ 42. In an owner occupancy proceeding, the landlord's good faith need to acquire the apartment for personal use or use of a family member is often a disputed question of fact. Thus, the court will grant the tenant discovery on the question. Perlman v. Martinez, N.Y.L.J., Jan. 6, 1999, page 27, col. 6 (Civ.Ct. Kings Co.).

¶ 43. A tenant who is disabled may be able to defeat an owner occupancy proceeding. However, a tenant who asserts such disability has placed his or her medical condition in issue, and the landlord can be granted discovery regarding the tenant's medical condition. Banchik v. Ruggieri, N.Y.L.J., Nov. 18, 1998, page 29, col. 4 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 44. Where a landlord brings an owner occupancy proceeding alleging that her son needs the apartment, the tenant will be allowed discovery regarding the landlord's family situation. Perlman v. Martinez, N.Y.L.J., Jan. 6, 1999, page 27, col. 6 (Civ.Ct. Kings Co.).

¶ 45. Although the existence of a rent reduction order pursuant to Admin. Code 26-514 precludes the landlord from collecting guidelines increases, it does not prevent the landlord from obtaining a vacancy increase where a tenant has moved out of the apartment. I.G. Second Generation Partners v. Young, May 1, 2002, page 22, col. 6 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 46. A landlord sought to remove a senior citizen tenant from an apartment under the owner occupancy statute and offered the tenant an alternative apartment. The offered apartment had a rent higher than that of the subject apartment, and was located on a relatively high floor in this walk-up building. Thus, the tenant, who had difficulty in walking, would have had problems negotiating the stairs. The court held that the offer was not sufficient to meet the requirements of the owner occupancy laws. Tsororos v. Lauriello, N.Y.L.J., Apr. 8, 1998, page 32, col. 5 (Civ.Ct. Kings Co.).

¶ 47. Where a landlord has installed new windows throughout the building, and all but a few windows are satisfactory, DHCR can permit an MCI increase for tenants in the building, exempting those units where there are still problems with the windows. Apparently, there are no specific agency procedures to be followed by a landlord who claim that the problems have been corrected, but the landlord will not be able to collect the increase until the agency or court has found that the conditions have in fact been corrected. Ace Fenimore Realty Corp. v. Weeks, N.Y.L.J., Dec. 22, 1999, page 34, col. 3 (Civ.Ct. Kings Co.).

¶ 48. The installation of new windows will not qualify for an MCI increase, where a substantial number of the new windows are defective. Duell v. DHCR, 269 A.D.2d 235, 703 N.Y.S.2d 37 (App.Div. 1st Dept.).

¶ 49. Where a tenant never received proper notice of the landlord's application for a Major Capital Improvement increase while the case was before the District Rent Administrator, the tenant will be able to raise new matters in a Petition for Administrative Review. Quiroz v. DHCR, 181 Misc.2d 734, 695 N.Y.S.2d 279 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 1999).

¶ 50. Although a landlord who fails to maintain required services may lose guidelines increases, this will not affect the landlord's entitlement to Major Capital Improvement increases or increases by reason of improvements to individual apartments (IAI increases). Barriga v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., Aug. 4, 1999, page 26, col. 1 (Sup.Ct. Queens Co.).

¶ 51. Where a landlord has made an application for an MCI increase, DHCR must serve a copy of the application upon the tenants. It is not sufficient for the agency to merely inform tenants that an application has been filed by the landlord and that the application can be examined at the DHCR office. Horowitz v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., Nov. 3, 1999, page 34, col. 1 (Sup.Ct. Queens Co.).

¶ 52. A determination by DHCR that an alteration constitutes a Major Capital Improvement (MCI) necessarily entails the agency's expertise in evaluating factual data and is entitled to deference if not irrational or unreasonable. If the determination is rational, it must be upheld even though the court, if viewing the case in the first instance, might have reached a different conclusion. The burden is on the landlord to justify an MCI increase sought by presenting documentary support. All relevant documentation should be presented to the Rent Administrator. New data cannot be presented for the first time in a Petition for Administrative Review (PAR), unless the evidence could not reasonably have been offered at the Rent Administrator level. West Village Assocs. v. DHCR, 277 A.D.2d 111, 717 N.Y.S.2d 31 (1st Dept. 2000).

¶ 53. Horowitz v. DHCR, 277 A.D. 382, 717 N.Y.S.2d 204 (2d Dept. 2000). A tenant who seeks to challenge a landlord's application for a Major Capital Improvement rent increase must interpose a timely objection to the application. The agency cannot consider the tenant's objection where the tenant fails to show good cause for the delay.

¶ 54. DHCR can deny a landlord's application for a Major Capital Improvement (MCI) rent increase by reason of the existence of a "rent impairing violation (see Multiple Dwelling Law Sec. 302-a). This is true even if the violation would not have been deemed to be a "C" violation within the meaning of the Housing Maintenance Code (Adm. Code. Secs. 27-2004 and 27-2115). In this case, the violation consisted of peeling lead paint. Weinreb Mgmt. v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., May 2, 2001, page 21, col. 5 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 55. Generally, a Major Capital Improvement (MCI) increase will not be granted if the work is performed in a piecemeal fashion and is not completed within a reasonable period of time. In order to demonstrate that the work is something other than routine repair and maintenance (which does not qualify as an MCI), it must be shown that the work was performed as part of a unified plan or consecutively timed project. However, in one case, where re-piping work took nearly four years to complete but the delays were beyond the control of the landlord (the contractor performing the work had suffered severe financial reverses), and there was no indication of any intent to abandon the project, the Appellate Division reversed the decision below and granted the landlord's application for an MCI. Riverside Equities, LLC v DHCR, 292 A.D.2d 313, 740 N.Y.S.2d 21 (1st Dept. 2002).

¶ 56. In one case, where the landlord has failed to collect an agency-authorized Major Capital Improvement increase, the agency held that the landlord had waived the right to include the MCI increase in the tenant's base rent. Apar Realty Co. v. DHCR, 286 A.D.2d 274, 729 N.Y.S.2d 135 (1st Dept. 2001).

¶ 57. A court held that DHCR's policy of permitting Major Capital Improvement increases for pointing and waterproofing work only once every fifteen years (unless the owner obtained a waiver from DHCR) was rationally based. Equity Properties, Inc. v. DHCR, 288 A.D.2d 117, 733 N.Y.S.2d 49 (1st Dept. 2001).

¶ 58. The 20-year rule, which protects long-time apartment residents from owner occupancy evictions, applies only to rent controlled tenants, and to rent stabilized tenants outside New York City, and not to rent stabilized tenants in New York City. Brusco v. Armstrong, N.Y.L.J., Feb. 6, 2002, page 18, col. 1 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 59. The rent stabilization law protects a tenant from eviction under the owner occupancy law where the tenant or tenant's spouse is disabled. Moreover, the protection from eviction applies where the tenant's gay life partner is disabled. Mandell v. Cummins, 2001 WL 968362 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 60. A landlord prevailed in an owner occupancy proceeding where he showed an intent to use this brownstone building as a one-family residence for himself and his family. The owner's admission that he might ultimately use the tenant's apartment as a bedroom for a child as yet unborn, was not fatal to the owner's case. Proctor v. Barnes, 2002 WL 1291835 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 62. Where a cooperative building is the subject of a mortgage foreclosure action and reverts to rent stabilization, the owner will (if requirements are met) be able to acquire an apartment under the owner occupancy rules. Crosby v. Hucko, N.Y.L.J., Sept. 20, 2001, page 19, col. 4 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 63. In one case, DHCR authorized a reduction of closet space in the subject apartment to accommodate a new plumbing system. This resulted in a permanent rent reduction of four dollars a month for each affected closet. The court held that since the de minimus reduction of closet space could not be equated with a failure to provide essential services (which would require a rent restoration order before rent increases would be allowed), the landlord was entitled to a Major Capital Improvement increase. 301 Holdings, LLC v. Matto, N.Y.L.J., Sept. 26, 2001, page 18, col. 1 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 64. Only a natural person can bring an owner occupancy proceeding. Thus, an executor of an estate, who is acting in a representative capacity, lacks standing to bring the proceeding. Even though the executor may be an ultimate beneficiary of the estate, such person will have to await probate and distribution of estate assets before he or she will be eligible to maintain an owner occupancy proceeding in an individual capacity. Estate of Marcus v. Davis, N.Y.L.J., Dec. 12, 2001, page 19, col. 4 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 65. In one case, a corporate shareholder commenced a holdover proceeding, seeking to acquire a tenant's apartment for personal use. Generally, only individual owners, and not corporate shareholders, can acquire apartments for personal use. Petitioner conceded that this building, which was formerly subject to the Loft Law (Multiple Dwelling Law Article 7C) was never formally converted to cooperative ownership, but claimed that the building was a de facto cooperative. Although the Attorney General accepted for filing an application for permission to file an offering plan, no actual plan was ever filed. As a result, the court rejected petitioner's claims that there was a de facto cooperative corporation and said that petitioner did not qualify as an owner for purposes of the owner occupancy statute. Ross v. Abbott, N.Y.L.J., Dec. 19, 2002, page 23, col. 1 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 66. The six percent limitation on the collect ability of Major Capital Improvement (MCI) increases must be based on the rent in effect at the time of the landlord's application for the MCI increase, not on the subsequent legal regulated rents. Permanent MCI increases will be added into the legal regulated rent. Dara Realty Assocs. v. Schachter, 194 Misc.2d 29, 751 N.Y.S.2d 677 (App.Term 2d Dept.).

¶ 67. Where the landlord has applied for a Major Capital Improvement (MCI) increase, the New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal has discretion to decide whether or not an inspection of the apartment is necessary. Moreover, the agency can consider violations which are placed upon the premises up until the date of the decision, even those placed upon the premises after the date of application. Furthermore, in denying the application, the agency has the right to rely upon reports of the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development, which found "C" (immediately hazardous) violations to exist. 370 Manhattan Ave. Co. v. DHCR, 11 A.D.3d 370, 783 N.Y.S.2d 38 (1st Dept. 2004).

¶ 68. In one case, the tenant had lived in the subject building for over ten years and when it came time to renew, did not execute a renewal lease. The landlord brought a holdover summary proceeding and sought to regain possession of the premises. The tenant claimed, in his defense, that his lease contained a preferential rent (below the legal regulated rent) and that he was entitled to a renewal lease based on that preferential rent. Admin. Code § 26-514(c)(14) provides that where a lease is made at a preferential rent, the landlord can, upon renewal, raise the rent to the legal rent regulated level. There is an exception in cases where the landlord and tenant specifically agree that the preferential rent will hold for the full length of the tenancy. However, where, as here, the lease provided that the preferential rent would hold for the current term, and did not provide for the continuation of the preferential rent into the next renewal term, the landlord can lawfully demand the full legal regulated rent upon the next renewal. Les Filles Quatre v. McNeur, 9 Misc.3d 179, 798 N.Y.S.2d 899 (Sup.Ct. N.Y. Co. 2005). On the other hand, where a lease clearly and unequivocally provides for a rent concession for the full length of the tenancy, the tenant is entitled to a rent concession for the duration of the tenancy. Colonnade Mgmt, LLC v. Warner, 11 Misc.3d 52, 812 N.Y.S.2d 209 (1st Dept. 2006).

¶ 69. There are conflicting decisions as to the amount of space in a building that a landlord can acquire for his or her own use and the use of his or her family. In Pultz v. Economakis, 8 Misc.3d 1022(A), 803 N.Y.S.2d 20 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 2005), the court issued a preliminary injunction prohibiting a landlord from taking steps to evict all of the tenants in the building, where the landlord had planned to create the equivalent of a one-family home consisting, among other rooms, of five bedrooms, six bathrooms, a living room, den, playroom, a library and a gym. On the other hand, in Malta v. Brown, 12 Misc.3d 1164(A), 819 N.Y.S.2d 210, 2006 WL 1540292 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.), the court held that there is no specific limitation on the number of tenants who can be evicted in an owner occupancy proceeding, and a case by case determination must be made as to the landlord's good faith need to acquire multiple apartments, or even an entire building, for the use of his or her own family.

¶ 70. In one case, tenants complained that DHCR approved a Major Capital Improvement without detailed evidence distinguishing rewiring work (for which the MCI was sought) and non-MCI telecommunications work done by the same contractor. The court ruled in favor of the landlord. The landlord produced their contract with the installation contractor and a separate contract between the cable telecom licensee and the contractor. The landlord consistently responded to DHCR's inquiries concerning income from the cable telecom license and what the subcontractors were being paid. The agency's action approving the MCI had a rational basis even though it did not seek documents showing individual tasks. Sanders v. DHCR, 40 A.D.3d 440, 836 N.Y.S.2d 583 (1st Dept. 2007).

¶ 71. Where a lease contained a rental less than the legal regulated rent, the owner can raise the preferential rent to the previously established legal regulated rent on lease renewal with the same tenant. This rule applies even where there are two apartments which have been combined. 764 Madison Ave. LLC v. Risse, 17 Misc.3d 330, 842 N.Y.S.2d 693

(Civ.Ct. New York Co. 2007).

¶ 72. Where a landlord and tenant agree to a preferential lease covering the tenant's entire period of occupancy (i.e. extending into subsequent leases), such an agreement is enforceable and does not violate the rent regulation laws. Romero v. DHCR, 16 Misc.3d 484, 842 N.Y.S.2d 213 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 2007).

¶ 73. A landlord conceivably can recover a group of rent stabilized apartments as per Pultz v. Economakis, 2008 NY Slip Op. 4900, 10 N.Y.3d 542 , 2008 NY Lexis 1463 (Ct. App. NY), the defendant owners served plaintiffs with notices of "nonrenewal of lease." They indicated their intention to recover possession of all of the remaining rent-stabilized apartments pursuant to the Rent Stabilization Code 9 NYCRR 2524.2(c)(3) and 2524.4(a). Specifically, the defendants were planning to occupy these apartments for their personal use as a primary residence for the husband. These notices were accompanied by a detailed plan for converting the subject apartments to their own single family dwelling.

The plaintiffs brought suit, and sought a declaration that the defendants' plan violated the Rent Stabilization law and Code. In addition, plaintiffs sought an injunction so that the notices would be tolled and the defendants would be prevented from instituting any holdover proceedings based on the notices during the course of the action. Plaintiffs also sought attorneys' fees based on defendants' breach of the residential leases with respect to the two plaintiffs.

Plaintiffs argue that it was the intent of the legislature to preserve rent-stabilized housing for persons and families that occupy such housing (RSL Admin. Code section 26-501). Further, the legislature intended to strictly limit those situations in which an owner is permitted to remove an entire building or all its units from the stabilized housing stock. Finally, they state that their actions requires authorization from DHCR.

Although the Supreme Court held in the plaintiffs' favor, the App. Div. Reversed, holding that defendants' plan to recover rent-stabilized apartment units was governed by 9 NYCRR 2524.4(a) ("owner occupancy provision) and not 9 NYCRR 2524.5(a)(1)(I) ("market withdrawal" provision). The Court granted plaintiffs appeal to this court.

Read together, the plain language of the Rent Stabilization Law (Admin. Code 26-511(c)(9)(b) and the Rent Stabilization Code 9 NYCRR 2524.4(a)(1)(3) permit an owner to refuse renewal leases to rent-stabilized tenants and to recover possession of "one or more" stabilized dwelling units for his or her personal use and occupancy as his or her primary residence, or as the primary residence of a member of the owner's family. DHCR approval was not required. If there is more than one owner, only one of the individual owners may recover the units for his or her personal use and occupancy. Section 2524.5(a)(1)(ii) was not considered applicable, and is triggered only when there is an attempt to wirthdraw any or all housing accommodations from the rental market and where the owner requires the units for use in connection with a business that he or she owns or operates, or because the cost of removing violations is equal to or exceeds the value of the property.

The Legislature intended to make more rental housing available, but it also intended to allow owners to live in their own buildings if they choose to do so. The unambiguous language of 9 NYCRR 2524.4(a) was chosen by the Legislature to reconcile conflicting policies, and the Court gave effect to the plain meaning of the law. Consequently, the Court affirmed the App. Div. decision in favor of the defendants. However, the defendants could not recover the stabilized apartment units unless and until they established their good faith intention to recover possession of the subject apartments for the husband owner's personal use as the primary residence.

An agreement by a tenant to pay a rent higher than that permitted under the rent stabilization law, in exchange for the landlord's agreement not to invoke the non-primary residence provisions of the law against the tenant, was void from its inception and unenforceable by either party. Riverside Syndicate, Inc. v. Munroe, 10 N.Y.3d 18, 853 N.Y.S.2d 263 (2008).

¶ 74. In 370 Manhattan Ave. Co, Inc. v. Seitz 2008 NY Slip Op. 28164, 2008 NY Misc. Lexis 2510 (App. Term 1st Dept.), a rent stabilized tenant had a lease and two renewal leases at a preferential rent. The registration statements listed both the preferential rent and the legal regulated rent. The tenant was served with the registration statements and was aware that the landlord was charging a lower rate for the apartment but reserved the right to raise the rent when the lease expired. Plaintiff signed renewal leases without objecting to the figures in the rent registration statement. Since the tenant did not challenge the rent for more than a four-year period, the tenant was bound by the legal regulated rent contained in the third renewal lease.

¶ 75. In Candida v. Salvation Army 2007 NY Slip Op. 9684, 46 AD3d 294, 847 NYS2d 81 (App. Div. 1st Dept.), the court held that two residences owned and operated by the Salvation Army were exempt from the Rent stabilization Law since the primary use of the residences was charitable. The tenants' initial occupancies commenced after defendant acquired the residences. Thus, they were exempt from the operation of the Rent Stabilization Law and defendant was entitled to refuse to renew the tenants leases (NYC Admin. Code section 26-511(c)(9)(c)(i)).

¶ 76. Admin. Code Sec. 26-511(c)(13) allows an "individual apartment improvement increase (IAII) only where there has been a substantial modification or increase of dwelling space or an increase in the services, or installation of new equipment or improvements, or new furniture or furnishings, provided in or to the tenant's housing accommodation. Where the only testimony was from the principal of an unlicensed contracting firm that supposedly performed the work, and he admitted he did not perform or even see the work being done, and he testified merely that he had "gone to the building," that testimony was insufficient to show that the work had been done. Moreover, where the landlord contended that the apartment was painted in 2006, that testimony was incredible in light of the finding of the City Department of Housing Preservation and Development that there was a lead paint hazard at the premises. Since the hazards of lead paint have been known for a long time, there is no way that disputed paint job could have been performed in 2006. A further reason for denying the IAII was that the landlord failed to produce canceled checks contemporaneous with completion of the work, or an invoice receipt marked "payment in full." Sheridan Properties, LLC v. Liefshitz 2007 NY Slip Op. 52316U, 17 Misc.3d 1137A, 851 NYS2d 74, 2007 NY Misc. Lexis 7948 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Cty.).

¶ 77. Years ago, when a landlord had been charging a tenant a preferential rent, the landlord could not raise the rent to the full legal regulated rent in lease renewals for that tenant, but would have to wait for a vacancy and new tenant before being able to collect the full legal regulated rent. The Rent Stabilization Law, Sec. 26-511(c)(14), was amended in 2003 to permit a landlord to end a preferential rent at the time of lease renewal and charge the legal regulated rent. The new rule came into play when a rent stabilized tenant sought a declaratory judgment that he was entitled to renew his lease at a preferential rent. The owner and landlord wanted to begin charging plaintiff the legal regulated rent. The court explained that the new rule applied unless otherwise agreed by the owner. In other words, the new rule did not preclude owners from entering into leases that continue preferential rents for a designated time period. Where an original lease or renewal lease contains a provision that the tenant is entitled to further leases at the preferential rent for the full term of the tenancy, the 2003 amendment does not negate such a provision. In the instant case, the landlord could have inserted into the lease a provision placing a time limit on the preferential rent, but did not do so. Where, as here, the lease provided for the preferential rent, with no time limit on that rent, the landlord could not properly insert into a renewal lease a provision calling for the charging of the full legal regulated rent. Von Rosenvinge v. Wellington Fee, LLC 2008 NY Slip Op. 50765U, 19 Misc.3d 1118A, 2008 NY Misc. Lexis 2053 (Sup. Ct. NY County).

§ 26-512 Stabilization provisions.

a. No owner of property subject to this law shall charge or collect any rent in excess of the initial legal regulated rent or adjusted initial legal regulated rent until the end of any lease or other rental agreement in effect on the local effective date until such time as a different legal regulated rent shall be authorized pursuant to guidelines adopted by a rent guidelines board.

b. The initial regulated rent for housing accommodations subject to this law on the local effective date of the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen seventy-four or which become subject to this law thereafter, pursuant to such act, shall be:

(1) For housing accommodations which were regulated pursuant to this law or the city rent and rehabilitation law prior to July first, nineteen hundred seventy-one, and which became vacant on or after such date and prior to the local effective date of the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen seventy-four, the rent reserved in the last effective lease or other rental agreement; provided that such initial rent may be adjusted on application of the tenant pursuant to subdivision b of section 26-513 of this chapter.

(2) For housing accommodations which were regulated pursuant to the city rent and rehabilitation law on the local effective date of the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen seventy-four, and thereafter become vacant, the rent agreed to by the landlord and the tenant and reserved in a lease or provided for in a rental agreement; provided that such initial rent may be adjusted on application of the tenant pursuant to subdivision b of section 26-513 of this chapter.

(3) For housing accommodations other than those described in paragraphs one and two of this subdivision, the rent reserved in the last effective lease or other rental agreement.

(4) For any plot or parcel of land which had been regulated pursuant to the city rent and rehabilitation law prior to July first, nineteen hundred seventy-one and which,

(i) became vacant on or after July first, nineteen hundred seventy-one and prior to July first, nineteen hundred seventy-four, the rent reserved in a lease or other rental agreement in effect on June thirtieth, nineteen hundred seventy-four plus increases authorized by the rent guidelines board under this law for leases or other rental agreements commencing thereafter; provided that such initial rent may be adjusted on application of the tenant pursuant to subdivision b of section 26-513 of this chapter or,

(ii) became vacant on or after July first, nineteen hundred seventy-four, the rent agreed to by the landlord and the tenant and reserved in a lease or other rental agreement plus increases authorized by the rent guidelines board under this law for leases or other rental agreements commencing thereafter; provided that such initial rent may be adjusted on application of the tenant pursuant to subdivision b of section 26-513 of this chapter.

(iii) Where the commissioner has determined that the rent charged is in excess of the lawful rents as stated in subparagraph (i) or (ii) hereof, plus lawful increases thereafter, he or she shall provide for a cash refund or a credit, to be applied against future rent, in the amount of any rent overcharge collected by an owner and any penalties, costs, attorneys' fees and interest from the date of the overcharge at the rate of interest payable on a judgment pursuant to section five thousand four of the civil practice law and rules for which the owner is assessed.

c. With respect to accommodations for which the initial legal regulated rent is governed by paragraph two of subdivision b hereof, no increase of such initial legal regulated rent pursuant to annual guidelines adopted by the rent guidelines board shall become effective until the expiration of the first lease or rental agreement taking effect after the local effective date of the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen seventy-four, but in no event before one year after the commencement of such rental agreement.

d. With respect to accommodations, other than those referred to in subdivision c, for which a lease is entered into after the local effective date of the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen seventy-four, but before the effective date of the first guidelines applicable to such accommodations, the lease may provide for an adjustment of rent pursuant to such guidelines to be effective on the first day of the month next succeeding the effective date of such guidelines.

e. Notwithstanding any contrary provisions of this law, on and after July first, nineteen hundred eighty-four, the legal regulated rent authorized for a housing accommodation subject to the provisions of this law shall be the rent registered pursuant to section 26-517 of this chapter subject to any modification imposed pursuant to this law.

f. Notwithstanding any provision of this law to the contrary in the case where all tenants named in a lease have permanently vacated a housing accommodation and a family member of such tenant or tenants is entitled to and executes a renewal lease for the housing accommodation if such accommodation continues to be subject to this law after such family member vacates, on the occurrence of such vacancy the legal regulated rent shall be increased by a sum equal to the allowance then in effect for vacancy leases, including the amount allowed by paragraph (five-a) of subdivision c of section 26-511 of this law. Such increase shall be in addition to any other increases provided for in this law including an adjustment based upon a major capital improvement, or a substantial modification or increase of dwelling space or services, or installation of new equipment or improvements or new furniture or furnishings provided in or to the housing accommodation pursuant to section 26-511 of this law and shall be applicable in like manner to each second subsequent succession.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. Determination of Concilation and Appeals Board fixing the "fair market" by averaging the guidelines of the Rent Guidelines Board with rents generally prevailing in the same area for substantially similar housing accommodations was not arbitrary and capricious.-Wallber Realty Co. v. Conciliation & Appeals Board of City of N.Y. 55 NY2d 739 [1981].

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Under this section, which makes it unlawful for landlords to charge any "rent" in excess of the legal regulated rent, previous cases have held that attorneys' fees and late fees cannot be collected as additional rent. In a more recent case, the court held that surcharges for sub-metered electrical service or other utility service could not be collected by the landlord as additional rent. Related Tiffany v. Faust, N.Y.L.J., Apr. 24, 2002, page 20, col. 5 (App.Term 2nd & 11th Judic. Dists.).

¶ 2. A person who succeeds to the rights of a rent stabilized tenant is not considered a "new" tenant within the meaning of Admin. Code Sec. 26-512. Thus, the owner cannot charge him or her a "first" rent as though he or she were a vacancy tenant. Lasigniora v. Hooper, N.Y.L.J., July 25, 2001, page 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).

¶ 3. Where a landlord withdrew the subject buildings from the Mitchell-Lama program, and they immediately became subject to rent stabilization, the immediately preceding rent for each apartment became the "initial regulated rent" under the RSL. CHAPTER 4 RENT STABILIZATION a. The tenant or owner of a housing accommodation made subject to this law by the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen seventy-four may, within sixty days of the local effective date of this section or the commencement of the first tenancy thereafter, whichever is later, file with the commissioner an application for adjustment of the initial legal regulated rent for such housing accommodation. The commissioner may adjust such initial legal regulated rent upon a finding that the presence of unique or peculiar circumstances materially affecting the initial legal regulated rent has resulted in a rent which is substantially different from the rents generally prevailing in the same area for substantially similar housing accommodations.

b. 1. The tenant of a housing accommodation that was regulated pursuant to the city rent and rehabilitation law or this law prior to July first, nineteen hundred seventy-one and that became vacant on or after January first, nineteen hundred seventy-four may file with the commissioner within ninety days after notice has been received pursuant to subdivision d of this section, an application for adjustment of the initial legal regulated rent for such housing accommodation. Such tenant need only allege that such rent is in excess of the fair market rent and shall present such facts which, to the best of his or her information and belief, support such allegation. The rent guidelines board shall promulgate as soon as practicable after the local effective date of the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen seventy-four guidelines for the determination of fair market rents for housing accommodations as to which any application may be made pursuant to this subdivision. In rendering a determination on an application filed pursuant to this subdivision b the commissioner shall be guided by such guidelines and by the rents generally prevailing in the same area for substantially similar housing accommodations. Where the commissioner has determined that the rent charged is in excess of the fair market rent he or she shall, in addition to any other penalties or remedies permitted by law, order a refund of any excess paid since January first, nineteen hundred seventy-four or the date of the commencement of the tenancy, whichever is later. Such refund shall be made by the landlord in cash or as a credit against future rents over a period not in excess of six months.

2. The provisions of paragraph one of this subdivision shall not apply to a tenant of a housing accommodation for which the initial legal regulated rent is no greater than the maximum rent that would have been in effect under this law on December thirty-first, nineteen hundred seventy-three, or for the period commencing January first, nineteen hundred seventy-four and ending December thirty-first, nineteen hundred seventy-five as calculated pursuant to the city rent and rehabilitation law (if no such maximum rent has been calculated for a particular unit for the period commencing January first, nineteen hundred seventy-four and ending December thirty-first, nineteen hundred seventy-five, the division of housing and community renewal shall calculate such a rent), as the case may be, if such apartment had not become vacant on or after January first, nineteen hundred seventy-four, plus the amount of any adjustment which would have been authorized under this law for renewal leases or other rental agreement, whether or not such housing accommodation was subject to this law, for leases or other rental agreements commencing on or after July first, nineteen hundred seventy-four.

c. Upon receipt of any application filed pursuant to this section, the commissioner shall notify the owner or tenant, as the case may be, and provide a copy to him or her of such application. Such owner or tenant shall be afforded a reasonable opportunity to respond to the application. A hearing may be held upon the request of either party, or the commissioner may hold a hearing on his or her own motion. The commissioner shall issue a written opinion to both the tenant and the owner upon rendering his or her determination.

d. Within thirty days after the local effective date of the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen seventy-four the owner of housing accommodations as to which an application for adjustment of the initial legal regulated rent may be made pursuant to subdivision b of this section shall give notice in writing by certified mail to the tenant of each such housing accommodation on a form prescribed by the commissioner of the initial legal regulated rent for such housing accommodation, the maximum rent at the time such housing accommodation became vacant and of such tenant's right to file an application for adjustment of the initial legal regulated rent of such housing accommodation.

e. Notwithstanding any contrary provision in this law an application for an adjustment pursuant to this section must be filed within ninety days from the initial registration. This subdivision shall not extend any other time limitations imposed by this law.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Fair market rent appeal process is available to the first tenant to occupy an apartment which becomes subject to the Rent Stabilization Law following vacancy decontrol, and to the second tenant where the first tenant was never properly notified, and continues to pass from tenant to tenant until there is a tenant who is duly notified, § 26-513(b)(d). In the case where an appeal has started and tenant "waives" his rights by discontinuing the rent appeal, the appeal will be continued until determination, § 26-513(b)(1); (c). McKenzie v. Mirabal, 155 AD2d 194, 553 N.Y.S.2d 699 (1st Dept. 1990).

¶ 2. In a rent regulation proceeding, the 90-day period within which to file a fair market rent appeal begins to run when the notice of the initial regulated rent is served (see Ad Code § 26-513(b)(1)) and the only evidence that the 90-day period ever commenced was submitted for the first time in the instant proceeding which may not be considered by the court. In addition, there is no proof that the notice of the initial rent was mailed in accord with Ad Code § 26-513(d) and petitioner-landlords failure to obtain the appropriate records from the prior owner may not be excused. Ardito v. Higgins, 147 Misc. 2d 412.

¶ 3. Realizing the difficulty tenant faces in obtaining comparable rent data, NYS Div. of Hous. & Comm. Ren. interpreted 9 NYCRR 2522.3(b) and §26-513(b)(1) as permissive, not mandatory, giving tenant option to provide supplemental facts if he so chose regarding initial regulated rent exceeded the Fair Market Rent. Chinitz v. NYS Div. of Hous. & Comm. Ren., 191 AD2d 222, 594 NYS2d 246, 594 N.Y.S.2d 246 (1st Dept. 1993).

¶ 4. Where the landlord fails to serve the tenant with the required initial legal regulated rent notice by the method prescribed in the statute, the 90 day period within which the tenant must bring a fair market rent appeal never begins to run. Estate of Goldman v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 228 A.D.2d 192, 643 N.Y.S.2d 99 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1996).

¶ 5. Where a landlord fails to provide required documentation for comparable rents, the administrative agency can use the special guidelines for determining the lawful rent, and is not required to give the landlord a hearing on the issue. Matter of Jane Mansions v. Higgins, 189 A.D.2d 713, 593 N.Y.S.2d 5 (1st Dept. 1993).

¶ 7. In opposing the tenant's fair market rent appeal, it is the landlord's burden to come forward with evidence of rents for housing accomodations similar to the one in question. The state agency is not required to do the landlord's work of assembling the necessary documents. Powers v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 229 A.D.2d 349, 645 N.Y.S.2d 794 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1996).

¶ 8. An apartment became decontrolled by reason of a vacancy and the landlord never registered the premises as rent stabilized, but the landlord charged the new tenant a substantially higher rent than the previous rent controlled figure. The court held that the tenant's challenge to this rent was in the nature of a rent overchage claim (over which the courts and the administrative agency have concurrent jurisdiction) rather than a fair market rent proceeding (over which only the administrative agency would have had jurisdiction). The court also held that since there was no initial registration, the legal rent was the last rent under rent control. Smitten v. 56 MacDougal Street Co., 167 A.D.2d 205, 561 N.Y.S.2d 585 (1st Dept. 1990).

¶ 9. The New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal properly rejected an apartment as being a comparable apartment in the context of a Fair Market Rent Appeal, where it was occupied by its owner for more than a year after 1953. Thus, the current tenant is not the first decontrolled tenant to take occupancy and thus would not have the right to take a fair market rent appeal. Fichera v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 233 A.D.2d 107, 649 NYS2d 430 (App. Div. 1st Dept. 1996).

¶ 10. In determining a fair market rent appeal, it is within the agency's discretion to decide whether to accept or reject rental data as truly comparable to the subject apartment. The court's function is limited to deciding whether the agency's ruling had a rational basis. Here, agency reasonably rejected the landlord's submission of a list a three apartments with a statement of the rent charged, where there was no proof that these were legally regulated rents. Chios Realty v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, N.Y.L.J., June 26, 1996, page 30, col. 3 (Sup.Ct. Queens Co.).

¶ 11. Where a landlord failed to send the tenant a proper notice of fair market rent, the right to take a fair market rent appeal will pass from tenant to tenant. Weinreb Management v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 231 A.D.2d 473, 647 N.Y.S.2d 219 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1996).

¶ 12. The agency should use the law related to comparable rents as the law existed at the time that the fair market rent appeal was filed. Jemrock Co. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, N.Y.L.J., Oct. 9, 1996, page 21, col. 5 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 13. Where a landlord fails to submit appropriate comparable rents after being given an opportunity to do so, the agency can decide a fair market rent appeal solely on the basis of the special rent guidlines promulgated under the rent stabilization law. Chios Realty Co. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 269 A.D.2d 296, 657 N.Y.S.2d 757 (App.Div. 2d Dept. 1997).

¶ 14. The general rule is that the tenant must present all its evidence and arguments while the case is before the District Rent Administrator (DRA). However, in one case, it was held that DHCR can accept evidence at the Petition for Administrative Review level that could not reasonably have been offered or included in the DRA process. Since DHCR failed to follow its customary procedures in affording the landlord the opportunity to complete its comparability data prior to the DRA decision, the evidence properly could be accepted during the PAR proceeding. Thus, LL prevailed. Stern v. DHCR, 250 A.D.2d 403, 673 N.Y.S.2d 7 (1st Dept. 1998).

¶ 15. A tenant who prevails in a Fair Market Rent Appeal is entitled to an abatement of rent in the amount of the award. If there is still a balance owed after six months, the tenant can obtain the balance of the award as a refund from the landlord. This differs from the procedures used in rent overcharge cases, where the tenant actually enters a judgment against the landlord in the amount of the overcharge. If a landlord brings a summary non-payment proceeding against a tenant, and the amount owed by the landlord on the Fair Market Rent award exceeds the amount of unpaid rent, the summary proceeding will be dismissed. Kingsbridge Partners v. Atkinson, N.Y.L.J., Dec. 24, 1998, page 30, col. 1 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 16. Where a landlord provides proof of a certified mailing to the tenant of a Notice of Fair Market Rent, such proof is sufficient to raise a presumption of receipt, and the tenant's assertion that she did not recall receiving the notice was insufficient to rebut the presumption. Pezzano v. Holland, 249 A.D.2d 17, 671 N.Y.S.2d 225 (1st Dept. 1998).

¶ 17. In Fair Market Rent Appeal cases, unlike rent overcharge cases, the statute does not provide awards of interest. However, a tenant in a Fair Market Rent Appeal case may have a contractual right to interest. The rights and obligations of the rent stabilization law are read into a lease as an implied covenant, so that the landlord's breach of the lease entitles the tenant to pre-judgment interest. Thus, a tenant who asserted a counterclaim for rent overcharges, in response to a summary non-payment proceeding brought by the landlord, was entitled to pre-judgment interest under CPLR 5001. 200 West 15th Street v. Nunez, N.Y.L.J., June 21, 2000, page 30, col. 5 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 18. The agency had a rational basis for rejecting comparability data submitted by the landlords, where the alleged comparable apartments were substantially larger than the subject apartment. IG Second Generation Partners LP v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., Nov. 10, 1999, page 27, col. 5 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 19. In an action by a tenant to enforce a fair market rent award, the court held that a managing agent, which is an agent for a disclosed principal (i.e. the owner of the building) is not personally liable for the award. Paganuzzi v.

Primrose Mgmt. Co., 268 A.D.2d 213, 701 N.Y.S.2d 350 (2d Dept. 2000).

¶ 20. Under the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997, if the rent is not challenged within four years after the filing of the registration statement, it cannot thereafter be challenged in a fair market rent proceeding. The law applies to proceedings which were pending at the time of the enactment of the law, even though the case had been subject to long administrative delays, which such delays were not willful. Goldman v. DHCR, 706 N.Y.S.2d 381 ((App.Div. 1st Dept. 2000). See also Negron v. Goldman, N.Y.L.J., May 4, 1999, page 26, col. 2 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 21. A tenant can bring a plenary action to enforce a Fair Market Rent (FMRA) award. Unlike the law governing rent overcharges, there are no statutory time limitations for enforcement of FMRA orders. Math v. Estate of Goldman, 707 N.Y.S.2d 425 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 2000).

¶ 22. In one case, the court held that the four-year lookback period applies not only to rent overcharge cases but also to Fair Market Rent Appeal cases. The court also held that where a formerly rent controlled apartment became decontrolled due to the tenant's non-primary residence, the landlord could charge the first tenant any level of rent that the market would bear, and the second rent stabilized tenant would not be entitled to maintain a Fair Market Rent Appeal. Muller v. DHCR, 263 A.D.2d 296, 703 N.Y.S.2d 80 (1st Dept. 2000).

¶ 23. In a hearing to determine the timeliness of a proceeding to challenge the fair market rent, DHCR cannot, on its own motion, rely upon evidence about which the parties had no notice or a chance to be heard. Spedicato v. DHCR, 269 A.D.2d 233, 703 N.Y.S.2d 118 (1st Dept. 2000).

¶ 24. Where a tenant was never served with an initial legal regulated rent, DHCR's four year review period runs from the filing of the complaint, not from a later time that the proceeding was converted by DHCR from a rent overcharge complaint to a fair market rent proceeding. One Three Eight Seven Assocs. v. DHCR, 269 A.D.2d 296, 703 N.Y.S.2d 44 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 2000).

¶ 25. Tzfil Realty Corp. v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., Jan. 3, 2001, at 25, col. 1 (Sup.Ct. Queens Co.). Fair Market Rent Appeals (FMRA's) are essentially rent overcharge complaints that challenge the first rent for a decontrolled apartment as exceeding the lawful stabilized increases over the last controlled rent. Rent overcharge complaints have separate statutory sections and time limits within the rent stabilization law, and are treated by DHCR as separate and distinct proceedings. However, DHCR, where appropriate, may convert a rent overcharge complaint into an FMRA, and the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 (RRRA) does not prohibit such conversion. Even though the tenant used the form for rent overcharge complaints, the agency properly recognized that the tenant in effect was challenging the first rent stabilized rent and converted the proceeding into the appropriate form. The fact that the conversion occurred about 18 months after the filing of the complaint does not constitute a basis for vacating DHCR's action, absent a showing that the delays were prejudicial, deliberate or negligent or violated some statutory provision.

¶ 26. Busbee v. Ken-Rob Co., 280 A.D.2d 406; also leave to appeal denied, 97 N.Y.2d 605, 737 N.Y.S.2d 52, 720 N.Y.S.2d 785 (1st Dept. 2001). A tenant is entitled to recover pre-judgment interest on the refund of the excess rent that was awarded to her in a Fair Market Rent Appeal, computed from the midpoint of the period during which she paid such excess rent to the date the landlord paid her the principal amount of the refund.

¶ 27. Although DHCR is required to award treble damages in the case of a willful rent overcharge, the Fair Market Rent Appeal statute makes no provision for treble damages. Mendelsohn v. Empire Associates Realty Co. Ass'n., 278 A.D.2d 40, 717 N.Y.S.2d 155 (1st Dept. 2000).

¶ 28. The Second Department has held that under the Rent Regulation Act of 1997 (RRRA) of 1997, the four-year limit on rent challenges applies not only to rent overcharge proceedings but also to Fair Market Rent Appeals. The court thus agreed with the First Department ruling in Muller v. DHCR, 263 A.D.2d 296, 703 N.Y.S.2d 80, and overruled its own prior decision of Janoff, 609 N.Y.S.2d 673, which pre-dated the RRRA. The legislative intent was to limit the landlord's record-keeping requirements to a four-year period. This results in consistent treatment of the initial rent registration for purposes of both Fair Market Rent Appeals and rent overcharge claims, the court said. Thus, where the landlord can establish that an unchallenged annual rent statement was issued at least four years before the filing of the complaint, the rent recited in that statement will be the legal regulated rent. With respect to complaints filed within 90 days of the initial registration statement, the legal regulated rent is the rent charged four years prior to the date of the initial registration plus any lawful increases and adjustments. Since a Fair Market Rent Appeal is a request for adjustment of the initial rent, and the legislature did not indicate any intent to eliminate Fair Market Rent Appeals, then the RRRA does not limit the tenant's right to timely challenge the initial registered rent on the ground that it exceeds the Fair Market Rent. Perry v. DHCR, 722 N.Y.S.2d 556 (2d Dept. 2001).

¶ 29. The Second Department has held that under the Rent Regulation Act of 1997 (RRRA) of 1997, the four-year limit on rent challenges applies not only to rent overcharge proceedings but also to Fair Market Rent Appeals. The court thus agreed with the First Department ruling in Muller v. DHCR, 263 A.D.2d 296, 703 N.Y.S.2d 80 (1st Dept. 2000), and overruled its own prior decision of Janoff, 203 A.D.2d 291, 609 N.Y.S.2d 673, which pre-dated the RRRA. The legislative intent was to limit the landlord's record-keeping requirements to a four-year period. This results in consistent treatment of the initial rent registration for purposes of both Fair Market Rent Appeals and rent overcharge claims, the court said. Thus, where the landlord can establish that an unchallenged annual rent statement was issued at least four years before the filing of the complaint, the rent recited in that statement will be the legal regulated rent. With respect to complaints filed within 90 days of the initial registration statement, the legal regulated rent is the rent charged four years prior to the date of the initial registration plus any lawful increases and adjustments. Since a Fair Market Rent Appeal is a request for adjustment of the initial rent, and the legislature did not indicate any intent to eliminate Fair Market Rent Appeals, then the RRRA does not limit the tenant's right to timely challenge the initial registered rent on the ground that it exceeds the Fair Market Rent. Perry v. DHCR, 722 N.Y.S.2d 556 (2d Dept. 2001).

¶ 30. A tenant is entitled to bring a plenary action to enforce a Fair Market Rent Adjustment order where the landlord has not refunded the excess rent within six months. Thus, where a landlord brings a summary non-payment proceeding against the tenant, the Civil Court has subject matter jurisdiction to entertain the tenant's counterclaim for a refund of rent and, if appropriate, enter a money judgment in favor of tenant for the sum in question. Goldman v. Topping, N.Y.L.J., Apr. 6, 2001, page 18, col. 1 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 31. Where a notice of fair market rent was served upon the tenant but is defective in form, the 90-day period for the tenant to bring a Fair Market Rent Appeal does not begin to run. I.G. Second Generation Partners L.P. v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., June 11, 2001, page 24, col. 1 (App.Div. 1st Dept.).

¶ 32. In calculating the Fair Market Rent for the subject apartment, DHCR added in a guidelines increase based upon a claimed increase in the Maximum Base Rent (MBR). The court, however, held that was improper to add in an MBR increase without first determining whether the landlord would have been entitled to such an increase. The court noted that the increase in the MBR would not have been automatic. To obtain an order of eligibility from DHCR, the landlord would have had to, among other things, submit a written certification to DHCR, six months before the effective date of the increase, that it has cleared all rent-impairing violations, as well as 80 percent of all other violations. Schaper & Falck v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., June 5, 2001, page 18, col. 2 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 33. The second tenant of a rent stabilized apartment was permitted to maintain a Fair Market Rent Appeal, where the notice of fair market rent served on the first tenant was defective in not disclosing the maximum rent (rent controlled rent) for the apartment. This was the case even though the first rent stabilized tenant admitted that he was not misled by the defective notice and knowingly elected to forego a Fair Market Rent Appeal. Weinreb v. DHCR, 741 N.Y.S.2d 38 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 2002).

¶ 34. In one case, a rent overcharge complaint was converted to a Fair Market Rent Appeal. The court then held that in adjudicating the fair market rent appeal, DHCR properly limited examination of the subject apartment's rental history to the four year period prior to the tenant's challenge to the rent charged for the apartment. 1781 Riverside, LLC v. DHCR, 287 A.D.2d 255, 730 N.Y.S.2d 506 (1st Dept. 2001).

¶ 35. A tenant may enforce the administrative agency's Fair Market Rent Appeal award in a plenary action, and the reduce the award to judgment. In such a case, the tenant will obtain pre-judgment interest, computed from the date of the agency order. Moreover, the tenant can also obtain judgment for any excess rents paid after the period covered by the agency order; in other words, there is no need to commence a second Fair Market Rent Appeal. Gersten v. 111-50 Realty Co., N.Y.L.J., July 11, 2001, page 25, col. 5 (Civ.Ct. Queens Co.).

¶ 36. In one case, the tenant filled out a form entitled "Tenant's Objection to Initial Rent/Services Reduction," complaining about increases taken by the landlord for individual apartment improvements and major capital improvements. However, the tenant left blank the box on the form which covered Fair Market Rent Appeals. More than five years later, DHCR chose to treat the case as a Fair Market Rent Appeal and demanded that the owner produce records of comparable rents. When the owner could not produce those records, the agency decided the Fair Market Appeal against the owner. The court, however, held that since the tenant never properly notified the owner that a Fair Market Rent Appeal was being brought, and the owner had no reason to retain its records regarding comparable apartments, it was arbitrary and capricious for the agency to demand production of those records long after the tenant's submission. Thus, from the tenant's point of view, it is vitally important to make it clear to the landlord that a Fair Market Rent Appeal is being brought. 1 BK Street Corp. v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., Nov. 7, 2001, page 18, col. 2 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 37. Absent a showing of good cause, a landlord cannot submit comparability data for the first time at the PAR (Petition for Administrative Review) level. Gilman v. DHCR, 99 N.Y.2d 144, 753 N.Y.S.2d 1 (2002).

¶ 38. In determining which comparable rents to use for the purposes of setting the fair market rent for the subject apartment, it was rational for DHCR to reject the proffered rental history of apartments in a different line from the subject apartment, where the apartments in the different line contained three rooms, as opposed to two rooms in the subject apartment. Moreover, the court held that DHCR did not deny the landlord due process by not giving notice that it would be relying on its own records and would not be making any inspections. Furthermore, even if the subject apartment were three rooms, the landlord failed to show that its other characteristics, including square footage, were comparable to that of the three room apartments in different lines. Finally, it was proper for DHCR to reject a report of the landlord's appraiser, which listed as comparables apartments that were not in the same area as the subject apartment. Goldman v. NYS DHCR 6 A.D.3d 197, 774 N.Y.S.2d 151 (1st Dept. 2004).

¶ 39. Where a landlord never served a notice of fair market rent on a tenant, DHCR has the discretion to treat the case as a Fair Market Rent Appeal rather than a rent overcharge claim. The court rejected the tenant's argument that this the determination deprived him of the "benefit" of treble damages. The law was not intended to generate "benefits" of inequitable windfalls for tenants in the form of unauthorized treble damages or onerous rent freezes during protracted periods of administrative processing, the court said. Verbalis v. DHCR, 1 A.D.3d 101, 769 N.Y.S.2d 474 (1st Dept. 2003).

¶ 40. Where a landlord withdrew the subject buildings from the Mitchell-Lama (private Housing Finance Law or PHFL) program, and they became subject to rent stabilization, the landlord made an application to DHCR for an adjustment of rent based upon "unique and peculiar" circumstances which allegedly resulted in rents substantially different from rents generally prevailing in the same area for substantially similar housing accommodations. The basis of the application was that the rents in the buildings had been governed by the PHFL for 29 years and were not economically viable without the requested adjustment. The landlord argued that the buildings were not subject to the stabilization under the 1969 Rent Stabilization Law (RSL of 1969) but instead became subject to stabilization under the Emergency Tenant Protection Act of 1974 (ETPA). If the landlord prevailed, it would be able to make an application under the "unique and peculiar" provision of §26-513(a). On the other hand, DHCR and an intervenor tenants' association argued that the building became subject to rent stabilization under the RSL of 1969, and that the landlord's appropriate remedy is an application for an adjustment based on the hardship standard, a tougher one to meet. KSLM-Columbus Apartments, Inc. v. DHCR, 2005 WL 1397033 (Court of Appeals).

¶ 41. It may take years before a tenant's fair market rent appeal is finally decided. In one case, the agency determined that the rent charged by the landlord was in fact a fair market rent. However, by the time of the determination, rent arrears of $19,000 (the difference between the rent paid by the tenant and the fair market rent) had accumulated. The agency then took the position that hardship would result if the tenant were required to pay the arrears, and sought to waive the arrears. The court, however, held that the agency did not have the power to waive the arrears. Although the agency had discretion to use equitable principles in setting the amount of fair market rent, it could not erase the rent arrears. On the other hand, to ease the impact on the tenant, it could direct that the arrears be paid back over a period of time rather than all at once. IG Second Generation Partners LP v. DHCR, 7 Misc.3d 229, 789 N.Y.S.2d 873 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 2005).

¶ 42. In one case, where the agency determined that the landlord had not served an initial registration statement, it found that the tenant's fair market rent appeal was timely. In upholding the action, the court found that the determination was based on more than the agency's own denial of receipt, and credited the tenant's testimony on the issue. The court held that the agency had wide discretion to determine issues of credibility, and that the courts were not going to review credibility determinations. 780 P.P. Associates v. DHCR, 11 A.D.3d 392, 783 N.Y.S.2d 559 (1st Dept. 2004).

¶ 43. Successor landlords are not generally liable for excess rent collected by predecessor landlords, as determinated in a Fair Market Rent Appeal order, unless they had an opportunity to participate in the FMRA, in which event they are subject to joint and several liability for the excess rent collected by their predecessors. Sciarra v. 531 East 83rd St. Owners Corp., 8 A.D.3d 159, 779 N.Y.S.2d 66 (1st Dept. 2004).

¶ 44. A plenary action to enforce an FMRA order is governed by the six-year statute of limitations period in CPLR 213(1). Sciarra v. 531 East 83rd St. Owners Corp., 8 A.D.3d 159, 779 N.Y.S.2d 66 (1st Dept. 2004).

Title 26 Housing and Building

CHAPTER 4 RENT STABILIZATION

§ 26-514 Maintenance of services.

In order to collect a rent adjustment authorized pursuant to the provisions of subdivision d of section 26-510 of this chapter an owner must file with the state division of housing and community renewal, on a form which the commissioner shall prescribe, a written certification that he or she is maintaining and will continue to maintain all services furnished on the date upon which the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen seventy-four becomes a law or required to be furnished by any state law or local law, ordinance or regulation applicable to the premises. In addition to any other remedy afforded by law, any tenant may apply to the state division of housing and community renewal, for a reduction in the rent to the level in effect prior to its most recent adjustment and for an order requiring services to be maintained as provided in this section, and the commissioner shall so reduce the rent if it is found that the owner has failed to maintain such services. The owner shall also be barred from applying for or collecting any further rent increases. The restoration of such services shall result in the prospective elimination of such sanctions. The owner shall be supplied with a copy of the application and shall be permitted to file an answer thereto. A hearing may be held upon the request of either party, or the commissioner may hold a hearing upon his or her own motion. The commissioner may consolidate the proceedings for two or more petitions applicable to the same building or group of buildings or development. If the commissioner finds that the owner has knowingly filed a false certification, it shall, in addition to abating the rent, assess the owner with the reasonable costs of the proceeding, including reasonable attorneys' fees, and impose a penalty not in excess of two hundred fifty dollars for each false certification.

The amount of the reduction in rent ordered by the state division of housing and community renewal under this subdivision shall be reduced by any credit, abatement or offset in rent which the tenant has received pursuant to section two hundred thirty-five-b of the real property law, that relates to one or more conditions covered by such order.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. Apt. had been rented unfurnished, prior to the base rent date, at the same rate as established for the apt. as furnished on July 1, 1974, and there was thus no requirement for a rollback of rent when the apt. was subsequently rented as unfurnished. There are no provisions for establishing the value of furnishings in an apt. for such purposes.-Paul Chessin v. N.Y.C. Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 116 Misc. 2d 1003 [1982]; reversed 100 AD2d 297 [1984].

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Order to reduce rent based upon decrease in services following complaint of no live-in superintendant, inadequate janitorial service, garbage accumulation. Administrative agency responsible to reduce rent changed from Conciliation and Appeals board (CAB) to State Division of Housing and Community Renewal per NYC Ad Cd § 26-514 [YY51-6.0.3] as amended Ch 403/1983. Such transfer of responsibility does not affect statutory authority to reduce stabilized rent. Matter of E. 52nd St. Assocs. v. State Div. of Hous. & Comm. Renewal, 131 AD2d 348 [1987].

¶ 2. Owner of apartment complex failed to maintain a new security system which included removal of preexisting outer door locks on each building. DHRC erred in failing to order a rent reduction because of a diminuation of "require service", § 26-514. Hyde Park Gardens v. DHCR, Off. of Rent Admin., 140 AD2d 351 affirmed 73 NY2d 998 [1989].

¶ 3. Tenant may not consent to rent restoration nor may DHCR order rent restoration "until the underlying defect is cured", in this case master bedroom ceiling was repaired in an unworkmanlike manner displaying blisters and water stains. Administrative Code § 26-514 provides tenant may apply for reduction to prior level rent and DHRC shall so reduce rent if owner has failed to maintain service. DHRC has no discretion and agency's denial of partial restoration of rent is correct. ANF Co. v. DHCR, 176 AD2d 518, 574 N.Y.S.2d 709 [1991].

¶ 4. DHRC ordered rent reduction in an amount of all rent increases until a date when services were restored and ordered refund of major capital improvement rent increases for all tenants for same period. Rent reduction is not denial of due process. In addition to financial incentive for landlords to maintain services, Administrative Code §26-514 provides remedy for tenants who have paid rent increases during periods of decreased services. While petitioners were free to use judicial process, tenants should not suffer because petitioners did not restore services until all appeals were exhausted. Mortgage holders-Intervenor's cross claim is not permitted in special proceedings absent leave of court. Hyde Park Assocs. v. Higgins, 191 AD2d 440, 594 N.Y.S.2d 57 (2nd Dept. 1993).

¶ 5. Nasaw v. Jemrock Realty Co., Inc. 639 N.Y.S.2d 37 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1996). Although the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal does not have exclusive jurisdiction with respect to the maintenance of service, court action in a landlord-tenant dispute should be stayed until a final determination is made by the agency, which has special competence to deal with the issues involved.

¶ 6. Where the state agency had a rational basis for its determination reducing the rent by reason of the landlord's failure to maintain required services, the finding will not be disturbed by the court. Newport Management Co. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 540 N.Y.S.2d 989 (2nd Dept. 1989).

¶ 7. If a services complaint is sustained, the agency should reduce the rent to the level which was in effect prior to the most recent guidelines increase. However, the landlord can still get a vacancy allowance and rent increases attributable to improvements made to the vacant apartment. Graham Court Owners v. Allen, N.Y.L.J., Mar. 19, 1996, page 25, col. 2 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 8. It is for the administrative agency to determine what constitutes a required service and whether such services are being properly maintained. The court affirmed the agency's rent reduction here. The agency reasonably relied on a report of its inspector indicating that the water pressure was too low. Melohn v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 234 A.D.2d 23, 650 N.Y.S.2d 166 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1996).

¶ 9. Where a landlord is ordered to reinstitute services at its building and fails to do so, but fails to do so, the agency can impose civil penalties. It is not necessary to establish that the violation was willful. Matter of David Frankel Realty Co., Inc. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 176 A.D.2d 617, 575 N.Y.S.2d 59 (1st Dept. 1991).

¶ 10. An adverse change in storage facilities available to tenants can constitute an impermissible reduction in services within the meaning of the statute. Originally, the tenants had each been provided with individually locked storage bins in the basement. This was replaced with a common storage area (to which the building superintendent provided access), which provided less security. Matter of Waterside Management v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, N.Y.L.J., July 29, 1998, page 24, col. 6 (Sup.Ct. Queens Co.).

¶ 11. Where an impartial DHCR inspector found that the tenant's refrigerator had an abnormal freezer and refrigerator temperature, and there were improperly installed gaskets, this confirmed the tenant's complaint of a malfunctioning refrigerator and justified a rent reduction. Simkowitz v. DHCR, 251 A.D.2d 5, 673 N.Y.S.2d 647 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1998).

¶ 12. In one case, an agency inter-office memorandum stated that certain conditions would be considered "de minimus" in nature and not rise to the level of decreases in services. One of the listed conditions was the removal of storage space, unless a specific lease rider is provided to tenants allowing storage space or unless formal storage boxes or bins were provided within three years of the filing of the complaint. The court held, in effect, that when adjudicating tenant complaints of reduced services, DHCR must consistently apply its own regulations. Thus, where part of the tenants' complaints related to reduction in storage space, the agency had to take into account the owner's claims that it had never authorized the tenants to use that storage space, and the fact that the registration statement had not listed storage space as one of the available services. Since the agency's decision did not address the impact of this inter-office memorandum, the court remanded the matter to the agency for further consideration. Hakim v. DHCR, 273 A.D.2d 3, 708 N.Y.S.2d 112, leave to appeal dismissed, 95 N.Y.2d 887, 715 N.Y.S.2d 378 (2000).

¶ 13. In one case, a court upheld an agency determination that a garage space was a required service, even though the majority of spaces in the garage were used by non-residents of the building and the garage was constructed after the tenant took occupancy. The important factors in favor of the agency determination were that the building and garage were under common ownership, that a portion of the garage was in the building, and that tenants were able to obtain access to the garage directly from the building. Lyndonville Properties v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., Feb. 23, 2000, page 29, col. 2 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 15. Normally, where the premises have been rent stabilized for a period of time, and DHCR is reducing the rent by reason of the landlord's failure to maintain required services, the rent is reduced by one guidelines increase. However, what happens if the tenant's lease is the first stabilized lease, and there has not been any previous guidelines increase. The Appellate Term, Second Department, held that in such a case, the rent is to be reduced to the level of the last rent controlled rent. Lorcorp, Inc. v. Burke, 185 Misc.2d 720, 713 N.Y.S.2d 891 (App.Term 2d Dept. 2000). Thus, the Second Department disagreed with a prior decision of the Appellate Term, First Department in Graham Court Owners Corp. v. Allen, N.Y.L.J., Mar. 19, 1996, page 25, col. 2, in which the court did not roll the rent back to the rent controlled level but merely reduced the rent by one guidelines increase.

¶ 16. The court upheld a DHCR rent reduction order imposed after the Department of Buildings shut down the elevator after bricks and plaster were falling into it. 780 P.P. Assocs. v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., Feb. 4, 2002, page 19, col. 2 (App.Div. 1st Dept.).

¶ 17. The determination of the rent agency to reduce rent by reason of the owner's failure to supply heat for one and a half months in the winter was upheld by the court as having a rational basis. An inspection by the New York City Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development (HPD) had revealed violations relating to heat, and the violation had not been remedied until after the rent reduction order had been issued and after the agency-imposed deadline for the owner's response to the tenant's complaint had passed. In Re 301 West 11th Street Owners Corp. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 7 A.D.3d 282, 776 N.Y.S.2d 55 (1st Dept. 2004).

¶ 18. Where a tenant had been permitted to use a laundry and a backyard area for the first six years of the tenancy, and the landlord then eliminated such uses, the landlord was deemed to have reduced services. Thus, DHCR acted reasonably in granting the tenant a reduction in rent. Llorente v. DHCR, 16 A.D.3d 105, 792 N.Y.S.2d 20 (1st Dept. 2005).

¶ 19. In one case, the a tenant contended that he was entitled to use the backyard because he had already used it for an extended period of time without a written lease prohibiting this action. However, as the court viewed this situation, the relevant issue was whether access to the backyard was a required service within the rent stabilization law's coverage. The tenant admitted that his only access to the yard was through a window. According to the court, this belied the tenant's inference that this was a service provided by the landlord. Moreover, the landlord and superintendent testified that the tenant was repeatedly told not to use the backyard. The tenant contended that he should have been provided a lease permitting use of the backyard; the court said that if that was the claim, the tenant should have brought a separate proceeding seeking a lease. Furthermore, the court said that even if the tenant had a lease for the premises, the result would be the same unless the lease expressly provided for or excluded use of the yard. Thus, the court held that the agency had a rational basis for determining that the backyard was not a required service. Meirowitz v. NYS Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 28 A.D.3d 350, 814 N.Y.S.2d 56 (1st Dept. 2006), leave to appeal denied, 7 N.Y.3d 718, 2006 WL 3716795 (2006).

a. An owner seeking to recover possession pursuant to subparagraph (c) of paragraph nine of subdivision c of section 26-511 of this chapter shall notify the tenant in occupancy not more than one hundred fifty and not less than one hundred twenty days prior to the end of the tenant's lease term, by mail, of such owner's intention not to renew such lease in order to recover the dwelling unit for its charitable or educational purposes. The owner may give such notice within one hundred twenty days of the expiration of the tenant's lease term, provided it may not commence a summary proceeding to recover the dwelling unit until the expiration of one hundred twenty days from the giving of such notice and, provided, further, that the tenant may remain in occupancy until the commencement of such proceeding at the same rent and upon the same terms and conditions as were provided in his or her expired lease. The notice of intention not to renew the tenant's lease shall be accompanied by a notice on a form prescribed by the division of housing and community renewal setting forth the penalties to which an owner may be subject for his or her failure to utilize the tenant's dwelling unit for the charitable or educational purpose for which recovery of the dwelling unit is sought.

b. If any owner who recovers a dwelling unit pursuant to such subparagraph (c), or any successor in interest, utilizes such unit for purposes other than those permitted under such subparagraph, then such owner or successor shall, unless for good cause shown, be liable to the removed tenant for three times the damages sustained on account of such removal plus reasonable attorney's fees and costs as determined by the court, provided that such tenant commences such action within three years from the date of recovery of the unit. The damages sustained by such tenant shall be the difference between the rent paid by such tenant for the recovered dwelling unit, and the rental value of a comparable rent regulated dwelling unit on the open market. In addition to any other damage, the reasonable cost of removal of the tenant's property shall be a lawful measure of damages.

c. Where a dwelling unit has been recovered pursuant to such subparagraph (c) and within four years of such recovery is rented to a person or entity for purposes other than those permitted pursuant to such subparagraph (c), unless for good cause shown, the rent charged by such owner or any successor in interest for four years following such recovery shall not exceed the last regulated rent payable prior to such recovery.

d. If the owner is found by the commissioner, to have recovered possession of a dwelling unit pursuant to such subparagraph (c) and within four years of such recovery such owner or any successor in interest shall have utilized such unit for purposes other than those permitted pursuant to such subparagraph (c), unless for good cause shown, the commissioner shall impose upon such owner or successor in interest, by administrative order after hearing, a civil penalty for any such violation. Such penalty shall be in an amount of up to one thousand dollars for each offense. Such order shall be deemed a final determination for the purposes of judicial review. Such penalty may, upon the expiration of the period for seeking review pursuant to article seventy-eight of the civil practice law and rules, be docketed and enforced in the manner of a judgment of the supreme court.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. The statute permits a landlord to give a tenant a notice of intention not to renew the lease where it intends to recover the premises for charitable purposes. The notice should be served at least 120 days before the end of the lease. However, even if the notice is served less than 120 days after the expiration of the lease, the landlord will not have to renew the lease but will merely have to give the tenant a 120-day period of continued occupancy dating from the time of service of the notice. A landlord covered by this provision can serve the notice of termination and accept rent without waiving his rights. The acceptance of rent after service of the notice does not create a month-to-month tenancy. Thus, the landlord does not have to serve a 30-day notice, which would have been required in the case of a month-to-month tenancy. Title 26 Housing and Building a. Subject to the conditions and limitations of this subdivision, any owner of housing accommodations who, upon complaint of a tenant, or of the state division of housing and community renewal, is found by the state division of housing and community renewal, after a reasonable opportunity to be heard, to have collected an overcharge above the rent authorized for a housing accommodation subject to this chapter shall be liable to the tenant for a penalty equal to three times the amount of such overcharge. In no event shall such treble damage penalty be assessed against an owner based solely on said owner's failure to file a timely or proper initial or annual rent registration statement. If the owner establishes by a preponderance of the evidence that the overcharge was not willful, the state division of housing and community renewal shall establish the penalty as the amount of the overcharge plus interest. (i) Except as to complaints filed pursuant to clause (ii) of this paragraph, the legal regulated rent for purposes of determining an overcharge, shall be the rent indicated in the annual registration statement filed four years prior to the most recent registration statement, (or, if more recently filed, the initial registration statement) plus in each case any subsequent lawful increases and adjustments. Where the amount of rent set forth in the annual rent registration statement filed four years prior to the most recent registration statement is not challenged within four years of its filing, neither such rent nor service of any registration shall be subject to challenge at any time thereafter. (ii) As to complaints filed within ninety days of the initial registration of a housing accommodation, the legal regulated rent shall be deemed to be the rent charged on the date four years prior to the date of the initial registration of the housing accommodation (or, if the housing accommodation was subject to this chapter for less than four years, the initial legal regulated rent) plus in each case, any lawful increases and adjustments. Where the rent charged on the date four years prior to the date of the initial registration of the accommodation cannot be established, such rent shall be established by the division.

§ 26-516 Enforcement and procedures.

Where the rent charged on the date four years prior to the date of initial registration of the housing accommodation cannot be established, such rent shall be established by the division provided that where a rent is established based on rentals determined under the provisions of the local emergency housing rent control act such rent must be adjusted to account for no less than the minimum increases which would be permitted if the housing accommodation were covered under the provisions of this chapter. Where the amount of rent set forth in the annual rent registration statement filed four years prior to the most recent registration statement is not challenged within four years of its filing, neither such rent nor service of any registration shall be subject to challenge at any time thereafter.

(1) The order of the state division of housing and community renewal shall apportion the owner's liability between or among two or more tenants found to have been overcharged by such owner during their particular tenancy of a unit.

(2) Except as provided under clauses (i) and (ii) of this paragraph, a complaint under this subdivision shall be filed with the state division of housing and community renewal within four years of the first overcharge alleged and no determination of an overcharge and no award or calculation of an award of the amount of an overcharge may be based upon an overcharge having occurred more than four years before the complaint is filed. (i) No penalty of three times the overcharge may be based upon an overcharge having occurred more than two years before the complaint is filed or upon an overcharge which occurred prior to April first, nineteen hundred eighty-four. (ii) Any complaint based upon overcharges occurring prior to the date of filing of the initial rent registration as provided in section 26-517 of this chapter shall be filed within ninety days of the mailing of notice to the tenant of such registration. This paragraph shall preclude examination of the rental history of the housing accommodation prior to the four-year period preceding the filing of a complaint pursuant to this subdivision.

(3) Any affected tenant shall be notified of and given an opportunity to join in any complaint filed by an officer or employee of the state division of housing and community renewal.

(4) An owner found to have overcharged may be assessed the reasonable costs and attorney's fees of the proceeding and interest from the date of the overcharge at the rate of interest payable on a judgment pursuant to section five thousand four of the civil practice law and rules.

(5) The order of the state division of housing and community renewal awarding penalties may, upon the expiration of the period in which the owner may institute a proceeding pursuant to article seventy-eight of the civil practice law and rules, be filed and enforced by a tenant in the same manner as a judgment or not in excess of twenty percent thereof per month may be offset against any rent thereafter due the owner.

b. In addition to issuing the specific orders provided for by other provisions of this law, the state division of housing and community renewal shall be empowered to enforce this law and the code by issuing, upon notice and a reasonable opportunity for the affected party to be heard, such other orders as it may deem appropriate.

c. If the owner is found by the commissioner:

(1) to have violated an order of the division the commissioner may impose by administrative order after hearing, a civil penalty in the amount of two hundred fifty dollars for the first such offense and one thousand dollars for each subsequent offense; or

(2)* to48 have harassed a tenant to obtain vacancy of his or her housing accommodation, the commissioner may impose by administrative order after hearing, a civil penalty for any such violation. Such penalty shall be in the amount of not less than one thousand dollars nor more than five thousand dollars for each such offense or for a violation consisting of conduct directed at the tenants of more than one housing accommodation.

(2) to49 have harassed a tenant to obtain vacancy of his or her housing accommodation, the commissioner may impose by administrative order after hearing, a civil penalty for any such violation. Such penalty shall be in the amount of up to one thousand dollars for a first such offense and up to twenty-five hundred dollars for each subsequent offense or for a violation consisting of conduct directed at the tenants of more than one housing accommodation.

Such order shall be deemed a final determination for the purposes of judicial review. Such penalty may, upon the expiration of the period for seeking review pursuant to article seventy-eight of the civil practice law and rules, be docketed and enforced in the manner of a judgment of the supreme court.

d. Any proceeding pursuant to article seventy-eight of the civil practice law and rules seeking review of any action pursuant to this chapter shall be brought within sixty days of the expiration of the ninety day period and any extension thereof provided in subdivision h of this section or the rendering of a determination, whichever is later. Any action or proceeding brought by or against the commissioner under this law shall be brought in the county in which the housing accommodation is located.

e. Violations of this law, or of the code and orders issued pursuant thereto may be enjoined by the supreme court upon proceedings commenced by the state division of housing and community renewal which shall not be required to post bond.

f. In furtherance of its responsibility to enforce this law, the state division of housing and community renewal shall be empowered to administer oaths, issue subpoenas, conduct investigations, make inspections and designate officers to hear and report. The division shall safeguard the confidentiality of information furnished to it at the request of the person furnishing same, unless such information must be made public in the interest of establishing a record for the future guidance of persons subject to this law.

g. Any owner who has duly registered a housing accommodation pursuant to section 26-517 of this chapter shall not be required to maintain or produce any records relating to rentals of such accommodation for more than four years prior to the most recent registration or annual statement for such accommodation.

h. The state division of housing and community renewal may, by regulation, provide for administrative review of all orders and determinations issued by it pursuant to this chapter. Any such regulation shall provide that if a petition for such review is not determined within ninety days after it is filed, it shall be deemed to be denied. However, the division may grant one extension not to exceed thirty days with the consent of the party filing such petition; any further extension may only be granted with the consent of all parties to the petition. No proceeding may be brought pursuant to article seventy-eight of the civil practice law and rules to challenge any order or determination which is subject to such administrative review unless such review has been sought and either (1) a determination thereon has been made or (2) the ninety day period provided for determination of the petition for review (or any extension thereof) has expired.

¶ 1. The triple damage penalty provided by this section for a willful overcharge is applicable only to such overcharges made after April 1, 1984.-Blodgette v. Melohn, 124 Misc. 2d 736 [1984].

¶ 2. Although certain amendments to this section were not effective until April 1, 1984, an action to obtain a refund of overcharges with interest for excess rent collected prior to April 1, 1984 is authorized as is the collection of attorneys fees.-Blodgette v. Melohn, 124 Misc. 2d 736 [1984].

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Treble damages for a rent overcharge were upheld because landlord failed to furnish documentation of rent records proving that there was no overcharge. Having received notice of the proceeding and failed to justify the rent charged, there can be no complaint of an adverse ruling. Sun v. DHCR, 137 Misc. 2d 434 [1987].

¶ 2. Respondent erred in granting tenant's second rent overcharge complaint after already denying same in a prior proceeding. Petition for administrative review (PAR) is deemed denied due to the expiration of the 90-day period following the filing of the petition without a determination by the administrative agency pursuant to § 26-516(h), is timely. The 60-day period to commence an article 78 proceeding does not begin to run until the 90 days (plus extension) has passed or until a determination is rendered "whichever is later". Judicial review is available. Raynes Assocs. v. DHCR, 137 Misc. 2d 484 [1987].

¶ 3. Alternative remedies in which a tenant may seek to recoup overcharge penalties from the landlord are provided in § 26-516(a)(5). Contention is that present owner is liable for rent overcharges of predecessor and that tenant may offset rent until judgment is satisfied. Tenant is right about liability for predecessor's collection of rent overcharges. Tenant receiving an award for rent overcharge penalties may enter a money judgment or deduct penalty from rent but not both. E. 7th St. Dv. Corp. v. Miller, 138 Misc. 2d 345 [1988].

¶ 4. Non-willful failure to file timely petition for administrative review (PAR) seeking treble damages for failure to show that rent overcharge was not willful does not bar judicial review. Landlords agreement to an indefinite extension of time to render decision does not bar seeking judicial review. Any review of agency determination which is not final represents a burden on the judiciary. Bloom v. DHCR, 138 Misc. 2d 523, 524 N.Y.S.2d 1014 (Sup. Ct. New York Co. 1988).

¶ 5. There is a clear duty to render decision on petition for administrative review (PAR) in a reasonable time. Respondent failed to do this within the 90-day period prescribed in the Rent Stabilization Law, § 26-516(h) and this is grounds for mandamus to compel. Ista Mgt. Co. v. DHCR, 139 Misc. 2d 1 [1988].

¶ 6. Tenants raised treble damage claim responding to landlord's petition for administrative review (PAR) of overcharge award and were not required to file their own PAR to seek judicial review. Landlord produced fraudulent lease to obtain rent increase and burden is on landlord to establish lack of willfulness in response to an overcharge complaint. Sakraf Props v. Eimicke, 139 Misc. 2d 519 [1988].

¶ 7. Maximum based rent increases for 38 units was denied for failing to remove rent impairing violations. Thereafter DHCR made no action to reinspect. Petitioner filed an application for administrative review and has waited 10 months. DHCR failure to perform its duty within a reasonable time is not discretionary once the 90-day review period has passed, § 26-516(h). Matter is remanded to DHCR for determination. Britton Realty Co. v. DHCR, 141 Misc. 2d 683 [1988].

¶ 8. The sixty day period for commencement of an Article 78 proceeding in a rent regulation case does not begin to run until the aggrieved party receives notice of the determination sought to be reviewed. Guirdanella v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 141 Misc.2d 714, 534 N.Y.S.2d 329 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 1988), aff'd 165 A.D.2d 667, 564 N.Y.S.2d (1st Dept.).

¶ 9. Treble damages may be awarded for rent overcharges occurring prior to April 1, 1984, the effective date of § 26-516 unless the landlord establishes the overcharge was not willful. In this case two leases were signed on the same date for the same apartment. Second tenant occupied apartment with a lease higher than the first tenant. Subsequent rent increases were based on this higher rent giving basis for overcharge complaint. Complete rent histories should be required of landlord for cases prior to April 1, 1984. Lavanant v. DHCR, 148 AD2d 185 [1989].

¶ 10. Tenant was awarded rent rollback after J.R.D. Management Corp. failed to submit leases showing rent history. During pendency of suit amendment to former § YY51-6.0.5(g) now § 26-516(g) took effect stating an owner "shall not be required to maintain or produce any records . . . for more than four years prior to the most recent registration of premises." This amendment was improperly ignored. Case remanded for redetermination. J.R.D. Management Corp. V. Eimicke, 148 AD2d 610 [1989].

¶ 11. In March 1984, four days before the effective amendment date of section 26-516(g) of the code of the City of NY, which provided that an owner who has registered its building shall not be required to maintain or produce any records relating to rentals of premises for more than four years prior to the most recent registration of such premises, the tenant filed a complaint of rent overcharge. The respondent, NY State Division of Housing and Community Renewal's (DHCR) determination requiring the production of rent records dating back at least to June 30, 1974 must be set aside because it is well established that where a statute is amended during the pendency of a proceeding, the application of that amended statute to the pending proceeding is appropriate. Woodner Co. v. Eimicke, 160 AD2d 907.

¶ 12. The 60 day statute of limitations contained in Ad Cd §26-516 does not apply and class certification may not be denied on the ground and class certification may not be denied on the ground that plaintiff is not a proper representative of the class because her claim was time barred. Tindell v. Koch, 164 AD2d 689, 565 N.Y.S.2d 789 [1991].

¶ 13. Plaintiff landlord seeks to demolish his building, to evict his rent-controlled tenants and not offer renewal leases to his rent-stabilized tenants. Supreme Court has no right to direct DHPD to issue "no harassment" certificates based on the court's own findings or grant an injunction to enjoin DHCR to inquire into tenant harassment charges. DHCR has responsibility to adjudicate claimed harassment violations, Ad Cd §26-413(b)(2), 26-412(d), 26-511(c). Sohn v. Calderon, 78 N.Y.2d 755, 579 N.Y.S.2d 940 (1991).

¶ 14. Rent increases for a rent-stabilized apartment are not authorized unless the owner complies with the rent stabilization law regarding the filing of annual registration statements and paying annual registration fees, §26-516(g), §§26-517, 26-517.1. Owner's noncompliance requires that the rent be rolled back to the legal regulated rent. Tiebout

Holding Co. v. Cordero, 154 Misc. 2d 37 [1992].

¶ 15. Ad Cd §26-516 provides that a landlord is liable to the tenant for a penalty three times the amount of a rent overcharge. An owner may avoid the penalty if he establishes by preponderance of the evidence that the overcharge was not willful. Here petitioner did not meet that burden and an award of treble damages was made. Matter of Wai Leung Chan v. DHCR, 207 AD2d 552 [1994].

¶ 16. Landlord shall not be assessed treble damages solely on his failure to file an initial or annual rent registration statement pursuant to Ad Cd §26-516(a). At issue here is whether landlord can keep rents collected above last rent-controlled rent. Pursuant to Ad Cd §26-517(e), the court held that upon the late filing of the rent registration statement the landlord can keep the otherwise legal increases in rent collected. Verveniotis v. Cacioppo, 164 Misc. 2d 334 [1995].

¶ 17. Because a rent overcharge complaint was filed by tenant after April 1, 1984 petitioner was under no obligation to produce records dating back more than four years prior to the most recent registration date for the apartment, Ad Cd §26-516(g), and that petitioner's nonproduction of such records should not have led the DHCR to infer a violation of Rent Guidelines Board Order No. 15. Matter of Giffuni Bros. v. DHCR, 211 AD2d 545, 621 NYS2d 73 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1995).

¶ 18. Landlord didn't file an initial rent registration for first stabilized tenant but amount was registered with DHCR. Pursuant to Ad Cd §26-517(e) if increases in rent were lawful except for failure to file a timely registration, the owner, upon the service and filing of late registration shall not be found to have overcharged at any time prior to the filing. Further, Ad Cd §26-516 provides that treble damage penalty not be assessed against owner based solely on owner's failure to file timely or proper rent registration statement. DBL Realty Corp. v. Zavala, 166 Misc. 2d 736 [1995], 637 NYS2d 612.

¶ 19. Branch v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 628 N.Y.S.2d 975 (App.Div. 2nd Dept. 1995). Once a rent overcharge is established, the landlord has the burden of proving that the overcharge was not willful.

¶ 20. Where in a fair market rent case, the landlord fails to submit appropriate rents of comparable apartments despite being given numerous opportunities to do so, the administrative agency can determine the lawful rent solely on the basis of special rent guidelines promulgated under the Rent Stabilization Law. Janoff & Olshan v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 203 A.D.2d 291, 609 N.Y.S.2d 673 (2nd Dept. 1994).

¶ 21. In assessing civil penalties, the administrative agency can multiply the $250 maximum penalty for a first offense by the number of violations and then by the number of years that the violations remained outstanding. Plaza Realty Investors v. Aponte, 198 A.D.2d 164, 604 N.Y.S.2d 61 (1st Dept. 1993).

¶ 22. Treble damages cannot be awarded for rent overcharges which occurred more than two years before the complaint was filed. Wolfisch v. Mailman, 196 A.D.2d 466, 601 N.Y.S.2d 300 (1st Dept. 1993).

¶ 23. Once it was determined that the landlord had overcharged the complaining tenant for rent, it became incumbent on the landlord to establish by a preponderance of the evidence that such overcharges were not willful. Chu v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 231 A.D.2d 567, 647 N.Y.S.2d 285 (App. Div. 2nd Dept. 1996).

¶ 24. Where there was no initial registration, the legal rent rate was the last rent under rent control. Where there is no proof that a late registration statement was filed, the landlord cannot use the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1993 as a defense to a rent overcharge claim. However, treble damages cannot be assessed against the owner based solely upon the owner's failure to file a proper initial or annual rent registration statement. The court also stated that the question of whether the landlord willfully overcharged the tenant is one of fact which is not suceptible to summary judgment. 11

Jones Street Associates v. Orbach, 168 Misc.2d 511, 646 NYS2d 916 (App.Term 1st Dept. 1996).

¶ 25. Where a landlord brings a non-payment proceeding against the tenant, the tenant can assert a setoff for rent overcharges without regard to the four year statute of limitations (CPLR 213-a) which would have applied to an affirmative claim for rent overcharges. Mansions v. Moorhead, N.Y.L.J., Oct. 8, 1996, page 25, col. 4 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 26. The requirement that a Petition for Administrative Review be brought within 35 days after the date of the order being challenged, is strictly enforced. There is no extension for a delay resulting from the agency's mailing of the order to a former address of the petitioner, where the petitioner never gave the agency notice of the change of address. Windsor Place Corp. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 161 A.D.2d 279, 554 N.Y.S.2d 913 (1st Dept. 1990).

¶ 27. A landlord who charged the tenant for appliances which it was aware it had not purchased or installed, and did not reimburse the tenant for more than a year after the tenant filed a complaint with the agency, was found guilty of a willful overcharge and was liable for treble damages. 985 Fifth Avenue, Inc. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 171 A.D.2d 572, 567 N.Y.S.2d 657 (1st Dept. 1991).

¶ 28. In a rene overcharge case, where a Petition for Administrative Review had been pending for more than the 90 day period set forth in the statute, the owner was entitled to a mandamus order directing the state agency to make a final determination within a specified period of time. Dorchester Associates New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 149 A.D.2d 388, 540 N.Y.S.2d 428 (1st Dept. 1989).

¶ 29. The sixty day period for the commencement of an Article 78 proceeding runs from the date that the aggrieved party receives th e order in question from the administrative agency. Sanders v. Holland, N.Y.L.J., Oct. 4, 1996, page 22, col. 2 (Sup. Ct. New York Co.)

¶ 30. Service of an Article 78 petition upon the Attorney General was not deemed service on the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal for purposes of determining the timeliness of service of the petition. Thus, where the Attorney General was served within the required sixty day period but the State Division of Housing and Community Renewal was not served within that time, the Article 78 petition was dismissed. Somlo v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 142 AD2d 535, 531 N.Y.S.2d 3 (1st Dept. 1988).

¶ 31. A landlord charged the tenant a rent increase by reason of improvements allegedly made to an individual apartment (painting and partial rewiring). When a rent overcharge proceeding was brought, the landlord claimed that the overcharge was not willful. However, it was held that the landlord should have known that the above items constituted ordinary repairs rather than "improvements" qualifying for rent increases under the Rent Stabilization Code. Therefore, it was proper for the rent agency to impose treble damages on the landlord. Mayfair York Co. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 658 N.Y.S.2d 270 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1997).

¶ 32. A new owner is liable for rent overcharges collected by a prior owner. Turner v. Spear, 134 Misc.2d 733, 512 N.Y.S.2d 335 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 1987).

¶ 33. A purchaser of a building takes subject to overcharge penalties, including treble damages, assessed upon the prior owner. The purchaser's liability is not affected by the discharge of the seller's debts in bankruptcy. Mars v. Venture Realty Group, 248 A.D.2d 101, 661 N.Y.S.2d 227 (App.Div. 2st Dept. 1997).

¶ 34. In one case, the court rejected a new owner's contention that the overcharge was not willful, and upheld an award of treble damages. The new owner had claimed that its inexperience as a landlord caused it to be misled by the advice of a prior owner that a fair market rent could be charged for the apartment once the tenant who was then in occupancy moved out. Moreover, the overcharge was not excusable on the ground that the prior owner did not provide the new owner with a full rental history. S.E. & K Corp. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community

¶ 35. In the First Department, it has been held that the pet law does not apply to condominiums. Board of Managers of the Parkchester North Condominium v. Quiles, 234 A.D.2d 130, 651 N.Y.S.2d 36 (1st Dept. 1997).

¶ 36. In one case, a tenant had filed a 1988 Fair Market Rent Appeal claiming that the 1987 rent was excessive. In 1995, DHCR issued an order adjusting the legal regulated rent back to 1987 and directed that the rent and all future renewal and/or vacancy increases be recomputed for the complaining tenant and successor tenants. In 1996, the successor tenant brought a rent overcharge claim. After the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 (RRRA) was enacted, the landlord argued that RRRA precluded the tenant from claiming overcharges dating back more than four years prior to the filing of the rent overcharge complaint. The court, however, held that the 1996 overcharge claim could properly be based upon the 1987 rent. Once the rent recalculations were made, as required by DHCR's order, the overcharge complaint was not deemed to relate back more than four years. The amount of rent set forth in the annual registration statements for the years 1994 through 1998 must be deemed to have been effectively challenged by virtue of the pre-existing Fair Market Rent Appeal, the court said. Ferrante v. 55 Spring Street Assocs., N.Y.L.J., Dec. 15, 1998, page 25, col. 1 (App.Term 1st Dept.). See also Crabtree v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., Dec. 9, 1998, page 26, col. 1 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.), which said that DHCR orders and decisions on Petitions for Administrative Review and Article 78 decisions are all rental events that can be considered if they were rendered within the four year period prior to filing of a rent overcharge complaint.

¶ 37. In Zafra v. Pilkes, 245 A.D.2d 218, 666 N.Y.S.2d 633 (1st Dept. 1997), the court, applying Section 26-516 as amended by the Rent Regulation Act of 1997, held that no determination of an overcharge could be based on overcharges occurring more than four years prior to the complaint.

¶ 38. A tenant cannot obtain a rent overcharge judgment personally against a partner unless that partner was specifically named as a party in the rent overcharge case. Corry Assocs. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 254 A.D.2d 286, 678 N.Y.S.2d 386 (App.Div. 2d Dept. 1998).

¶ 39. The Civil Court was found to have improperly given judgment in 1996 for a rent overcharge claim dating back to 1984. The RRRA of 1997 precludes an examination of rental records dating back more than four years prior to the filing of the complaint. Since the rent overcharge claim relates solely to a large rent increase which occurred in 1985, it cannot now be considered by the court. Theoharidou v. Newgarden, 176 Misc.2d 97, 673 N.Y.S.2d 813 (App.Term 1st Dept. 1998).

¶ 40. In Ouziel v. Brito, 176 Misc.2d 216, 673 N.Y.S.2d 531 (App.Term 2d Dept. 1998), the court held that party who purchased the property at a foreclosure sale was not liable for rent overcharges collected by the prior owner, in the absence of collusion between the prior owner and the new owner. Even though the new owner appointed one of the prior owners to be managing agent, the court did not find that the prior and current owner were united in interest. Here, the appointment took place more than six months after the foreclosure sale and the weight of the evidence showed that there had been an adversarial relationship between the prior owner and the new owner's husband, during the pendency of the foreclosure proceedings. The court rejected the tenant's argument that a mortgagee who purchased the premises at a foreclosure sale had a greater burden of inquiry than others who purchase at foreclosure sale. So long as the purchasing mortgagee was not on notice of rent overcharge the new owner was not liable for overcharges, the court said. Goldstein v. DHCR, 226 A.D.2d 722, 642-530 (2d Dept. 1996), where the tenant prevailed in a claim against the foreclosure purchaser. In Goldstein, the mortgagee had taken possession of the premises and had collected rent for a substantial period of time before the foreclosure sale, and thus was properly chargeable with knowledge of rent records.

¶ 41. A rent stabilized tenant can bring a direct action against the landlord by reason of a rent overcharge. The statute precludes the examination of the rental history of the subject unit for the period prior to four years before the filing of the complaint. The law applies in any action which was pending as of June 19, 1997. Thus, where a complaint of rent overcharge was filed in 1990, the agency's rent overcharge calculations could not properly refer to the 1985 rent.

Pechock v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 253 A.D.2d 655, 677 N.Y.S.2d 554 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1998).

¶ 42. The constitutionality of that portion of the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 which precludes an examination of any rental history prior to the four year period immediately preceding the commencement of the action, has been upheld. Daniel v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 179 Misc.2d 452, 683 N.Y.S.2d 404 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 1998).

¶ 43. A tenant who fails to bring a Petition for Administrative Review within 35 days after an order of deregulation will be bound by the order. In some cases, a tenant contends that he never received the order and that the 35 day period never began to run. However, where DHCR officials submit affidavits regarding the agency's mailing practices, it will not be sufficient for the tenant to merely deny having received a copy of the order. Dowling v. Holland, 245 A.D.2d 167, 666 N.Y.S.2d 585 (1st Dept. 1997).

¶ 44. The four year limitation does not apply to complaints filed before April 1, 1984. Mark Greenberg Real Estate v. DHCR, 258 A.D.2d 313, 685 N.Y.S.2d 188 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1999).

¶ 45. A purchaser at a foreclosure sale who does not know of rent overcharge at time of bidding on sale is not responsible for rent overcharges, even if it learns of overcharge before he takes title. However, where there was a dispute of fact as to whether the purchaser learned of the facts of the rent overcharge proceeding before the bidding occurred, the court remanded the case to DHCR for a determination on the facts. Cooke v. DHCR, 179 Misc.2d 418, 684 N.Y.S.2d 767 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 1999).

¶ 46. A statute which limited inquiry into rental history to four year period prior to filing of the complaint was not so lacking in reason as to be arbitrary, and was constitutionally valid. The fact that the tenant already had an order granting an overcharge award covering, in part, a period more than four years prior to the complaint, did not give the tenant a vested right, and the Deputy Commissioner could lawfully change the ruling at the PAR level on the basis of the changes created by the RRRA. Gelston v. DCHR, 177 Misc.2d 431, 676 N.Y.S.2d 765 (Sup.Ct. Queens Co. 1998).

¶ 47. A new owner can be held liable for overcharges incurred by a prior owner, but will be entitled to recoup from the prior owner the amount paid to the tenant. DiMaggio v. DHCR, 248 A.D.2d 533, 670 N.Y.S.2d 501 (2d Dept. 1998).

¶ 48. A tenant's claim for rent overcharge, which accrued in 1990, when the tenant first entered into possession of the apartment, was time barred since it was not filed until 1995. The four-year statute of limitations commenced running with the first overcharge alleged, and the statute precludes examination of the rent history of the apartment prior to the four-year period preceding the filing of the rent overcharge complaint. Myers v. Frankel, 292 A.D.2d 575, 740 N.Y.S.2d 366 (2d Dept. 2002).

¶ 49. Normally, a new owner will not be liable in treble damages for overcharges imposed by the prior owner. However, the new owner is liable to the tenant for interest on the overcharge in question. Heights Assoc. v. Bautista, N.Y.L.J., June 29, 1998, page 30, col. 1 (App. Term 2d & 11th Judic. Dists.).

¶ 50. The New York County Supreme Court disagreed with the decision of the Appellate Term, Second Department in Heights Assocs. v. Bautista, 178 Misc.2d 669 (1998), and held that a new owner, even though technically not the wrongdoer, can be liable for treble damages for overcharges collected by a prior owner. The court's rationale was that this was the only way to prevent owners from avoiding liability for overcharges. The court pointed out that the conduct of the prior owner was particularly egregious in seeking repeated adjournments rather than responding to the claim. 500 West End Ave. Owners, Ltd. v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., June 21, 2000, page 29, col. 5 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 51. A tenant may maintain a rent overcharge claim based on a services reduction order (landlord's failure to provide services; see Admin. Code Sec. 26-514) even though the order was entered more than four years prior to the overcharge complaint. In other words, the landlord's obligation to restore services is a continuing obligation, and the statute of limitations is not a defense to an action based on breaches of that duty occurring within the four-year period. Thelma Realty v. Harvey, 190 Misc.2d 303, 737 N.Y.S.2d 500 (App.Term 1st Dept. 2001).

¶ 52. A tenant who elects to proceed on a rent overcharge complaint before the administrative agency, and who receives a favorable determination, has the option of either taking an offset against the monthly rent or filing the administrative order in the same manner as a judgment. There is no other basis for enforcement of the order. Under those circumstances, a plenary action to recover rent overcharges is not permitted. Bowen v. East 13th Street Realty Co., N.Y.L.J., Sept. 23, 1999, page 26, col. 3 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 53. The four-year statute of limitations does not retroactively apply to a rent overcharge complaint filed prior to April 1, 1984. Thus, where the complaint was filed prior to that date, the entire rent history may be considered. Mengoni v. DHCR, 97 N.Y.2d 630, 735 N.Y.S.2d 863 (2001). See also, Roth v. DHCR, 739 N.Y.S.2d 641 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 2002); Joseph Peppie Realty Corp. v. DHCR, 265 A.D.2d 173, 696 N.Y.S.2d 42 (1st Dept. 1999).

¶ 54. Where a landlord was unable to adequately document alleged improvements made to apartments, and improperly applied a vacancy increase percentage, the landlord was subject to treble damages by reason of a willful rent overcharge. Artnor Realty Co. v. DHCR, 265 A.D.2d 183, 695 N.Y.S.2d 567 (1st Dept. 1999).

¶ 55. One case, contra to Schutt, took position that the four year SOL won't apply to FMRA where no registration was ever filed. Kempner v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., Oct. 27, 1999, page 28, col. 2 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 56. A tenant is precluded from examining the rental history of the unit prior to the four-year period immediately preceding the filing of the rent overcharge complaint. This is true even where the landlord cannot prove that it ever served or filed an initial registration for the apartment. Moreover, the court rejected the tenant's constitutional challenge to the four-year provision of the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997. The RRRA merely clarified existing law and did not impermissibly interfere with any vested rights of the tenant, the court said. Brinckerhoff v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., Nov. 24, 1999, page 30, col. 4 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 57. On the application of the four-year rule, see Negron v. Goldman, N.Y.L.J., May 4, 1999, page 26, col. 2 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 58. A rent overcharge award can be particularly harsh on an owner where the proceeding has been pending for a long period of time prior to the award. In one case, the rent agency was guilty of gross delays and then issued a rent overcharge award dating back to 1985, effectively denying the landlord the benefit of lawful increases since that date. The court found that the delay was prejudicial to the rights of the landlord, and directed the agency to reconsider whether the landlord might be entitled to lawful increases in rent for some of the years during which the proceeding was pending. Lukin v. DHCR, 264 A.D.2d 341, 694 N.Y.S.2d 63 (1st Dept. 1999).

¶ 59. In one case, petitioner sought to avoid treble damages by alleging that its failure to reduce rent in accordance with a DHCR order was a bookkeeping error and was not willful. The court, however, rejected this defense. Petitioner had sold the building, taking back a mortgage from the purchaser. When the purchaser defaulted on the mortgage, petitioner foreclosed and took back the property. Since a portion of the overcharges accrued during the period of petitioner's ownership of the property, the court held that petitioner was not entitled to invoke the rules that otherwise protected bona fide foreclosure purchasers from treble damages. Hollis Realty v. Glover, N.Y.L.J., Jan. 13, 1999, page 29, col. 2 (App.Term 2d & 11th Judic. Dists.).

¶ 60. In a rent overcharge case, DHCR asked for a rental history, including leases, riders and ledgers, that would substantiate the basis of the rent being charged the tenant. The court held that the landlord's submission of copies of some leases, apartment registrations and a Major Capital Improvement order, were not sufficient. The court rejected the landlord's excuse that the records had been placed in deep storage when the landlord moved offices, since the landlord still had ample time to retrieve the records. The registration statements are not alone sufficient evidence of vacancies, lease renewals or the rent charged, because these are unilaterally filled out by the landlord and not necessarily verified by the tenant or by DHCR. Oxford East Assocs. v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J, Apr. 7, 1999, page 30, col. 3 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 61. In one case, rents paid back in 1987 were never registered, and registration did not occur until 1997. The court held that even under this state of facts, it could not consider any rents charged more than four years prior to the filing of the rent overcharge complaint. In other words, the four-year statute of limitations involves a lookback to the date when the rent was paid, not to the later registration date, the court said. Bragston Realty Corp. v. Dixon, N.Y.L.J., July 6, 1999, page 29, col. 3 (App.Term 2nd & 11th Judic. Dists.).

¶ 63. With the exception of persons who purchase buildings at a foreclosure sale, new owners can be liable for overcharges collected by the prior owner. Luna v. Gjokaj, N.Y.L.J., Mar. 15, 2000, page 28, col. 1 (Civ.Ct. Bronx Co.).

¶ 64. The landlord's sending of a letter to DHCR will not extend the time for serving a petition for administrative review. Boulevard Tenants Corp. v. DHCR, 264 A.D.2d 444, 694 N.Y.S.2d 442 (2d Dept. 1999).

¶ 65. For purposes of the four-year rule governing rent overcharge claims, courts look at two dates-the date that the rent overcharge complaint was filed, and the date that the rent registration was filed by the landlord. Here, in January 1993, the landlord filed rent registration statements covering the years 1986 through 1992. The tenant filed the complaint in 1996. The court held that since the complaint was filed no more than four years after the rent registrations were filed, the complaint could properly the 1986 through 1992 rents, even though the rents in question covered periods more than four years prior to the tenant's complaint. Crabtree v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., July 19, 2000, page 23, col. 3 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 66. In one case, where an apartment was vacant, the landlord registered the premises using the rent paid by the last tenant. Some time after the registration statement was filed, a new tenant moved in, under a lease calling for a substantially higher rent than that recited in the registration statement. The new tenant then brought a rent overcharge proceeding, pointing out that even though the last rent paid by anyone was more than four years before the filing of the overcharge complaint, the last registered rent was within the four-year period. Thus, the tenant argued that the last registered rent should be considered as part of the rental history for purposes of determining whether or not there had been an overcharge. However, DHCR determined that the rent listed in the registration statement was not part of the rental history, and the court upheld that decision. Thus, the actual rental history that falls outside the four-year period does not become reviewable merely because it is listed in a registration statement filed within the four-year period. DHCR correctly used the first rent charged to the tenant after the vacancy as the initial legal regulated rent in order to calculate any increases taken within the four-year period. McCarthy v. DHCR, 290 A.D.2d 313, 736 N.Y.S.2d 353 (1st Dept. 2002).

¶ 67. A landlord filed annual rent registration statements for the years 1993 through 1997. In 1998, in response to a summary non-payment proceeding brought by the landlord, the tenant asserted a counterclaim for rent overcharges. In that counterclaim, the tenant sought to go back to 1992, claiming that there was no proof that the landlord had served an initial registration statement in that year. The court, however, held that this was precisely the type of rent challenge that the four-year provision of the Rent Regulation Act of 1997 sought to prevent. Thus, since there were rent registration statements filed for all of the four years prior to the tenant's assertion of the counterclaim, the tenant could not challenge the 1992 rents. Ennismore Apts., Inc. v. Valenti, N.Y.L.J., Jan. 2, 2001, page 29, col. 2 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 68. Loft premises are different from other rent regulated premises. Rent stabilized buildings are registered right from the outset. However, a loft building may be under Interim Multiple Dwelling status for years, during which the landlord is required to bring the building into compliance with residential building codes. Interim Multiple Dwelling rents are not registered at all until the owner reports to the Loft Board and places the tenant on notice of what he or she claims the legal rent should be. Where the Loft Board is setting the legal regulated rent for the first time, and the tenant is claiming rent overcharges, the tenant can demand an examination of the entire rental history for the unit. In other words, where no legal regulated rent had previously been set for the unit, the tenant can obtain an examination even of rents that were charged more than four years prior to the filing of the tenant's complaint. Sori-Goalya v. New York City Loft Board, N.Y.L.J., Feb.28, 2001, page 19, col. 1 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.). The Appellate Division, First Department affirmed, stating that the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 did not apply to rent overcharge proceedings of the Loft Board. Sori-Goalya v. New York City Loft Board, 284 A.D.2d 137, 726 N.Y.S.2d 93 (1st Dept. 2001), leave to appeal denied, 97 N.Y.2d 601, 735 N.Y.S.2d 490 (2001).

¶ 69. In one case, DHCR had issued a rent reduction order by reason of the failure of the landlord to maintain required services. The rent reduction order was still on record more than ten years later. The court held that, despite the fact that the rent reduction order was more than four years old, it was still in effect and could be considered in determining the amount of any rent overcharge. However, the court did not summarily determine the overcharge question, and gave the landlord the opportunity to apply to DHCR for a determination that the rent reduction order was no longer in effect, or to apply for a rent restoration order with retroactive effect. Thelma Realty Co. v. Harvey, N.Y.L.J., Aug.23, 2000, page26, col. 3 (Civ.Ct.Kings Co.).

¶ 70. Before the effective date of the Omnibus Housing Act of 1983 (April1, 1984), tenants were not limited to a four-year period in terms of rent overcharge claims. Before the enactment of the Rent Regulation Act of 1997 (RRRA), there was a split of authority between the First and Second Departments as to whether a tenant who filed a rent overcharge complaint prior to April 1, 1984 could still use the old law, under which tenants could go back more than four years. However, the Appellate Division Second Department has now ruled that the RRRA created a straight four-year rule, so that even tenants who filed their rent overcharge complaints before April 1, 1984 cannot go back more than four years. Orin Management v. DHCR, 275 A.D.2d 126, 713 N.Y.S.2d 556 (2d Dept. 2000).

¶ 71. A tenant can challenge the rents set forth in a rent registration statement which was filed less than four years prior to the filing of the rent overcharge complaint, even if the challenged rents were actually collected by the landlord more than four years prior to the filing of the complaint. In other words, the time to challenge a rent registration speaks not to the time at which the rents should have been filed, but to the actual date that the registration was filed. Crabtree v. DHCR, N.Y.L.J., July 19, 2000, page 23, col. 3 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 72. An owner who purchased the premises at a foreclosure sale was able to avoid liability for treble damages in connection with rent overcharges collected by the prior owner. The tenant did not introduce any evidence to contradict the owner's contention that at the time of its purchase, it had no notice of the prior owner's overcharges. Moreover, the new owner had shown evidence of good faith, in that as soon as it learned of the overcharge, it immediately credited the tenant for the amount of overcharges collected during the new owner's tenure. Gerard v. Supreme Co., 277 A.D.2d 154, 717 N.Y.S.2d 106 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 2000).

¶ 73. SOL on both administrative and judicial overcharge complaints runs from first overcharge alleged. Also, a fraud claim, which is incidental to RO claim will also be time barred. Ct also rejected claim that retroactive applic of the SOL, which effectively shortened the limits for already pending overcharge claims, denied T's due process. Brinckerhoff v DHCR, 275 A.D.2d 622, 713 N.Y.S.2d 56 (1st Dept. 2000), leave to appeal dismissed 96 N.Y.2d 729, 722 N.Y.S.2d 795 (2001).

¶ 74. A tenant cannot assert a rent overcharge accruing more than four years prior to the filing of the complaint. The four-year period applies even though the landlord filed the last registration statement several years before the beginning of the four-year period. Sessler v. DHCR, 722 N.Y.S.2d 864 (1st Dept. 2001).

¶ 75. Provisions permitting recovery of treble damages for a rent overcharge are authorized by a penal provision in the state enabling legislation, and clearly reflect the legislative intent that treble damages are to be imposed as a penalty. Cox v. Microsoft Corp., 290 A.D.2d 206, 737 N.Y.S.2d 1 (1st Dept. 2002).

¶ 76. Cecelia v. Irizarry, 292 A.D.2d 557, 740 N.Y.S.2d 89 (2d Dept. 2002). A claim for recovery of damages, predicated on a registration statement filed in 1984, is not timely.

¶ 77. The DHCR acted rationally in imposing a rent overcharge penalty upon the current owner of a building, because the prior owner and the current owner failed to file annual registration statements. L.G.B. Assocs. v. DHCR, 292 A.D.2d 609, 739 N.Y.S.2d 444 (2d Dept. 2002).

¶ 78. The DHCR rationally applied the four-year statute retroactively to a rent overcharge complaint filed before the enactment of the statute, where the apartment was vacant four years before the filing of the overcharge complaint by the tenant's predecessor (her sister), and the sister was the only tenant to occupy the apartment within the reviewable four-year period. Marmelstein v. DHCR, 292 A.D.2d 207, 739 N.Y.S.2d 143 (1st Dept. 2002).

¶ 79. The tenant took occupancy on August 1, 1984 and filed a rent overcharge complaint on August 18, 1988. The landlord argued that DHCR was precluded from considering any rental history prior to August 18, 1984, and that since the rent charged as of August 18, 1984 was $2410, the tenant was now precluded from challenging that figure. However, the landlord had filed registration statements in 1985 and 1986 falsely stating the rent to be $1488.95 and listing a lease that commenced on August 1, 1984, using fictitious names for the tenants. For more than a decade, the landlord did not offer the tenants a lease. Under the circumstances, the court held that it was rational for DHCR to fix the base rent in the amount stated in the first reviewable registration statements rather than the unexplained amount actually charged and collected. To do otherwise would be to render largely meaningless a rent registration system that requires landlords to substantiate the lawfulness of their rents. Since DHCR fixed a rent base date of August 1984, and the registration statements it relied upon were filed in 1985 and 1986, there is no problem with the four-year rule. Lyndonville Properties Management, Inc. v. DHCR, 291 A.D.2d 311, 737 N.Y.S.2d 617 (1st Dept. 2002).

¶ 80. Where the tenant was receiving benefits under Section 8 of the Housing Act of 1937 (known as Section 8), and the tenant's boy friend paid the landlord an "under the table" rent over and above the Section 8 amount, the amount paid by the boy friend could form the basis of a rent overcharge complaint. Even though the tenant had suggested this arrangement, as part of an attempt to hide her true income status from the Section 8 administrators, the court held that the tenant would not be stopped from recovering the excess rent. The court said that to permit an owner to increase a subsidized tenant's share of the rent beyond the legal limit would subvert the very purpose of the federal law. Rent subsidies are intended to decrease the tenant's rent, not to increase the landlord's return. Crutchley v. Costa, 2002 WL 452200 (Dist.Ct. Nassau Co.).

¶ 81. The Civil Court and DHCR have concurrent jurisdiction in rent overcharge cases. Thus, it was proper for the Civil Court to assume jurisdiction over the rent overcharge claim in a nonpayment proceeding which was based on amended registrations filed subsequent to tenant's complaint to DHCR. Classic Equities, LLC v. Garrity, 2001 WL 1635443, N.Y.L.J., Dec. 16, 2001, page 18, col. 1 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 82. Civil Court retains jurisdiction to hear a counterclaim for rent overcharge, even after dismissal of the landlord's non-payment petition. Crutchley v. Costa, 2001 WL 1666007 (Dist.Ct. Nassau Co.); Platzer v. Germain, N.Y.L.J., June 11, 1990, page 32, col. 1 (App.Term 9th & 10th Judic. Dists.).

¶ 83. Where the tenant is the first rent stabilized tenant, he or she cannot assert a claim for rent overcharge but must instead bring a Fair Market Rent Appeal. Ramlie v. Soufer Family, 287 A.D.2d 388, 731 N.Y.S.2d 455 (1st Dept. 2001).

¶ 84. Where the timeliness of an Article 78 is in issue, it is important to establish the date on which an order denying a Petition for Administrative Review (PAR) was received. In one case, where the agency mailed the order to the landlord "care of" the landlord's attorneys, the time period for brining an Article 78 proceeding ran from the date that the law firm received the order. In other words, it was the responsibility of the law firm to forward the mailing to the correct client file, so that the attorney handling the case could act upon it. Moreover, where DHCR's representative submitted an affidavit establishing the date of mailing, the mere denial of receipt by the law firm attorney handling the case was insufficient to rebut the presumption of receipt of the mailing. 219 East 25th Street Realty Co. v. DHCR, 298 A.D.2d 240, 748 N.Y.S.2d 157 (1st Dept. 2002).

¶ 85. In one case, a tenant who prevailed on an overcharge complaint elected to take a credit against future rent. The tenant began taking the credit against rent due to the landlord. A court held that even after the building was taken over by an Article 7A Administrator, the tenant could continue to take the credit until the overcharge award was collected. Olton v. Hunter, N.Y.L.J., July 10, 2002, page 28, col. 2 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.)

¶ 86. The proper method for challenging the granting of a Major Capital Improvement Increase is by means of an Article 78 proceeding to review the rent agency's determination. A tenant who fails to use this remedy cannot mount a collateral attack on the MCI increase in a Housing Court non-payment proceeding. Dara Realty Assocs. v. Schachter, 194 Misc.2d 29, 751 N.Y.S.2d 677 (App.Term 2d Dept.).

¶ 87. Upon reclassifying a hotel to an apartment building, DHCR can retroactively roll back rents, but rent overcharge claims are limited to a four-year period. Benjamin Shapiro Realty Co. v. DHCR, 2 A.D.3d 220, 769 N.Y.S.2d 226 (1st Dept. 2003).

¶ 88. In one case, a court found that a rent overcharge was willful where the landlord knowingly charged rent for improvements purportedly made before the present tenant moved in, when in fact the improvements had never been made. The fact that the District Rent Administrator initially found in the landlord's favor, and that this finding was not reversed until the proceeding had been pending a total of ten years, did not make the overcharge any less willful. Thus, award of treble damages was sustained. Samouha v. DHCR, 309 A.D.2d 523, 765 N.Y.S.2d 325 (1st Dept. 2003)

¶ 89. Where a landlord was on notice of a DHCR rent reduction order, which provided that no rent increase could be collected until a rent restoration order had been issued, a landlord's statement, that she was not aware that the order prohibited an increase in rent until services were restored, was not sufficient to rebut the presumption that the overcharge was willful. Raffo v. McIntosh, 2004 WL 906582 (Apr.12, 2004) (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 90. In one case, the tenant received an overcharge award of over $16,000, and credited the award against his rent. The building was in such poor condition that an administrator was appointed under Article 7A of the Real Property Actions and Proceedings Law (7A Administrator). The 7A Administrator claimed that the overcharge order could not be enforced once a 7A Administrator was appointed, and brought a summary non-payment proceeding against the tenant. The court, however, held that for the purposes of enforcement of a rent overcharge award, the 7A Administrator stood in the same position as the owner. Thus, the tenant could continue to credit the award against his rent, and the non-payment proceeding was dismissed. Olton v. Hunter N.Y.L.J. May 25, 2004, at 27, col. 1 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 91. The rule prohibiting the agency from reviewing rental history beyond the four-year period applies even if the landlord applies for restoration of rent (i.e. rent previously reduced because of lack of building services) within the four-year period. Highlawn Assocs. v. DHCR, 309 A.D.2d 750, 765 N.Y.S.2d 272 (2d Dept. 2003).

¶ 92. Suppose the landlord gives the tenant a rent concession (preferential lease) in exchange for the tenant's agreement to relocate to a different apartment. Suppose further that at the end of the lease, the landlord demands offers a renewal lease at a rent calculated by adding the rent guidelines figure to the rent which would have been legally payable during the term of the prior lease if there had been no preferential lease. In such a case, there is a rent overcharge. The court held that the four-year period began to run when the lease end and the landlord failed to offer a renewal lease whose rent should have been calculated by adding the guidelines increase to the preferential rent. Aljaz v. Hillside Place, LLC, 3 Misc.3d 754, 774 N.Y.S.2d 662 (Civ.Ct. Queens Co. 2004).

¶ 93. In one order deciding a Petition for Administrative Review (PAR), DHCR awarded treble damages for a rent overcharge, covering up to the time when the District Rent Administrator (DRA) issued the rent overcharge. Up to that point, the award of treble damages was in lieu of an award of interest. The PAR order then provided that the award could be entered as a judgment and that the county clerk could add interest (at the legal rate) to the overcharge from the issuance date of the DRA order to the issuance date of the PAR order. Some time elapsed between the date of the PAR order and the date of entry of the judgment, largely because the landlord brought an Article 78 proceeding against DHCR. The question was whether the court could add interest for the period between the issuance of the PAR order and the entry of the judgment, and continuing after the entry of judgment until the judgment was satisfied. The Appellate Division said that the answer was yes, since the landlord did not show that the delay was the fault of the tenant. The tenant was not even allowed to enter the award until after the landlord's Article 78 proceeding was concluded. Mohassel v. Fenwick, 6 A.D.2d 234, 775 N.Y.S.2d 257 (1st Dept. 2004).

¶ 94. In one case, a rent reduction order was imposed by DHCR on the landlord, more than four years prior to the tenant's filing of an overcharge complaint. The order, however, was still in effect at the time of the filing of the complaint. The court held that, although the statute precludes examination of the rent history of an apartment prior to the four-year period preceding the filing of a rent overcharge complaint, where a duty imposed prior to a limitations period is a continuing one, the statute of limitations is not a defense to actions based on breaches of that duty occurring during the limitations period. Since the rent reduction order imposed upon the landlord a continuing obligation to reduce rent, the tenant can recover overcharges covering a maximum of four years prior to the complaint. Matter of Condo Units, LP v. DHCR, 4 A.D.3d 424, 771 N.Y.S.2d 380 (2d Dept. 2004).

¶ 95. The agency's determination not to award treble damages is entitled to judicial deference, since it turns in part on a factual matter of whether the landlord proved that the overcharge was not willful. Waverly Assocs. v. DHCR, 12 A.D.3d 272, 785 N.Y.S.2d 67 (1st Dept. 2004).

¶ 96. A tenant is entitled to interest on an overcharge award, from the date of the award until the landlord satisfies the judgment. Waverly Assocs. v. DHCR, 12 A.D.3d 272, 785 N.Y.S.2d 67 (1st Dept. 2004).

¶ 97. The agency has discretion as to whether or not to award attorneys' fees in a rent overcharge case (the court did not indicate whether the lease had an attorneys' fees clause, which might, depending on the wording, have afforded the tenant a right to attorneys' fees). Waverly Assocs. v. DHCR, 12 A.D.3d 272, 785 N.Y.S.2d 67 (1st Dept. 2004).

¶ 98. In calculating the 60-day period within which an Article 78 proceeding must be commenced, the time begins to run when the agency mails the decision to petitioner (or in this case, petitioner's counsel), not from the time that petitioner (or the counsel) receives the decision. LeHavre Tenants' Association v. DHCR, 17 A.D.3d 268, 793 N.Y.S.2d 80 (3d Dept. 2005).

¶ 99. Where a landlord failed to produce credible evidence of improvements that would justify a rent increase, the landlord had not proven that a rent overcharge was not willful. Thus, treble damages could be imposed. Mangano v. N.Y. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 30 A.D.3d 267, 817 N.Y.S.2d 262 (1st Dept. 2006).

¶ 100. Where a landlord seeks to avoid treble damages by showing that the rent charged was charged in good faith, the landlord can, on the good faith issue, introduce evidence going back more than a four-year limitation period. H.O. Realty Corp. v. DHCR, 46 A.D.3d 103, 844 N.Y.S.2d 204 (1st Dept. 2007).

¶ 101. The statutory provision which permits a subtenant to recover treble damages from a prime tenant in cases of willful overcharge, does not violate the constitutional right of equal protection. Gboizo v. DHCR, 13 Misc.3d 714, 820 N.Y.S.2d 989 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 2006).

¶ 102. It is possible for a landlord to be guilty of an overcharge even if the rent charged is actually well below market levels. In one case, the tenant, who never had a lease, paid only $300 a month as rent, from 1982 to 2000. There had never been a renewal lease. In 2000, the landlord increased the rent to $400 a month (still way below market), which the tenant paid. However, in 2004, the tenant brought a rent overcharge proceeding before DHCR. The Appellate Division (reversing the trial court) upheld DHCR's ruling that in the absence of a renewal lease, the legal regulated rent was $300 a month, i.e. the rent charged on the base date, which was four years prior to the filing of the rent overcharge complaint. The appellate court also upheld the agency's finding that the landlord had failed to prove that the overcharge was not willful. Accordingly, the tenant was entitled to treble damages. Ellis v. DHCR 2007 NY Slip Op. 8459, 45 AD3d 594, 845 NYS2d 407, 2007 NY App. Div. Lexis 11384 (App. Div. 2nd Dept.).

¶ 103. In 508 Realty Assoc., LLC v. DHCR, 61 AD3d 753, 877 NYS2d 392 (2d Dept. 2009), the court affirmed an award of treble damages. The Rent Stabilization Law (Admin. Code of the City of NY §26-501 et seq.) provides that if DHCR finds that a landlord, after a reasonable opportunity to be heard, has collected an overcharge above the rent authorized for a housing accommodation, the landlord will be liable to the tenant for triple the amount of the overcharge. (See Admin. Code of the City of NY §26-516[a]). In this type of proceeding, it is the landlord's burden to prove, by a preponderance of the evidence standard, that the overcharge was not willful. If there is no proof to support the landlord's arguments, he will be assessed the aforementioned penalty. In reviewing a determination made by an administrative agency such as the DHCR, the court's inquiry is limited to whether the determination is arbitrary or capricious. In this case, the documentation of the rental history of the apartment provided by the petitioner landlord was riddled with inaccuracies and discrepancies. For example, two of the lease renewal forms covered the same period, but listed different rents and reportedly permissible rent increases for the apartment. Moreover, one of the lease renewal forms indicated that it was signed eight months after the term of the renewal lease commenced. In addition, it is undisputed that the apartments in the same building had not been registered with the DHCR for the relevant five year period.

¶ 104. In one case, the court upheld a DHCR determination that took notice of rent reduction orders which were issued more than two years prior to the filing of the overcharge complaint but that limited the amount of rent overcharges recoverable to the four years prior to the filing of the overcharge complaint. Cintron v. Calogero, 59 A.D.3d 345, 874 N.Y.S.2d 76 (1st Dept. 2009). See also, Jenkins v. Fieldbridge Assocs., ____ A.D.3d ____ , 877 N.Y.S.2d 375 (2d Dept. 2009).

Title 26 Housing and Building

CHAPTER 4 RENT STABILIZATION

§ 26-517 Rent registration.

a. Each housing accommodation which is subject to this law shall be registered by the owner thereof with the state division of housing and community renewal prior to July first, nineteen hundred eighty-four upon forms prescribed by the commissioner. The data to be provided on such forms shall include the following: (1) the name and address of the building or group of buildings or development in which such housing accommodation is located and the owner and the tenant thereof; (2) the number of housing accommodations in the building or group of buildings or development in which such housing accommodation is located; (3) the number of housing accommodations in such building or group of buildings or development subject to this code and the number of such housing accommodations subject to the local emergency housing rent control act; (4) the rent charged on the registration date; (5) the number of rooms in such housing accommodation; and (6) all services provided on the date that the housing accommodation became subject to this chapter.

a-1. Within thirty days of changing his address, the managing agent or, if there is no managing agent, the owner, of a building or group of buildings or development, such agent or owner shall advise the state division of housing and community renewal and all tenants of his new address.

b. Registration pursuant to this section shall not be subject to the freedom of information law provided that registration information relative to a tenant, owner, lessor or subtenant shall be made available to such party or his or her authorized representative.

c. Housing accommodations which become subject to this chapter after the initial registration period must be registered within ninety days thereafter. Registration of housing accommodations subject to the local emergency housing rent control act immediately prior to the date of initial registration as provided in this section shall include, in addition to the items listed above, where existing, the maximum base rent immediately prior to the date that such housing accommodations become subject to this chapter.

d. Copies of the registration shall be filed with the state division of housing and community renewal in such place or places as it may require. In addition, one copy of that portion of the registration statement which pertains to the tenant's unit must be mailed by the owner to the tenant in possession at the time of initial registration or to the first tenant in occupancy if the apartment is vacant at the time of initial registration.

e. The failure to file a proper and timely initial or annual rent registration statement shall, until such time as such registration is filed, bar an owner from applying for or collecting any rent in excess of the legal regulated rent in effect on the date of the last preceding registration statement or if no such statements have been filed, the legal regulated rent in effect on the date that the housing accommodation became subject to the registration requirements of this section. The filing of a late registration shall result in the prospective elimination of such sanctions and provided that increases in the legal regulated rent were lawful except for the failure to file a timely registration, the owner, upon the service and filing of a late registration, shall not be found to have collected an overcharge at any time prior to the filing of the late registration. If such late registration is filed subsequent to the filing of an overcharge complaint, the owner shall be assessed a late filing surcharge for each late registration in an amount equal to fifty percent of the timely rent registration fee.

f. An annual statement shall be filed containing the current rent for each unit and such other information contained in subdivision a of this section as shall be required by the division. The owner shall provide each tenant then in occupancy with a copy of that portion of such annual statement as pertains to the tenant's unit.

g. Each housing accommodation for which a timely registration statement was filed between April first, nineteen hundred eighty-four and June thirtieth, nineteen hundred eighty-four, pursuant to subdivision a of this section shall designate the rent charged on April first, nineteen hundred eighty-four, as the rent charged on the registration date.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Rent increases for a rent-stabilized apartment are not authorized unless the owner complies with the rent stabilization law regarding the filing of annual registration statements and paying annual registration fees, §26-516(g), §§26-517, 26-517.1. Owner's noncompliance requires that the rent be rolled back to the legal regulated rent. Tiebout Holding Co. v. Cordero, 154 Misc.2d 37, 583 N.Y.S.2d 350 (Civ.Ct. Bronx Co. 1992), aff'd in part and modified on other grounds, 154 Misc.2d 43, 592 N.Y.S.2d 904 (App.Term 1st Dept. 1992).

¶ 2. Where landlord failed to file annual rent registration statements pursuant to Ad Code §26-517(e) for 1988 through 1990 until March 1994 tenant is not entitled to return of any alleged overcharges based solely on such failure to file when owner has served and filed late registrations and the rent increase (overcharge) was otherwise lawful.

Likewise the owner is not entitled to any retroactive rent increase occurring prior to his filing of registration statement. 17 E. 101 St. v. Huguenin, 161 Misc.2d 815, 614 N.Y.S.2d 1003 [1994].

¶ 3. It was irrational for DHRC to deny an application for a major capital improvement rent increase on grounds that petitioner failed to file registration statements for 1987 and 1988. This was immaterial because these two registrations were not due at time application was filed. Further, Administrative Code §26-517(e) provides for prospective elimination of sanctions for failure to timely file registration statements. Matter of 226 E. 13th St. Ltd. Partnership v. DHCR, 215 AD2d 277 [1996].

¶ 4. Landlord shall not be assessed treble damages solely on his failure to file an initial or annual rent registration statement pursuant to Ad Cd §26-516(a). At issue here is whether landlord can keep rents collected above last rent-controlled rent. Pursuant to Ad Cd §26-517(e), the court held that upon the late filing of the rent registration statement the landlord can keep the otherwise legal increases in rent collected. Verveniotis v. Cacioppo, 164 Misc. 2d 334 [1995].

¶ 5. Landlord didn't file an initial rent registration for first stabilized tenant but amount was registered with DHCR. Pursuant to Ad Cd §26-517(e) if increases in rent were lawful except for failure to file a timely registration, the owner, upon the service and filing of late registration shall not be found to have overcharged at any time prior to the filing. Further, Ad Cd §26-516 provides that treble damage penalty not be assessed against owner based solely on owner's failure to file timely or proper rent registration statement. DBL Realty Corp. v. Zavala, 166 Misc. 2d 736 [1995], 637 NYS2d 612.

¶ 6. Court ordered modification of Rent Administration Department order, vacating a penalty and retroactively vacated the freeze imposed on the rent imposed. Under Ad Cd §26-517(e) and Rent Stabilization Code (9 NYCRR) §2528.4, a rent freeze imposed because of an owner's failure to file rent stabilization registration statements may be prospectively eliminated upon the filing of those statements. The statute makes no provision for the IAS court action taken here, i.e. the retroactive elimination of the freeze upon the late filing of the statements. Matter of Cardona v. DHCR, 214 AD2d 393 [1995], 625 NYS2d 32.

¶ 7. Bauer v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 640 N.Y.S.2d 492 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1996). Since the landlord failed to register the regulated apartment initially in 1984 or prior to the Rent Administrator's order and failed to serve a copy of the registration on the tenant, or provide a rent history for the apartment dating back to the base date, the agency properly barred collection of rent increases in excess of the lawful rent. The agency was then permitted to use its settled procedures to establish the rent. Moreover, since the landlord failed to prove by a preponderance of evidence that the overcharges were not willful, the agency properly imposed treble damages against the landlord.

¶ 8. A landlord added space to an apartment by incorporating and removing a closet of an adjoining apartment. The landlord then took the position that this was a newly created apartment, and charged the tenant a "first rent." Although the court ultimately held that the work in question did not qualify for "first rent" treatment, it was held that the overcharge was not willful; the landlord had relied in good faith on prior decisions which appeared to support its position. Roker Realty Corp. v. Gross, 163 Misc.2d 766, 624 N.Y.S.2d 736 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 9. A tenant, who was not represented by an attorney, executed a stipulation under which he waived rights to various defenses, including those based on the landlord's failure to have registrered the apartment. The court held that where the tenant was mistaken as to such a fundamental matter, there were sufficient grounds for vacating the stipulation. The landlord argued that since the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development (HPD) had owned and operated the building for a period of time, the rent charged by HPD constituted a lawful rent. The court held, however, that the rent charged in the last registration statement, rather than the rent charged by HPD, was the controlling factor, because HPD was exempt from rent registration. Ashton-Jones Management Co. v. Campbell, N.Y.L.J., May 21, 1997, page 30, col. 3 (Civ.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 10. In the First Department, it has been held that where an apartment had been rent controlled and the landlord never registered the first rent charged to the first rent stabilized tenant, the legal rent is still the rent controlled rent and any charges in excess of that amount is an overcharge (Smitten v. 56 MacDougal St. Co., 167 A.D.2d 205 [App.Div. 1st Dept.]). Originally, in Verveniotis v. Cacioppo, 164 Misc.2d 334, the Appellate Term for the 2d & 11th Judicial Districts agreed with the First Department on that point. However, in Murray v. Robinson, N.Y.L.J., July 6, 1999, page 29, col. 1, the Appellate Term for the 2d & 11th Judicial Districts changed its view and held that where the landlord failed to register the first rent stabilized rent, the tenant could not claim as an overcharge the difference between the rent charged and the last rent controlled rent. Thus, the Murray court dismissed the tenant's rent overcharge claim, without prejudice to the commencement of a Fair Market Rent Appeal.

¶ 11. In one case, the landlord filed timely registrations in 1989 and 1991 but did not file until 1994 the registration that should have been filed in 1990. The court held that the late registration would not retroactively validate the prior improper collection of rent increases. In other words, the existence of a timely registration in 1991 did not validate the improper collection of rent in 1990. BN Realty v. State, 254 A.D.2d 7, 677 N.Y.S.2d 791 (1st Dept. 1998), leave to appeal denied, 93 N.Y.2d 806, 691 N.Y.S.2d 1 (1999).

¶ 12. In one case, an apartment which was previously under rent control came under rent stabilization for the first time. The court held that where the landlord failed to file a registration statement, the landlord was therefore barred from collecting any rent in excess of the last legal regulated rent, which in this case was the previous rent controlled rent. The landlord's subsequent filing of an initial registration form had only prospective application. The landlord sought to charge an initial stabilized rent of $2,200 and then argued that since the rent was in excess of the $2,000 threshold for high rent deregulation (see Admin. Code. § 26-504.2), it was not required to file a rent registration. The court, however, held that even though the landlord sought high rent deregulation, the landlord still had to file a rent registration. The rationale was that the unit qualified for deregulation only if DHCR ultimately determined that the initial legal regulated rent was $2,000 or more. In other words, the tenant had the right to challenge the $2,200 rent as being in excess of the Fair Market Rent. 101 West 70th Street Assocs. v. DeDoiza, N.Y.L.J., Dec. 24, 1998, page 30, col. 2 (App.Term 1st Dept.).

¶ 14. Previously, the Appellate Term, Second Department had followed the First Department case of Smitten v. 56 MacDougal St. Co., 167 A.D.2d 205, and said that if no initial registration had been filed for an apartment, the proper rent was the last rent controlled rent (Verveniotis v. Cacioppo, 164 Misc.2d 334. However, in Murray v. Morrison, 181 Misc.2d 209, 695 N.Y.S.2d 255 (App.Term 1st Dept. 1999). Second and Eleventh Judic. Districts, changed its mind and held that if the landlord failed to register the apartment properly after the rent controlled tenant vacated the premises, the legal rent would be set by the DHCR in a fair market rent appeal.

¶ 15. The initial rent registration statement must be served upon the first rent stabilized tenant. It is not necessary for the landlord to serve that statement upon any subsequent tenant. Sherry House Assocs. v. DHCR, 277 A.D.2d 54, 717 N.Y.S.2d 1 (1st Dept. 2000).

NYC Administrative Code 26-517.1

Administrative Code of the City of New York

Title 26 Housing and Building

CHAPTER 4 RENT STABILIZATION

§ 26-517.1 Fees.

a. The department of finance shall collect from the owner of each housing accommodation registered pursuant to section 26-517 of this law an annual fee in the amount of ten dollars per year for each unit subject to this law, in order to defray costs incurred by the city pursuant to subdivision c of section eight of the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen seventy-four.

b. (1) Pursuant to the provisions of subdivision d of section eight of the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen seventy-four, the failure to pay the fee imposed by the provisions of subdivision a of this section shall constitute a charge due and owing the city. All such fees due and owing the city shall constitute a debt recoverable from the owner and the city may commence an action or proceeding for the recovery of such fees or may file a lien upon the building and lot. If the payment of such fees is not received by the city within sixty days of the date contained in the written notice requesting such payment, the city shall provide a second written notice to the owner setting forth the amount of fees due and owing the city and a demand for payment within thirty days thereof.

(2) If such payment is not made to the city within such time, all unpaid fees shall constitute a lien upon the premises and shall be filed in the office of the city collector as an entry of the account stated in the book in which such charges against the premises are to be entered. Such lien shall have priority over all other liens and encumbrances on the premises except for the lien of taxes and assessments. However, no lien created pursuant to this subdivision against any premises shall be enforced against an owner or mortgagee of such premises who acquired in good faith an interest therein subsequent to the period for which the fee was imposed but prior to the creation of any such lien.

(3) A notice pursuant to paragraph one of this subdivision, stating the amount due and the nature of the charge, shall be mailed by the city collector, within five days after such entry, to the last known address of the owner or agent.

(4) If such charge is not paid within thirty days from the date of entry, it shall be the duty of the city collector to receive interest thereon at the same rate as is imposed on a delinquent tax on real property, to be calculated to the date of payment from the date of entry.

(5) Such charge and the interest thereon shall continue to be, until paid, a lien on the premises. Such lien shall be a tax lien within the meaning of sections 11-319 and 11-401 of this code and may be sold, enforced or foreclosed in the manner provided in chapters three and four of title eleven of this code.

(6) The provisions set forth in this subdivision shall be the sole remedy for the enforcement of this section.

c. The provisions of subdivision a of this section shall be deemed to have been in full force and effect as of April first, nineteen hundred eighty-four.

(legislative findings, recoup costs and expenses, LL 26/1986 § 1)

Provisions of L.L. 26/1986 amending the old code providing legislative findings.

Section one. Legislative findings. In conjunction with the transfer to the state of New York of responsibility for the administration of rent stabilization, the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen hundred seventy-four was amended to require that the city of New York reimburse the state for its expenses incurred. The city of New York is in turn authorized to require by local law that owners of rent stabilized buildings pay a fee annually to the city so that the city may recoup its costs. By local law number ninety-five for the year nineteen hundred eighty-five, an annual fee of ten dollars for each registered unit was imposed on owners of rent stabilized buildings. However, commencing April first, nineteen hundred eighty-five, the date upon which the transfer of administrative responsibility to State became effective, the city has been obligated to reimburse the State at the annual rate of ten dollars for each registered unit. Local law number ninety-five imposed a fee on a prospective basis only. As a result, the city is foregoing reimbursement of nearly ten million dollars and owners of rent stabilized buildings will be benefitting by having one year of administrative costs borne entirely by the city. It is inequitable that one group of property owners benefit in this fashion at the expense of the taxpayers of the city, and the inequity becomes more pronounced in view of impending reduction in aid to the city from the federal government. For the reasons herein set forth the Council finds that it is appropriate that the imposition of the fee set forth in local ninety-five be made retroactive to April first, nineteen hundred eighty-four.

ALSO NOTE

Provisions of L.L. 66/1986

Section one. Declaration of legislative findings. On October second, nineteen hundred eighty-six, a judgment was entered by a justice of the New York state supreme court which invalidated local law number twenty-four for the year nineteen hundred eighty-six on the ground that the requirements for notice of public hearing prior to mayoral approval of the measure set forth in former section 38b-1.0 of the administrative code of the city of New York were not met. Since the hearing held in connection with mayoral approval of local law number twenty-six for the year nineteen hundred eighty-six, relating to the fees charged owners of buildings subject to the emergency tenant protection act of nineteen hundred seventy-four and the rent stabilization law of nineteen hundred sixty-nine, was similarly noticed, questions may be raised as to the validity of local law number twenty-six for such year. While the corporation counsel advises that the judgment invalidating local law twenty-four for such year is before the appellate courts, and that, in his view, the mayor properly approved local law number twenty-four for such year and all other local laws which were before the mayor at that time, the council has determined that to exercise utmost caution in order to protect the fiscal health of the city it is prudent at this time to re-enact the provisions of such local law number twenty-six so as to remove any uncertainty that may exist as to its status.

Section 3. To the extent that this local law has application prior to September first, nineteen hundred eighty-six, the amendment to section 26-517.1 of the administrative code of the city of New York shall be deemed an amendment to former section YY51-6.0.7 of such code repealed by chapter nine hundred seven of the laws of nineteen hundred eighty-five.

Section 4. If any clause, sentence, paragraph, section or part of this local law shall be adjudged by any court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, such judgment shall not affect, impair or invalidate the remainder thereof, but shall be confined in its operation to the clause, sentence, paragraph, section, or part thereof directly involved in the controversy in which such judgment shall have been rendered.

Section 5. This local law shall take effect immediately and be retroactive to and deemed in full force and effect as of July eighth, nineteen hundred eighty-six.

ALSO NOTE

Provisions of L.L. 36/2001 § 7:

§ 7. Notwithstanding any provision of section 26-517.1 of the administrative code of the city of New York to the contrary:

(a) The owner of each housing accommodation registered pursuant to section 26-517 of such code who has failed to pay the annual rent stabilization fee imposed by subdivision a of such section 26-517.1 for any year or years from nineteen hundred eighty-four to nineteen hundred ninety-eight shall not be liable for payment of any interest imposed thereon pursuant to such section provided that such owner shall pay in full any and all unpaid annual fees due and owing for any such year or years within ninety days of a notice demanding payment pursuant to subdivision b of this section, provided, further, that where the commissioner determines that an owner has timely paid the annual fee for each year from nineteen hundred ninety-three to nineteen hundred ninety-eight for which such owner was liable, the annual fee for each year prior to nineteen hundred ninety-three shall be deemed paid;

(b) Where, pursuant to paragraph one of subdivision b of such section 26-517.1, the city, prior to the date of the enactment of this local law, has provided an owner a written notice requesting payment of any unpaid annual fee or fees for any year or years from nineteen hundred eighty-four to nineteen hundred ninety-eight and any interest thereon within sixty days from the date of such notice, and such payment has not been received as of the date of the enactment of this local law, the city shall provide a second written notice setting forth the amount of the fee or fees and any interest thereon due and owing and a demand for payment, and such second notice shall demand payment within ninety days thereof;

(c) The commissioner of finance is authorized to promulgate any rules, including rules establishing a method for determining whether any rent stabilization fee imposed by subdivision a of section 26-517.1 of such code for any year or years from nineteen hundred eighty-four to nineteen hundred ninety-eight has been paid, that he or she deems necessary to implement the provisions of this section and to ensure that the determination and collection of any such fee paid or to be paid by an owner is administered in a manner that the commissioner deems to be reasonable.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. A one-year retroactive fee imposed by Local Law No. 66 of 1986 upon owners of rent-stabilized dwelling to recoup administrative costs the city paid the state for 1984-1985 is not in conflict with the enabling statute permitting such fee. Attempt was made to locate prior owners for those owners purchasing property after October 1, 1984. Further such local law is not void based on 2-year delay in passage since 1983 enabling statute provided for payment of such fee. Wittenberg v. City of New York, 135 AD2d 132, 523 N.Y.S.2d 1003 (1st Dept. 1988).

¶ 2. Rent increases for a rent-stabilized apartment are not authorized unless the owner complies with the rent stabilization law regarding the filing of annual registration statements and paying annual registration fees, §26-516(g), §§26-517, 26-517.1. Owner's noncompliance requires that the rent be rolled back to the legal regulated rent. Tiebout Holding Co. v. Cordero, 154 Misc.2d 37, 583 N.Y.S.2d 350 (Civ.Ct. Bronx Co. 1992), aff'd in part and modified on other grounds, 154 Misc.2d 43, 592 N.Y.S.2d 904 (App.Term 1st Dept. 1992).

¶ 3. Where an owner acquires/purchases a building that had previously been under the control of an administrator appointed pursuant to Article 7A of the Real Property Actions and Proceedings Law (7A administrator), the owner will not be barred from collecting rent increases by reason of the 7A administrator's failure to pay the annual fee for each rent stabilized apartment in the building. Rodriguez v. Flores, 154 Misc.2d 160, 584 N.Y.S.2d 269 (Civ.Ct. New York Co. 1992).

¶ 4. D.B.L. Realty Corp. v. Zavala, 637 N.Y.S.2d 612 (App.Term 1st Dept. 1995). The rent charged to the tenant was consistent with the rent listed in registration statements which properly filed during the tenant's occupancy, but the landlord had failed to file an initial rent registration when the prior (first) stabilized tenant entered into possession of the apartment years earlier. The court held that where the rent charged to the tenant, and paid by the tenant, was lawful except for the failure to register the premises at the earlier stage, the tenant could not recover a rent overcharge award or treble damages.

¶ 5. Verveniotis v. Cacioppo, 164 Misc.2d 334, 627 N.Y.S.2d 509 (App.Term 2nd & 11th Judic. Dists. 1995). Where the rent charged the tenant was lawful except for the failure of the landlord to file the registration statement, the landlord could not maintain an action against a tenant to recover unpaid rent in excess of the legal regulated rent prior to the time of registration but would be able to retain rent already paid by the tenant.

¶ 6. Zas v. Bricard, New York Law Journal 2-28-96, page 29, col. 5 (Civ.Ct. Kings Co.). Unlike the rent overcharge statute, Section 26-517.1 does not contain the four year statute of limitations. Hence, in determining the extent to which the landlord's failure to pay the required $10 fee precludes the owner from collecting rent increases, the court can look back more than four years.

¶ 7. The New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal has issued Policy Statement 92-1, which says that the statutory sanction for non-payment of the fee will not be imposed until 60 days after the agency sends the owner a notice of non-payment accompanied by a copy of the bill, and the owner still fails to pay. There is a split of authority as to whether the statutory penalty will be imposed upon an owner who failed to pay the fee but never received the notice of non-payment. In Moreira v. Halperin, N.Y.L.J., Aug. 16, 1995, page 22, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. New York Co.), the court held that the policy statement was at variance with the statute and was therefore unenforceable. In Lombardo v. Santevecchi, N.Y.L.J., Nov. 20, 1996, page 33, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.), the court also held that the statute called for the penalty regardless of the question of receipt of a notice of non-payment. However, in 224 Eighth Ave. Corp. v. Palacios, N.Y.L.J., Sept. 25, 1996, page 22, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. New York Co.), the court held that the penalty would not apply where the landlord never received a notice of non-payment from the state agency.

¶ 8. Until the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 ("RRRA"), the statute provided that the failure to pay the required fee would bar the landlord from collecting rent increases. However, the RRRA amended the statute to provide that the fee would constitute a charge which the City could collect but that the failure to pay the fee would not affect the landlord's right to rent increases. Djuko Realty, Inc. v. Roman, N.Y.L.J., Aug. 20, 1997, at 23, col. 5 (Civ.Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 26-518 Hotel industry stabilization association.

a. The hotel industry stabilization association registered with the department of housing preservation and development is hereby divested of all its powers and authority under this law. The stabilization code heretofore promulgated by such association, as approved by the department of housing preservation and development, is hereby continued to the extent that it is not inconsistent with law. Such code may be amended from time to time provided, however, that no such amendments shall be promulgated except by action of the commissioner of the division of housing and community renewal and provided further, that prior to the adoption of any such amendments, the commissioner shall (i) submit the proposed amendments to the commissioner of the department of housing preservation and development and allow such commissioner thirty days to make comments or recommendations on the proposed amendments, (ii) review the comments or recommendations, if any, made pursuant to clause (i) of this subdivision and make any revisions to the proposed amendments which the commissioner of the division of housing and community renewal deems appropriate provided that any such review and revision shall be completed within thirty days of receipt of such comments or recommendations and (iii) thereafter hold a public hearing on the proposed amendments. No provision of such code shall impair or diminish any right or remedy granted to any party by this law or any other provision of law.

b. A code shall not be approved hereunder unless it appears to the commissioner of the division of housing and community renewal that it provides for a cash refund or a credit to be applied against future rent, in the amount of the excess, if any, of rent paid since January first, nineteen hundred sixty-nine, over the permissible fair increase, and that it gives a hotel tenant the right to request a six month lease at the permissible rent rate within thirty days of the approval of such code, or, if his or her tenancy commences after such thirty day period, within thirty days of the commencement of his or her tenancy, and that is in compliance with the standards set forth in subdivision c of section 26-511 to the extent such standards are applicable to the hotel industry, and that it provides specifically that no owner shall refuse to extend or renew a tenancy for the purpose of preventing a hotel tenant from becoming a permanent tenant.

c. Each landlord who is made subject to this law pursuant to section 26-505 or 26-506 of this code shall furnish to each permanent tenant signing a new or renewal lease, a rider describing the rights and duties of owners and tenants as provided under the rent stabilization law of nineteen hundred sixty-nine. Such rider shall be in a form promulgated by the commissioner and shall conform to the intent of section 5-702 of the general obligations law and shall be in a print size larger than the print size of the lease to which the rider is attached.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. Tenant had been "constructively" evicted from her apartment and was entitled to move out of "uninhabitable" apartment and move into another apartment in the same complex without the landlord's consent until original apartment was repaired.-DWH Realty v. Ward, 190 (111) N.Y.L.J. (12-12-83) 20, Col. 5M.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Complainant was forced to vacate his residence after only 10 days. He previously resided in another of defendants buildings for over 30 days before being forced to move. NYC unlawful eviction law, § 26-521, was adopted to deter landlords from using harassment like lock-outs to evict tenants. The law has twice been amended to increase its scope. Both evictions violate this section and are criminal. People v. 850 West End Ave. Corp., 138 Misc. 2d 998 [1988].

¶ 2. City is not barred from taking action pursuant to the Unlawful Eviction Law (§§ 26-521-26-529) on same grounds as a case already settled with state agency. Harassment of tenants and withholding of services to get tenants to vacate their units are charged. Action is not preempted by the Omnibus Housing Act (Chap. 403/1983). UEL continues as a tool to meet special housing needs. City v. Park South Assoc., 139 Misc. 2d 997 [1988].

¶ 3. Barclay v. Natoli, New York Law Journal, 2-28-96, page 29, col. 6 (Civ.Ct. Kings Co.). A janitor or caretaker whose employment has terminated cannot be evicted without legal process and is protected by the unlawful eviction statute. The court rejected the landlord's claim that the former janitor had become a mere licensee who could be evicted by means of self-help.

¶ 4. A husband complained that his estranged wife locked him out of the apartment they shared, in violation of Admin. Code. Sec. 26-521. It was held that the proper forum for the resolution of the dispute was Family Court, not the Housing Court. The rationale is that since the marital relationship has not been terminated or otherwise modified by court order, a summary proceeding could not have been used by the wife to evict the husband, Thus, the husband cannot use Sec. 26-521 to obtain restoration to possession. The court noted that this was essentially a domestic dispute which concerned the health and safety of the couple's children (the wife alleged that the husband had bragged to their children that he was a gang member), and that the Family Court was equipped to handle this type of case. CHAPTER 5 UNLAWFUL EVICTION

§ 26-524 Enforcement actions or proceedings.

The civil penalties prescribed by this chapter shall be recovered by an action or proceeding in any court of competent jurisdiction. All such actions or proceedings shall be brought in the name of the city by the corporation counsel. In addition, the corporation counsel may institute any other action or proceeding in any court of competent jurisdiction that may be appropriate or necessary for the enforcement of the provisions of this chapter, including actions to secure permanent injunctions enjoining any acts or practices which constitute a violation of any provision of this chapter, mandating compliance with the provisions of this chapter or for such other relief as may be appropriate. In any such action or proceeding the city may apply to any court of competent jurisdiction, or to a judge or justice thereof, for a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction enjoining and restraining all persons from violating any provision of this chapter, mandating compliance with the provisions of this chapter, or for such other relief as may be appropriate, until the hearing and determination of such action or proceeding and the entry of final judgment or order therein. The court, or judge or justice thereof, to whom such application is made, is hereby authorized forthwith to make any or all of the orders above specified, as may be required in such application, with or without notice, and to make such other or further orders or directions as may be necessary to render the same effectual. No undertaking shall be required as a condition to the granting or issuing of such order, or by reason thereof.

§ 26-526 Notice of pendency.

a. In any action or proceeding instituted under this chapter, the corporation counsel may file in the county clerk's office of the county where the dwelling affected by such action or proceeding is situated, a notice of the pendency of such action or proceeding. Such notice may be filed at the time of the commencement of the action or proceeding, or at any time afterwards, before final judgment or order. The corporation counsel shall designate in writing the name of each person against whom the notice is filed and the number of each block on the land map of the county which is affected by the notice. The county clerk in whose office the notice of pendency is filed shall record and index such notice against the names and blocks designated.

b. Any such notice may be vacated upon the order of a judge of the court in which such action or proceeding was instituted or is pending, or upon the consent in writing of the corporation counsel. The clerk of the county where such notice is filed shall cancel such notice upon receipt of such consent or of a certified copy of such order.

§ 26-530 Increase of rentals.

a. Before acting upon any application or motion for an increase in the maximum rental per room to be charged tenants and cooperators of dwellings where the department of housing preservation and development is the "supervising agency" under the provisions of the private housing finance law, a public hearing shall be held. Said hearing shall be held upon no less than twenty days' written notice to the tenants and said notice shall have annexed thereto a copy of the application or motion for increase in rentals and shall set forth the facts upon which the application or motion is based.

b. No application or motion for an increase in the maximum rental per room shall be entertained or acted upon hereunder for a period of two years from the date or any previous order of the "supervising agency" for the increase of maximum rent affecting the same dwelling.

c. No increase in maximum rental per room or surcharge thereto or any other penalty shall be charged to or assessed against any tenant or tenant-cooperator of dwellings, where the department of housing preservation and development is the "supervising agency", for failure to authorize the commissioner of finance to verify to such "supervising agency" the amount of income as it appears on their New York state or New York city income tax returns.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. Where public hearing held pursuant to this section was primarily informational and not judicial tenant-shareholders of a mutual housing company organized under the Private Housing Law were not entitled to a preliminary injunction restraining enforcement of increased carrying charges ordered by the city Housing and Development Administration.-Matter of Messner v. Housing and Development Administration, 78 Misc. 2d 381, 356 N.Y.S. 2d 155 [1974].

¶ 2. The Housing and Development Administration would not be required to hold a full evidentiary hearing prior to the implementation of the second stage of a rent increase in a Mitchell-Lama house since this section applies only to rent increases and not to a requested reduction in rent and such hearing was "informational to assist H.D.A. in developing a sound fiscal structure for the housing company it supervises" and did not "purport to be a judicial type hearing in connection with a rent increase".-Matter of Davis v. Starr, 88 Misc. 2d 210 [1976].

CHAPTER 7 RENT INCREASE EXEMPTION FOR LOW INCOME ELDERLY PERSONS AND PERSONS WITH DISABILITIES*51

§ 26-601 Definitions.

As used in this section. a. "Commissioner" means the commissioner of housing and community renewal of the state of New York.

b. "Dwelling unit" means that part of a dwelling in which an eligible head of the household resides and which is subject to the provisions of either article II, IV, V, or XI of the private housing finance law, or that part of a dwelling which was or continues to be subject to a mortgage insured or initially insured by the federal government pursuant to section two hundred thirteen of the national housing act, as amended, in which an eligible head of the household resides.

c. "Eligibility date" means the later of (1) January first, nineteen hundred seventy-five, or (2) the last day of the month in which a person became an eligible head of a household in the dwelling unit in which such person resides at the time of filing the most recent application for benefits hereunder, or in the case of a dwelling subject to a mortgage insured or initially insured by the federal government pursuant to section two hundred thirteen of the national housing act, as amended, "eligibility date" means the later of (1) July first, nineteen hundred seventy-seven, or (2) the last day of the month in which a person became an eligible head of a household in the dwelling unit in which such person resides at the time of filing the most recent application for benefits hereunder.

d. "Eligible head of the household" means a person or his or her spouse who is sixty-two years of age or older or who qualifies as a person with a disability pursuant to section 26-617 of this chapter and is entitled to the possession or to the use and occupancy of a dwelling unit, provided, however, that with respect to a dwelling which was subject to a mortgage insured or initially insured by the federal government pursuant to section two hundred thirteen of the national housing act, as amended, "eligible head of the household" shall be limited to that person or his or her spouse who was entitled to possession or the use and occupancy of such dwelling unit at the time of termination of such mortgage, and whose income when combined with the income of all other members of the household whose head of household is sixty-two years of age or older does not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand five, twenty-six thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand six, twenty-seven thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand seven, twenty-eight thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand eight, and twenty-nine thousand dollars beginning July first, two thousand nine, for the taxable period, or whose income for the current income tax year when combined with the income of all members of the household residing in the housing accommodation whose head of the household is a person with a disability does not exceed the maximum income above which such head of the household would not be eligible to receive cash supplemental security income benefits under federal law during such tax year.

e. "Housing company" means any limited-profit housing company, limited dividend housing company, redevelopment company or housing development fund company incorporated pursuant to the private housing finance law and operated exclusively for the benefit of persons or families of low income, or any corporate owner of a dwelling which is or was subject to a mortgage insured or initially insured by the federal government pursuant to section two hundred thirteen of the national housing act, as amended.

f. "Income" means income received by the eligible head of the household combined with the income of all other members of the household from all sources after deduction of all income and social security taxes and includes without limitation, social security and retirement benefits, supplemental security income and additional state payments, public assistance benefits, interest, dividends, net rental income, salary and earnings, and net income from self-employment, but shall not include gifts or inheritances, payments made to individuals because of their status as victims of Nazi persecution, as defined in P.L. 103-286, or increases in benefits accorded pursuant to the social security act or a public or private pension paid to any member of the household which increase, in any given year, does not exceed the consumer price index (all items United States city average) for such year which take effect after the eligibility date of an eligible head of the household receiving benefits hereunder, whether received by the eligible head of the household or any other member of the household. When the eligible head of a household has retired on or after the commencement of the taxable period and prior to the date of making an application for a rent increase exemption order/tax abatement certificate pursuant to this chapter, such person's income shall be adjusted by excluding salary or earnings and projecting such person's retirement income over the entire taxable period.

g. "Income tax year" means a twelve month period for which the head of the household filed a federal personal income tax return, or if no such return is filed, the calendar year.

h. "Increase in maximum rent" means any increase in the maximum rent for the dwelling unit becoming effective on or after the eligibility date, including capital assessments and voluntary capital contributions but excluding any increase in maximum rent attributable to gas or electrical utility charges or an increase in dwelling space, services or equipment, provided, however, that with respect to any dwelling unit in a dwelling which is or was subject to a mortgage insured or initially insured by the federal government pursuant to section two hundred thirteen of the national housing act, as amended, "increase in maximum rent" shall not include any increase in maximum rent attributable to capital assessments or voluntary capital contributions.

i. "Maximum rent" means the maximum rent, excluding gas and electric utility charges, which has been authorized or approved by the commissioner or the supervising agency or the legal regulated rent established for the dwelling unit pursuant to the provisions of either article II, IV, V or XI of the private housing finance law, or the rental established for a cooperatively owned dwelling unit previously regulated pursuant to the provisions of article II, IV, V or XI of the private housing finance law, or the rental established for a dwelling unit, in a dwelling subject to a mortgage insured or initially insured by the federal government pursuant to section two hundred thirteen of the national housing act, as amended or such rent established for a dwelling unit which was subject to a mortgage insured or initially insured by the federal government pursuant to section two hundred thirteen of the national housing act, as amended.

j. "Members of the household" means the head of the household and any person, permanently residing in the dwelling unit.

k. "Supervising agency" means the department of housing preservation and development.

l. "Taxable period" means the income tax year immediately preceding the date of making application for a rent increase exemption order/tax abatement certificate.

§ 26-605 Rent increase exemption orders/tax abatement certificates.

(a) Subject to the provisions of this chapter an eligible head of the household may obtain a rent increase exemption order/tax abatement certificate entitling him or her to an exemption from increases in the maximum rent otherwise payable in one of the following amounts:

(1) where the eligible head of the household does not receive a monthly allowance pursuant to the social services law, the amount by which increases in the maximum rent subsequent to such persons' eligibility date have resulted in the maximum rent exceeding one-third of the combined income of all members of the household for the taxable period, except that in no event shall a rent increase exemption order/tax abatement certificate become effective prior to January first, nineteen hundred seventy-six; or

(2) where the eligible head of the household receives a monthly allowance for shelter pursuant to the social services law, an amount not exceeding that portion of any increase in maximum rent subsequent to such person's eligibility date which is not covered by the maximum allowance for shelter which such person is entitled to receive pursuant to the social services law.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, when a head of a household to whom the then current, valid tax abatement certificate has been issued under this chapter, chapter three or chapter four of this title moves his principal residence to a subsequent dwelling unit subject to this chapter, or which is or was subject to a mortgage insured or initially insured by the federal government pursuant to section two hundred thirteen of the national housing act, as amended, the head of the household may apply to the supervising agency, subject to the terms and conditions imposed by this chapter, for a tax abatement certificate relating to the subsequent dwelling unit, and such certificate may provide that the head of the household shall be exempt from paying that portion of the maximum rent for the subsequent dwelling unit which is the least of the following:

(1) the amount by which the rent for the subsequent dwelling unit exceeds the last rent, as reduced, which the head of the household was required to actually pay in the original dwelling unit;

(2) the last amount deducted from the maximum rent or legal regulated rent meaning the most recent monthly deduction for the applicant in the original dwelling unit pursuant to this section, section 26-406 or section 26-409 of this title; or

(3) where the eligible head of the household does not receive a monthly allowance pursuant to the social services law, the amount by which the maximum rent of the subsequent dwelling unit exceeds one-third of the combined income of all members of the household.

Such certificate shall be effective as of the first day of the month in which the tenant applied for such exemption or as of the date the tenant took occupancy of the subsequent dwelling unit, whichever is later, provided both occur after the effective date of this law.

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of law and to the extent applicable to the provisions of this chapter, any renewal application being made by the tenant pursuant to this section, any rent increase order then in effect with respect to such tenant shall be deemed renewed until such time as the department of housing preservation and development shall have found such tenant to be either eligible or ineligible for a rent increase exemption order but in no event for more than six additional months. If such tenant is found eligible, the order shall be deemed to have taken effect upon expiration of the exemption. In the event that any such tenant shall, subsequent to any such automatic renewal, not be granted a rent increase exemption order, such tenant shall be liable to his or her landlord for the difference between the amounts he or she has paid under the provisions of the automatically renewed order and the amounts which he or she would have been required to pay in the absence of such order. Any rent increase exemption order issued pursuant to this chapter shall include provisions giving notice as to the contents of this section relating to automatic renewals of rent exemption orders.

(d) notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, where an eligible head of the household holds a current, valid rent increase exemption order/tax abatement certificate and, after the effective date of this subdivision, there is a permanent decrease in income in an amount which exceeds twenty percent of such income as represented in such eligible head of household's last approved application for a rent increase exemption order/tax abatement certificate or for renewal thereof, such eligible head of the household may apply for a redetermination of the amount set forth therein. Upon application, such amount shall be redetermined so as to reestablish the ratio of adjusted rent to income which existed at the time of approval of such eligible head of the household's last application for a rent increase exemption order/tax abatement certificate or for renewal thereof; provided, however, that in no event shall the amount of the adjusted rent be redetermined to be (i) in the case of an eligible head of the household who does not receive a monthly allowance for shelter pursuant to the social services law, less than one-third of income; or (ii) in the case of an eligible head of the household who receives a monthly allowance for shelter pursuant to the social services law, less than the maximum allowance for shelter which such eligible head of the household is entitled to receive pursuant to law. For purposes of this subdivision, a decrease in income shall not include any decrease in income resulting from the manner in which income is calculated pursuant to any amendment to paragraph f of subdivision one of section four hundred sixty-seven-c of the real property tax law or an amendment to subdivision f of section 26-601 of this code made on or after April first, nineteen hundred eighty-seven. For purposes of this subdivision, "adjusted rent" shall mean maximum rent less the amount set forth in a rent increase exemption order/tax abatement certificate.

§ 26-608 Credit allowances; penalties for overcharge.

Upon receipt of a copy of a rent increase exemption order/tax abatement certificate, the housing company managing the dwelling unit of the eligible head of the household shall promptly accord to the eligible head of the household covered by such order/certificate the appropriate credit against the monthly maximum rent then and thereafter payable. To the extent the full amount of such credit has not been accorded for any past period since the effective date specified in the order/certificate, the housing company shall credit the total aggregate amount not so credited to the monthly maximum rent next payable or to such subsequent monthly maximum rents, as the supervising agency may authorize. It shall be illegal to collect any amount for which a rent increase exemption order/tax abatement certificate provides credit or to withhold credit for any such amounts already collected, and collection or retention of any such amount for a dwelling unit occupied by such eligible head of the household shall be deemed a rent overcharge, and upon conviction therefor the housing company and its directors and any employee responsible therefor shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine not to exceed one thousand dollars or imprisonment not to exceed six months, or both.

Notwithstanding any inconsistent provision of law, whenever a rent increase exemption order/tax abatement certificate is issued to an eligible head of the household residing in a dwelling unit owned by a housing company which is subject to the provisions of article II, IV, V or XI of the private housing finance law entitling such eligible person to an exemption from an increase in maximum rent attributable to a capital assessment or voluntary capital contribution made prior to, on or after the effective date of this section and such person later transfers his shares in such housing company, such person shall be required to pay over to such housing company, or such housing company shall be entitled to deduct from the amount to be paid to such person for the sale of such shares, all amounts covered by such rent increase exemption order/tax abatement certificate which are attributable to such capital assessment or voluntary capital contribution. Such housing company shall not approve the transfer of shares unless it has received the payment required by the preceding sentence or made the deduction therein authorized. Such housing company shall remit such amount to the commissioner of finance within ninety days of the collection thereof. Payments due to the city in accordance with this section shall be deemed a tax lien and may be enforced in any manner authorized for the collection of delinquent taxes on real property.

b. "Total price" (1) with respect to cooperative conversions, the number of all shares in the offering multiplied by the last price per share which was offered to tenants in occupancy prior to the effective date of the plan regardless of number of sales made; (2) with respect to condominium conversions, the sum of the cost of all units in the offering at the last price which was offered to tenants in occupancy prior to the effective date of the plan regardless of number of sales made.

c. "Capital replacement" a building-wide replacement of a major component of any of the following systems:

(1) elevator;

(2) heating, ventilation and air conditioning;

(3) plumbing;

(4) wiring;

(5) window;

or, a major structural replacement to the building; provided, however, that replacements made to cure code violations of record shall not be included.

§ 26-703 Establishment of reserve fund.

a. Within thirty days after the closing of a conversion pursuant to an offering plan the offeror shall establish and transfer to the cooperative corporation or condominium board of managers, a reserve fund to be used exclusively for making capital repairs, replacements and improvements necessary for the health and safety of the residents of such buildings. Such reserve fund shall be exclusive of any other funds required to be reserved under the plan or applicable law or regulation of the state attorney general, except a fund for capital repairs, replacements and improvements substantially similar in purpose to and in an amount not less than the reserve fund mandated by this section. Such reserve fund also shall be exclusive of any working capital fund and shall not be subject to reduction for closing apportionments.

b. Such fund shall be established in an amount equal to either (i) three per cent of the total price or, (ii) (A) three per cent of the actual sales price of all cooperative shares or condominium units sold by the offeror at the time the plan is declared effective, provided, however, that if such amount is less than one per cent of the total price, then the fund shall be established as a minimum of one per cent of the total price; plus (B) supplemental contributions to be made by the offeror at a rate of three per cent of the actual sales price of cooperative shares or condominium units for each unit or its allocable shares held by the offeror and sold to bona fide purchasers subsequent to the effective date of the plan and within five years of the closing of the conversion pursuant to such plan notwithstanding that the total amount contributed may exceed three per cent of the total price; and provided, further, that if five years from thirty days after the closing of the conversion pursuant to such plan the total contributions by the offeror to the fund are less than three per cent of the total price the offeror shall pay the difference between the amount contributed and three per cent of the total price. Supplemental contributions shall be made within thirty days of each sale.

c. The contributions required pursuant to this section may be made earlier or in an amount greater than so provided. An offeror may claim and receive credit against the mandatory initial contribution to the reserve fund for the actual cost of capital replacements which he or she has begun after the plan is submitted for filing to the state department of law and before the plan is declared effective; provided, however, that any such replacements must be set forth in the plan together with their actual or estimated costs and further provided, that such credit shall not exceed the lesser of the actual cost of the capital replacements or one per cent of the total price.

d. Any building, construction of which was completed within three years prior to the closing of a conversion pursuant to an offering plan, shall be exempt from the requirements of this section.

§ 26-708 Criminal and civil penalties; enforcement.

a. Except as otherwise provided in subdivision b of this section, any person who knowingly violates or assists in the violation of any section of this chapter shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars. Except as otherwise provided in subdivision b of this section, any person who violates or assists in the violation of any section of this chapter shall be subject to a civil penalty of one hundred dollars per day per unit for each day that a building is not in compliance with the provisions of such sections; provided, however, that such civil penalty shall not exceed one thousand dollars per unit.

b. Any person who knowingly violates or assists in the violation of section 26-703 of this chapter shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not more than two times the amount required to be reserved by section 26-703 of this chapter which was not so reserved. Any person who violates or assists in the violation of section 26-703 of this chapter shall also be subject to a civil penalty of one thousand dollars per day for each day that the reserve fund required by section 26-703 of this chapter is not established; provided, however, that such civil penalty shall not exceed the amount required to be reserved pursuant to section 26-703 of this chapter.

c. In addition, any other action or proceeding in any court of competent jurisdiction that may be appropriate or necessary for the enforcement of the provisions of this chapter may be brought in the name of the city, including actions to secure permanent injunctions enjoining any acts or practices which constitute a violation of any provision of this chapter, mandating compliance with the provisions of this chapter or for such other relief as may be appropriate. In any such action or proceeding the city may apply to any court of competent jurisdiction, or to a judge or justice thereof, for a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction enjoining and restraining all persons from violating any provision of this chapter, mandating compliance with the provisions of this chapter, or for such other relief as may be appropriate, until the hearing and determination of such action or proceeding and the entry of final judgment or order therein. The court, or judge or justice thereof, to whom such application is made, is hereby authorized forthwith to make any or all of the orders above specified, as may be required in such application, with or without notice, and to make such other or further orders or directions as may be necessary to render the same effectual. No undertaking shall be required as a condition of the granting or issuing of such order, or by reason thereof.

d. Nothing contained in this section shall impair any rights, remedies or causes of action accrued or accruing to purchasers of cooperative shares or condominium units.

e. The department of housing preservation and development is empowered to enforce the provisions of this chapter.

CHAPTER 9 RIGHT OF FIRST REFUSAL AND FIRST OPPORTUNITY TO PURCHASE*52

§ 26-801 Definitions.

For the purposes of this section, the following definitions shall apply:

(a) "Affordable" shall mean that rental expenses for dwelling units do not exceed thirty percent of the annual gross household income of the existing tenants, and/or where rental expenses do not exceed the rent levels allowable pursuant to the rent restrictions applicable to such dwelling units prior to conversion, provided however that dwelling units which become vacant in assisted rental housing should not be rented to households whose income exceeds eighty percent of the New York metropolitan area median income as determined by the United States department of housing and urban development.

(b) "Appraised value" shall mean the value as determined by a majority vote of an advisory panel of three appraisers who shall perform such appraisal in accordance with the American Arbitration Association's rules for the real estate industry.

(c) "Assisted rental housing" shall mean a privately-owned multiple dwelling or group of multiple dwelling units managed together under the same ownership in which the majority of dwelling units therein are subject to federal, state or city income eligibility restrictions and in which rents for such dwelling units are controlled, regulated or assisted by a federal, state or city agency pursuant to a regulatory agreement or rental assistance agreement designed to make such dwelling units affordable on a project-based basis. Assisted rental housing programs shall include:

(1) any program created, administered, or supervised by the city or state under article II or article IV of the private housing finance law, but shall not include any multiple dwelling owned or operated by a company organized under article II or article IV of the private housing finance law that was occupied prior to January 1, 1974.

(2) any program providing project-based assistance under section eight of the United States housing act of 1937, as it may be amended from time to time; and

(3) housing programs governed by sections 202, 207, 221, 232, 236, or 811 of the national housing act, (12 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.), as they may be amended from time to time;

(d) "Bona fide purchaser" shall mean a person or entity that has tendered a bona fide offer to purchase the assisted rental housing.

(e) "Bona fide offer to purchase" shall mean a good faith and without fraud offer, made in writing and approved by the department that is tendered by a bona fide purchaser no later than one hundred and twenty days after an appraisal performed pursuant to section 26-804 of this chapter, and that is non-binding on the owner with intent to convert.

(f) "Conversion" or "convert" shall mean the transfer of title, leasing, intention to sell or lease, mortgage pre-payment, withdrawal from an assisted housing program, decision not to extend or renew participation in the program or any other action taken by the owner that would result in the termination of participation by the owner in the assisted rental housing program.

(g) "Household" shall mean all lawful occupants of any dwelling unit as defined in section 27-2004 of this code.

(h) "Household income" shall mean, for any household, the sum of the amount reported separately in the most recent individual or joint tax return for wage or salary income, net self-employed income, interest, dividends, rent received, royalties, social security or railroad retirement benefits or disability benefits and all other income for each member of the household reported on a tax return.

(i) "Department" shall mean the department of housing preservation and development or successor agency.

(j) "Financial assistance" shall mean any benefits received as a result of an assisted rental housing program that act to maintain affordable rents in the assisted rental housing.

(k) "First opportunity to purchase" shall mean the opportunity by a tenant association, or if applicable, a qualified entity, to purchase in good faith and without fraud the assisted rental housing at or below its appraised value before such assisted rental housing becomes subject to conversion.

(l) "Notice" shall mean a written communication addressed to a tenant association, or if no tenant association exists, to each tenant, or if applicable, to a qualified entity, by means of first class and registered mail, or personal delivery upon a tenant association, or if no tenant association exists, upon each tenant, or if applicable, a qualified entity. Each such notice shall be deemed to have been given upon the deposit of such first class and registered mail in the custody of the United States postal service or upon receipt of personal delivery, and by posting of such notice in the common areas of the assisted rental housing.

(m) "Owner" shall mean any person or entity, or combination of such persons or entities, or any agent of such persons or entities, that has a controlling interest in assisted rental housing that is subject to conversion.

(n) "Qualified entity" shall mean any individual, partnership, limited liability partnership, limited liability corporation, not-for-profit corporation or business corporation, or other entity authorized to do business in New York state and experienced in the management of affordable housing, designated by the tenants residing in at least sixty percent of the occupied dwelling units within the same assisted rental housing to act on its behalf pursuant to section 26-809 of this chapter and approved in writing by the department and which obligates itself and any successors in interest to assume the ongoing responsibility of continuing maintenance and operation of the assisted rental housing as affordable for the duration of the housing's useful life and in accordance with the purposes of this chapter.

(o) "Right of first refusal" shall mean the right of a tenant association, or if applicable, a qualified entity, to submit a good faith and without fraud offer, in writing to the owner to purchase the higher of the assisted rental housing's appraised value or the identical price, terms and conditions offered by a bona fide purchaser as approved by the department.

(p) "Tenant" shall mean a lawful occupant who resides within a dwelling unit within such assisted rental housing pursuant to law or a lease recognized by either the owner of such assisted rental housing, the department or a court of competent jurisdiction.

(q) "Tenant association" shall mean an association, whether incorporated or not, for which written consent to forming a tenant association has been given by tenants representing at least sixty percent of the occupied dwelling units within the same assisted rental housing, and which association notifies or has notified the owner of the assisted rental housing and the department of its existence or establishment and has provided to such owner and the department the names and addresses of at least two of the officers or representatives of such association. Where more than one group of tenants in the same assisted rental housing claims to be the tenant association for such assisted rental housing, the department shall determine which group, if any, is the tenant association for the purposes of this chapter in the same manner as the department certifies a tenant association for the purposes of article II of the private housing finance law.

Section 1. Declaration of legislative findings and intent. The Council of the City of New York hereby finds that the increasing scarcity of affordable housing in the City makes it crucial to preserve existing subsidized housing units. Private owners are electing to prepay subsidized mortgages or to opt out of project-based subsidy programs at an alarming rate. No longer constrained by such programs, owners are putting their buildings up for sale, with the new purchasers forcing out low- and moderate-income tenants as the buildings open to market rents.

One in ten federally subsidized assisted rental housing units in New York City has been or is in the process of being removed from the affordable housing stock, according to data compiled by the Community Service Society. Compounding this problem, the federal government has eliminated funding for programs designed to promote the preservation of subsidized housing, and it does not appear that any new federal programs will be funded to create new subsidized housing. In the face of such conversions from affordable housing to market rate housing, some city and state governments have enacted legislation granting a right of first refusal and a first opportunity to purchase to low to moderate-income residents who will maintain the buildings as housing for low- and moderate-income residents. The City of New York has an obligation to safeguard against the loss of affordable housing and the Council is enacting this local law to help ensure that the assisted rental housing stock is maintained for the people of New York.

. . . . . § 3. If any sentence, paragraph, section or part of this local law shall be adjudged invalid by a court of competent jurisdiction such judgment shall not impair or invalidate the remainder thereof but shall be confined to that part deemed invalid.

§ 4. This local law shall take effect ninety days after its enactment into law except that the commissioner of housing preservation and development shall take all actions, including the promulgation of rules, necessary for the implementation of this local law prior to such effective date.

§ 26-802 Notification of impending conversion.

(a) Notice shall be provided by the owner to the tenant association, or if no tenant association exists, to each tenant, and to the department of the intention of the owner to take any action that will result in the conversion of the assisted rental housing.

(b) Such notice shall be provided no less than twelve months prior to the taking of such action by the owner. Such notice shall include the following information:

(1) The name and address of each owner of the assisted rental housing. For any owner that is a corporation, the notice shall contain the names and addresses of the officers and directors of the corporation and of any person directly or indirectly holding more than ten percent of any class of the outstanding stock of the corporation. For any owner that is a partnership or joint venture, the notice shall contain the name and address of each individual who is a principal or exercises control of such entities.

(2) The address and/or addresses and the name and/or names of the assisted rental housing and the type of program or programs to which the assisted rental housing is subject;

(3) The nature of the action that the owner intends to take that will result in a conversion;

(4) The date on which such action resulting in the conversion is anticipated to take place;

(5) The provision of law, rule or regulation pursuant to which such action is authorized;

(6) The total number and type of dwelling units subject to a conversion; (7) The current rent schedule for the dwelling units along with an estimation of the rent increases anticipated upon conversion;

(8) The income and expense report for the twelve-month period prior to the notice including capital improvements, real property taxes and other municipal charges;

(9) The amount of the outstanding mortgage as of the date of the notice; (10) The two most recent inspection reports from the real estate assessment center of the United States department of housing and urban development, for the assisted rental housing or group of multiple dwelling units operated together under the same ownership for which such inspection reports are required, or, the reports of the two most recent comprehensive building-wide inspection reports that may have been conducted by the department or by the New York state division of housing and community renewal;

(11) A statement of notice in a manner approved by the department which advises a tenant association, or if no tenant association exists, advises each tenant, of the first opportunity to purchase as required by section 26-806 of this chapter, or of the right of first refusal, as required by section 26-805 of this chapter;

(12) Such other information the department may require.

(c) During the twelve-month notification period provided for in subdivision b of this section the owner may not sell or contract to sell the assisted rental housing, but may engage in such discussions with other interested parties.

(d) Notice shall not be required of an owner who intends to maintain the property as assisted rental housing or intends to transfer, lease or refinance a mortgage in order to maintain the property as assisted rental housing.

(e) Where an owner decides not to convert the assisted rental housing program, such owner may withdraw the notice of intention to convert the assisted rental housing program, subject to the terms of any accepted offer to purchase or executed purchase and sale agreement, and to existing statutory and common law remedies. In such event, the owner shall give notice to the tenant association, or if no tenant association exists, to each tenant, or if applicable, to a qualified entity, and to the department. However, should the owner at any time decide to take an action that will result in conversion, the twelve-month notice period of this section as well as all other applicable requirements of this chapter shall be complied with.

(f) Notwithstanding any of the above, if any applicable supervening statute or program has a notice requirement substantially similar to any notice requirement of this section, then the notice requirement under this section shall be that of the supervening statute or program.

(g) Notwithstanding any of the above, if the notices required by this section require more information than is required by any applicable supervening city, state or federal statute or program, then such additional information shall be provided within the time period established by the supervening statute or program.

§ 26-804 Appraisal determination.

(a) The department shall convene an advisory panel, which advisory panel shall determine the appraised value of the assisted rental housing within thirty days of a tenant association's, or if applicable, a qualified entity's notice to the owner and the department pursuant to subdivision a of section 26-805 or subdivision a of section 26-806 of this chapter.

(b) The advisory panel shall consist of one appraiser selected by the owner, one appraiser selected by the tenant association, or if applicable, a qualified entity, and one appraiser to be selected either by mutual agreement between the owner and the tenant association or if applicable, a qualified entity, or by mutual agreement between the appraiser that was selected by the owner and the appraiser selected by the tenant association, or if applicable, a qualified entity, if such condition is deemed acceptable to the owner and the tenants association, or if applicable, a qualified entity, and is agreed upon in writing, except that in the case of where there is no agreement between the owner and the tenant association, or if applicable, a qualified entity, or between the appraiser that was selected by the owner and the appraiser selected by the tenant association, or if applicable, a qualified entity, then the appraiser will be selected by the department. The cost for the appraiser shall be borne by the party responsible for providing such appraiser. However, where the department must select the third appraiser, the cost for such appraiser shall be equally borne by the owner and the tenant association, or if applicable, a qualified entity.

(c) Notice shall be provided by the department to the owner and the tenant association, or if applicable, a qualified entity, fifteen days before the intended date that such advisory panel is to initiate the performance of the appraisal. In the instance when either the owner fails to provide an appraiser within fifteen days of such notice or when the tenant association, or if applicable, a qualified entity, fails to provide an appraiser within fifteen days of such notice then the department shall select the appraiser on behalf of the party or parties that failed to select an appraiser. In such circumstance, the cost for the appraiser selected by the department shall be borne by the party responsible for providing that appraiser.

(d) The department shall promulgate rules for the timely determination of the appraised value and that such rules are to be consistent with the notice requirements mandated under this chapter. The department shall make such appraised value publicly available within fifteen days from the date of such advisory panel's determination.

(e) In the instance where the owner and the tenant association, or if applicable, a qualified entity, have mutually agreed upon an appraised value for the assisted rental housing prior to the convening of the advisory panel, the owner and the tenant association, or if applicable, a qualified entity, may in writing apply to the department for a waiver from subdivisions a through d of this section. In the face of such conversions from affordable housing to market rate housing, some city and state governments have enacted legislation granting a right of first refusal and a first opportunity to purchase to low to moderate-income residents who will maintain the buildings as housing for low- and moderate-income residents. The City of New York has an obligation to safeguard against the loss of affordable housing and the Council is enacting this local law to help ensure that the assisted rental housing stock is maintained for the people of New York.

Section 1. Declaration of legislative findings and intent. The Council of the City of New York hereby finds that the increasing scarcity of affordable housing in the City makes it crucial to preserve existing subsidized housing units. Private owners are electing to prepay subsidized mortgages or to opt out of project-based subsidy programs at an alarming rate. No longer constrained by such programs, owners are putting their buildings up for sale, with the new purchasers forcing out low- and moderate-income tenants as the buildings open to market rents.

One in ten federally subsidized assisted rental housing units in New York City has been or is in the process of being removed from the affordable housing stock, according to data compiled by the Community Service Society. Compounding this problem, the federal government has eliminated funding for programs designed to promote the preservation of subsidized housing, and it does not appear that any new federal programs will be funded to create new subsidized housing. In the face of such conversions from affordable housing to market rate housing, some city and state governments have enacted legislation granting a right of first refusal and a first opportunity to purchase to low to moderate-income residents who will maintain the buildings as housing for low- and moderate-income residents. ARTICLE 4 ALTERATIONS OF EXISTING BUILDINGS

§ 27-123.1 Alterations, additions, repairs and changes in occupancy or use requiring facilities for people having physical disabilities.

The provisions of subarticle two of article two of subchapter four of chapter one of title twenty-seven of this code shall apply to alterations, additions and repairs made to buildings, as well as to changes in occupancy or use, as set forth below. The provisions of sections 27-115, 27-116, 27-117, 27-118 and 27-120 of this code shall not govern the application of the provisions of such subarticle.

(a) The provisions of subarticle two of article two of subchapter four of chapter one of title twenty-seven of this code shall apply to an entire existing building, as if hereafter erected, when the costs of any alterations, additions or repairs, other than ordinary repairs, made within any twelve-month period immediately following the filing of the application exceed fifty percent of the cost of replacement of the building with one of similar floor space, as estimated by the department at the beginning of that twelve-month period. When such estimated costs of alterations, additions or repairs, other than ordinary repairs, do not exceed fifty percent of such replacement cost, then the provisions of subarticle two of article two of subchapter four of chapter one of title twenty-seven shall apply to such alterations, additions or repairs, although nothing herein is meant to discourage compliance with the standards set forth in subarticle two of article two of subchapter four of chapter one of title twenty-seven in other portions of buildings described in this sentence.

(b) The provisions of subarticle two of article two of subchapter four of chapter one of title twenty-seven of this code shall apply to an entire existing building, as if hereafter erected, when there is a change in occupancy classification of the building. The provisions of subarticle two of article two of subchapter four of chapter one of title twenty-seven of this code shall apply to a space in a building when there is a change in the occupancy type thereof or in how such space is used.

(c) When any work not otherwise required to comply with the provisions of subarticle two of article two of subchapter four of chapter one of title twenty-seven is done on an interior accessible route in existing residential buildings, other than in occupancy group J-3, which work involves plumbing fixtures, that work shall be required to comply with section 27-292.8 of this code for the extent of the work being performed, provided such work will not require any structural changes or additional partitions; ordinary repairs and replacement of existing piping shall be exempt from the provisions of this sentence.

(d) Where additions or alterations subject parts of existing systems to loads exceeding those permitted herein, such parts shall be made to comply with this code.

(e) The provisions of subarticle two of article two of subchapter four of chapter one of title twenty-seven of this code and of subdivisions b and c of this section shall not apply to the alteration of existing residential buildings, other than adult residential care facilities, which are classified in occupancy group J-2 and contain no more than three dwelling units or which are classified in occupancy group J-3 and are being altered to contain three dwelling units, and which satisfy the requirements of subdivision (d) of section 27-357 of this code, when the cost of any alterations, additions or repairs, other than ordinary repairs, made within any twelve-month period immediately following the filing of the application do not exceed fifty percent of the cost of replacement of the building with one of similar floor space, as estimated by the department at the beginning of that twelve-month period.

Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, the provisions of section 27-954 of this code shall apply to alterations made to buildings, as well as to changes in occupancy or use, as set forth below:

(a) The provisions of section 27-954 of this code shall apply to an entire existing building that is being altered, when such building is classified in occupancy group J-2 and will have four or more dwelling units upon the completion of the alterations, or is classified in occupancy group J-1, and when the costs of making any alterations to any such J-1 or J-2 building within any twelve-month period exceeds fifty percent of the building value.

(b) The provisions of section 27-954 of this code shall apply to an entire existing building when the occupancy classification of the building will change to a residential occupancy group other than occupancy group J-2 with not more than three dwelling units or occupancy group J-3.

(c) The provisions of section 27-954 of this code shall apply to any space: (1) when alterations thereto involve a change in the occupancy or use thereof to a residential occupancy group other than occupancy group J-2 with not more than three dwelling units or occupancy group J-3, or (2) when the costs of making alterations thereto within any twelve-month period exceeds fifty percent of the value of the space.

(d) For the purposes of this section, the cost of making alterations and the value of any such building or space shall be determined as set forth in section 27-119 of this chapter; provided, however, that for purposes of this section: (1) the cost of making alterations to a residential building shall be determined based on the aggregate cost of alterations to the residential portions of such building, and the value of such a building shall be determined based on the aggregate value of the residential portions of the building, exclusive of the value of any non-residential portions of the building; and (2) the cost of making alterations to residential spaces in a non-residential building shall be determined based on the collective cost of alterations to such spaces, and the value of such residential spaces shall be determined based on the aggregate value of all such spaces in the building, exclusive of the value of any non-residential portions of the building.

(e) When a system of automatic sprinklers is installed in any existing building or space pursuant to this section, such system shall comply with the requirements of this code and any other laws and rules applicable to the occupancy group in which such building or space is classified or in which such building or space would be classified if such building or space were classified under this chapter.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. Where receiver was forbidden by order of appointment from making repairs costing more than $300 or spending more than he collected except by court order and receiver lacked funds to make repairs, as application to court for authority to repair would have been a futile gesture and thus receiver could not be convicted for failure to maintain building in safe condition.-People v. Eisenberg, 100 Misc. 2d 29, 420 N.Y.S. 2d 962 [1979].

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Defendant failed to maintain bulging brickwork and rotten wood header beam over entrance doors in violation of NYC Ad Cd § 27-127 [C26-105.1]. Before sentence a portion of front wall failed causing building to be vacated. Defendant fined. People v. Erin Construction Corp., 136 Misc. 2d 807 [1987].

¶ 2. Beck v. Woodward Affiliates, 640 N.Y.S.2d 205, 226 A.D.2d 328 (1996). A pedestrian who was injured when she leaned against building that had been cleaned with an acid-containing product, could not impose liability against the owner under § 27-127 or 27-128. Although these sections generally impose a non-delegable duty upon an owner to maintain the premises in a safe condition, there was no specific structural or design defect in the facade of the building which would create liability under the Code. Moreover, these sections apply only to owners, so that plaintiff could not maintain the action against the lessee of the building. Thus, the plaintiff's remedy is to sue the independent contractor who performed the work in question.

¶ 3. A landowner who was completely parted with possession and control of a building will not be held liable unless it retains a right to enter to make inspection and repairs. Garcia v. Dormitory Authority of the State of New York, 195 A.D.2d 288, 599 N.Y.S.2d 600 (1st Dept. 1993).

¶ 4. Plaintiff, who was robbed by an armed assailant, brought an action against the landlord claiming lack of security. In S.M.R.K., Inc. v. 25 West 43rd Street Co., N.Y.L.J., Jan. 7, 1997, page 25, col. 5, Sup. Ct. New York Co.

¶ 5. A lease provided that the lessee would assume the cost of structural changes required by its use of the premises. Where the lessee' use of the premises to sublease office space was the use contemplated by the lease, and the duty to remove asbestos was imposed by a change in governmental policy rather than by the lessee's use of the premises, the landlord was required to absorb the cost of asbestos abatement. Rapid American Corp. v. 888 7th Avenue Associates Limited Partnership, 151 Misc.2d 966, 574 N.Y.S.2d 447 (Sup.Ct. New York Co. 1991).

¶ 6. This section can now form the basis of a an action by an injured police officer against the New York City Transit Authority, even though it merely states a common law duty with respect to premises maintenance (Muncipal Law § 205-e as amended, now allows police officers to sue even though the injury was caused by a violation of a provision prohibiting activities or conditions which increase the dangers inherent in police work). Farrington v. City of New York, 659 N.Y.S.2d 318, 240 A.D.2d 697 (1997). See also Corbisiero v. City of New York, 659 N.Y.S.2d 319, 240 A.D.2d 694 (1997).

¶ 7. A wrongful death suit was brought by the survivors of a police officer who had been shot and killed by a prisoner who stole a service revolver from a police locker room. Plaintiff's theory of recovery was that the locker room was improperly used as a prisoner detention area and that the prisoner had gained access to the locker containing the gun because it was either open or defective. Plaintiffs also alleged that the locker room was maintained in an unsafe condition, in violation of Admin. Code §27-127. The court, however, held that §27-127 could not be a basis for recovery, because decedent was not injured by any condition which could be said to arise from a failure to maintain the premises. Williams v. City of New York, 304 A.D.2d 562, 758 N.Y.S.2d 349 (2d Dept. 2003).

¶ 8. The statutory requirement that buildings be maintained in a safe condition is applicable to the accumulation of water defect that led to plaintiff's accident. Kelly v. City of New York, 6 A.D.3d 188, 774 N.Y.S.2d 520 (1st Dept. 2004).

¶ 9. The statute imposes a nondelegatable duty upon building owners to maintain their premises in a safe condition, but does not apply to a subcontractor/site manager. Weiss v. City of New York, 16 A.D.3d 680, 792 N.Y.S.2d 530 (2d Dept. 2005).

¶ 10. Admin. Code § 27-127 is non-specific, and reflects only a general duty to maintain the premises in a safe condition. Reddy v. 369 Lexington Ave. Co., L.P., 31 A.D.3d 732, 819 N.Y.S.2d 776 (2nd Dept. 2006).

¶ 11. In one case, a tenant claimed that a dangerous mold existed in the apartment, and brought an action against a building owner, managing agent, and contractor for personal injuries allegedly caused by contractor's negligent performance of exterior facade work. The court determined that there was conflicting evidence from the parties' experts, and fact issues were raised with respect to the mold. Specifically, the court questioned whether the mold was directly caused by the water and matter that entered the apartment as a result of the contractor's alleged failure to exercise due care. There was also a fact issue as to whether the owner had notice of the hazard. While the tenant plaintiff repeatedly complained to the owner, it was not clear when the initial complaint was made. If the plaintiff tenant did not complain about the mold until after the onset of respiratory problems, it would have been too late for the owner to take remedial action. Additionally, it would have to be determined whether the mold was a foreseeable consequence of the water and matter that entered plaintiff's apartment while facade work was being done. If the events were foreseeable, then defendant would have had constructive notice of a potential mold hazard. Previous notice of decoloration and knowledge of previous water damage does not constitute notice of mold growth, however. On the other hand, under the statute, the owner is under a non-delegable duty to maintain the premises in a reasonably safe condition, and cannot absolve themselves or responsibility by stating that they are not liable for the negligence of the independent contractor who performed the exterior facade work. Daitch v. Naiman, 25 A.D.3d 458, 807 N.Y.S.2d 95 (1st Dept. 2006).

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Pursuant to the Ad Code of the City of NY § 27-128, an absentee landlord's statutory responsibility for the "safe maintenance of the building and facilities" extends beyond structural defects to the building to transient unsafe conditions caused by the tenant, where the tenant had contracted to maintain and repair the premises and the landlord maintain the right to reenter to inspect and make repairs; therefore landlord is legally responsible for tenants unsafe stacking of boxes and cartons in the basement storage area. Sergio v. Benjolo N.V., 146 Misc. 2d 1011.

¶ 2. Tenant who is renovating premises in order to sublet is not required to bear the cost of asbestos removal. Landlord is responsible. Rapid-American Corp. v. 888 7th Avenue Assoc., 151 Misc 2d 966 [1991].

¶ 3. There is a special duty imposed on building owners for the safe maintenance of buildings at all times pursuant to Ad Cd §27-128. People v. DiLorenzo, 154 Misc.2d 485, 585 N.Y.S.2d 675 [1991]

¶ 4. An out-of-possession landlord's reservation of right to enter, inspect and make repairs to premises may be deemed to constitute sufficient retention of control to permit finding that landlord had constructive notice of a defective condition. Here, plaintiff's defeated summary judgment that allegedly defective condition was a structural defect which violated defendants' responsibility "for the safe maintenance of the building and its facilities" under Ad Code §27-128. Gantz v. Kurz, 203 AD2d 240, 610 NYS2d 279 (2nd Dept. 1994).

¶ 5. Kilimnik v. Mirage Restaurant, 223 A.D.2d 530, 635 N.Y.S.2d 702 (App.Div. 2nd Dept. 1996). This section will not impose liability against a lessor who is not in possession of the premises. In the absence of a specific statutory duty, the lessor's mere right to enter the leased premises to inspect and repair will not permit the victim of a slip and fall accident to maintain a claim against the lessor.

¶ 6. The statute governing the responsibility of an owner for safe maintenance of a building and its facilities is applicable to the accumulation of water defect that led to plaintiff's accident. Kelly v. City of New York, 6 A.D.3d 188, 774 N.Y.S.2d 520 (1st Dept. 2004).

¶ 7. The statute imposes a nondelegatable duty upon building owners to maintain their premises in a safe condition, but did not to a subcontractor/site manager. Weiss v. City of New York, 16 A.D.3d 680, 792 N.Y.S.2d 530 (2d Dept. 2005).

¶ 8. Admin. Code § 27-128 is non-specific, and reflects only a general duty to maintain the premises in a safe condition. Reddy v. 369 Lexington Ave. Co., L.P., 31 A.D.3d 732, 819 N.Y.S.2d 776 (2nd Dept. 2006).

¶ 9. See Daitch v. Naiman, 25 A.D.3d 458, 807 N.Y.S.2d 95 (1st Dept. 2006), discussed in note 11 to Admin. Code § 27-127.

ARTICLE 26 SPECIAL FILING REQUIREMENTS

§ 27-228.5 General requirements.

(a) Owners of all existing buildings which are required to comply with the provisions of subdivision (a) of section 27-353.1 (elevator vestibules), section 27-381 and subdivision (b) of section 27-382 (exit lighting), subdivision (b) of section 27-384 (exit signs), section 27-396.3 (signs in sleeping rooms), section 27-777.2 (ventilation in J-1 buildings), subdivision (b) of section 27-929 (sprinklers, fire alarm systems, fire command and communication systems), paragraph two of subdivision (c) of section 27-989 (elevators in readiness), section 27-996.1 (locks on hoistway doors) and section 27-996.2 (firemen's service) shall file with the department a report on or before April first, nineteen hundred eighty-seven certifying to the installation of the required fire protection systems in accordance with approved plans and appropriate permits prior to such date. Owners of all existing buildings not already subject to the requirements of article nine of subchapter six of this chapter as of January eighth, nineteen hundred seventy-three shall file with the department a report on or before October first, nineteen hundred eighty-five certifying to the installation of stair and elevator signs meeting the requirements of article nine of subchapter six of this chapter prior to such date. Owners of all existing buildings that are required to comply with the provisions of subdivision (c) of section 27-384 (power source of exit signs) shall file with the department, on or before July 1, 2007, a report of an architect or engineer certifying that all required exit and/or directional signs are connected to an emergency power source or to storage battery equipment in compliance with such subdivision except that no such report shall be required to be filed if an owner of a building submits an affidavit to the department, within ninety days after the effective date of this sentence, certifying that all required exit and/or directional signs are connected to an emergency power source or to storage battery equipment as required by such subdivision. Such reports shall be on such forms and in such manner as prescribed by the commissioner. Failure to file such report by such dates shall be a violation of this section, which shall be punishable pursuant to section 26-125 of title twenty-six of the administrative code.

(b) (1) Owners of all buildings one hundred feet or more in height required to comply with the provisions of subdivision (a) of section 27-929.1 (sprinklers) shall file with the department on or before July 1, 2019 a final report prepared by an architect or engineer certifying to the installation of the required sprinklers in accordance with such provisions and, pending the filing of such final report, such owner shall be required to file the following interim reports as described below. Failure to file such final report and/or, where required, such interim reports by the dates indicated or within any extended period of time granted by the commissioner pursuant to paragraph (2) of this subdivision shall be a violation of this section, which shall be punishable pursuant to section 26-125 of the code. Such reports shall be on such forms and in such manner as prescribed by the commissioner and shall be filed as follows:

Unless a final report is filed on or prior to such date, a one year report shall be filed no later than July 1, 2005. The one year report shall contain an affidavit by the owner of the building acknowledging that sprinklers are required to be installed in such building on or before July 1, 2019 in compliance with subdivision (a) of section 27-929.1 of this code and indicating his or her intention to comply with such requirement.

Unless a final report is filed on or prior to July 1, 2011, a seven year report shall be filed no earlier than January 1, 2011 and no later than July 1, 2011. Such seven year report shall contain a certification by an architect or engineer of the percentage of the building in which sprinklers have been installed as of the date of such report and an implementation plan prepared by such architect or engineer detailing when and how the remaining portions of the building will be made fully compliant.

Unless a final report is filed on or prior to July 1, 2018, a fourteen year report shall be filed no earlier than January 1, 2018 and no later than July 1, 2018. Such fourteen year report shall contain a certification by an architect or engineer of the percentage of the building in which sprinklers have been installed as of the date of such report and an implementation plan, prepared by such architect or engineer detailing when and how the remaining portions of the building will be made fully compliant.

Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (2) of this subdivision, a final report shall be filed no later than July 1, 2019. Such final report shall contain a certification by an architect or engineer that the building is fully compliant.

(2) Where the owner of a building is unable to comply with the requirements of subdivision (a) of section 27-929.1 on or before July 1, 2019 because of undue hardship, and where such owner timely filed all interim reports as required in paragraph (1) of this subdivision and has obtained approval of all required applications, plans and permits relating to the required work, such owner may submit to the department an application for additional time to comply with such requirements. Such application shall be submitted to the department on or before July 1, 2018, along with supporting documents indicating the basis for such claim of undue hardship. The commissioner shall appoint a committee consisting of employees of the department and the fire department and a representative of the real estate industry to review such application. Such committee shall issue findings and recommendations relating to the application. After reviewing such findings and recommendations, if the commissioner finds that the owner has made a good faith effort to complete the required work and has substantiated his or her claim of undue hardship, the commissioner may brant an extension of time in which to complete the work and submit the final report.

HISTORICAL NOTE

Section amended L.L. 26/2004 § 3, eff. Oct. 22, 2004 except that prior to such date the commissioner of buildings and the fire commissioner may promulgate rules or take other administrative actions to faciliate the implementation of such provisions.

CHAPTER 1 BUILDING CODE

SUBCHAPTER 2 DEFINITIONS

ARTICLE 2 DEFINITIONS

§ 27-232 Definitions.

*8 Words that are capitalized are defined in this section.

ACCESSIBLE. A building or portion thereof and the accessory public areas thereof are accessible when they comply with subarticle two of article two of subchapter four of chapter one of title twenty-seven of this code and can be approached, entered and used by people having physical disabilities. (Definition added L.L. 58/1987 § 2.)

ACCESSIBLE ROUTE. A continuous unobstructed path connecting all accessible spaces and rooms in a building that can be negotiated by all categories of people having physical disabilities. Interior accessible routes may include corridors, doorways, floors, ramps, elevators, lifts and clear floor space adjacent to fixtures. Exterior accessible routes may include parking access aisles, curb ramps, walks, ramps and lifts. (Definition added L.L. 58/1987 § 2.)

ACCESSORY BUILDING. A building, the use or occupancy of which is incidental to that of the main building.

ACCESSORY USE. A use or occupancy incidental to the principal use or occupancy of a building.

ACCESS STAIR. A stair between two floors, which does not serve as a required exit. (See EXTERIOR STAIR and INTERIOR STAIR).

ADAPTABLE DWELLING UNITS. Dwelling units which are constructed on an accessible route and equipped as set forth in reference standard RS 4-6, so that they may be converted to be used, with a minimum of structural change, by all categories of people having physical disabilities. (Definition added L.L. 58/1987 § 3.)

ADDITION. An extension or increase in floor area or height of a building that increases its exterior dimensions.

ADJOINING GRADE ELEVATION. The average elevation of the final grade adjoining all exterior walls of a building, calculated from grade elevations taken at intervals of ten feet around the perimeter of the building.

AIR CONDITIONING. The process by which the temperature, humidity, movement, cleanliness, and odor of air circulated through a space are controlled simultaneously.

AIR-SUPPORTED STRUCTURE. A structure consisting of skin diaphragms made of flexible material, which achieves its shape, support, and stability from internal air pressure.

ALLOWABLE SOIL PRESSURE. The maximum stress permitted in soil of a given type and under given conditions.

ALLOWABLE STRESS. The maximum stress permitted at a given point in a structural member under given conditions.

ALTERATION. Any addition, or change or modification of a building, or the service equipment thereof, that affects safety or health and that is not classified as a minor alteration or ordinary repair. The moving of a building from one location or position to another shall be deemed an alteration.

AMUSEMENT ATTRACTION. A game of chance or skill or similar activity in which the public participates as a form of amusement.

AMUSEMENT DEVICE. A mechanically operated device or structure, open to the public, used to convey persons in any direction as a form of amusement.

APARTMENT HOUSE. (See MULTIPLE DWELLING.)

APPROVED. When used in connection with plans, materials and equipment shall mean approved by the commissioner; when used in connection with materials and equipment, shall also mean previously approved by the board, unless such approval is amended or repealed by the commissioner; otherwise shall mean approved by the department or agency indicated by the text. (Definition amended L.L. 49/1991 § 18, eff. July 1, 1991.)

ARCHITECT. A person licensed to practice the profession of architecture under the education law of the state of New York.

AREA OF REFUGE. A floor area to which egress is made through a horizontal exit or supplemental vertical exit.

AREAWAY. A space below grade, adjacent to a building, open to the outer air and enclosed by walls.

ASSEMBLY SPACE. Any part of a place of assembly, exclusive of a stage, that is occupied by numbers of persons during the major period of occupancy. Every tier of seating shall be considered a separate assembly space.

ATRIUM. A vertical opening or series of openings within a building connecting three or more floors, which may be covered at the top, and which is used for purposes other than an enclosed stairway, elevator hoistway or utility shaft.

ATTIC. The space between the ceiling framing of the topmost story and the underside of the roof framing.

AUTOMATIC. As applied to an opening protective, shall mean a door, window, damper, or other device, and its assembly, which is normally open and is designed to close automatically when subjected to a predetermined temperature, rate of temperature rise, or abnormal smoke condition.

AUTOMATIC DRY STANDPIPE SYSTEM. A standpipe system in which all piping is filled with air, either compressed or at atmospheric pressure. Water enters the system through a control valve actuated either automatically by the reduction of air pressure within the system or by the manual activation of a remote control located at each hose station.

AUTOMATIC DRY PIPE SPRINKLER SYSTEM. A sprinkler system in which the piping up to the sprinkler heads is filled with air, either compressed or at atmospheric pressure, with the water supply controlled by a Type A or Type B dry pipe valve.

AUTOMATIC FIRE PUMP. A pump that maintains a required water pressure in a fire extinguishing system and which is actuated by a starting device adjusted to cause the pump to operate when the pressure in the system drops below a predetermined pressure, and to stop the pump when the pressure is restored.

AUTOMATIC OPERATION. As applied to an elevator, shall mean operation whereby the starting of the car is effected in response to the momentary actuation of operating devices at the landing, and/or of operating devices in the car identified with the landings, and/or in response to an automatic starting mechanism, and whereby the car is stopped automatically at the landings.

AUTOMATIC WET PIPE SPRINKLER SYSTEM. A sprinkler system in which all piping and sprinkler heads are at all times filled with water under pressure which is immediately discharged when a sprinkler head operates, with the water continuing to flow until the system is shut off.

AUTOMOTIVE LIFT. A vehicle-lifting device, the purpose of which is to raise an entire vehicle to provide accessibility for under-chassis service.

AUTOMOTIVE REPAIR SHOP. A building or space in which motor vehicles are repaired.

AUTOMOTIVE SERVICE STATION. A building, space, or premises used for the storage and sale of motor fuels, and which may also have facilities for lubrication, minor repairs, or washing of motor vehicles.

BACKFLOW (Water Supply). The flow of water or other substances into the distribution pipes of a potable water supply from any source other than the intended source.

BALLOON FRAME. Light timber construction in which the exterior walls consist of studs that are either continuous through floors or interrupted only by thickness of plates.

BASEMENT. A story partly underground, but having less than one-half its clear height (measured from finished floor to finished ceiling) below the curb level; except that where the curb level has not been legally established, or where every part of the building is set back more than twenty-five feet from a street line, the height shall be measured from the adjoining grade elevation. (See CELLAR.)

BEARING. As applied to a wall or partition, shall mean supporting any vertical load in addition to its own weight.

BELT-DRIVE MACHINE. As applied to an elevator, shall mean an indirect-drive machine having a single belt or multiple belts as the connecting means.

BOARD. The board of standards and appeals of the city of New York.

BOARDER (ROOMER, LODGER). An individual living within a household who pays a consideration for such residence and does not occupy such space as an incident of employment therein.

BREEZEWAY. A structure open to the outdoors consisting of a roof, roof supports, and floor, connecting a garage or other accessory building with a dwelling.

BUILDING. An enclosed structure including service equipment therein. The term shall be construed as if followed by the phrase "structure, premises, or part thereof" unless otherwise indicated by the text.

BUILDING HOUSE DRAIN. That part of the lowest piping of a drainage system that receives the discharge from the soil, waste, and other drainage pipes and conveys it to the building house sewer by gravity. The building house drain shall be considered to extend five feet outside the exterior wall of the building.

BUILDING HOUSE DRAIN (COMBINED). A building house drain that conveys storm water in combination with sewage or other drainage.

BUILDING HOUSE DRAIN (SANITARY). A building house drain that carries sewage only.

BUILDING HOUSE DRAIN (STORM). That part of the lowest piping of a storm drainage system that receives clear water drainage from leaders, surface run-off, ground water, subsurface water, condensate, cooling water, or other similar storm or clear drainage and conveys it to the building house storm sewer by gravity. The building house storm drain shall be considered to extend five feet outside the exterior wall of the building.

BUILDING HOUSE SEWER. That part of the horizontal piping of a drainage system that extends from the end of the building house drain and that receives the discharge of the building house drain and conveys it to a public sewer, private sewer, individual sewage-disposal system, or other point of disposal.

BUILDING HOUSE SEWER (COMBINED). A building house sewer that conveys sewage in combination with storm water and other clear water wastes.

BUILDING HOUSE SEWER (SANITARY). A building house sewer that carries sewage only.

BUILDING HOUSE STORM SEWER. That part of the horizontal piping of a storm drainage system that extends from the building house storm drain to the public storm sewer, combined sewer, or other point of disposal.

BUILDING SECTION. A room, floor, group of floors, wing, or any other portion of a building contained within fire divisions.

BUILDING SUB-HOUSE DRAIN. That portion of a house drainage system that cannot drain by gravity into the building house sewer.

BULKHEAD. An enclosed structure on or above the roof of any part of a building, enclosing a shaft, stairway, tank, or service equipment, or other space not designed or used for human occupancy. (See PENTHOUSE and ROOF STRUCTURE.)

CABARET. The term cabaret shall mean any room, place or space in which any musical entertainment, singing, dancing or other similar amusement is permitted in connection with an eating and drinking establishment.

CABLEWAY. A power operated system for moving loads in a generally horizontal direction in which the loads are conveyed on an overhead cable, track or carriage.

CAR DOOR OR GATE. As applied to an elevator, shall mean the sliding portion of the car that closes the opening giving access to the car.

CAR DOOR OR GATE SWITCH. As applied to an elevator, shall mean an electrical device, the function of which is to prevent operation of the driving machine by the normal operating device unless the car door or gate is in the closed position.

CAR-SWITCH OPERATION. Operation of an elevator wherein the movement and direction of travel of the car are directly and solely under the control of the operator by means of a manually operated car switch or of continuous-pressure buttons in the car.

CASING-OFF. The elimination of the frictional forces between a portion of a pile and the surrounding soil by use of a sleeve between the pile and the soil.

CATCH PLATFORM. A platform or other construction projecting from the face of a building, supported therefrom, and used to intercept the fall of objects and to protect individuals and property from falling debris.

CELLAR. A story partly or wholly underground, but having one-half or more of its clear height (measured from finished floor to finished ceiling) below the curb level; except that where the curb level has not been legally established, or where every part of the building is set back more than twenty-five feet from a street line, the height shall be measured from the adjoining grade elevation. Cellars shall not be counted as stories in measuring the height of buildings. (See BASEMENT.)

CERTIFICATE OF OCCUPANCY. (See article twenty-two of subchapter one of this chapter.)

CHAIN-DRIVE MACHINE. As applied to an elevator, shall mean an indirect-drive machine having a chain as the connecting means.

CHARGING CHUTE (INCINERATOR). An enclosed vertical passage through which refuse is fed to an incinerator.

CHARGING GATE (INCINERATOR). A gate in an incinerator used to control the flow of combustion gases into the charging chute and the entry of refuse into the combustion chamber.

CHIMNEY. A vertical enclosure containing one or more flues used to remove hot gases from burning fuel, refuse, or from industrial processes.

CHIMNEY CONNECTOR. A pipe or metal breeching that connects combustion equipment to a chimney.

CITY. The city of New York.

CLOSED SHAFT. A shaft enclosed at the top.

COATINGS, FIRE-RETARDANT. A material applied to the surface of a building material to improve its flame spread rating.

COLLECTING SAFE AREA. A safe area that receives occupants from the assembly space it serves as well as from other safe areas.

COMMISSIONER. The commissioner of buildings of the city of New York, or his or her duly authorized representative.

COMPRESSOR (REFRIGERATION). A machine used for the purpose of compressing a refrigerant.

CONCENTRATED LOAD. A conventionalized representation of an element of dead or live load whereby the entire load is assumed to act either at a point or within a limited area.

CONCURRENT LOADS. Two or more elements of dead or live load that, for purposes of design, are considered to act simultaneously.

CONSTRUCTION. Any or all work or operations necessary or incidental to the erection, demolition, assembling, installing, or equipping of buildings, or any alterations and operations incidental thereto. The term "construction" shall include land clearing, grading, excavating, and filling. It shall also mean the finished product of any such work or operations.

CONSTRUCTION CLASS (GROUP). The category in which a building or space is classified by the provisions of subchapter three of this chapter, based on the fire-resistance ratings of its construction elements.

CONSOLE LIFT. A section of the floor area of a theater or auditorium that can be raised and lowered.

CONTRACTOR. A person undertaking construction.

CONTROLLED INSPECTION. (See Section 27-132 of subchapter one of this chapter.)

CORRIDOR. An enclosed public passage providing a means of access from rooms or spaces to an exit. (See EXIT PASSAGEWAY.)

COURT. An inner court or outer court.

CRANE. A machine for lifting or lowering a load and moving it horizontally which utilizes wire rope and in which the hoisting mechanism is an integral part of the machine.

CROSS AISLE. An aisle in a place of assembly usually parallel to rows of seats, connecting other aisles or an aisle and an exit.

CROSS-CONNECTION (FIRE EXTINGUISHING SYSTEM). Piping between risers and siamese connections in a standpipe or sprinkler system.

CROSS-CONNECTION (POTABLE WATER SYSTEM). A physical connection or arrangement between two otherwise separate piping systems, one of which contains potable water, and the other of which contains water of questionable safety, or steam, gases, or chemicals whereby there can be a flow from one system to another.

CURB LEVEL. The legally established level on the curb in front of a building, measured at the center of such front. When a building faces on more than one street, curb level shall mean the average of the legally established levels of the curbs at the center of each front.

CURB LINE. The line coincident with the face of the street curb adjacent to the roadway.

DATUM. (See section 27-158 of subchapter one of this chapter.)

DEAD END. A portion of a corridor in which the travel to an exit is in one direction only.

DEAD LOAD. Materials, equipment, constructions, or other elements of weight supported in, on, or by the building (including its own weight) that are intended to remain permanently in place.

DECIBEL. A unit of measurement of the loudness of sound. A division of a logarithmic scale for expressing the ratio of two amounts of power or energy. The number of decibels denoting such a ratio is ten times the logarithm of the ratio.

DELUGE SPRINKLER SYSTEM. An open head sprinkler system without water in the system piping, with the water supply controlled by an automatic valve operated by smoke or heat-responsive devices installed throughout the sprinklered area, and independent of the sprinkler heads.

DEMOLITION. The dismantling or razing of all or part of a building, including all operations incidental thereto.

DEPARTMENT. The department of buildings of the city of New York.

DERRICK. An apparatus consisting of a mast or equipment members held at the top by guys or braces, with or without a boom, for use with a hoisting mechanism and operating ropes, for lifting or lowering a load and moving it horizontally.

DRAINAGE SYSTEM. All the piping within public or private premises, which conveys sewage, rain water, or other liquid wastes to a legal point of disposal, but shall not include the mains of public sewer system or private or public sewage-treatment or disposal plant.

DRAFT CURTAIN. A noncombustible curtain suspended in a vertical position from a ceiling for the purpose of retarding the lateral movement of heated air, gases, and smoke along the ceiling in the event of fire.

DRAFT HOOD. A device placed in and made part of a chimney, vent connector, or combustion equipment, to (1) insure the ready escape of the products of combustion in the event of no draft, back-draft, or stoppage beyond the draft hood, (2) prevent a back-draft from entering the equipment, or (3) neutralize the effect of excessive stack action of the chimney flue upon the operation of the equipment.

DRY PIPE VALVE. A valve that automatically controls the water supply to a sprinkler system so that the system beyond the valve is normally maintained dry.

DUCT (VENTILATION). A pipe, tube, conduit, or an enclosed space within a wall or structure, used for conveying air.

DUMBWAITER. A hoisting and lowering mechanism equipped with a car that moves in guides in a substantially vertical direction, the floor area of which does not exceed nine square feet, whose total inside height whether or not provided with fixed or movable shelves does not exceed four feet, the capacity of which does not exceed five hundred pounds, and that is used exclusively for carrying materials.

DWELLING. Any building occupied in whole or in part as the temporary or permanent home or residence of one or more families.

DWELLING UNIT. One or more rooms in a dwelling or building that are arranged, designed, used or intended for use by one or more families.

ELECTRICALLY SUPERVISED. As applied to a control circuit, shall mean that in the event of interruption of the current supply or in the event of a break in the circuit, a specific signal will be given.

ELEVATOR. A hoisting and lowering mechanism equipped with a car or platform that moves in guides in a substantially vertical direction, and that serves two or more floors of a building.

ELEVATOR VESTIBULE. A room or space enclosed with noncombustible smoke barrier partitions with smoke stop doors conforming to subdivision (c) of section 27-371. Except for such smoke stop doors, openings to elevators and to exits shall be the only other door openings permitted in the enclosing partitions.

EMERGENCY INTERLOCK RELEASE SWITCH. As applied to an elevator, shall mean a device to make inoperative, in case of emergency, door or gate electric contacts or door interlocks.

ENGINEER. A person licensed to practice the profession of engineering under the education law of the state of New York.

EQUIVALENT UNIFORM LOAD. A conventionalized representation of an element of dead or live load, used for the purposes of design in lieu of the actual dead or live load.

ESCALATOR. A power driven, inclined, continuous stairway used for raising or lowering passengers.

EXISTING BUILDING. A building, whether high rise or low rise:

(1) Which on April first, nineteen hundred eighty-four is complete or under construction, or

(2) For which an application for approval of plans has been filed with the department prior to October first, nineteen hundred eighty-four and construction commenced prior to April first, nineteen hundred eighty-six, provided that those requirements of this code applicable to existing buildings classified in the same occupancy group as the proposed building shall be complied with in accordance with the time limitations set forth in this code.

EXISTING HIGH RISE BUILDING. A building, classified as a high rise structure:

(1) Which on April first, nineteen hundred eighty-four is complete or under construction, or

(2) For which an application for approval of plans has been filed with the department prior to October first, nineteen hundred eighty-four and construction commenced prior to April first, nineteen hundred eighty-six, provided that those requirements of this code applicable to existing buildings classified in the same occupancy group as the proposed building shall be complied with in accordance with the time limitations set forth in this code.

(1) EXISTING OFFICE BUILDING, ONE HUNDRED FEET OR MORE IN HEIGHT. An office building

one hundred feet or more in height or a building classified in occupancy group E, one hundred feet or more in height:

(1) which on January eighteenth, nineteen hundred seventy-three is complete or under construction, or

(2) for which plans have been filed before January eighteenth, nineteen hundred seventy-three and construction commenced on or before January eighteenth, nineteen hundred seventy-four, or

(3) for which plans are filed on or before January eighteenth, nineteen hundred seventy-four and construction commenced on or before January eighteenth, nineteen hundred seventy-five and further provided that all the requirements for such existing office buildings are fully complied with in the course of construction and before completion.

EXIT. A means of egress from the interior of a building to an open exterior space which is provided by the use of the following, either singly or in combination: exterior door openings, vertical exits, exit passageways, horizontal exits, interior stairs, exterior stairs, fire towers or fire escapes; but not including access stairs, aisles, corridor doors or corridors.

EXIT PASSAGEWAY. A horizontal extension of a vertical exit, or a passage leading from a yard or court to an open exterior space.

EXTERIOR SEPARATION. The shortest distance across an unobstructed outdoor space measured from the furthest projection of the exterior wall of a building to an interior lot line or to a line halfway between the wall and that of any other building on the same lot, or to the centerline of an adjacent street or other public space.

EXTERIOR STAIR. A stair open to the outdoor air, that serves as a required exit. (See ACCESS STAIR and INTERIOR STAIR.)

FACING. As applied to a sign, shall mean the surface of the sign, upon, against or through which the message of the sign is exhibited.

FAMILY. A single individual; or two or more individuals related by blood or marriage or who are parties to a domestic partnership, and living together and maintaining a common household, with not more than four boarders, roomers or lodgers; or a group of not more than four individuals, not necessarily related by blood, marriage or because they are parties to a domestic partnership, and maintaining a common household.

FIRE ALARM. A system, automatic or manual, arranged to give a signal indicating a fire emergency.

FIRE AREA. A floor area enclosed by fire divisions and/or exterior walls.

FIRE CANOPY. A solid horizontal projection, extending beyond the exterior face of a building wall, located over a wall opening so as to retard the spread of fire through openings from one story to another.

FIRE DISTRICTS. The geographical territories established under subchapter four of this chapter for the regulation of occupancy groups and construction classes within such districts.

FIRE DIVISION. Any construction, vertical, horizontal or otherwise, having the required fire-resistance rating and structural stability under fire conditions to provide a fire barrier between adjoining buildings or between adjoining or superimposed fire areas or building sections within the same building.

FIRE DOOR. An opening protective in the form of a door and its assembly.

FIRE PROTECTION PLAN. A report containing a narrative description of the life and fire safety systems and evacuation system for a structure, in accordance with section 27-228.2 of this title.

FIRE-PROTECTION RATING. The time in hours or fractions thereof that an opening protective and its assembly will withstand fire exposure as determined by a fire test made in conformity with specified standards of subchapter five of this chapter.

FIRE-RESISTANCE RATING. The time in hours or fractions thereof that materials or their assemblies will withstand fire exposure as determined by a fire test made in conformity with a specified standard of subchapter five of this chapter.

FIRE RETARDANT TREATED WOOD. Wood that has been pressure impregnated with chemicals so as to reduce its com- bustibility.

FIRE SAFETY PLAN. A description of the fire drill and evacuation procedures for a structure which is required to be submitted to the fire department in accordance with the requirements of section 27-4267 of the administrative code and the regulations of the fire commissioner.

FIRE SECTION. A sprinklered area within a building that is separated from other areas by noncombustible construction having at least a twohour fire-resistance rating.

FIRE SEPARATION. Any construction, vertical, horizontal, or otherwise, having the required fire-resistance rating to provide a fire barrier between adjoining rooms or spaces within a building, building section, or fire area.

FIRESTOP. A solid or compact, tight closure to retard the spread of flames or hot gases within concealed spaces.

FIRE SUPPRESSION PIPING SYSTEM. Any system including any and all equipment and materials in connection therewith the purpose of which is to control, to contain, to suppress or to extinguish fire.

FIRE WALL. A fire division in the form of a wall.

FIRE WINDOW. An opening protective in the form of a window and its assembly.

FLAME SPREAD RATING. The measurement of the comparative rate of propagation of flame over the surface of a material as determined by a fire test made in accordance with a specified standard in subchapter five of this chapter.

FLAMMABLE. Capable of being easily ignited when exposed to flame, and which burns intensely, or has a rapid rate of flamespread.

FLASH POINT. The lowest temperature at which a liquid gives off sufficient vapor to form an ignitable mixture with air near the surface of the liquid or within the vessel used.

FLOOR AREA. The projected horizontal area inside of walls, partitions, or other enclosing construction.

FLOOR AREA (NET). When used to determine the occupant load of a space, shall mean the horizontal occupiable area within the space, excluding the thickness of walls, and partitions, columns, furred-in spaces, fixed cabinets, equipment, and accessory spaces such as closets, machine and equipment rooms, toilets, stairs, halls, corridors, elevators and similar unoccupied spaces.

FLUE. An enclosed passageway in a chimney to carry products of combustion to the outer air.

FOLDED PLATE. An assembly consisting of one or more units, each unit of which is formed by two or more individually planar elements, termed plates, intersecting at angles.

FOOTING. A foundation element consisting of an enlargement of a foundation pier or foundation wall, wherein the soil materials along the sides of and underlying the element may be visually inspected prior to and during its construction.

FOUNDATION (BUILDING). A construction that transfers building loads to the supporting soil.

FOUNDATION PIER. A foundation element consisting of a column embedded into the soil below the lowest floor to the top of a footing or pile cap. Where a pier bears directly on the soil without intermediate footings or pile caps, the entire length of the column below the lowest floor level shall be considered as a foundation pier. Foundation piers shall be limited to piers so constructed that the entire surface of the sides of the pier and the bearing material under the lower end of the pier can be visually inspected prior to or during construction, but which will be concealed in the final work. Piers below the lowest floor or basement level that will be exposed and open to inspection in the final work shall be considered as columns. Types of construction wherein the sides cannot be visually inspected shall be considered as piling.

FOUNDATION WALL. A wall extending below grade.

FRAMEWORK. As applied to a sign, shall mean the supports, uprights and bracing of the sign.

FRESH AIR. Outdoor air.

FRONT. As applied to building location on a lot, shall mean the distance between lines drawn through the most remote points of the building perimeter, projected at right angles to a frontage space.

FRONTAGE SPACE. A street; or an open space outside of a building, not less than thirty feet in any dimension, that is accessible from a street by a driveway, lane, or alley at least twenty feet in width, and that is permanently maintained free of all obstructions that might interfere with its use by the fire department.

FRONT YARD. A yard extending along the full length of a street line.

GAS DISTRIBUTION PIPING. All piping from the house side of the gas meter piping that distributes gas supplied by a public utility to all fixtures and apparatus used for illumination or fuel in any building.

GAS METER PIPING. The piping from the gas service line valve to the outlet of the meter-regulator set or the meter if no regulator is required.

GAS PIPING SYSTEMS. The gas service piping, meter piping and distribution piping.

GAS SERVICE LINE VALVE. The valve located at or below grade on the supply side of the meter or service regulator, if a service regulator is required. If a plug type valve is used it shall be constructed so as to prevent the core from being blown out by the pressure of the gas. In addition, it shall be of a type capable of being locked in the off position by the local gas utility.

GAS SERVICE PIPING. The supply piping from the street main up to and including the gas service line valve.

GRADE. The finished surface of the ground, either paved or unpaved.

GRADE BEAM. A beam, at, near, or below grade, spanning between footings, pile caps or foundation piers, and supporting walls or other elements of a building.

GRANDSTAND. A structure used to support spectators, either standing or seated, usually outdoors.

GROUND SIGN. A sign supported by uprights or braces in or upon the surface of the ground.

GROUP HOME. A facility for the care and maintenance of not less than seven nor more than twelve children, operated pursuant to subdivision (c) of section three hundred seventy-four of the social services law, or other provisions of applicable laws, and supervised by the New York state board of social welfare.

HABITABLE ROOM. A residential room or space, having the minimum dimensions required by section 27-751 of article six of subchapter twelve of this chapter in which the ordinary functions of domestic life are carried on, and which includes bedrooms, living rooms, studies, recreation rooms, kitchens, dining rooms and other similar spaces, but does not include closets, halls, stairs, laundry rooms, or bathrooms.

HEIGHT (BUILDINGS). The vertical distance from the curb level to the highest point of the roof beams in the case of flat roofs, or to a point at the average height of the gable in the case of roofs having a pitch of more than one foot in four and one-half feet; except that where the curb level has not been legally established, or where every part of the building is set back more than twenty-five feet from a street line, the height shall be measured from the adjoining grade elevation.

HEREAFTER. On or after the effective date of this code.

HERETOFORE. Before the effective date of this code.

HIGH RISE. A structure seventy-five feet or more in height.

HOISTWAY. An enclosed or partly enclosed shaft used for the travel of an elevator, dumbwaiter, platform or bucket.

HOISTWAY DOOR. As applied to an elevator, shall mean the hinged or sliding portion of a hoistway enclosure which closes the opening giving access to a landing.

HOISTWAY DOOR INTERLOCK. A device used to prevent the operation of the driving machine of an elevator by the normal operating device unless the hoistway door is locked in the closed position, and also used to prevent the opening of the hoistway door from the landing side unless the car is within the landing zone and is either stopped or being stopped.

HOISTING MACHINE. A power operated machine used for lifting or lowering a load utilizing a drum and wire rope, excluding elevators. This shall include but not be limited to a crane, derrick and cableway.

HORIZONTAL EXIT. (See Section 27-373 of article five of subchapter six of this chapter.)

ILLUMINATED SIGN. A sign designed or arranged to give forth or reflect light from an attached artificial source.

IMPACT LOAD. A kinetic load of short duration such as that resulting from moving machinery, elevators, craneways, vehicles, etc.

INDEPENDENT POLE SCAFFOLD. A scaffold supported by multiple rows of uprights, and not depending on the building for support.

INDIRECT WASTE PIPE. A drain pipe used to convey liquid wastes which does not connect directly with the drainage system, but which discharges into the house drainage system through an air break into a trap, fixture, receptacle, or interceptor.

INDUSTRIAL LIFT. A hoisting and lowering mechanism of a nonportable power-operated type for raising or lowering material vertically, operating entirely within one story of a building.

INDUSTRIAL WASTE. Liquid, gaseous or solid substances, or a combination thereof, resulting from any process of industry, manufacturing, trade or business, or from the development or recovery of any natural resource.

INNER COURT. Any open area, other than a yard or portion thereof, that is unobstructed from its lowest level to the sky and that is bounded by either building walls, or building walls and one or more lot lines other than a street line or building walls, except for one opening on any open area along an interior lot line that has a width of less than thirty feet at any point.

INTERIOR LOT LINE. A lot line other than a street line.

INTERIOR STAIR. A stair within a building, that serves as a required exit. (See ACCESS STAIR and EXTERIOR STAIR.)

LAGGING (PILE). Pieces of timber or other material attached to the sides of piles to increase resistance to penetration through soil.

LAMELLA. Shell construction in which the shell is formed by a lattice of interlacing members.

LANDING DOOR. (See HOISTWAY DOOR.)

LEADER. A vertical drainage pipe for conveying storm water from roof or gutter drains to a building house storm drain, building house drain (combined), or other means of disposal. The leader shall include the horizontal pipe to a single roof drain or gutter drain.

LESSEE. The person in possession of a building under a lease from the owner thereof.

LICENSE. A written document issued by the commissioner authorizing a person to perform specific acts in or in connection with the construction or alteration of buildings, or the installation, alteration, and use and operation of service equipment therein.

LIVE LOAD. All occupants, materials, equipment, constructions or other elements of weight supported in, on or by a building that will or are likely to be moved or relocated during the expected life of the building.

LOAD-BEARING. (See BEARING.)

LOADING RAMP. A hinged, mechanically operated lifting device used for spanning gaps and/or adjusting heights between loading surfaces, or between loading surfaces and carriers.

LODGER. (See BOARDER.)

LOT. A portion or parcel of land considered as a unit. A zoning lot.

LOT LINE. A line dividing one land unit from another, or from a street or other public space. A boundary line of a zoning lot.

LOW RISE. A structure less than seventy-five feet in height.

MALL. An enclosed or roofed area used as a pedestrian circulation space and connecting no more than three stories or portions of stories of a building or buildings housing single and/or multiple tenants.

MANUAL FIRE PUMP. A pump that feeds water into a fire extinguishing system that must be started by either the building personnel or members of the fire department.

MARQUEE SIGN. A sign placed flat against the front or side fascia of a marquee.

MECHANICAL VENTILATION. The process of introducing outdoor air into, or removing vitiated air from a building by mechanical means. A mechanical ventilating system may include air heating, air cooling, or air conditioning components.

MECHANIZED PARKING GARAGE EQUIPMENT. Special devices in mechanical parking garages that operate in either stationary or horizontal moving hoistways, that are exclusively for the conveying of automobiles, and in which no persons are normally stationed on any level other than the receiving level and in which each automobile during the parking process is moved by means of a power driven transfer device, on and off the elevator directly into parking spaces or cubicles.

MEZZANINE. An intermediate floor between the floor and ceiling of any space. When the total gross floor area of all mezzanines occurring in any story exceeds thirty-three and one-third percent of the gross floor area of that story such mezzanine shall be considered as a separate story.

MINOR ALTERATIONS. (See Section 27-124 of article five of subchapter one of this chapter.)

MORTAR (GROUT). A mixture of cementitious materials, fine-aggregates and water.

MOTOR VEHICLE. A conveyance propelled by an internal combustion engine and having a fuel storage tank capacity of more than two gallons.

MOVING WALK. A passenger-carrying device on which persons stand or walk, and in which the passenger-carrying surface remains parallel to its direction of motion and is uninterrupted.

MULTIPLE DWELLING. A building containing three or more dwelling units. Multiple dwelling shall not be deemed to include a hospital, school, convent, monastery, asylum or other public institution.

NONAUTOMATIC SPRINKLER SYSTEM. A sprinkler system in which all pipes and sprinkler heads are maintained dry and which is supplied with water through a fire department siamese con- nection.

NONAUTOMATIC STANDPIPE SYSTEM. A standpipe system in which all piping is maintained dry, and which is supplied with water through a fire department siamese connection.

NONBEARING. As applied to a wall or partition, shall mean one that supports no vertical load other than its own weight.

NONCOMBUSTIBLE. A material which, in the form in which it is used in construction, will not ignite and burn when subjected to fire. However, any material which liberates flammable gas when heated to any temperature up to one thousand three hundred eighty degrees Fahrenheit for five minutes shall not be considered noncombustible. No material shall be considered noncombustible which is subject to increase in combustibility beyond the limits established above, through the effects of age, fabrication or erection techniques, moisture, or other interior or exterior atmospheric conditions. (Definition amended L.L. 13/1987 § 1, effective 3/23/1987.)

NONCURRENT LOADS. Two or more elements of dead or live load which, for purposes of design, are considered not to act simultaneously.

NONLOADBEARING. (See NONBEARING.)

OCCUPANCY. The purpose or activity for which a building or space is used or is designed or intended to be used.

OCCUPANCY GROUP. The category in which a building or space is classified by the provisions of subchapter three of this chapter, based on its occupancy or use.

OCCUPANT LOAD. The number of occupants of a space, floor or building for whom exit facilities shall be provided.

OCCUPIABLE ROOM. A room or space, other than a habitable room designed for human occupancy or use, in which persons may remain for a period of time for rest, amusement, treatment, education, dining, shopping, or other similar purposes, or in which occupants are engaged at work.

OCTAVE. The interval between two sounds having a basic frequency ratio of two. By extension, the octave is the intervale between any two frequencies having the ratio 2:1. The standard octave bands are:

FREQUENCY (CPS)
Mid-Frequency	63	125	250	500	1000	2000	4000	8000
Approximate
Lower	45	90	180	355	710	1400	2800	5600
Frequency
Limits Upper	90	180	355	710	1400	2800	5600	11200

OFFICE BUILDING. A building constructed pursuant to the code in effect prior to December 6, 1968 in which the main use or dominant occupancy is offices or a building classified in occupancy group E.

OIL BUFFER. As applied to an elevator, shall mean a buffer using oil as a medium which absorbs and dissipates the kinetic energy of a descending car or counterweight.

OPEN EXTERIOR SPACE. A street or other public space; or a yard, court, or plaza open on one or more sides and unroofed or open on all sides, which provides egress to a street or public space.

OPEN PARKING LOT. A lot, or portion thereof, used for the storage or sale of more than four motor vehicles, but not used for the repair or servicing of such vehicles.

OPEN PARKING STRUCTURE. A structure open to the outdoors fifty percent or more on two or more sides of each story, used for the parking of motor vehicles.

OPEN SHAFT. A shaft open to the outdoor air at the top.

OPENING PROTECTIVE. An assembly of materials and accessories, including frames and hardware installed in an opening in a wall, partition, floor, ceiling or roof to prevent, resist, or retard the passage of flame, smoke or hot gases.

ORDINARY REPAIRS. (See section 27-125 of this chapter.)

OUTER COURT. Any open area, other than a yard or portion thereof, that is unobstructed from its lowest level to the sky and that, except for an outer court opening upon a street line, a front yard, or a rear yard, is bounded by either building walls or building walls and one or more lot lines other than a street line.

OUTRIGGER SCAFFOLD. A scaffold, the platform of which is built upon supports cantilevering beyond the walls of the building.

OUTSIDE GAS SERVICE LINE VALVE. The valve located on the gas service piping which can be either exposed or buried.

OWNER. A person having legal title to premises; a mortgagee or vendee in possession; a trustee in bankruptcy; a receiver or any other person having legal ownership or control of premises.

PARAPET. The continuation of an exterior wall, fire wall, or party wall above the roof line.

PARKING TIER. A general level of parking.

PARTITION. A vertical unit or assembly of materials that separates one space from another within any story of a building.

PARTY WALL. A fire division on an interior lot line common to two adjoining buildings.

PENTHOUSE. An enclosed structure on or above the roof of any part of a building, which is designed or used for human occupancy. (See BULKHEAD and ROOF STRUCTURE.)

PERMIT. A written document issued by the commissioner authorizing the construction or alteration or demolition of a building, or the installation, alteration or use and operation of service equipment therein.

PERSON. An individual, partnership, corporation, or other legal entity.

PHYSICAL DISABILITY. Any of the following:

(a) impairment requiring use of a wheelchair; or

(b) impairment causing difficulty or insecurity in walking or climbing stairs or requiring the use of braces, crutches or other artificial supports; or impairment caused by amputation, arthritis, spastic condition or pulmonary, cardiac or other ills rendering the individual semi-ambulatory; or

(c) total or partial impairment of hearing or sight causing insecurity or likelihood of exposure to danger in public places; or

(d) impairment due to conditions of aging and incoordination.

The term "physical handicap" shall have the same meaning as the term "physical disability" and the phrase "people having physical disabilities" shall include those having one or more physical disabilities.

(Definition added L.L. 58/1987 § 4.)

PILE. A structural element introduced into the ground to transmit loads to lower strata and of such construction that the material underlying the base of the unit or along the sides cannot be visually inspected.

PILE CAR. A construction encasing the heads of one or more piles which transfers loads to the pile or piles.

PLACE OF ASSEMBLY. An enclosed room or space in which seventy-five or more persons gather for religious, recreational, educational, political or social purposes, or for the consumption of food or drink, or for similar group activities or which is designed for use by seventy-five or more persons gathered for any of the above reasons, but excluding such spaces in dwelling units; or an outdoor space in which two hundred or more persons gather for any of the above reasons or which is designed for use by two hundred or more persons gathered for any of the above reasons. (Definition amended L.L. 23/1990 § 8 eff. July 7, 1990.)

PLASTIC. A material that contains as an essential ingredient an organic substance of large molecular weight, is solid in its finished state and, at some stage in its manufacture or its processing into finished articles, can be shaped by flow.

PLASTIC, SLOW BURNING. A plastic having a rate of combustion within the limits of a specified standard of subchapter five of this chapter.

PLATFORM FRAME. Light timber construction in which the exterior walls and bearing walls consist of studs which are interrupted at floors by the entire thickness of the floor construction.

PLUMBING. The practice, materials, and fixtures used in the installation, maintenance, extension, and alteration of all piping, fixtures, appliances, equipment, and appurtenances in connection with any of the following: sanitary drainage or storm drainage facilities, the venting system and the public or private water supply systems, within or adjacent to any building; also the practice and materials used in the installation, maintenance, extension, or alteration of storm water, liquid-waste, or sewerage, and water-supply systems of any premises and their connection with any point of public disposal or other acceptable terminal.

PLUMBING FIXTURES. Installed receptacles, devices, or appliances that are supplied with water or which receive or discharge liquids or liquid-borne wastes.

PLUMBING SYSTEM. The water-supply and distribution pipes; plumbing fixtures and traps; soil, waste, and vent pipes; building house drains and building house sewers including their respective connections, devices, and appurtenances within the property lines of the premises; and water-treating or water-using equipment.

POLE FOOTING. A type of construction in which a pole embedded in the ground and extending upward to form a column is used for both column and footing.

PONDING. The collection of rainwater.

POTABLE WATER. Water free from impurities present in amounts sufficient to cause disease or harmful physiological effects. Its bacteriological and chemical quality shall conform to the requirements of the department of health and mental hygiene.

POWER-OPERATED SCAFFOLD. Any form of scaffold that is propelled vertically by the use of power machinery.

PREMISES. Land, improvements thereon, or any part thereof.

PRIMARY ENTRANCE(S). The principal entrance(s) to a building primarily and expressly utilized for day-to-day pedestrian ingress and egress. Side, rear and other entrances solely used for freight and service shall not constitute a primary entrance. (Definition added L.L. 58/1987 § 5.)

PRIVATE GARAGE. A building or enclosed space used for the parking or storage of not more than four motor vehicles having fuel storage tanks of twenty-six gallon capacity or less, and in which no repair, body work, or painting of vehicles is conducted, and in which no gasoline, oil, or similar products are dispensed.

PRIVATE SEWER. A sewer privately owned and controlled by public authority only to the extent provided by law.

PROJECTING SIGN. A sign affixed to an exterior wall of a building and extending more than fifteen inches beyond the wall surface.

PUBLIC AREAS. Area(s) within a building usually open to or used by the general public, such as lobbies, corridors, waiting rooms, reception rooms, rest rooms, etc.

PUBLIC GARAGE. A building or space used for the parking or storage of motor vehicles, other than an automotive service station, automotive repair shop, open parking structure, or private garage. Truck loading and shipping areas shall be classified as public garages.

PUBLIC SEWER. A sewer entirely controlled by public authority.

PUBLIC SPACE. An open space outside of a building, which is dedicated or devoted to public use by lawful mapping or by any other lawful procedure.

PURE TONE. A soundwave of a single frequency, so called to distinguish it from a complex tone.

REAR LOT LINE. Any lot line, except a street line, that is parallel or within forty-five degrees of being parallel to, and does not intersect any street line bounding such lot.

REAR YARD. A yard extending for the full length of a rear lot line.

REBOUND. Recovery of displacement due to release or reduction of applied load.

REFRIGERATION. The process by which heat is absorbed from a substance by expansion or vaporization of a refrigerant.

REQUIRED. Shall mean required by the provisions of this code.

RETAINING WALL. A wall designed to prevent the lateral displacement of soil or other materials.

RIGGING LOFT. A space above a stage, designed and used for the flying and storage of scenery and scenic elements. A space used for the occasional flying of incidental props during a performance shall not be deemed to constitute a rigging loft.

ROOF. The topmost slab or deck of a building, either flat or sloping, with its supporting members, not including vertical supports.

ROOF COVERING. The covering applied to the exterior surface of a roof for weather resistance, fire resistance, wear, and/or appearance, but not including insulation.

ROOF SIGN. A sign erected and maintained on or above the roof of a building.

ROOF STRUCTURE. An unenclosed structure on or above the roof of any part of a building. (See BULKHEAD and PENTHOUSE.)

ROOMER. (See BOARDER.)

SAFE AREA. An interior or exterior space that serves as a means of egress by providing a transitional area from, and that also serves as a normal means of entry to, an assembly space.

SAFETY (CAR OR COUNTERWEIGHT). A mechanical device attached to an elevator car frame or to an auxiliary frame, or to the counterweight frame, to stop and hold the car or counterweight in case of predetermined overspeed or free fall, or if the hoisting ropes slacken.

SCENERY AND SCENIC ELEMENTS. Any or all of those devices ordinarily used on a stage in the presentation of a theatrical performance, such as back drops, side tabs, teasers, borders or scrim, rigid flats, set pieces, and all properties, but not including costumes.

SCHOOL. An elementary school, high school, or college, either public or private.

SEATING SECTION. An area of seating bounded on all sides by aisles, cross aisles, walls or partitions.

SELF-CLOSING. As applied to an opening protective shall mean a door, window, damper, or other device, and its assembly that is normally kept in a closed position and that is equipped with an approved device to insure immediate closing after having been opened for use.

SELF-RELIEVING CONSTRUCTION. Construction using a type of framing in which the connections are capable of developing a known and dependable moment capacity but which, under larger moments, are capable of rotating (without fracture) an amount sufficient to accommodate the deflection due to the excess of the applied moment over the moment capacity.

SERVICE EQUIPMENT. Equipment, including all components thereof, which provides sanitation, power, light, heat, cooling, ventilation, airconditioning, refuse disposal, fire-fighting, transportation, or similar facility for a building which by design becomes a part of the building, and which is regulated by the provisions of this code.

SEWAGE. Any liquid waste containing animal or vegetable matter in suspension or solution, and may include liquids containing chemicals in solution.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL SYSTEM. A system for the disposal of sewage by means of a septic tank, cesspool, or mechanical treatment, all designed for use apart from a public sewer to serve a single establishment, building, or development.

SEWAGE EJECTOR. A mechanical device used to pump or eject sewage.

SHAFT. A vertical, inclined, or offset passage, or hoistway, penetrating through two or more floors of a building or through a floor and roof. (See CLOSED SHAFT and OPEN SHAFT.)

SHALL. As used in this code, is always to be construed as mandatory.

SHELL. A structure consisting of a curved or folded slab whose thickness is small compared to its other dimensions, and which is characterized by its three dimensional load-carrying behavior. The term shall include those forms of construction that approximate slab surfaces, such as lamellas and lattices.

SIAMESE CONNECTION. A fitting connected to a fire extinguishing system and installed on the outside of a building, with two hose inlets for use of the fire department, to furnish or supplement the water supply to the system.

SIDE LOT LINE. Any lot line that is not a street line or a rear lot line.

SIDEWALK ELEVATOR. A freight elevator that operates between a sidewalk or other area outside of a building and floor levels inside the building below such area, which has no landing opening into the building at its upper limit of travel, and which is not used to carry automobiles.

SIDE YARD. A yard extending along a side lot line from the required front yard (or from the street line if no front yard is required) to the required rear yard (or to the rear lot line if no rear yard is required).

SIDEWALK SHED. A construction over a public sidewalk, used to protect pedestrians from falling objects.

SIGN. An outdoor structure, banner or other device, designed or used as an advertisement, or announcement for the information or attraction of the public; consisting of the framework and all letters, words, numerals, illustrations, illumination, decorations, trade marks, emblems, symbols or other figures or characters.

SINGLE POLE SCAFFOLD. A platform resting on putlogs or crossbeams, the outer ends of which are supported on ledgers secured to a single row of posts or uprights, and the inner ends of which are supported by a wall.

SMOKE BARRIER. Any continuous non-combustible construction, vertical, horizontal, or otherwise, such as a wall, floor, or ceiling assembly, that is designed and constructed to restrict the spread of smoke and constructed in accordance with the provisions of section 27-353.3 of this code.

SMOKE-STOP DOOR. A door or set of doors placed in a corridor to restrict the spread of smoke and to retard the spread of fire by reducing draft.

SOIL VENT. (See STACK VENT.)

SOUND POWER. The rate at which sound energy is radiated by a source.

SOUND POWER LEVEL. The ratio, expressed in decibles, of the sound power of a source to the reference power of ten-thirteen watts.

SOUND PRESSURE LEVEL. The square ratio, expressed in decibels, of a sound pressure to a reference pressure of 0.0002 dynes per square centimeter.

SPANDREL WALL. That portion of an exterior wall between the top of one opening and the bottom of another in the story directly above.

SPARK ARRESTER. A device to prevent sparks, embers, or other ignited material above a given size from being expelled to the atmosphere from the top of a chimney.

SPECIAL WASTE. Wastes that require special treatment before entry into the normal plumbing system.

SPRAY BOOTH. A compartment in which spraying with any substance is carried on, consisting of at least two sides, a back and a top.

SPRAYING SPACE OR DIPPING SPACE. Any portion of a building in which the actual work of spraying, dipping, or immersing any article with or into flammable substances takes place.

SPRINKLER ALARM. An apparatus constructed and installed so that a flow of water through the sprinkler system equal to, or greater than, that required for a single automatic sprinkler head will cause an alarm to be given.

SPRINKLER SYSTEM. A system of piping and sprinkler heads connected to one or more sources of water supply.

STACK. (See CHIMNEY.) Also, a general term applying to any vertical line of soil, waste, vent, or inside leader piping. It shall not include vertical fixture and vent branches that do not extend through the roof or that pass through not more than two stories before being reconnected to the vent stack or stack vent.

STACK VENT. The extension of a soil or waste stack above the highest horizontal drain connected to a plumbing stack.

STAGE. An area used in the presentation of a live performance at anytime and includes the performing area and non-audience areas that are open to the performing area. It may be level or raised with or without scenic elements, and generally is serviced by stage illumination appliances and control panels. For places of assembly classified as occupancy group F-1A or F-1B, the word stage shall be defined in accordance with the definition set forth in sections 27-546 and 27-547 of article three of subchapter eight of this code.

STAGE LIFT. A movable section of a stage floor, designed to carry scenery between staging areas and the stage, and also used to be raised to and temporarily retained at elevations above or below the stage level.

STANDPIPE SYSTEM. A system of piping, for fire-fighting purposes, consisting of connections to one or more sources of water supply, and serving one or more hose outlets.

STORM DRAIN. (See BUILDING STORM DRAIN.)

STORM SEWER. A sewer used for conveying rain water, surface water, condensate, cooling water, or similar clear liquid wastes which do not contain organic materials or compounds subject to decomposition.

STORY. That portion of a building that is between a floor level and the next higher floor level or roof above.

STREET. A thoroughfare dedicated or devoted to public use by legal mapping or other lawful means.

STREET FLOOR. A floor, usually the principal entrance floor, that is not more than one-half story above or below grade at the location from which egress is provided to the street.

STREET LINE. A lot line separating a street from other land.

STREET MAIN. (See WATER MAIN and GAS SERVICE PIPING.)

STRUCTURE. An assembly of materials forming a construction for occupancy or use, including among others: buildings, stadia, tents, reviewing stands, platforms, stagings, observation towers, radio towers, tanks, trestles, open sheds, coal pockets, shelters, fences, and display signs.

SUBSTRATE. A surface upon which a finish material is directly applied and which extends completely behind such finish material.

SUMP PIT. A tank or pit that receives clear liquid wastes that do not contain organic materials or compounds subject to decomposition, located below the normal grade of the gravity system and that must be emptied by mechanical means.

SUMP PUMP. A mechanical device used to pump the liquid waste from a sump pit into the gravity drainage system.

SUPPLEMENTAL VERTICAL EXIT. An enclosed stair, ramp or escalator providing means of egress to an area of refuge at another level nearer to the street floor.

THIS CODE. The building code.

TIER OF SEATING. A general level of seating, such as an orchestra (usually the main tier), a balcony, or gallery.

TRAILER CAMP. A lot or parcel of land used for temporary or permanent occupancy by two or more mobile homes or travel trailers.

TRANSFER COLUMN. A column supported by beams, girders, trusses or similar members and reacting on two or more columns at a lower level.

UNIFORMLY DISTRIBUTED LOAD. A conventionalized representation of an element of dead or live load as a load of uniform intensity, distributed over an area.

USABLE DWELLING UNITS. Dwelling units which are accessible, constructed and equipped as set forth in reference standard RS 4-6, so as to be usable by all categories of people having physical disabilities. (Definition added L.L. 58/1987 § 6.)

USE (USED). The purpose for which a building, structure, or space is occupied or utilized, unless otherwise indicated by the text. Use (used) shall be construed as if followed by the words "or is intended, arranged, or designed to be used."

VAULT (SIDEWALK). Any space below the surface of the sidewalk portion of a street, that is covered over, except those openings that are used exclusively as places for descending, by means of steps, to the cellar or basement of any building.

VENT (GAS). A flue or duct, used to convey the products of combustion from gas-fired equipment to the outdoor air by natural draft.

VENT STACK (PLUMBING). A vertical vent pipe extending through more than two stories, which is then connected to a stack vent or is otherwise extended through the roof, installed primarily for the purpose of providing circulation of air to and from any part of a drainage system.

VENT SYSTEM (COMBUSTION). A gas vent or chimney, together with a vent connector that forms a continuous unobstructed passageway from gas burning equipment to the outdoor air for the purpose of removing vent gases.

VENT SYSTEM (PLUMBING). A pipe or pipes installed to provide a flow of air to or from a drainage system or to provide a circulation of air within such system to protect trap seals from siphonage and back pressure.

VERTICAL EXIT. A stair, ramp, or escalator serving as an exit from one or more floors above or below the street floor.

WALL SIGN. A sign affixed to the exterior wall of a building, no part of which projects more than fifteen inches from the wall surface.

WATER-DISTRIBUTION PIPING. The pipes in a building or premises that convey water from the water service pipe to the plumbing fixtures and other water outlets.

WATER (STREET) MAIN. A water-supply pipe for public or community use controlled by public authority.

WATER-SERVICE PIPE. The pipe from the water (street) main or other source of water supply to the building served.

WATER SUPPLY SYSTEM. The water-service pipe, the water-distribution piping, and all of the necessary connecting pipes, fittings, control valves, and appurtenances used for conveying water in a plumbing system.

WET STANDPIPE SYSTEM. A standpipe system in which all of the piping is filled with water under pressure, that is immediately discharged upon the opening of any hose valve.

WINDING-DRUM MACHINE. As applied to an elevator, shall mean a geared drive machine in which the hoisting ropes are fastened to and wind on a drum.

WORKERS' HOIST. A hoisting and lowering mechanism equipped with a car that moves in guides in a substantially vertical direction and that is used primarily for raising and lowering workers to the working levels.

WRITING (WRITTEN). The term shall be construed to include handwriting, typewriting, printing, photo-offset, or any other form of reproduction in legible symbols or characters.

WRITTEN NOTICE. A notification in writing delivered by hand to the person or parties intended, or delivered at or sent by mail to the last business address known to the party giving such notice.

YARD. That portion of a lot extending open and unobstructed from the lowest level to the sky along the entire length of a lot line.

ZONE. A vertical division of a building fire standpipe system used to establish the water working pressures within the system and also to limit the pressure at the lowest hose outlet in the zone.

ZONING RESOLUTION. The zoning resolution of the city of New York, adopted December fifteenth, nineteen hundred sixty-one, including all amendments thereto.

HISTORICAL NOTE

Section added chap 907/1985 § 1.

Elevator vestibule amended L.L. 26/2004 § 6, eff. Oct. 22, 2004 except

¶ 1. Ruling that a building is "enlarged, extended, reconstructed or structurally altered" within the meaning of the zoning resolution only where there is a change or substitution in a substantial particular in the structure of the building itself or in one of its parts or by the addition of another structure to it so that there is an effective conversion of an existing building into a different structure, is supported by the definition of "alteration" formulated in Administrative Code § C26-11.0.-440 East 102nd Street Corp. v. Murdock, 285, N.Y. 298, 34 N.E. 2d 329 [1941], rev'g 260 App. Div. 604, 23 N.Y.S. 2d 347 [1940].

¶ 2. In his application for a building permit, defendant stated he was going to make an alteration in his two-story building. He then evicted his statutory tenants for the purpose of "demolishing the building with the intention of constructing a new building". The "alteration" consisted of erecting 18 additional floors and joining the building with an adjacent 20-story building. Held: although the building permit called the work an "alteration" it constituted a demolition and construction under the Business Rent Law.-Friedman v. Ontario Holding Corp., 279 App. Div. 23, 107 N.Y.S. 2d

¶ 3. Under the definition of "bulkhead" in this section, section C26-873.0 prescribing the headroom in bulkheads did not apply to the door opening in an elevator involved in an accident.-Haffner v. S. H. Kress & Co., 20 App. Div. 2d 634, 246 N.Y.S. 2d 220 [1963].

¶ 4. Administrative Code § B26-33.0 exempting from the statute requiring a license for hoisting or lowering articles on the outside of a structure, the hoisting or lowering of building materials used in the course of construction of a building, did not apply to a defendant who was hoisting sand in connection with the conversion of a single family five-story dwelling into a ten-story dwelling. That defendant's operation amounted to an "alteration" under the definition of alterations in § C26-11.0 and under § C26-41.0 this amounted to a "construction" was not controlling, inasmuch as § C26-9.0, subd. a, states that the definitions should have the meaning therein given except as they were defined in any other law which might apply in particular cases.-People v. Olsen, 32 N.Y.S. 2d 63 [1940].

¶ 5. Where plaintiff proposed to construct four apartment houses in H-shape units of two, one unit to face on Franklin Avenue and the other on Blossom Avenue, the fact that the excavation running south for the apartment to face on Franklin Avenue was commenced from that avenue and that nine days later, the excavation running north for the apartment to face on Blossom Avenue was commenced from that avenue, did not transform what was in effect one excavation conducted by one owner and on one lot in connection with one project into two excavations for the purpose of ascertaining the depth thereof in order to fix the obligation of the parties for shoring up the adjoining land under Administrative Code § C26-45.0. If there was but one excavation and the curb which was nearest to the point of excavation was the Franklin Avenue curb, the level of that curb had to be used to fix the depth of excavation. The excavation as thus fixed was more than 10 feet deep, and hence, the expense of preserving and protecting defendant's wall must be borne by the plaintiff.-Blossom Mannor, Inc. v. Carlhart Realty Corp., 126 (61) N.Y.L.J. (9-26-51) 638, Col. 3 T.

¶ 6. A heated porch, 6'10" by 18'6", having the same roof as the remainder of the house, and containing furniture for sleeping, held to be a "livable room".-Jaffe v. McGoldrick, 285 App. Div. 889, 137 N.Y.S. 2d 519 [1955].

¶ 7. The provisions of the Code dealing with passenger elevators imposes the responsibility of inspection and maintenance on the person in actual possession and control of the premises and it could not effect a change in substantive law so as to hold an elevator service company having a maintenance contract with the owner liable in tort to an invitee to the premises.-Ames v. Jalpur Realty Corp., 138 N.Y.S. 2d 698 [1955].

¶ 8. The employee of a restaurateur which leased space in a large office building was not entitled to recover over against the owner of buildings for injuries sustained when, in the course of his employment, as he was riding a freight elevator between basement of premises and sidewalk, he caught his foot under a metal plank which protruded from the shaft wall about one-eighth of an inch to one inch and thereby was caused to lose four toes. Although it could have been found that there was a negligently defective condition on the elevator, the owner of the premises had divested himself of all possession and control of the elevator and its appurtenances by investing possession and control in the lessee. Administrative Code § C26-1171.0 imposing responsibility upon the owner of the structure in which an elevator is installed, was intended to impose responsibility upon the person in actual possession and control. Furthermore, the Administrative Code is merely a codifying statement and was not intended to make changes in the substantive law, such as making a sweeping extension of liability of owners.-Stein v. Pershing Square Building Corp., 191 Misc. 30, 79 N.Y.S. 2d 417 [1948].

¶ 9. The defendant, who was in the steel business and maintained rigging equipment on the outside of a building for purpose of hoisting and lowering steel beams into position to be used in the construction of a penthouse on an existing 13-story building, was not required to have a rigger's license, as the construction of a penthouse came within Administrative Code § B26-33.0, exempting the hoisting or lowering of building material used in course of construction of any building or structure.-People v. Sherry, 185 Misc. 64, 55 N.Y.S. 2d 776 [1945].

¶ 10. A cabaret with a capacity of 58 persons is not a "place of assembly" and it is not necessary that capacity signs be posted.-People v. Wallace, 44 Misc. 2d 179, 253 N.Y.S. 2d 512 [1964].

¶ 11. Application for a mandamus order requiring the Commissioner of the Department of Marine and Aviation to redraft certain contracts for work at the Idlewild Municipal Airport to provide that certain work be performed by plumbers, was denied on ground no clear legal right to a mandamus order was established, as the Commissioner was required to exercise reasonable discretion and it appeared that the sewer mains and water pipes laid in an airport project consisting of 4557 acres could presumably be determined by reasonable minds as not being plumbing, water system or lines, or drainage of buildings or the connection thereof with a public sewer, private sewer, or an approved sewerage disposal plant. It might reasonably be regarded that the work was part of the public sewer or water system, and that Administrative Code §§ C26-1268.0, C26-1204.0, C26-1206.0, C26-1208.0 and 82d9-7.0, and the Borough President's regulations, had application to plumbing within the buildings and structures proposed to be erected within the grounds and the connection thereof with sewers and water mains. Even though certain small items of the work might be plumbing, these were so small when compared with the entire work and so integrated in it as to constitute merely incidental plumbing not separable from the contracts.-Moriarty v. McKenzie, 185 Misc. 87, 55 N.Y.S. 2d 771 [1945].

¶ 12. Even if it could be held that plaintiff had a strict legal right to any of the relief sought, enforcement in the present instance would work unnecessary hardship, and granting such relief would not be in the public interest.-Id.

¶ 13. Application for mandamus order requiring the Commissioner of the Department of Marine and Aviation to redraft contracts for work at the Idlewild Municipal Airport to provide that certain work be done by plumbers was denied on the ground that no clear legal right to such order was established since it might reasonably be regarded that the work was part of the public sewer or water system and not plumbing from a building to a public or private sewer system.-Moriarty v. McKenzie, 185 Misc. 87, 55 N.Y.S. 2d 771 [1945].

¶ 14. Action to recover for injuries sustained when plaintiff tripped over lock two inches high on cellar door in sidewalk in front of defendant's premises, did not come within City ordinance relating to vault roofs in sidewalks (Code of Ordinances, Ch. 5, § 170, subd. 4(k)), inasmuch as it was provided elsewhere (Ch. 23, § 240, subd. 1) that the term "vault" does not include such a door as was presently involved.-King v. Dredger, 256 App. Div. 1086, 11 N.Y.S. 2d 257 [1939].

¶ 15. In an action by a pedestrian against an electric light company to recover for injuries sustained in a fall occasioned by tripping against the side of a manhole cover constructed and maintained by the defendant in an unpaved portion of the sidewalk between the sidewalk and the curb, Administrative Code § C26-230.0 requiring construction of all covers "flush and all parts of the sidewalk" was inapplicable. The statute applies only to such openings as are otherwise unprovided for by law. The construction of the manhole in question was pursuant to authorization of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity upon consent of the Borough president in accordance with the specific provisions of law, operative independently of the Administrative Code provisions (Transportation Corp. Law § 11, Charter § 734). In view of the nature of the cover its projection of only two or three inches above the surface of the surrounding dirt area and the availability of the adjacent paved area of sidewalk, there was no proof of negligence in the absence of a violation of the Code provision.-Kaupsterstein v. Brooklyn Edison Co., 266 App. Div. 879, 43 N.Y.S. 2d 23 [1943], aff'd without opinion, 292 N.Y. 561, 54 N.E. 2d 686 [1944].

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. A mortgagee is an "owner" within the meaning of the section only if it is in possession of the premises. People v. Riverdale Equities, 148 Misc.2d 816, 562 N.Y.S.2d 352 (Crim.Ct. Bronx Co. 1990).

¶ 2. The statute imposes a nondelegatable duty upon building owners to maintain their premises in a safe condition, but did not to a subcontractor/site manager. Weiss v. City of New York, 16 A.D.3d 680, 792 N.Y.S.2d 530 (2d Dept. 2005).

¶ 3. In one case, plaintiff allegedly was injured due to a defective stairway. It was claimed that the stairs in question failed to comply with the requirements pertaining to treads, risers ad handrails contained in Article 153 of the applicable 1916 Building Code. Where the 1916 Code did not contain a definition of "interior stairs," the trial court properly considered the definition of "interior stairs" in the current Building Code. Sec. 27-232 defines interior stairs as "a stair within a building, that serves as a required exit." Here, the stairs were located under a trap door and ran between the first floor and the basement. Since the stairs did not qualify under the statute, plaintiff could not use a statutory violation as a basis for liability. Maksuti v. Best Italian Pizza, 27 A.D.3d 300, 8ll N.Y.S.2d 375 (1st Dept. 2006), leave to appeal denied, 7 N.Y.3d 715, 826 N.Y.S.2d 180, 859 N.E.2d 920 (2006).

¶ 5. In a lawsuit arising out of a fall on a stairway at Yankee Stadium, the court had to determine whether the stairs were subject to the handrail and tread requirements applicable to exit stairs. The outdoor stairs to Monument Park at the stadium lead from seating section to the field level of the stadium to the park area. The park is contained wholly within the stadium and does not lead to a street or public space. Thus, the stairs are not a "public space" or "open space". Moreover, since Monument Park does not offer access to the street, these stairs do not fall within the requirements of the Building Code applicable to exit stairs. De Rosa v. City of New York, 30 A.D.3d 323, 817 N.Y.S.2d 282 (1st Dept. 2006).

In one case, the plaintiff, a bartender, fell when he was descending the stairway to the basement. The stairway, located in a bar and grill restaurant owned by defendant, was accessible through an opening in the floor located behind the bar, and went into the basement of the building. Plaintiff contends that the location met the definition of an "interior stair" as defined in NYC Admin. Code § 27-232 and was governed by the principles set forth in Admin. Code § 27-375. The plaintiff argued that the stairway violated the requirements established under § 27-375, and therefore establishing that they were structurally defective, he should be entitled to recover for damages for the injuries he sustained.

The question for the court was: what is the requirement for interior stairs? Since the stairway from an opening in the floor behind the bar to the basement and was not a means of "egress", to an open interior space on either end. Thus, the safety requirements of Admin. Code § 375 governing the condition of "interior stairs were inapplicable. Since there was no independent basis for liability and plaintiff failed to cite empirical data or an industry standard independent of the Administrative Code, the court granted summary judgment dismissing the complaint. Mansfield v. Dolcemascolo, 34 A.D.3d 763, 826 N.Y.S.2d 115 (2d Dept. 2006)

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Under Administrative Code §27-232, a fence is considered a "structure." Administrative Code §27-235 requires that any unsafe structure be taken down or removed, or made safe and secure. In one case, a police officer, who was injured in a fall from a chain-link fence that bent inwards as he and a fellow officer scaled it in pursuit of a suspect, sued the property owner, alleging a violation of the statute. However, the court held that a mere allegation that the fence was unsafe, without specifying the how the fence was defective, was insufficient to set forth a statutory violation. Wedlock v. Troncoso, 185 Misc.2d 432, 712 N.Y.S.2d 328 (Sup.Ct. Richmond Co. 2000).

ARTICLE 3 OCCUPANCY GROUP A-HIGH HAZARD

§ 27-243 Classification.

Buildings and spaces shall be classified in the high hazard occupancy group when they are used for storing, manufacturing, or processing potentially-explosive products or materials, or highly-combustible or highly-flammable products or materials that are likely to burn with extreme rapidity. The high hazard group shall also include: uses that involve storing, processing, or handling any materials that produce explosive dust, or that result in the division of matter into fine particles subject to spontaneous ignition; uses that employ solids or substances that ignite or produce flammable gases on contact with water; and any other uses that constitute a high fire hazard because of the form, character, or volume of the materials involved.

(a) Typical material contents. Acetylene gas and gases under pressure of fifteen psig or more and in quantities greater than twenty-five hundred cubic feet, including hydrogen, illuminating gas, natural gas, and all other gases subject to explosion; gas piping at pressure levels above fifteen psig regardless of the quantities of gas; celluloid and celluloid products; cotton batting; kerosene; fuel or other oils having a flash point under 200F (tag closed cup), except five hundred fifty gallons or less in one- and two-family dwellings; refrigerating systems using high hazard refrigerants as defined in subchapter thirteen of this chapter, and except that in buildings lawfully occupied as garages prior to December sixth, nineteen hundred sixty-eight the storage of tank trucks or other vehicles, approved by the fire commissioner for the transportation of products having a flash point of over 100F (tag open cup), and where the product contained in the cargo space of the vehicles is pending delivery, shall only be considered to constitute a high hazard occupancy when the product is stored in quantities greater than forty-five thousand gallons.

(b) Typical occupant activities. Artifical flower and synthetic leather manufacture; ammunition, explosives, and fireworks manufacture, sales or storage; dry cleaning or dyeing; using or storing gasoline or other combustible solvents as outlined in article six of subchapter seven of this chapter; feather renovating; fruit ripening processes; hydrogenation processes; match manufacture or storage; metal enamelling or japanning; paint and varnish manufacture; paint spraying or dipping, as specified in article three of subchapter seven of this chapter; derivation of petroleum products by application of heat; processing of paper or cardboard in loose form; pyroxylin products manufacture and storage; rag sorting and storage; shoe polish manufacture; straw goods manufacture or broom corn storage; tar, pitch, or resin processing; waste paper sorting, shredding, storage, or baling; cotton waste processes.

ARTICLE 14 CONSTRUCTION CLASSIFICATIONS

§ 27-271 Classification table.

The fire-resistance ratings of construction elements in hours listed in table 3-4 shall be used as a basis for classifying buildings and spaces by construction. Fire-resistance ratings shall be based on the test procedures of reference standard RS3-1 and shall apply to all occupancy groups except as specifically noted. For hazardous occupancies involving an exceptionally high degree of fire risk or an exceptionally high concentration of combustible or flammable contents, the commissioner may increase the requirements of table 3-4.

Notes:

a The area of openings permitted in exterior walls at any story shall be obtained by multiplying the percentage shown in the table by the exterior separation distance in feet, and then multiplying that product by the square-foot area of the facade of that story. Requirements for protected exterior openings shall not apply to churches [.Protected openings within an exterior separation of 3 ft. 0 inch or less are permitted for buildings classified in Occupancy Groups J-2 and J-3 provided, however said openings do not exceed in total area 10% of the fa;alcade of thye story in which they are located. The openings however, may not be credited towards meeting any of the mandatory natural light or ventilation requirements of Art. 12* Protection of openings with an exterior separation of 3 ft. to 30 ft. shall not be required for J2 and J3 occupancy groups.] or to buildings classified in occupancy groups J-2 and J-3. See section 27-331 of article four of subchapter five of this chapter for additional requirements for exterior walls and exterior wall openings.

b Upon special application, the commissioner may permit exterior wall openings to be constructed in excess of the permitted area established by table 3-4 if such openings at the time of their construction are located at least sixty feet in a direct line from any neighboring building except as otherwise permitted by footnote f. Such additional openings may not, however, be credited toward meeting any of the mandatory natural light or ventilation requirements of subchapter twelve of chapter one of this title. If any neighboring building is later altered or constructed to come within the above distance limitation, the affected exterior openings shall immediately be closed with construction meeting the fire-resistance rating requirements for exterior wall construction of the building in which they are located.

*Now Subchapter 12.

Copy in brackets not enacted but included in NYC Department of Buildings version.

Copy from closing brackets to these asterisks enacted but probably intended to be omitted per NYC Department of Buildings version.

c Applies to occupancy groups A, B-1, B-2, and D-1.

d Applies to all occupancy groups other than those described in footnote c.

e See subdivision (i) of section 27-375 of article five of subchapter six of this chapter for additional impact resistance requirements applicable to certain stair enclosures and for certain exceptions to stair enclosure requirements.

f When two or more buildings are constructed on the same lot, and the combined floor area of the buildings does not exceed the limits established by tables 4-1 and 4-2 for any one of the buildings, no fire-resistance rating shall be required for nonbearing portions of the exterior walls of those buildings facing each other, and there shall be no limitation on the permitted amount of exterior openings.

g Fire retardant treated wood complying with the requirements of section 27-328 of article three of subchapter five of this chapter may be used.

h Tabulated ratings apply to buildings over one story in height. In one story buildings roof construction may be of material having 0 hour fire-resistance rating.

i Materials which are not noncombustible, as defined in subchapter two of chapter one of this title, may be used in nonbearing construction elements if they fall into one of the following categories:

1. Materials having a structural base of noncombustible material as defined in subchapter two, and having a surface not over one-eighth inch thick which when tested in accordance with the provisions of reference standard RS 3-2 has a flame spread rating not higher than fifty.

2. Materials which when tested in accordance with the provisions of reference standard RS 3-2 have a surface flame spread rating not higher than twenty-five without evidence of continued progressive combustion, and which are of such composition that surfaces which would be exposed by cutting through the material in any way would not have a flame spread rating higher than twenty-five without evidence of continued progressive combustion.

j Applies to the construction of the street floor and all construction below the level of the street floor in buildings or spaces classified in occupancy group J-2 except where the space below the street floor does not exceed five feet in height.

k Columns supporting the roof of a one-story building shall have the same fire-resistance rating as required for a column supporting one floor in a building of the same construction class.

1. Members supporting loads of not more than two floors or one floor and a roof need not have a fire-resistance rating greater than the floor construction fire-resistance requirement in buildings classified in occupancy groups G, H, and J-2, not including unsprinklered spaces of other occupancies, and in fully sprinklered buildings in occupancy groups E and J-1.

ARTICLE 2 BUILDING ACCESS*9

SUBARTICLE 110 FIRE DEPARTMENT ACCESS

§ 27-292 Building access.

Provisions shall be made for access by the fire department to every building as follows:

(a) Above Grade. Access shall be provided directly from the outdoors to each story below a height of one hundred feet except to the first story or ground floor, by at least one window or readily identifiable access panel within each fifty feet or fraction thereof of horizontal length of every wall that fronts on a street or frontage space. Windows shall be openable or breakable from both the inside and the outside, and shall have a size when open of at least twenty-four inches by thirty-six inches. Panels shall be openable from both the inside and outside and shall have a height when open of forty-eight inches and a width of at least thirty-two inches. The sill of the window or panel shall not be higher than thirty-six inches above the inside floor.

(b) Below grade. Access shall be provided directly from the outdoors to the first basement or cellar story below grade, except as provided in paragraphs two, three and four of this subdivision, within each one hundred feet or fraction thereof of horizontal length of every wall that fronts on a street or frontage space. Such access shall be by stairs, doors, windows or other means that provide an opening forty-eight inches high and thirty-two inches wide, the sill of which shall not be higher than thirty-six inches above the inside floor. If an areaway is used to provide below grade access, the minimum horizontal dimension shall be at least one-third the depth of the areaway or six feet whichever is less.

(1) Access to additional stories below grade is not mandatory since they are required to be sprinklered as provided in subdivision k of section 27-954 of article four of subchapter seventeen of this chapter.

(2) One and two-family dwellings need not provide direct access.

(3) Any building classified in occupancy group J-2 not more than three stories in height and with not more than two dwelling units on any story need not provide direct access when such first basement or cellar story is used for dwelling units or for uses accessory to the residential use in the building.

(4) Except as provided in paragraph three of this subdivision, for buildings classified in occupancy group J-1 or J-2 only one direct access from the outdoors to the first basement or cellar story consisting of a stair or door shall be required when such story is used for dwelling units or for uses accessory to the residential use in the building.

(c) Signs. Where wall signs are erected to cover doors or windows of existing buildings, access panels shall be provided as necessary to comply with the requirements of subdivisions (a) and (b) of this section.

(d) Location. Wherever practicable, one access opening in each story shall provide access to a stairway, or where there is no stairway at the exterior wall, one access opening in each story shall be located as close as practicable to a stairway.

(e) Exemptions. The provisions of subdivisions (a) through (d) of this section shall not apply to any story that is completely protected by an automatic sprinkler system conforming to the construction requirements of subchapter seventeen.

§ 27-292.5 Accessibility.

(a) Primary entrance(s).-The primary entrance(s) for buildings shall be accessible, except for buildings classified in occupancy group A, J-3 and/or other spaces which normally are not frequented by the public or employees of the facility.

(b) Exterior accessible route.-Except as provided in this subarticle, buildings shall be provided with an exterior accessible route to permit entry at the primary entrance(s) of the building from the following locations:

(1) Public street or sidewalk

(2) Driveways

(3) Parking areas

(4) Passenger loading zones

(5) Transportation stops

(c) Interior accessible route.-Except as provided in this subarticle, in buildings having (an) interior route(s) to one or more of the following spaces or facilities, such route(s) shall be (an) interior accessible route(s) from the entrance(s) usable by all categories of people having physical disabilities to adaptable or usable dwelling units and other spaces and facilities on the same premises including but not limited to:

(1) Laundry rooms

(2) Refuse disposal locations

(3) Mailbox areas

(4) Recreational, assembly and tenants' meeting rooms

(5) Storage rooms

(6) Management offices

(7) Stores

(8) Dining areas

(9) Parking areas

Where the only route to one or more of such spaces or facilities is an exterior route, such route shall be accessible.

(d) Path of travel.-The path of travel in exterior and interior accessible routes shall provide unobstructed safe access and applicable items in such path of travel shall comply with the requirements set forth in reference standard RS 4-6.

(e) Elevators.-Where provided, all elevators shall comply with subchapter eighteen, reference standard RS 18-1, where an interior accessible route is required.

(f) Assembly occupancies.-For assembly occupancies having a mezzanine or balcony which provides a similar view as that from the main floor, accessibility to the mezzanine or balcony shall not be required provided toilet rooms are on the main floor.

(g) Restaurants.-For restaurants, dining rooms and similar occupancies having the same services on levels other than the main floor, accessibility to such levels shall not be required provided that toilet rooms are on the main floor.

(h) Storage.-For buildings in which the intended use is the storage of goods or merchandise, the only requirement shall be accessibility at the primary entrance and an interior accessible route to offices where business may be conducted.

(i) Non-grade stories of small non-residential buidings.-The following non-residential buildings or parts thereof are exempt from the provisions of this subarticle concerning requirements for people having physical disabilities, to the extent set forth in subdivisions (1) and (2) of this subsection:

(1) construction of such new buildings the total floor area of which is two thousand five hundred square feet or less;

(2) alterations to such building already existing where the alterations are being made to an above-grade story having a total floor area of two thousand five hundred square feet or less or to a below-grade story having a total floor area of two thousand square feet or less.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, floor areas frequented by the public for assembly, governmental, public utility or health facility purposes shall not be exempted unless equivalent functional accessible facilities are provided on the first story.

(j) Where the floor area is more than two thousand five hundred square feet but less than five thousand square feet, a vertical wheelchair lift enclosed in construction having the required fire-resistance rating and connecting not more than two contiguous levels is permitted in lieu of an accessible route as set forth in reference standard RS 4-6.

(k) Where the below-grade cumulative floor area is more than two thousand square feet but not more than five thousand square feet, a vertical wheelchair lift enclosed in construction having the required fire-resistance rating and connecting not more than two contiguous levels is permitted in lieu of an accessible route as set forth in reference standard RS 4-6.

§ 27-292.6 Waiver of requirements.

(1) The commissioner may waive the requirements of this subarticle or of subdivision (d) of section 27-357 of this code for the alteration of existing buildings, and for any new building for which a formal application together with plans required by such application was filed with an agency of the city or with the battery park city authority prior to September first, nineteen hundred eighty-seven, when such application was required by law or regulation to be approved by such agency; provided, however, that such waiver would not significantly adversely affect provisions for health, safety and security and that equally safe and proper alternatives are prescribed and, further, that such waiver is based upon a specific finding that strict compliance with the requirement:

(a) would create an undue economic burden; or

(b) would not achieve its intended objective; or

(c) would be physically or legally impossible; or

(d) would be unnecessary in light of alternatives which insure the achievement of the intended objective or which, without a loss in the level of safety, achieve the intended objective more efficiently, effectively or economically; or

(e) would entail a change so slight as to produce a negligible additional benefit consonant with the purposes of this code.

(2) Each application for a waiver under subdivision one of this section shall be made to the commissioner in writing, setting forth each requirement sought to be waived and the specific reason or reasons therefor. The commissioner shall determine, under all of the circumstances presented by such application, which of such requirements may appropriately be waived. The commissioner shall render such determination in a writing which shall set forth in detail the commissioner's findings and conclusions with respect to each requirement sought to be waived. A copy of such written determination shall be forwarded to the applicant. Such written determination shall be filed with the department and shall be available for public inspection.

(3) The mayor's office for the handicapped or its successor agency shall be consulted by and shall advise the commissioner concerning each application for a waiver under subdivision (1) of this section.

§ 27-292.8 Adaptable dwelling units.

(a) General require- ments.

(1) Adaptable dwelling units are units that contain habitable rooms, kitchens, kitchenettes and bathrooms in residential buildings other than in occupancy group J-3 which when constructed are on an accessible route (except as set forth in this subdivision) and are constructed and equipped as defined in section 27-232 and as set forth in this subarticle so that they can be converted to be used, with a minimum of structural change, by all categories of people having physical disabilities.

(2) Such units shall be provided with door widths and clear floor spaces for making dwelling units usable as set forth in reference standard RS 4-6 when occupied by people having physical disabilities.

(3) Interior access, floor surfaces, adaptable kitchens, adaptable kitchenettes and adaptable bathrooms in these dwelling units shall comply with the requirements set forth in reference standard RS 4-6.

(4) Where an adaptable dwelling unit occupies two or more stories within itself, accessibility shall only be required at the first story of such dwelling unit provided that:

a. The second story is accessible from without; or that

b. Equivalent accessible functional facilities are provided on the first story; or that

c. The stair within the dwelling unit has a minimum width of three feet.

(b) Number of adaptable dwelling units.-(1) All dwelling units in buildings with elevators shall be adaptable unless usable dwelling units are provided in accordance with section 27-292.9.

(2) At least one but not less than twenty-five percent of the total number of dwelling units in buildings without an elevator, which have dwelling units on the ground floor and which contain three or more dwelling units, shall be adaptable, unless usable dwelling units are provided in accordance with section 27-292.9. Such adaptable dwelling unit(s) shall be located on the ground floor. Where determination by percentage results in a number containing a decimal of 0.5 or more, the next higher number shall be used, but such number shall not exceed the number of dwelling units actually proposed for the ground floor.

(c) Adaptable bathrooms, kitchens and kitchenettes.-Adaptable bathrooms, kitchens and kitchenettes within adaptable dwelling units shall be constructed and equipped in accordance with requirements set forth in reference standard RS 4-6 with respect to the following:

Access doorway or opening

Clear floor space

Floor surface

Bathroom, kitchen and kitchenette facilities and controls capable of being made usable

Space and utilities for usable range, (or cooktop or oven), refrigerator/freezer, (dishwasher if provided).

Such items shall include water closet and toilet paper dispenser, lavatory and removable base cabinet, mirrors, medicine cabinet, bathtub and controls, bathtub and shower enclosure, reinforced areas for grab bars, clearance between opposing base cabinets, counter tops, appliances and walls, adjustable or replaceable sink and removable base cabinet, as well as storage cabinets, drawers and shelves.

(d) Washing machines and clothes dryers within adaptable dwelling units.-Where washing machines and clothes dryers are located within adaptable dwelling units, they shall comply with or be capable of being converted to the requirements set forth in reference standard RS 4-6.

(e) Emergency warning devices within adaptable dwelling units.-Emergency warning devices within adaptable dwelling units shall be capable of being converted to audible and visual indication as required and to conform to the requirements set forth in subchapter seventeen, article six, reference standard RS 17-11, reference standard RS 17-12 and reference standard RS 4-6.

§ 27-292.9 Usable dwelling units.

(a) General requirements.-

(1) Usable dwelling units are units in residential buildings in other than occupancy group J-3 which are accessible, constructed and equipped, as defined in section 27-232 and as set forth in this subarticle, so as to be usable by people having physical disabilities. A usable dwelling unit shall be established by conversion from an adaptable dwelling unit when the unit becomes occupied by a person having a physical disability.

(2) Access, storage, controls, windows, doors, floor surfaces, kitchens, kitchenettes and bathrooms, appliances and emergency warning devices in these units shall comply with the requirements set forth in reference standard RS 4-6.

(b) Number of usable dwelling units. (1) Hotels-In lieu of the requirements of section 27-292.8 in buildings in occupancy group J-1 having ten or more units, not less than five percent of the total number of units shall be constructed as usable units. In all buildings in occupancy group J-1 there shall be available portable smoke detectors of both audible and visual design. The number of detectors available shall be three percent of the number of sleeping rooms with a minimum of one operational detector per building. Proprietors shall post conspicuously a sign at least three inches in height, at the main desk or other similar station, advising of the availability of such detectors. Such detectors shall have a flash frequency range of sixty to one hundred twenty flashes per minute; and, where the average illuminance with motion present is more than twenty lumens per square foot, the visible signaling appliance shall have an effective intensity rating between one hundred and one thousand candela. Hard wiring of audible/visual detectors into an existing central closed-circuit alarm system shall be permitted in lieu of such portable detectors. Where determination by percentage results in a number containing a decimal of 0.5 or more, the next higher number shall be used. Notwithstanding the foregoing, entrance doors to all dwelling units in occupancy group J-1 having ten or more units, and to all bathrooms in such units, shall be no less than thirty-two inches in width.

(2) Adult residential care facilities.-All units in adult residential care facilities shall be usable. "Adult residential care facility" shall mean a family type home for adults, a shelter for adults, a residence for adults, an enriched housing program or an adult home, which contains three or more dwelling units and which provides board and temporary or long-term residential care and services to adults who, though not requiring continual medical or nursing care, are by reason of physical or other limitations associated with age, physical or mental disabilities or other factors unable or substantially unable to live independently. Such facilities shall be considered to be within occupancy group J-2.

(c) Usable bathrooms, kitchens and kitchenettes.-Usable bathrooms, kitchens and kitchenettes within usable dwelling units shall be constructed and equipped in accordance with requirements set forth in reference standard RS 4-6 with respect to the following:

Access doorway or opening

Clear floor space

Floor surface

Bathroom, kitchen and kitchenette facilities and controls

Space and utilities for usable range, (or cooktop or oven), refrigerator/freezer, (dishwasher if provided).

Such items shall include usable water closet and toilet paper dispenser, lavatory and base cabinet, bathtub and controls, bathtub and shower enclosure, grab bars, clearance between opposing base cabinets, counter tops, appliances and walls, sink and base cabinet.

(d) Washing machines and clothes dryers within usable dwelling units.-Where washing machines and clothes dryers are located within usable dwelling units, they shall comply with or be capable of being converted to the requirements set forth in reference standard RS 4-6.

(e) Emergency warning devices within usable dwelling units.-Emergency warning devices within usable dwelling units shall be capable of being converted to audible and visual indication as required and to conform to the requirements set forth in subchapter seventeen, article six, reference standard RS 17-11, reference standard RS 17-12 and reference standard RS 4-6.

§ 27-297 Exemptions.

The following constructions shall be exempt from the provisions of section 27-296 of this article:

(a) One- or two-family dwellings. One- or two-family detached or semi-detached dwellings of two stories or less in height and two thousand five hundred square feet or less in area located within zoning residence districts may be constructed or reconstructed of construction groups II-D combustible materials, or if damaged for any cause, only the damaged portions shall be required to be reconstructed to conform to IID construction. In addition, one-family dwellings located within zoning residence district anywhere in the city, may be of combustible group IIE construction in conformance with the area and height limits established by tables 4-1 and 4-2.

(b) Fences. Fences not over six feet high may be erected of wood or other combustible material.

(c) Storm enclosures, bay windows, etc. Storm enclosures, bay windows and similar appendages may be constructed of combustible materials in accordance with the provisions of section 27-336 of article four of subchapter five of this chapter.

(d) Accessory buildings for open parking lots. Parking lot offices and similar accessory buildings not more than ten feet high and not more than one hundred fifty square feet in area may be constructed of combustible materials when on the same lot or accessory to a lot used for motor vehicle parking, and when located at least six feet from any lot line or building.

(e) Temporary structures. Temporary platforms, reviewing stands, and similar miscellaneous structures may be constructed of combustible materials and used for a limited period of time, subject to the approval of the commissioner.

(f) Greenhouse. Greenhouses may be constructed of combustible materials when accessory to a one- or two-family dwelling on the same lot and when located at least six feet from any lot line or building.

(g) Roof structures. Cooling towers, antenna supports, and other roof structures may be constructed of combustible materials in accordance with the provisions of section 27-338 of subchapter five of this chapter.

(h) Bins, tanks, and towers. Coal and material bins, water towers, tank structures, and trestles may be constructed of wood planking and timbers of dimensions not less than as required for class II-A construction when not over thirty-five feet high and having an exterior separation of a least thirty feet.

(i) Signs. Ground signs, wall signs, roof signs, and temporary signs may be constructed of combustible materials within the limitations established in article eighteen of subchapter seven of this chapter.

SUBCHAPTER 4 BUILDING LIMITATIONS

ARTICLE 9 PERMISSIBLE PROJECTIONS BEYOND STREET LINES

§ 27-313 Projections above grade.

Subject to the provisions of article eight of this subchapter the following projections may be constructed, above grade, to project beyond the street line:

(a) Fixed Projections. Fixed projections are those elements listed below, generally of an architectural character, that form an integral part of the building facade. The aggregate area of all fixed projections constructed to extend beyond the street line shall not exceed ten square feet within any one hundred square feet of wall area, except that a veneer may be applied to the entire facade of a building erected before December sixth, nineteen hundred sixty-eight, if such veneer does not project more than four inches beyond the street line. The area of any fixed projection shall be measured at that vertical plane, parallel to the wall, in which the area of the projection is greatest. This plane of measurement may be at the street line, the line of maximum projection, or any point in between.

(1) ENTRANCE DETAILS. Entrance details, including steps, and doors when fully open, may be constructed to project beyond the street line not more than eighteen inches. Entrance steps that project beyond the street line shall be guarded at each end by railings or check pieces at least three feet high or by other members of the entrance detail providing equivalent protection.

(2) ARCHITECTURAL DETAILS. Details such as cornices, eaves, bases, sills, headers, band course, opening frames, sun control devices, rustications, applied ornament or sculpture, grilles, windows when fully open, air conditioning units, and other similar elements may be constructed to project not more than four inches beyond the street line when less than ten feet above the ground or sidewalk level, and not more than ten inches beyond the street line when more than ten feet above the ground or sidewalk level.

(3) BALCONIES. Balconies, including railings and supporting brackets, no parts of which are less than ten feet above the ground or sidewalk level, may be constructed to project not more than twenty-two inches beyond the street line. When permitted by the provisions of subchapter six of this chapter, fire escapes that are part of a required exit may be constructed to project not more than four feet six inches beyond the street line provided no part, including any movable ladder or stair, is lower than ten feet above the ground or sidewalk level when not in use.

(4) MARQUEES. Marquees may be erected on public buildings, theaters, hotels, terminals, large department stores, supermarkets, multi-family dwellings, and similar buildings of an essentially public nature, or upon a warehouse or market in an established market area as designated by reference standard RS 4-3, so as to project beyond the street line, but not nearer than two feet to the curb line, provided that no parts of such marquees are less than ten feet above the ground or sidewalk level. Marquees must not be more than two feet to curb lines hereafter established or changed. When measured from top to bottom, marquees shall not be thicker nor shall the fascia be higher than three feet. This dimension shall include all decorations, but shall exclude any tension supports suspending the marquee from the wall. Marquees shall be supported entirely from the building and be constructed of noncombustible materials,except that the roof or any part of the roof may contain skylights complying with the requirements of subdivision (d) of section 27-338 of article four of subchapter five of this chapter. Marquee roofs shall be drained in accordance with the provisions of subchapter sixteen of this chapter. When the occupancy or use of a building with a marquee projecting beyond the street line is changed to an occupancy or use for which a marquee is not permitted by this section the marquee shall be removed.

(5) LIGHT FIXTURES. Light fixtures that are supported entirely from the building may be constructed to project not more than two feet beyond the street line, provided no part of the fixture is less than eight feet above the ground or sidewalk level.

(6) FLAGPOLES. Flagpoles that are supported entirely from the building may be constructed to project not more than eighteen feet beyond the street line, but not closer than two feet to the curb line, provided that no part of the flagpole is less than fifteen feet above the ground or sidewalk level.

(7) WALL SIGNS. Wall signs may be constructed to project not more than twelve inches beyond the street line when conforming to the requirements of subchapter seven of this chapter.

(8) PROJECTING SIGNS. Projecting signs may be constructed to project not more than ten feet beyond the street line, but not closer than two feet to the curb line, when conforming to the requirements of subchapter seven of this chapter, and provided that no part of the sign is less than ten feet above the ground or sidewalk level.

(b) Awnings. Awnings supported entirely from the building may be constructed to project beyond the street line as follows:

(1) STORE FRONT AWNINGS. Store front awnings may be constructed to project beyond the street line not more than eight feet, provided no part of the awning is less than eight feet above the ground or sidewalk level, except for a flexible valance, which may be not less than seven feet above the ground or sidewalk level, and provided that the awning box or cover does not project more than twelve inches.

(2) AWNINGS. Awnings over windows or doors may be constructed to project beyond the street line not more than five feet, provided that no part of the awning is less than eight feet above the ground or sidewalk level.

(3) CONSTRUCTION. Awnings shall be constructed of a noncombustible frame covered with flameproofed canvas or cloth, slow-burning plastic, sheet metal, or other equivalent material.

(c) Storm Enclosures. Storm enclosures projecting not more than eighteen inches beyond the street line may be permitted during the period between November fifteenth and the following April fifteenth. Such enclosures shall be removed at the end of this period. Construction shall follow the requirements of section 27-336 of subchapter five of this chapter.

(d) Bridges Between Buildings. Bridges connecting buildings, and projecting beyond street lines, may be constructed subject to the approval of the board of estimate and the department of highways. Such bridges shall be of a construction class that is at least equal to the higher class of the two buildings connected, and shall otherwise comply with the provisions of this code and other applicable laws and regulations.

(e) Sidewalk cafes. (1) Enclosures for sidewalk cafes, where permitted by the commissioner of consumer affairs, may be provided beyond the building line, within a street, provided such enclosures are constructed of incombustible material or slow-burning plastic or other material which will not support combustion, and provided the sides of such enclosures do not extend more than eight feet above the sidewalk.

(2) Awnings supported entirely from the building may be placed over sidewalk cafes provided they are at least eight feet clear above the sidewalk and provided they are within the limits specified by the commissioner of consumer affairs. Such awnings shall be supported on metal frames and constructed of canvas treated to render it fire-resistive or other material which will not support combustion.

(3) No part of any awning, enclosure, fixture or equipment of a sidewalk cafe shall be located beneath a fire-escape so as to obstruct operation of fire-escape drop ladders or counter-balanced stairs or to obstruct any exit from a building.

(4) a. Removable platforms shall be constructed to provide for a continuous unbroken and level floor without openings or cracks so as to prevent any material or liquid from falling through to the area beneath; no papers, trash or other materials may be permitted to accumulate in the area beneath the floor of the platform.

b. No part of the platform shall obstruct an exit from any building.

c. No part of the platform shall cover a cellar entrance, areaway or other vent, except that an easily removable section, prominently designated, will be permitted if acceptable to the commissioner.

d. No siamese connection or hydrant may be obstructed in any way that would hinder its use by the fire department.

(5) In addition to the requirements specified herein, the commissioner may promulgate such additional regulations necessary to secure safety.

(f) Curb cuts. The lowering of any curb or the change of grade of any sidewalk for the purpose of providing a driveway across such curb or sidewalk shall be constructed in accordance with the specifications prescribed in section 27-558 of article three of subchapter nine of this chapter or as required by the commissioner. The commissioner shall limit the length of any curb cut for the purpose of providing a driveway across such curb or sidewalk, when in the opinion of the commissioner the actual use or intended use of such driveway would endanger the public. The owner shall maintain every part of such driveway in accordance with the specifications prescribed in section 27-558 of article three of subchapter nine of this chapter. Where the vehicular use of such driveway, in the opinion of the commissioner is dangerous to the public, the commissioner shall order the owner to discontinue use of such driveway and restore the curb and sidewalk as required by the department of transportation. Upon the failure of the owner to comply with such order, the commissioner may inform the commissioner of transportation of such failure to comply and request the cooperation of the commissioner of transportation acting under his or her authority pursuant to section twenty-nine hundred four of the New York city charter in the enforcement of this section.

(a) Footings. Exterior wall and column footings may be constructed to project beyond the street line not more than twelve inches, provided that the top of the footing is not less than eight feet below the ground or sidewalk level.

(b) Foundation Walls. Foundation walls required to support permitted projections may be constructed to project not more than the permitted projection beyond the street line.

(c) Vaults. Vaults licensed by the commissioner of transportation may be constructed to project beyond the street line but not beyond the curb line. Vault covers shall be set flush with the sidewalk and surfaced with non-skid material.

(d) Tunnels Between Buildings. Tunnels connecting buildings, and projecting beyond street lines, may be constructed subject to the approval of the board of estimate and the department of transportation.

Such tunnels shall comply with the provisions of this code and other applicable laws and regulations.

§ 27-316 Permit restrictions.

Within special flood hazard areas, as delineated in reference standard RS4-4, applications for permits shall be subject to the following:

(a) Permissible uses and other measures to reduce flood losses shall take precedence over any conflicting laws.

(b) Major repairs or alterations shall be with construction materials and utility equipment that are resistant to flood damage, and use construction methods and practices that will minimize flood damage.

(c) New and proposed construction or substantial improvements shall be protected against flood damage, be designed (or modified) and anchored to prevent flotation, collapse or lateral movements of the structure, use construction materials and utility equipment that are resistant to flood damage, and use construction methods and practices that will minimize flood damage.

(d) New and proposed developments and construction shall minimize flood damage, locate, elevate and construct all public utilities such as gas, sewer, electrical and water systems to minimize or eliminate flood damage, and provide adequate drainage so as to reduce exposure to flood hazards.

(e) New or replacement water supply systems and/or sanitary sewage systems shall be designed to minimize or eliminate infiltration of floodwaters into the systems, and discharges from the systems into floodwaters, and require on-site disposal systems to be located so as to avoid impairment of them or contamination from them during flooding.

(f) Subdivision proposals and other proposed new developments and construction shall (i) minimize flood damage, (ii) have all public utilities, such as sewer, gas, electrical and water systems located and constructed to minimize or eliminate flood damage, and (iii) provide adequate drainage so as to reduce exposure to flood hazards.

(g) Upon placement of the lowest floor, or flood-proofing by any means, the holder of any permit to which this section applies shall submit to the department a certification of the elevation of the lowest floor, or where applicable of the lowest flood-proofed elevation, in relation to mean sea level. Provided, however, that in areas designated as Zone V in reference RS 4-4, such permit holder shall certify to the department the elevation, in relation to mean sea level, of the botton*12 of the lowest structural member of the lowest floor. Such certification shall be prepared by a registered architect or licensed professional engineer.

§ 27-316.1 Permit application contents.

Applications for permits for construction within special flood hazard areas, as delineated in reference standard RS 4-4, shall contain the following information:

(a) the elevation in relation to mean sea level of the proposed lowest floor (including basement or cellar);

(b) for non-residential structures, the elevation in relation to mean sea level to which such structure will be flood-proofed;

(c) a certification from a registered architect or licensed professional engineer that heating, ventilation, air conditioning, plumbing, electrical and other services facilities within the structure will be located or constructed so as to prevent water from entering or accumulating within the components during conditions of flooding;

(d) for non-residential structures intended to be floodproofed, a certification from a registered architect or licensed professional engineer that the flood-proofing design and methods of construction of such structure are in accordance with reference standard RS 4-5 and with accepted standards of practice to make such structure watertight, with walls substantially impermeable to the passage of water, and with structural components having the capability of resisting hydrostatic and hydrodynamic loads and effects of buoyancy;

(e) for structures within Zone V, as delineated in reference standard RS 4-4, a certification from a registered architect or licensed professional engineer that the design and methods of construction of such structure are in accordance with reference standard RS 4-5 and with accepted standards of practice for meeting the requirements of subdivision (f) of section 27-317 of this code; and

(f) a description, where applicable, of the extent to which any watercourse will be altered or relocated as a result of the proposed work.

SUBCHAPTER 4 BUILDING LIMITATIONS

ARTICLE 10 GENERAL LIMITATIONS ON OCCUPANCY AND CONSTRUCTION WITHIN SPECIAL FLOOD HAZARD AREAS

§ 27-317 Occupancy and construction restrictions.

(a) Within special flood hazard areas, as delineated in reference standard RS 4-4, no building in occupancy group classification J1, J2 or J3 shall be constructed or altered so as to have the lowest floor below the base flood elevation.

(b) New construction or substantial improvements of non-residential buildings within special flood hazard areas, as delineated in reference standard RS 4-4, shall have the lowest floor elevated to or above the base flood elevation; or, together with attendant utilities and sanitary facilities, shall be floodproofed up to the level of the base flood elevation, in accordance with the requirement of reference standard RS 4-5. Provided, however, that new construction or substantial improvements of non-residential buildings within area designated as Zone V in reference standard RS 4-4 shall meet the requirements of subdivision (f) of this section.

(c) Any encroachment in the floodway, as delineated in reference standard RS 4-4, including fill, new construction, substantial improvement, or any other development that would result in any increase in flood levels within the community during the occurrence of the base flood discharge, shall be prohibited.

(d) Manufactured homes shall be anchored to resist flotation, collapse or lateral movement and shall be elevated on a permanent foundation to or above the base flood elevation or, when no base flood elevation has been determined, two feet above the highest adjacent grade. Methods of anchoring may include, but are not limited to, use of over-the-top or frame ties to ground anchors. No park trailers or travel trailers shall be permitted within special flood hazard areas, as delineated in reference standard RS 4-4.

(e) In the case of alterations constituting a substantial improvement to parts of non-residential and non-institutional buildings below the base flood elevation, all parts below the base flood elevation need comply with the applicable requirements of reference standard RS 4-5.

(f) All new construction and substantial improvements of buildings within Zone V, as delineated in reference standard RS 4-4, shall be performed pursuant to the provisions of RS 4-5. Such construction and improvements shall have the lowest floor elevated on adequately anchored pilings or columns and securely anchored to such piles or columns to prevent flotation, collapse or lateral movement resulting from the simultaneous action of wind and water loads on all building components, and the lowest portion of the structural members of the lowest floor, other than the pilings or columns, shall be elevated to or above the base flood elevation. For purposes of this subdivision, wind and water loading values shall each have a one percent chance of being equalled or exceeded in any given year (one hundred year mean recurrence interval). In addition:

(1) The installation of anchoring to anchored pilings or columns shall be subject to controlled inspection.

(2) The space below the lowest floor shall be free of obstruction or, alternatively, such space shall be constructed with break-away walls of an open lattice type construction which is intended to collapse under stress from abnormally high tides or wind driven water without jeopardizing the structural support of the building. Such space shall not be used for human habitation.

(3) The use of fill for structural support of buildings within Zone V shall not be permitted.

(4) The man-made alteration of sand dunes within Zone V which would increase potential flood damage to buildings shall not be permitted.

(5) All new construction within Zone V shall be located landward of the reach of mean high tide.

(g) All new construction and substantial improvements of buildings within Zone A, as delineated in reference standard RS 4-4 shall be performed pursuant to the provisions of reference standard RS 4-5. Where such construction or improvement is not floodproofed, any fully enclosed space below the lowest floor that is subject to flooding, as defined in section 27-317.1 of this code, shall be designed to equalize hydrostatic flood forces on exterior walls automatically (without human intervention) by allowing for the entry and exit of floodwaters. Design for meeting this requirement shall be certified by a registered architect or licensed professional engineer or shall meet or exceed the following minimum criteria:

(1) A minimum of two openings, having a total net area of not less than one square inch for every square foot of enclosed space subject to flooding, shall be provided.

(2) The bottom of all openings shall be no higher than one foot above grade.

(3) Openings may be equipped with screens, louvers, valves or other coverings or devices provided that they permit the automatic entry and exit of floodwaters.

(h) When used within special flood hazard areas, as delineated in reference standard RS 4-4, breakaway walls shall have a design safe loading resistance of not less than ten and no more than twenty pounds per square foot. Use of a breakaway wall which exceeds a design safe loading resistance of twenty pounds per square foot shall be permitted only if a registered architect or licensed professional engineer certifies that the proposed design meets the following conditions:

(1) Breakaway wall collapse will result from a water load less than that which would occur during the base flood; and

(2) the elevated portion of the building and supporting foundation system will not be subject to collapse, displacement, or other structural damage due to the effects of wind and water loads acting simultaneously on all building components (structural and non-structural). Maximum wind and water loading values used in this determination shall each have a one percent chance of being equalled or exceeded in any given year (one hundred year mean recurrence interval).

SUBCHAPTER 4 BUILDING LIMITATIONS

ARTICLE 10 GENERAL LIMITATIONS ON OCCUPANCY AND CONSTRUCTION WITHIN SPECIAL FLOOD HAZARD AREAS

§ 27-317.1 Definitions for special flood hazard areas.

The following definitions shall supplement the definitions that appear in article two of subchapter two of this chapter and shall apply only to the provisions of article ten of subchapter four of this chapter and to the reference standards contained therein:

AREA OF SPECIAL FLOOD HAZARD. The land in the flood plain delineated in reference standard RS 4-4 as subject to a one percent or greater chance of flooding in any given year. Such area is designated on the Flood Insurance Rate Map (FIRM) as Zone A, AE, AH, A1-99, V, VE or V1-30. Such area is also known as the base flood plain or one hundred year flood plain.

BASEFLOOD. The flood having a one percent chance of being equalled or exceed in any given year.

BASEFLOOD ELEVATION. The level (in feet) indicated on the Flood Insurance Rate Map (FIRM).

BREAKAWAY WALL. A wall that is not part of the structural support of the building to which it is attached and is intended through its design and construction to collapse under specific later loading forces without causing damage to the elevated portion of the building or the supporting foundation system.

DEVELOPMENT. Any man-made change to improved or unimproved real estate, including but not limited to buildings or other structures, mining, dredging, filling, grading, paving, excavation or drilling operations, located within the area of special flood hazard.

ELEVATED BUILDING. A non-basement building (i) constructed, in an area designated as Zone A in reference standard RS 4-4, to have the top of the elevated floor, or in an area designated as Zone V in reference standard RS 4-4, to have the bottom of the lowest horizontal structural member of the elevated floor elevated above the ground level by means of pilings, columns (posts and piers), or shear walls parallel to the flow of water, and (ii) adequately anchored so that the structural integrity of such building is not impaired during a flood of up to the magnitude of the base flood. In an area designated as Zone A in reference standard RS 4-4, such term also includes a building elevated by means of fill or solid foundation perimeter walls with openings sufficient to permit the unimpeded movement of flood waters. In an area designated as Zone V in reference standard RS 4-4, such term also includes a building otherwise meeting the definition of "elevated building" in which the lower area is enclosed by means of breakaway walls meeting the standards of subdivision (h) of section 27-317 of this code.

FLOOD OR FLOODING. A general and temporary condition of partial or complete inundation of normally dry land areas resulting from:

(1) the overflow of inland or tidal waters; or

(2) the unusual and rapid accumulation or runoff of surface waters from any source.

FLOOD BOUNDARY AND FLOODWAY MAP (FBFM). An official map issued by the Federal Emergency Management Agency on which the regulatory floodway along water courses is delineated.

FLOOD HAZARD BOUNDARY MAP (FHBM). An official map issued by the Federal Emergency Management Agency on which areas of special flood hazard are delineated.

FLOOD INSURANCE RATE MAP (FIRM). The official map on which the Federal Emergency Management Agency has delineated the areas of special flood hazards. Such map includes the flood boundary and floodway map and the flood hazard boundary map, as defined in this section.

FLOOD PLAIN. Any land area susceptible to being inundated by water from any source (see "flood or flooding").

FLOODPROOFING. Any combination of structural and non-structural additions, changes or adjustments to structures to reduce or eliminate flood damage to real estate, improved real property, water and sanitary utilities, or structural and their contents.

FLOODWAY OR REGULATORY FLOODWAY. The channel of a river or other watercourse and the adjacent land areas that must be reserved in order to discharge the base flood without cumulatively increasing the water surface elevation more than one foot.

HIGHEST ADJACENT GRADE. The highest natural elevation of the ground surface, prior to construction, next to the proposed walls of a structure.

LOWEST FLOOR. The lowest level including cellar or basement of the lowest enclosed area. For the purpose of this article, an unfinished or flood resistant enclosure, usable solely for the parking of vehicles, building access or storage in an area other than a basement, is not considered a structure's lowest floor, provided that such enclosure shall not be built so as to render the structure in violation of the requirements of subdivision (g) of section 27-317 of this code.

MANUFACTURED HOME. A structure, transportable in one or more sections, which is built on a permanent chassis and designed to be used with or without a permanent foundation when connected to required utilities.

MIXED USE BUILDING. Any building occupied in part for residential use, with one or more nonresidential uses located on a story below the lowest story occupied entirely by such residential use.

NATIONAL GEODETIC VERTICAL DATUM (NGVD). A vertical control used as a reference for establishing elevations within the flood plain, as provided in section 27-158 of this code.

NEW CONSTRUCTION. Buildings for which the "start of construction" commenced on or after November sixteenth, nineteen hundred eighty-three.

SAND DUNES. Naturally occurring accumulations of sand in ridges or mounds landward of a beach.

START OF CONSTRUCTION. The date on which the building permits was issued, provided, however, that the actual start of construction, repair, reconstruction, placement or substantial improvement is within one hundred eighty days of such date. "Actual start" means either the first placement of permanent construction of a building on a site, such as pile driving, the pouring of slabs or footings, or any work beyond the stage of excavation; or, for a building without a cellar, basement or poured footings, the first permanent framing or assembly of such building or any part thereof on its piling or foundations. "Permanent construction" does not include land preparation, such as clearing, grading and filling; nor does it include excavation for a cellar, basement, footings, piers or foundations or the erection of temporary forms; nor does it include the installation on the property of accessory buildings, such as garages or sheds not occupied as dwelling units or not as part of the main building.

SUBSTANTIAL IMPROVEMENT. Any repair, reconstruction, alteration, or improvement of a building, the cost of which equals or exceeds fifty percent of its market value either:

(1) before the alteration, improvement or repair is started, or

(2) if the building has been damaged and is being restored before such damaged occurred.

For the purposes of this definition, "substantial improvement" is considered to occur when the first alteration of any wall, ceiling, floor or other structural parts of the building commences, whether or not that alteration affects the external dimensions of the building. The term "substantial improvement" does not, however, include either:

(1) any project for improvement of a building to comply with state or local health, sanitary or safety code specifications which are solely necessary to assure safe condtions, or

(2) any alteration of a building designated as worthy of preservation because of historic or architectural importance, or a building within an area so designated by the landmarks preservation commission, or listed on the national register of historic places or state inventory of historic places.

ZONE A. A symbol used on the flood insurance rate map to designate an area of special flood hazard without velocity (wave action). When not shown on the flood insurance rate map, the water surface elevation may be determined from available data by the registered architect or licensed professional engineer of record.

ZONE V. A symbol used on the flood insurance rate map to designate an area of special flood hazard with velocity (wave action). When not shown on the flood insurance rate map, the water surface elevation may be determined from available data by the registered architect or licensed professional engineer of record.

ARTICLE 3 FIRE-RESISTANCE REQUIREMENTS*

§ 27-324 Protection of structural members.

Columns, girders, trusses, beams, lintels, etc. that are required to be fire protected, and that support only one floor or a roof, and/or a non-bearing wall not more than one story high, shall be individually encased on all sides with materials having the required fire-resistance rating; or shall be protected by a ceiling as specified in section 27-327 of this article having the required fire-resistance rating; or shall be protected by a combination of both a ceiling and individual encasement which, together, provide the required fire-resistance rating. Columns, girders, trusses, beams, lintels, etc. that are required to be fire protected, and that support more than one floor or support a bearing wall or wall more than one story high, shall be individually encased on all sides for their entire length or height with materials having the required fire-resistance rating. Trusses that support only two stories or one story and a roof may be fire protected by an envelope that encompasses the entire truss with materials of the required fire-resistance rating.

(a) Embedments and enclosures. Pipes, wires, conduits, ducts, or other service facilities shall not be embedded in the required fire protection of a structural member that is required to be individually encased; except that pipes, wires, and conduits may be installed in the space between the required fire protection and the structural member protected, provided that where such facilities pierce the required fire protection, the area of the penetrations does not exceed two percent of the area of the fire protection on any one face, the penetrations are closed off with close-fitting metal escutcheons or plates and the concealed space shall be firestopped at each story in accordance with the provisions of section 27-345 of article five of this subchapter.

(b) Impact protection. Where the fire protective covering of a structural member is subject to impact damage from moving vehicles, the handling of merchandise, or other activity, the fire protective covering shall be protected by corner guards or by a substantial jacket of metal or other noncombustible material, to a height adequate to provide full protection. Where applicable, such protection shall be designed in accordance with the requirements of section 27-558 of article three of subchapter nine of this chapter.

(c) Structural members in cavity walls. Where structural members occur within exterior cavity walls, portions of such structural members facing the exterior need not be individually fire protected if the outer width of the cavity wall provides the required fire-resistance rating and is located not more than two and one-half inches from such structural members, and if all surfaces of the structural members are fire protected from the interior of the building by materials having the required fire-resistance rating.

(d) Prestressing steel. Minimum covering of prestressing steel shall comply with the requirements of reference standard RS 5-15.

(e) Exterior Exposed Structural Members. Structural members exposed to the outdoors on buildings that do not exceed two stories or thirty feet in height, which are required by table 3-4 to have a fire-resistance rating not exceeding one hour, need not be protected on any face of the member that has an exterior separation of thirty feet or more, provided the outdoor area within the thirty feet separation distance is not used for storage of materials, or for motor vehicle parking.

(f) Inspection of fire protection. The installation of all required sprayed-on fire protection of structural members except those encased in concrete shall be subject to the controlled inspection requirements of section 27-132 of article seven of subchapter one of this code.

(g) Inspection of existing sprayed-on fire protection during alterations in office spaces and in occupancy group E spaces. In office spaces and spaces classified in occupancy group E, where an alteration exposes any required sprayed-on fire protection of structural members, or where, pursuant to an alteration persons are required to enter or access areas in which such sprayed-on fire protection is capable of being observed, the existing required spray-on fire protection shall be subject to the controlled inspection requirements of section 27-132 of this code. Such controlled inspection shall require a determination (i) that the existing sprayed-on fire protection as originally applied or installed complies with the applicable requirements of this code, including those for installation methods, materials, thickness and coverage; and (ii) that, since its original application, the integrity of the existing sprayed-on fire protection has not been compromised, damaged or displaced by the current alteration or by any prior alteration or other event.

§ 27-327 Ceilings.

(a) Ceilings that contribute to the required fire-resistance rating of a floor or roof assembly shall be continuous between exterior walls, vertical fire divisions, fire separations, corridor partitions or any other partitions having at least the same fire-resistance rating as the ceiling. All such fire-rated partitions shall be constructed as set forth in section 27-340 or subdivision (a) of section 27-341, as appropriate. The concealed space above such ceiling shall be firestopped into areas not exceeding three thousand square feet with materials listed in section 27-345 of this subchapter for the full height of the concealed space. Access to each such concealed space may be through one or more openings, not exceeding nine square feet and protected by self-closing opening protectives having the fire-protection rating required by table 5-3.

(1) Firestopping shall not be required where the structural members within the concealed space are individually protected with materials having the required fire-resistance rating, or where the ceiling is not an essential part of the fire-resistive assembly; nor shall firestopping be required where a concealed space is sprinklered in accordance with the construction requirements of subchapter seventeen of this chapter.

(b) Electrical and other openings in ceilings. Ceilings required to have a fire-resistance rating may be pierced to accommodate noncombustible electric outlet boxes or recessed lighting fixtures if the aggregate area of such openings does not exceed sixteen square inches in each ninety square feet of ceiling area and the electrical outlet boxes or recessed lighting fixtures are constructed of steel at least .022 inches thick and sealed tightly at the ceiling. Noncombustible pipes, ducts, and additional or larger electrical or other service facilities may pierce ceilings that are required to have a fire-resistance rating only when the type of ceiling to be used has been tested with such types of facilities installed in place and the proportionate area of openings for such facilities to be installed in the ceiling does not exceed the proportionate area of such openings in the assembly tested, and provided no opening is larger than that in the assembly tested. Protection for such openings shall be the same as provided in the test. Duct openings installed in accordance with the foregoing shall be protected by fire dampers complying with the requirements of subchapter thirteen of this chapter.

§ 27-328 Fire retardant treated wood.

(a) Material. Fire-retardant treated wood shall be pressure treated with fire retardant chemicals in accordance with reference standards RS 5-3 and RS 5-4. Where used as a structural element or as furring, the material shall have a flame spread rating not greater than twenty-five when tested in accordance with reference standard RS 5-5 when exposed for a period of at least thirty minutes, with no evidence of significant progressive combustion. Where used as interior finish or trim, the material shall have a flame spread rating that meets the requirements of section 27-348 of this subchapter for the location in which it is used. Subsequent to treatment, material two inches thick or less shall be air dried or kiln dried to an average moisture content of not more than nineteen percent.

(b) Label. All fire-retardant treated wood shall bear the identification of a testing laboratory or producer certifying to the performance thereof, in accordance with the acceptance requirements of section 27-131 of article seven of subchapter one of this chapter.

(c) Application. Fire-retardant treated wood may not be used where exposed to the weather or in interior spaces where the relative humidity is normally eighty percent or more. There shall be no fabrication of the material after treatment, such as cutting, shaping, or grooving for splines or ring connectors so as to expose untreated surfaces, except that the material may be cut to length, shaped, or grooved if the exposed surfaces or edges are tightly butted against other material that is noncombustible or that is fire retardant treated, so that no untreated wood is left exposed to danger of ignition. Holes may be bored or cut for plumbing or heating pipes and for electric outlets only if the openings are covered with tightly-fitted noncombustible escutcheons or cover plates. The allowable working stresses of the material shall be ninety percent of the allowable stresses for untreated lumber of like classification.

(d) Where permitted in construction group I. Fire-retardant treated wood may be used in buildings of construction group I in the following cases:

(1) As permitted by table 3-4.

(2) For interior non-bearing partitions that are not required to have a fire-resistance rating.

(3) For interior furring and blocking of exterior walls, furring and blocking of interior walls and partitions, and framing of suspended ceilings provided the furring, blocking, and framing do not affect the integrity, or reduce the fire-resistance rating, of the construction element.

(4) For interior finish and trim.

(e) Area increase. Fire-retardant treated wood may be used in construction group II buildings in lieu of untreated wood for wall studs, bearing partition studs, columns, beams, girders, joists, rafters, trusses, sole and cap plates, subflooring and roof decks, and when so used, the area limitations of tables 4-1 and 4-2, for buildings of construction group II, may be increased by thirty-three and one-third percent.

ARTICLE 4 PREVENTION OF EXTERIOR FIRE SPREAD

§ 27-331 Exterior walls.

Exterior walls shall comply with the fire-resistance rating requirements of table 3-4. Where provisions of this code require a space or facility to be enclosed, the construction requirements for the enclosure shall not apply to any exterior wall that forms part of the enclosure.

(a) Openings in exterior walls. In addition to the requirements of table 3-4 and subchapters six and eight of this chapter, exterior openings above the third floor level of a building or above a height of forty feet, except buildings in occupancy group J-3, open parking structures, and buildings of construction classes II-D and II-E, shall have opening protectives when (1) any part of the opening is less than thirty feet distant in a direct unobstructed line not in the same plane, from an opening in another building or from a wood frame building or (2) any part of the opening is above and less than thirty feet in a direct unobstructed line from, any roof construction that has a fire-resistance rating of less than one hour or that has unprotected openings therein within this distance, whether the roof construction is on the same building or on an adjacent building.

(b) Opening protective required ratings. In a building or space classified in occupancy group A, all opening protectives shall be three-quarter hour (class E) opening protectives meeting the requirements of reference standard RS

5-8. Such protectives shall be fixed self-closing or automatic. Alternatively, these openings may be protected with three-quarter hour (class F) protectives together with outside sprinklers installed in accordance with construction requirements of subchapter seventeen of this chapter. In such cases, there shall be an automatic dry pipe sprinkler head centered over each opening with the orifice directed against the opening. All opening protectives required by table 3-4 or by subdivision (a) above in buildings classified in other than occupancy group A shall be three-quarter hour (class F) openings.

(c) First story openings. Opening protectives required by table 3-4 may be omitted in show windows or other openings on the lowest story of a building facing on a street or public space.

(d) Nonautomatic protectives. Required opening protectives in exterior openings, if not self-closing or automatic, shall be kept closed by the occupants at all times when not required for light or ventilation under the provisions of subchapter twelve of this chapter.

(e) Construction of unprotected openings. Exterior windows and doors, including their frames and glazing, that are not required by this code to have a fire-protection rating, may be of combustible materials. Below a height of seventy-five feet, slow-burning plastic glazing may be used in windows. Glazing in balcony doors shall comply with the requirements of paragraph four of subdivision (g) of section 27-369 of article five of subchapter six of this chapter.

(f) Vertical separation of openings. In buildings classified in occupancy groups A, B, C, D and E, exceeding three stories or forty feet in height, openings located vertically above one another in exterior walls except in stairway enclosures, shall be separated by a spandrel wall at least three feet high between the top of one opening and the bottom of the opening immediately above; or each such opening above the lower one shall be protected against fire by an opening protective; or a fire canopy of noncombustible materials, extending out at least two feet horizontally from the wall and at least as long as the width of the lower opening, shall be constructed between the two openings. Spandrels and fire canopies shall be constructed to provide at least the fire-resistance rating required for the exterior wall, but in no event less than one hour.

Parapets shall be provided on all exterior walls of buildings of construction class II-A, II-B, or II-C that have roof construction of combustible materials.

(a) Exceptions. A parapet need not be provided on the exterior wall of any building:

(1) That is less than twenty-two feet high; or

(2) Whose roof has a pitch of more than twenty degrees to the horizontal and whose overhang, fascia, cornice or gutter is of noncombustible construction, or if of combustible construction is separated from the roof and ceiling construction by construction having the fire-resistance rating required for the exterior wall of the building. Combustible members, excluding roof sheathing and its supporting members, if covered by a class A roof covering and complying with the restrictions as required by section 27-335 of this article, shall not extend through this construction, but shall have at least four inches of solid noncombustible material below, at the sides, and at the ends of such members; or

(3) That is provided with a fire canopy at, or not more than two feet below the roof level, continuous around that portion of the wall that is without a parapet, constructed as required by subdivision (f) of section 27-331 of this article.

(b) Construction. Parapets required under this section shall be of materials and assembly having at least the fire-resistance rating of the wall below, and shall be at least two feet high.

§ 27-335 Exterior trim.

For the purposes of this section, exterior trim shall be defined as any material, other than door and window frames and sash, that is applied to exterior walls and which, if removed or destroyed, will not reduce the structural stability of the building enclosure, and which is installed so as not to reduce the required fire-resistance rating of the enclosure. Exterior trim shall include cornices, overhanging eaves, fascias, belt courses, pilasters, surrounds, gutters, leaders, half-timber work, shutters, trellises, etc.

(a) Combustible exterior trim:

(1) May not be used on buildings required to be of construction group I except that slow-burning plastics or approved equivalent materials may be used up to a height of twenty-five feet, provided that such trim covers not more than five percent of the surface area of the building enclosure (openings not included), or not more than one thousand square feet.

(2) May be used to a height of forty feet on buildings of construction classes II-A, II-B, and II-C provided that such trim covers not more than ten percent of the surface area of the building enclosure (openings not included), projects not more than eight inches beyond the outside face of the building enclosure, and has an exterior separation of at least fifteen feet measured from the outermost surface of the trim.

EXCEPTION. Cornices, gutters, or overhanging roofs, when permitted, may project up to three feet beyond the outside face of the building enclosure if they are at least eight inches above the topmost opening, are firestopped as required by section 27-345 of article five of this suchapter and either:

a. have their combustible structural members protected by soffits and fascias of a material or assembly having at least a one hour fireresistance rating, or

b. have all their combustible members separated from the roof and ceiling construction by construction having the fire-resistance rating required for the exterior wall, with at least four inches of solid noncombustible material below, at the sides, and at the ends of such members;

(3) May be used to an unlimited extent in buildings of construction classes II-D and II-E on exterior walls that are not required to have a fire-resistance rating.

§ 27-335.1 Acoustical and thermal insulation; use in noncombustible construction.

(a) Notwithstanding any provision of this code to the contrary, acoustical or thermal insulation which is not noncombustible may be used where noncombustible construction is required if:

(1) it satisfactorily passes a test for determining noncombustibility of elementary materials, based on the test procedures of A.S.T.M. E136-65, and, upon exposure to fire will not produce products of decomposition or combustion that are more toxic in point of concentration that those given off by wood or paper when decomposing or burning under comparable conditions; or

(2) it has a flame-spread rating not greater than twenty-five, a smoke developed rating not greater than fifty, is without evidence of continued progressive combustion when tested in accordance with the test procedure of reference standard RS 5-5, and upon exposure to fire will not produce products of decomposition or combustion that are more toxic in point of concentration than those given off by wood or paper when decomposing or burning under comparable conditions.

(b) Notwithstanding any provision of subdivision a of this section or any other provision of this code to the contrary, acoustical or thermal insulation, which is not noncombustible and which does not meet the requirements of subdivision a of this section, may be used where noncombustible construction is required subject to the approval of the commissioner, and provided it is installed in a composite method of construction, with a minimum of three inches of unpierced masonry or concrete on all sides.

(c) Notwithstanding any provision of subdivision a or b of this section or any other provision of this code to the contrary, thermal insulation, which is not noncombustible and which does not meet the requirements of subdivisions a and b of this section, may be installed in an exterior wall system in any noncombustible construction group, provided that:

(1) such insulation is of a thickness no greater than four inches; provided, additional thickness used exclusively for decorative or leveling purposes shall be permissible, where the area of such additional thickness does not exceed fifteen percent of the wall area on any single story;

(2) such insulation has a heat value not in excess of six thousand BTU per square foot;

(3) such insulation is installed in a composite method of construction and is separated from interior spaces by a thermal barrier having at least a one-hour fire resistance rating;

(4) such insulation has a flame spread rating not greater than twenty-five and a smoke developed rating not greater than four hundred fifty, and is covered with, and sealed or joined by, material having a flame spread rating not greater than twenty-five and a smoke developed rating not greater than fifty, when tested in accordance with the procedures of reference standard RS 5-5;

(5) such insulation is installed in a manner which meets the requirements for firestopping set forth in section 27-345;

(6) upon exposure to fire, the exterior wall system and each of its components will not produce products of decomposition or combustion that are more toxic in point of concentration than those given off by wood or paper when decomposing or burning under comparable conditions;

(7) the structure on which the exterior wall system is installed meets the requirements of section 27-331 pertaining to minimum horizontal and vertical separation distances; provided, however, that such insulation shall not be used on the exterior surface of a wall of a court or shaft if the horizontal or vertical separation distance between such wall and another wall of such court or shaft is less than twenty feet;

(8) the use of such insulation on soffits or other horizontal areas shall not extend more than three feet beyond the outside face of the building enclosure;

(9) the use of such insulation on buildings having party walls meets the requirements of section 27-332;

(10) such insulation meets the acceptance requirements of section 27-131;

(11) the results of a fire test of a representative portion of the exterior wall system meet the requirements of reference standard RS5-21;

(12) the edge or face of the assembly containing such insulation is labeled with the following information:

a. the name of a nationally recognized testing laboratory acceptable to the commissioner which has inspected such insulation;

b. the model of the exterior wall assembly for which such insulation is listed by a nationally recognized testing laboratory acceptable to the commissioner;

c. the identity of the manufacturer of such insulation;

d. the flame spread and smoke developed ratings; and

(13) the installation of such insulation shall be subject to controlled inspection to ensure that the installation is fully consistent with the terms of the listing by a nationally recognized testing laboratory acceptable to the commissioner, acceptance requirements of section 27-131 and the manufacturer's installation recommen- dations.

(d) The commissioner may, with regard to thermal insulation, the use of which is authorized by this subdivision, establish by regulation training criteria for persons installing such insulation, and prohibit the installation of such insulation by persons not adequately trained. Any person installing such insulation shall certify to the commissioner that the installation is fully consistent with the terms of the listing by a nationally recognized testing laboratory acceptable to the commissioner, acceptance requirements of section 27-131 and the manufacturer's installation recommendations.

(e) Definitions. As used in this section:

(1) "Composite method of construction" shall mean a method of construction in which diverse materials are combined to form an assembly, whether the assembly is prefabricated or fabricated at the site of installation.

(2) "Exterior wall system" shall include the exterior walls of a building and the appurtenances thereof.

(a) The building is classified in occupancy group J-2 or J-3.

(b) The building is not more than three stories or forty feet high.

(c) The appendage has an exterior separation on all exposed sides of at least fifteen feet, measured from the outermost surface of the appendage.

(d) The appendage is so constructed that its removal or destruction will not reduce the structural stability or fire resistive integrity of the building.

(e) The vertical surface area of the combustible portions of the appendage, including any exterior trim, is not more than ten percent of the total wall area (windows excluded) of the building.

(f) The appendage has a superficial roof area not exceeding one hundred fifty square feet and is included in the area limitations of table 4-1 and 4-2 for the entire building.

(g) The appendage is not higher than the sills of the second story windows.

(h) The roof of the appendage has a class A roof covering.

(i) The soffit or ceiling covering the combustible roof framing of the appendage has a one hour fire-resistance rating.

(j) The requirements of subdivisions (h) and (i) of this section shall not apply in the case of roofs or awnings over patios or entrance platforms where the area of vertical exposure of the patios or platforms to the outdoors is equal to at least that of the patio or platform area. (a) Limitations of use. Every roof placed on a building shall be covered with class A or B roof covering, except class C roof coverings may be placed on buildings classified in occupancy group J when not more than three stories or forty feet in height, and on buildings permitted by this code to be of class II-D or II-E construction. The use of roofing having no rating is prohibited, except for replacement to the extent of twenty-five percent of the roof area in any twelve month period.

(b) Combustible roof decking. Unless attached directly to noncombustible framework, all roof coverings shall be applied to a closely fitted deck; except that wood shingles, to the extent permitted in subdivision (a) of this section, may be applied to wood slats.

(c) Roof insulation. Combustible roof insulation may be applied on top of roof decking or slab provided that it is protected with the roof covering applied directly thereto.

CHAPTER 1 BUILDING CODE

SUBCHAPTER 5 FIRE PROTECTION CONSTRUCTION REQUIREMENTS

ARTICLE 4 PREVENTION OF EXTERIOR FIRE SPREAD

§ 27-338 Roof structures.

(a) Construction of penthouses. Enclosure walls of penthouses shall comply with the requirements for exterior walls of table 3-4 for the construction class of the building on which they are erected. Roofs of penthouses shall comply with the requirements for roof construction of table 3-4 and section 27-337 of article five of subchapter six of this chapter.

(b) Construction of bulkheads. Bulkheads shall be constructed of noncombustible materials having a one hour fire-resistance rating, except that in buildings of construction class II-E, they may be constructed of combustible materials having a one hour fire-resistance rating.

(c) Scuttles. Scuttles shall be constructed of noncombustible materials, or of combustible materials covered on the top, sides, and edges with noncombustible materials.

(d) Skylights. For the purposes of this section, the term "skylight" shall be construed to include the sash, frames, and glazing of roof monitors and sawtooth roofs.

(1) SASH AND FRAMES. Skylights that are inclined at less than sixty degrees to the horizontal on all buildings of other than construction classes II-D and II-E, shall have sash and frames constructed of noncombustible materials, and their glazing shall be as prescribed in paragraph two of this subdivision. Skylights that are inclined at greater than sixty degrees to the horizontal shall have sash and frames constructed as required for windows, and their glazing shall be as required for windows. Glass, glass blocks, or plastic used in skylights shall be designed and constructed to withstand the same live loads as required for roofs plus any concentrated live loads required herein.

(2) GLAZING. a. Skylights over stairways and shafts. Skylights placed over stairways and shafts shall be glazed with plain glass not more than one-eighth inch thick or unreinforced plastic not more than three-sixteenths of an inch thick.

b. Skylights over other spaces. Skylights in all locations other than over stairways and shafts shall be glazed with one-quarter inch wired glass, plain glass, glass block, or plastic of material and installation complying with subparagraph c of this paragraph.

c. Plastic. Plastic used for the glazing of skylights other than skylights over stairways and shafts shall be slow burning plastic. The aggregate area of skylight openings, other than over stairways and shafts, shall not exceed thirty-nine per cent of the floor area of any room or space sheltered by the roof in which they are located. The edges of plastic, if exposed, shall be protected by metal or other noncombustible material. Skylights in which plastic is used, if on roofs having a pitch of twenty degrees to the horizontal or less, shall be constructed in accordance with the following:

1. The area within the curbs of each skylight shall not exceed five square feet, except that this area may be of any size, limited only by other provisions of this section,if the opening is protected on all sides by a noncombustible railing thirty-six inches in height complying with the provisions of section 27-558 of article three of subchapter nine of this chapter for railings; or the skylight is subdivided into areas of five square feet or less by noncombustible muntins or bars capable of supporting a live load of three hundred pounds at any point; or a noncombustible screen or grid capable of supporting a load of three hundred pounds over any one foot by two foot area as provided above, integral with, or not more than three feet below the skylight, with the wire or bars spaced into areas of five square feet or less (if above the roof, the wires shall be of corrosion resistive metal).

2. There shall be a minimum clear distance of three feet between skylights.

(3) Separation of skylights from structures. There shall be at least ten feet between a plain glass or plastic skylight and any door in a stair bulkhead located above the roof in which the skylight is located, and at least ten feet between such a skylight and any opening in any roof structure or other wall above the roof not equipped with an opening protective. On buildings up to one hundred feet in height there shall be at least ten feet from such a skylight to the outside face of an exterior wall facing on a frontage space.

(4) SCREENS. Plain glass skylights shall be protected on their underside by noncombustible screens having a mesh not smaller than three-quarters of an inch by three-quarters of an inch nor larger than one inch by one inch of at least No. 12 B. & S. gauge wires. The screen shall be installed tight against the roof opening or shall project on all sides for a distance of not less than the distance of the screen below the glass, and shall be of such material and construction so as to support a load of three hundred pounds over any one foot by two foot area. The provisions for wire glass or screen protection shall not apply to glass block skylights.

(e) Greenhouses. Greenhouses on the roofs of buildings other than buildings of construction class II-D or II-E shall be constructed of noncombustible framework and shall be glazed with plain or wire glass, or slow burning plastic. The floors of greenhouses shall be constructed at least as required for roof construction in table 3-4 for the construction class of the building on which it is located.

(f) Construction of sloping roofs. Roofs having a slope of more than sixty degrees to the horizontal shall be constructed of material having the same fire-resistance rating as required for an exterior non-bearing wall of the building of which it is a part. When the slope is sixty degrees or less to the horizontal, the sloping roof shall be constructed as required for the roof of the building. Where the back of a false mansard is exposed to the outdoors, the back shall be covered with noncombustible material or with roof coverings as required for the roof of the building.

(g) Dormers. Roofs of dormers shall be of the same type of construction and have roof covering of the same class as required for the roof of the building on which they are located. The walls of dormers shall be constructed of materials having the same fire resistance rating as required for non-bearing exterior walls of the building on which they are located; except that in buildings of construction classes II-A, II-B, II-C, and II-D, the walls may be constructed of combustible framing provided that the outside face of the framing is protected with noncombustible sheathing and the aggregate area of all such dormer walls, including openings therein, does not exceed twenty percent of the roof area.

(h) Water tanks.

(1) SUPPORTS. All water tanks placed in or on a building and having a capacity of more than five hundred gallons shall be supported on noncombustible walls or framing. When such tank is located within the building, above the lowest story, its framing shall be fire protected as required for columns supporting one floor or the tank shall be located within a room or space that is enclosed with construction having a fire-resistance rating equivalent to that otherwise required for the protection of the framing.

(i) Cooling towers. Cooling towers shall be constructed of noncombustible materials, except as follows:

(1) Outside the fire districts, when located on a building three stories or forty feet in height or less of construction group I, cooling towers may be constructed of combustible materials provided they are not more than fifteen feet high and do not exceed seven hundred fifty square feet in area.

(2) Outside the fire districts, when located on the ground and not exceeding three stories or forty feet in height or one thousand five hundred square feet in area, cooling towers may be constructed of combustible material provided they are protected by a noncombustible screen, fence, or wall at least twenty feet from the tower and at least seven feet high.

(3) Filling and drift eliminators may be of combustible materials if the towers are provided with automatic sprinkler protection complying with the construction provisions of subchapter seventeen.

(4) Filling and drift eliminators may be of combustible materials where the towers are not provided with automatic sprinkler protection, provided all of the following conditions are met:

a. The cooling tower is constructed of noncombustible material;

b. The cooling tower is located on a building in construction group I-A or I-B;

c. The cooling tower and filling and drift eliminators are located at least thirty feet away from any windows or fresh air intakes which are at an elevation above the roof on which the cooling tower is located, whether in the same building or in an adjoining building;

d. The cooling tower is located not less than fifteen feet from the nearest lot line; and

e. The cooling tower is located not less than ten feet from any chimney, except that the distance shall be not less than twenty feet from a chimney venting products of combustion other than from gas or oil fired appliances, whether on the same building or an adjoining building.

(5) In no event shall cooling towers or filling and drift eliminators be constructed of materials that contain asbestos.

(j) Miscellaneous roof structures. The following roof structures may be constructed of combustible material if less than twelve feet high above the roof: antenna supports; flagpoles; clothes drying frames; duckboarding or platforms that do not cover more than twenty per cent of the roof area at that level.

§ 27-339 Fire segregation of occupancies.

(a) Segregation by fire divisions. When different occupancies are to be segregated by fire divisions under the provisions of section 27-240 of subchapter three of this chapter, the occupancies shall be separated from each other, vertically and horizontally, by fire divisions having at least the fire-resistance ratings listed in table 5-2 for the occupancy groups involved. Every building section shall be constructed of elements having at least the fire-resistance rating of a construction class required for the area and height of the building section as listed in tables 4-1 and 4-2.

Key: Fire-resistance ratings are given in hours. For Table 5-1 read above heavy line. For Table 5-2 read below heavy line.

NR means No Requirement.

(b) Segregation by fire separations. When different spaces are to be segregated by fire separations under the provisions of section 27-240 of subchapter three of this chapter, the occupancies shall be separated from each other, vertically and horizontally, by fire separations having at least the fire-resistance ratings listed in table 5-1. In buildings of construction group I, fire separations shall be constructed of noncombustible materials.

Notes for Tables 5-1 and 5-2:

[a] An office, or group of offices, whose use is accessory to an occupancy, and totals four hundred square feet or less in area shall not be required to have a fire separation. Such office, or group of offices, totalling more than four hundred square feet in area shall not be required to have a fire separation if such offices exit directly, without having to pass through the area of the related occupancy.

[b] Counters and backbars for the sale of publications, tobacco products, liquors, or candies, or for making of reservations for travel, car rental, or theatre, or otherwise involving similar business and mercantile activities that are accessory to an occupancy and are limited in area to one hundred square feet, within the area of the occupancy, need not comply with the requirements of this table.

[c] The provisions of this table shall not apply to closets seventy-five square feet or less in area.

[d] Nonresidential kitchens need not be separated by fire separations from adjoining dining spaces, provided:

(1) The cooking equipment is vented directly to the outdoors, and

(2) 2 draft curtain of noncombustible material, at least twenty-four inches down from the ceiling, is provided to separate the cooking facilities from dining spaces, and

(3) Sprinkler heads constructed in accordance with the provisions of subchapter seventeen of this chapter, are provided on the cooking facilities side of the curtain, or any opening between the kitchen and dining space, located within twenty-four inches of the curtain or opening, and spaced not more than forty-eight inches on centers if the opening is more than sixty inches wide. When fire separations are provided double-action doors may be permitted.

[e] Kitchens having a floor area of fifty-nine square feet or less located within dwelling units shall be separated from adjacent spaces by partitions having a fire-resistance rating of at least one hour except for the entrances thereto which need comply with section 27-342 of this article. If doors are provided they may be of wood.

[f] In buildings or spaces classified in occupancy group J-1 or J-2 all partitions in dwelling units located in cellars shall have a minimum fire-resistance rating of one hour.

(c) Compartmentation. Notwithstanding the provisions of table 4-1, in existing office buildings one hundred feet or more in height having air-conditioning and/or mechanical ventilation systems that serve more than the floor on which the equipment is located, unsprinklered floor areas, more than forty feet above curb level, shall be subdivided by fire separations into spaces or compartments of the size required by paragraphs one through five of this subdivision. Floor area shall be defined as the area within exterior walls and excluding any areas enclosing stairs, corridors, elevators and shafts: (1) Unless otherwise provided below, all unsprinklered floor areas shall be segregated by one-hour fire separations into spaces or compartments not to exceed seventy-five hundred square feet.

(2) Where the floor area exceeds ten thousand square feet, at least one of the subdividing fire separations shall be of two-hour fire-resistive construction, creating areas of refuge, complying with section 27-372 of article five of subchapter six of this code except that the requirement for an elevator in each area shall not apply.

(3) The floor area or any subdivided area may be increased to not more than fifteen thousand square feet if complete area protection by approved devices for the detection of products of combustion other than heat is provided within such increased area and provided further than at least one of the subdividing fire separations shall be of two-hour fireresistive construction where the floor area exceeds fifteen thousand square feet, creating areas of refuge in the same manner and under the same conditions as provided in two of this subdivision. The activation of any such detectors shall have the same effect as provided in subdivision (f) of section 27-972 of article five of subchapter seventeen of this code.

(4) In existing buildings, existing fire separations of one-hour fire-resistive construction may be accepted in lieu of the fire separation of two hour fire-resistive construction providing all other requirements of paragraphs two and three of this subdivision are complied with.

(5) Regardless of the floor area, no subdivision of the floor area shall be required under this subdivision when complete sprinkler protection is provided in accordance with the construction provisions of subchapter seventeen of this chapter.

(6) Existing office buildings one hundred feet or more in height shall comply with the requirements of this subdivision as follows:

a. Whenever an alteration is performed involving partition changes, compliance with this subdivision shall be required in that portion of the building being altered.

b. At least one-third of the total floor area of the building not in compliance with the requirements of this subdivision on February seventh, nineteen hundred seventy-three, shall comply with such requirements on or before December thirteenth, nineteen hundred eighty-one. Complete plans showing such compliance for the phase of the work to be done shall be filed with, and a permit secured from, the commissioner on or before September thirteenth, nineteen hundred eighty.

c. At least two-thirds of the total floor area of the building not in compliance with the requirements of this subdivision on February seventh, nineteen hundred seventy-three, shall comply with such requirements on or before August seventh, nineteen hundred eighty-four.

d. Full compliance shall be provided on or before February seventh, nineteen hundred eighty-eight.

(7) In existing office buildings one hundred feet or more in height where compliance would cause practical difficulty or undue hardship, the commissioner may waive or modify the requirements of paragraphs one through five of this subdivision and accept alternatives fulfilling the intent of these requirements. Where compliance with the time requirements of paragraph six of this subdivision would cause undue hardship, the commissioner, with the approval of the fire commissioner, may extend the time for compliance, in accordance with rules and regulations to be promulgated. Before such application for a time extension shall be considered all required applications and plans must be filed and approved, permits obtained and a good faith effort towards completion of the work shall have been made.

§ 27-340 Fire divisions.

Fire divisions shall be constructed of noncombustible materials or assembly of noncombustible materials to provide the fire-resistance ratings required by table 5-2. Vertical fire divisions shall be continuous between foundation, roof, or horizontal fire divisions, and through any concealed space in floor or roof construction. Horizontal fire divisions shall be continuous between exterior walls and/or vertical fire divisions.

(a) When roof construction is combustible on both sides of a vertical fire division, the vertical fire division shall extend through the roof construction to a height of at least four inches above the high point at the roof framing. Decking shall tightly butt the fire division. Above the decking of roofs that are flatter than twenty degrees to the horizontal, blocking shall be constructed to form cants on both sides of the fire division with slopes not steeper than 1:4. Combustible decking shall not extend over the top of the fire division.

(b) Except as required in subdivision (c) of this section, when roof construction is noncombustible on one or both sides of a vertical fire division, the vertical fire division may terminate at the underside of the noncombustible roof construction provided the junction of the wall and roof construction is made smoke tight.

(c) When a vertical fire division is required by table 5-2 to have a fire-resistance rating of three or four hours, and the roof construction has a fire-resistance rating of less than two hours, the fire division shall extend above the roof construction to form a parapet at least three feet high.

(d) Fire divisions shall be so constructed that the removal or collapse of construction on one side will not endanger the support of construction on the other side.

(e) Fire divisions shall be made smoketight at their junction with exterior walls. In buildings of construction class II-D and II-E, exterior walls shall be constructed of noncombustible materials for a distance of at least eighteen inches on each side of the fire division, or the fire division shall project at least twelve inches through the exterior wall.

(f) Fire divisions may be offset if the construction between the offset divisions, including their supports, has at the same fire-resistance rating as the fire division, with all hollow spaces within the construction firestopped with noncombustible material.

(g) Where combustible members such as joists, beams, or girders bear on, or frame into, vertical fire divisions, such members shall not extend through the wall and shall have at least four inches of solid noncombustible material below, at the sides, and at the ends of each such member.

(h) Chases or recesses shall not be cut into fire divisions so as to reduce their thickness below that required for the fire-resistance rating.

(i) Vertical fire divisions that are hollow shall be firestopped with at least four inches of noncombustible material so as to prevent passage of flame, smoke, or hot gases through the hollow spaces to the story above or below, or to hollow spaces within connecting floor or roof construction.

§ 27-342 Openings in fire divisions and separations.

Openings in fire divisions and fire separations that are required to have a fire-resistance rating, shall be protected by opening protectives having the fire-resistance ratings prescribed in table 5-3, shall not exceed the limits in size and area herein prescribed, and shall comply with the provisions of section 27-329 of article three of this subchapter. Door and other openings in enclosures of vertical exits, exit passageways, corridors, and places of assembly shall be protected by opening protectives as required by the provisions of subchapters six and eight of this chapter. When such enclosures also serve as fire divisions or fire separations, openings therein shall be protected as required by the provisions of this subchapter.

(a) Size of opening. In buildings that are not sprinklered no opening through a fire division or fire separation shall exceed one hundred twenty square feet in area, with no dimension greater than twelve feet, and the aggregate width of all openings at any level shall not exceed twenty-five percent of the length of the wall. Where the areas on both sides of a fire division or fire separation are sprinklered in accordance with the construction provisions of subchapter seventeen of this chapter, the size of the opening may be one hundred fifty square feet in area, with no dimension greater than fifteen feet. In buildings fully sprinklered in compliance with the provisions of subchapter seventeen of this chapter, the size and aggregate width of openings through fire divisions or fire separations shall be unlimited. When a fire division or fire separation serves as a horizontal exit also, it shall have no opening other than door openings not exceeding fifty-six square feet in area, the aggregate width of all openings at any level shall not exceed twenty-five percent of the length of the wall, and shall comply with the provisions of section 27-373 of article five of subchapter six of this chapter.

(b) Conveyor openings. Where fire doors or shutters are impractical for the protection of conveyor openings in fire divisions or fire separations, a system of water spray nozzles may be used. At least four nozzles shall be provided on each side of the opening so as to give complete coverage of the opening. Nozzles shall be controlled by an automatic valve actuated by a heat detector. Nozzles shall be located at an angle not more than thirty degrees between the centerline of nozzle discharge and a line perpendicular to the plane of the opening. The water discharge rate shall be at least three gallons per square foot per minute. When conveyor openings through floors are protected by this method, the openings shall also be provided with a noncombustible enclosure constructed around the conveyor from the floor up to or slightly beyond the spray nozzles, and draft curtains shall be provided extending twenty-four inches below and around the floor opening.

§ 27-343 Ducts, pipes and conduits through rated construction.

(a) Installation of ducts which pass through construction required to have a fire-resistance rating shall comply with the requirements of subchapter thirteen, provided that, notwithstanding the provisions of subchapter thirteen or reference standard RS 13-1, noncombustible ducts which pass through construction required to have a fire-resistance rating of one hour must be provided with fire dampers unless:

(1) The building is classified in occupancy group C, E, or H-2; and

(2) Complete sprinkler protection is provided for the floor in accordance with subchapter seventeen; or

(3) The openings for the ventilation ducts do not exceed three square feet in area; or

(4) The duct is protected on both sides of the partition for a distance equal to the maximum duct dimension by a sleeve affording one hour fire separation for such horizontal distance.

(b) Noncombustible pipes and conduits. Noncombustible pipes and conduits may pass through construction required to have a fire-resistance rating provided that the space between the pipe or conduit and its sleeve or opening does not exceed one-half inch and is completely packed with mineral wool or equivalent noncombustible material and is closed off by close-fitting metal escutcheons on both sides of the construction; and provided further that the aggregate net area of such openings does not exceed twenty-five square inches in any one hundred square feet of wall or floor area (excluding the areas of openings for sleeves which are firestopped in conformance with this section and section 27-345).

(c) Openings for passage of pipe and ducts whose aggregate net area exceeds twenty-five square inches in any one hundred square feet of wall or floor area (excluding opening for sleeves which are firestopped in conformance with this section and section 27-345) may pierce constructions required to have a fire-resistance rating only when the type of construction to be used has been tested with such types of facilities installed in place and the proportionate area of openings of such facilities to be installed in the construction does not exceed the proportionate area of openings in the assembly tested, and provided no opening is larger than that in the assembly tested. Protection of such openings shall be the same as provided in the test. All openings through hollow fire rated construction shall be sleeved with sheet metal least No. 14 U.S. std. gage thick.

(d) The installation and proper functioning of required fire dampers shall be subject to the controlled inspection requirements of section 27-132 of this code, except that it shall not be required that the architect or engineer be in the employ of the owner.

CHAPTER 1 BUILDING CODE

SUBCHAPTER 5 FIRE PROTECTION CONSTRUCTION REQUIREMENTS

ARTICLE 5 PREVENTION OF INTERIOR FIRE SPREAD

§ 27-344 Shafts.

The requirements of this section shall apply to all shafts, except that floor openings accommodating a slide pole in a fire house and openings other than for ventilation, chimneys or gas vents in buildings three stories or less in height classified in occupancy group J-3 shall be exempt from these requirements, and except as more restrictive requirements may be specified for chimneys and gas vents in subchapter fifteen of this chapter, stairway enclosures in subchapter six, duct enclosures in subchapter thirteen, elevator, escalator, and dumbwaiter enclosures in subchapter eighteen of this chapter, and except as permitted in reference standard RS 5-18.

(a) Construction. Shafts shall be enclosed with materials having at least fire-resistance rating required by table 3-4. A shaft that serves the topmost story of a building shall extend through the roof at least thirty-six inches above any combustible roof construction. Where the roof construction is of noncombustible materials, the shaft shall extend through any concealed space within the roof construction and may terminate at the underside of the roof deck. Pipes and ducts penetrating shaft construction shall comply with the requirements of section 27-343 of this article.

(b) Combustible Contents. Shafts shall be kept free of bookstacks or other combustible contents except for stair construction as permitted under subchapter six of this chapter, duct and pipe coverings as permitted under subchapters thirteen and sixteen, and elevator car enclosures as permitted under subchapter eighteen of this chapter.

(c) Openings in shafts. All shaft openings below the top terminus shall be provided with opening protectives that comply with section 27-329 of this subchapter and table 5-3. In shafts that contain only one opening below the roof terminus, no opening protective need be provided. Openings in elevator and dumbwaiter shafts shall comply only with the requirements of subchapter eighteen of this chapter. Where a window is located in a shaft wall that is an exterior wall and is ten stories or less above grade or three stories or less above a roof, it shall be protected against entrance by a permanently secured grille consisting of 5/8 in. dia. bars, 10 in. o. c. vertically, or by a stationary metal sash window having 1/8 in. thick solid section steel muntins, 8 in. o. c. one way. This protection shall not be required in stair shafts where there is a stair landing or platform not more than three feet directly below the window sill.

(d) Smoke venting of closed shafts. All closed shafts having an area exceeding four square feet, other than elevator or dumbwaiter shafts, shall be provided with a smoke vent having an area of at least three and one-half percent of the maximum shaft area at any floor, but in no event less than one-half square foot. Elevator and dumbwaiter shaft vents shall comply with the requirements of subchapter eighteen of this chapter. Smoke vents may be windows, louvers, skylights, vent ducts, or similar devices. Vent ducts shall be enclosed by construction having the same fire resistance rating as required for the shaft enclosure. Such vent ducts shall extend vertically, diagonally, or horizontally as provided below.

(1) Through any roof of the building provided the vent opening is at least ten feet from any window, door, outside stairway, or interior lot line. This dimension may be reduced to five feet if the vent duct is extended up to at at least the level of the top of the window or door. A vent that is required to extend above a roof shall extend at least eight inches above a roof assembly constructed of noncombustible materials, and at least thirty-six inches above a roof assembly constructed of combustible materials that are within a horizontal distance of ten feet.

(2) Through an exterior wall of the building, provided there are no openings in the wall within a distance of thirty feet vertically above the vent opening, and within five feet either side of the vent opening. When a side of a shaft is an exterior wall or a wall of a roof bulkhead, the required vent may be a louver or window. Any window or louver located in a shaft wall above a roof constructed of combustible materials shall have its sill at least thirty-six inches above the roof.

(e) Terminus of shaft vents. Of the total required vent area for shafts, at least one-third shall be clear opening to the outdoors, either in the form of fixed louvers, ridge vents, or hooded or goosenecked openings. In lieu thereof, skylights or trap doors may be used if constructed and arranged to open automatically by fusible link or other mechanical device when subjected to a temperature of one hundred sixty degrees Fahrenheit or to a rapid rise in temperature at a rate of fifteen to twenty degrees Fahrenheit per minute. The remaining portion of the required vent area may be a window or skylight glazed with plain glass not more than one-eighth inch thick or slow burning plastic.

(f) Machine rooms. Any compartment containing machinery that communicates with a shaft enclosure shall comply with all requirements for shafts. The required louver or glazing shall not be located in any door leading into such compartment.

SUBCHAPTER 5 FIRE PROTECTION CONSTRUCTION REQUIREMENTS

ARTICLE 5 PREVENTION OF INTERIOR FIRE SPREAD

§ 27-345 Firestopping.

Concealed spaces within partitions, walls, floors, roofs, stairs, furring, pipe spaces, column enclosures, etc. that would permit passage of flame, smoke, fumes, or hot gases from one floor to another floor or roof space, or from one concealed area to another, shall be firestopped to form an effective draft barrier, or shall be filled with noncombustible material in accordance with the requirements of this section. Firestopping shall not be required where a concealed space is sprinklered in accordance with the construction provisions of subchapter seventeen of this chapter, or is constructed as a shaft.

(a) Firestopping materials. In buildings of construction group I, firestopping or fill shall be of noncombustible material that can be shaped, fitted, and permanently secured in position. In buildings of construction group II, firestopping may be of combustible material consisting of wood not less than two inches nominal thickness with tight joints, two layers of one inch nominal thickness assembled so that there are no through joints or of one-half inch exterior type plywood with joints backed, except that noncombustible firestopping shall be used in concealed spaces of fire divisions and where in contact with fireplaces, flues, and chimneys. Noncombustible firestopping may be masonry set in mortar, concrete, three-quarter inch thick mortar or plaster on noncombustible lath, plasterboard at least three-eighths of an inch thick, fire-rated wallboard at least five-eighths of an inch thick, sheet metal at least No. 14 U.S.

std. gage thick, solid web metal structural members, asbestos-cement board at least one-quarter of an inch thick, or equivalent rigid noncombustible material. Mineral, slag, or rockwool may be used for firestopping when compacted to a density of at least three and one-half pounds per cubic foot into a confined space of least dimension not more than one-third its second dimension.

(1) The performance of through-penetration fire stops shall be measured and specified according to reference standard RS 5-19.

(2) The commissioner may accept reference standard RS 5-19 test data results from an independent laboratory acceptable to the commissioner pursuant to subdivision (c) of section 27-131, when such data is submitted by a registered architect or licensed professional engineer to justify the usage of fire stops or the details of their installation not specified herein.

(b) Hollow partitions and furred spaces. All hollow partitions and furred out spaces shall be firestopped at each floor level. Firestops shall be the full thickness of the hollow space or furred out space.

(c) Stairs. Concealed spaces within stair construction shall be firestopped between stringers at the top and bottom of each flight of stairs so as not to communicate with concealed spaces in the floor, roof or intermediate landing construction.

(d) Ceiling spaces. Floor or roof assemblies required to have a fireresistance rating shall have any concealed spaces therein firestopped in accordance with section 27-327 of this subchapter.

(e) Exterior cornices. Exterior cornices and eaves, constructed of combustible materials or with combustible framing, shall be firestopped at the ends of fire divisions and party walls, and at maximum intervals of twenty feet. If not continuous, they shall have closed ends and at least four inches separation between adjoining sections.

(f) Trim and finish. Where combustible trim and finish is permitted all hollow spaces shall be firestopped at ten foot intervals or shall be solidly filled with noncombustible materials.

(g) Duct and pipe spaces. Ducts and pipes enclosed in construction that does not meet the requirements of this code for shaft construction shall be firestopped at every floor level.

(h) Inspection of firestopping. The installation of all required firestopping shall be subject to the controlled inspection requirements of section 27-132 of article seven of subchapter one of this chapter, except that the architect or engineer need not be retained by the owner. Firestopping shall not be concealed from view until inspected.

Folding partitions shall not be used as partitions that are required by this code to have a fire-resistance rating.

(a) Construction group I. In buildings of construction group I, folding partitions may be used if they are constructed of noncombustible materials, or of fire retardant treated wood, or are constructed of noncombustible frame covered with fabric that has a class A interior finish rating. Where partitions of combustible materials are permitted by section 27-346 of this article, folding partitions may also be constructed of combustible materials. Where doors constructed of materials having a class C interior finish rating are permitted by section 27-348 of this article, folding doors may be constructed of combustible materials.

(b) Construction group II. In buildings of construction group II, folding partitions may be constructed of combustible materials, surfaced with interior finish materials meeting the requirements of section 27-348 of this article.

CHAPTER 1 BUILDING CODE

SUBCHAPTER 5 FIRE PROTECTION CONSTRUCTION REQUIREMENTS

ARTICLE 5 PREVENTION OF INTERIOR FIRE SPREAD

§ 27-348 Interior finish.

(a) Definition. For the purposes of this section, interior finish shall mean those materials that form the exposed interior surfaces of a building and that are part of or affixed to walls, fixed or folding partitions, ceilings, and other construction elements.

(b) Classification. Interior finish materials shall be classified in accordance with the surface flame-spread rating obtained as prescribed in the provisions of reference standard RS 5-5. Where an interior finish material is comprised of two or more materials laminated, glued, nailed, or otherwise secured together, the test rating for flame spread shall be based upon the composite of the materials in the form in which it will be used in construction. Interior finish materials shall be grouped in the following classes, in accordance with their surface flame spread characteristics:

Interior Finish Class	Flame-Spread Rating
A	0 to 25
B	26 to 75

C	76 to 225
D	Over 225

(c) Requirements. Interior finishes and exposed structural or construction materials shall have a flame-spread rating not greater than that designated by the class prescribed for the various occupancy groups in which they are used, as listed in table 5-4. Exceptions to these requirements are:

(1) Finish flooring and floor coverings, which are subject to the requrements of section 27-351.

(2) Wall coverings and coatings that are less than 0.036 in total thickness, when applied directly to a noncombustible, or fire-retardant treated wood, substrate.

(3) Exposed structural members and planking in buildings of class II-A construction, which may be left exposed in any room or space, except in exits.

(4) Twenty per cent (20%) of the aggregate wall and ceiling area of any room, space, or corridor required to have a class A or B rating may be finished with materials having a class C rating. This allowance shall include the area of doors, folding partitions, windows, glazing, skylights, luminous ceilings, trim, bases, chair rails, panels, moldings, etc. This exception shall not operate as a waiver of other requirements of this code relating to opening protectives.

(5) When a sprinkler system is provided in any room or space, and is installed in compliance with the construction provisions of subchapter seventeen of this chapter, interior finish materials may be one class higher in flame-spread rating than required by tables 5-4.

(d) Smoke density. No material shall be used for interior finish in the following locations if the material develops smoke in greater density than the rating shown, based upon a test conducted in accordance with the provisions of reference standard RS 5-5. Materials used for interior finish that cover not more than twenty percent of the aggregate wall and ceiling area of any room, space, or corridor shall be exempt from the above requirements.

[See tabular material in printed version]

(e) Toxicity. No material shall be used in any interior location that, upon exposure to fire will produce products of decomposition or combustion that are more toxic in point of concentration than those given off by wood or paper when decomposing or burning under comparable conditions.

(f) Attachment of interior finish.

(1) To be credited with the same rating, interior finish materials that were applied to a substrate when tested shall be applied at the building to an equivalent substrate.

(2) Interior finish materials shall be cemented or otherwise secured in place in the same manner and with materials equivalent to those used in flame-spread tests conducted in accordance with subdivision (b) of this section for the applicable classification.

(3) Where walls, ceilings, partitions, or other construction elements are required to have a fire-resistance rating or are required to be constructed of noncombustible materials, and the interior finish is secured to studs or furring, the surface of the interior finish facing the concealed space shall either have a class A rating, shall be applied to a substrate that has a class A rating, or shall have the concealed space completely filled with noncombustible material.

Notes For Table 5-4:

[a]In determining the applicable requirements for rooms or enclosed spaces, the occupancy group classification of the room or enclosed space shall be the governing factor, regardless of the occupancy group classification of the building. For the purposes of this table, the area of a room shall be that floor area contained within enclosing construction in which interior doors or other interior openings represent not more than ten percent of the area of the enclosing construction. Interior doors or windows that are constructed of noncombustible materials and that are self-closing or automatic may be ignored in computing door or opening area. Rooms or spaces that have unprotected openings constituting more than ten percent of the area of enclosing construction shall not be considered as a room. Interior finish requirements for rooms are based upon rooms being enclosed in ceiling high partitions. Partitions, to be considered ceiling high, shall extend up to the floor or roof construction above or to a ceiling having at least a three-quarter hour fire-resistance rating. Partitions that do not comply with this requirement shall not be considered as enclosing the spaces, and the rooms or spaces on both sides thereof shall be considered as one.

[b]Rooms or spaces through which it is necessary for occupants of an adjacent room to pass in order to reach the only exit shall, for the purposes of this table, be considered as corridors. Where used in corridors, class B finish material shall not extend more than fifty feet between separations of class A finish material that are at least two feet wide.

[c] On the street floor of one-story buildings in construction group II, ceilings, beams, trusses, etc. that are twenty feet or more in height from the floor to their lowest part, may have a class C finish.

[d] Class C interior finish may be used in offices, or groups of offices, whose use is accessory to an occupancy, provided such offices are separated from the occupancy, by construction having at least a two hour fire-resistance rating.

[e] Class C interior finish may be used in the residential rooms of one- and two-story motels when there is a direct exit from each room to the exterior.

[f] Interior finish when used in the following spaces shall be at least class B:

(1) Kitchens, cooking spaces, and pantries in buildings classified in occupancy groups other than J-2 and J-3.

(2) Repair and maintenance rooms.

(3) Boiler rooms and incinerator combustion rooms.

§ 27-350 Ceiling construction.

Ceilings that are to be suspended below floor or roof construction by means of a framing system shall consist of supporting hangers, carrying channels and a supporting grid complying with reference standard RS 5-16 or shall have supporting hangers and carrying channels and a supporting grid that can be demonstrated to the satisfaction of the commissioner to be of strength adequate to support the ceiling material. The hangers and supporting grid shall be of noncombustible materials. In buildings of construction group II, every other hanger supported from wood members shall be attached by a through bolt or clinched through nail. Where, in table 3-4, floor or roof construction is required to have a fire-resistance rating, a ceiling having no fire-resistance rating may be suspended below the fire-resistance construction.

(a) Luminous ceilings. For the purpose of this section, a luminous ceiling shall be defined as a ceiling consisting of translucent, louvered, egg-crated, mesh, or similar light-diffusing material suspended from the ceiling or structural framework. A suspended ceiling containing less than twenty square feet of translucent, louvered, egg-crated, mesh, or similar material in any one hundred square feet of ceiling area shall not be considered a luminous ceiling, and shall be constructed and installed in accordance with department of buildings requirements for lighting fixtures. Luminous ceilings shall, in addition to the requirements of this section, conform to all of the requirements of section 27-348 of this article for interior finish.

(1) LUMINOUS CEILINGS OF NONCOMBUSTIBLE MATERIAL. Luminous ceilings constructed of glass and/or metal or other noncombustible materials may be used in any location.

a. Glass used in luminous ceilings, unless it is wire glass or heat-resistant glass as specified below, shall not weigh more than two psf, nor shall any pane be larger than eight square feet in area. If glass used in luminous ceilings is wire glass, or is heat resistant by reason of having a maximum coefficient of expansion of 36 x 10-7 in. per in. per degree C, the glass may be of any weight and any size, limited only by considerations of structural safety.

b. Luminous ceilings installed below sprinkler heads shall be constructed of a type of noncombustible louver, mesh, or other open material that will not impede the flow of water from the sprinkler heads over the intended area of coverage. The luminous ceiling shall be constructed so as to provide access to all heads and valves.

(2) LUMINOUS CEILINGS OF COMBUSTIBLE MATERIAL. Luminous ceilings constructed of combustible materials shall not be installed in:

a. Any exit or corridor.

b. Any room classified in occupancy group H, or any room leading therefrom as defined in note b of table 5-4.

c. Any room in which the net floor area per occupant is twenty square feet or less, or any room leading therefrom as defined in note b of table 5-4.

d. Luminous ceilings constructed elsewhere than in the spaces listed in subparagraphs a, b, and c above shall be exempt from the provisions of section 27-348 of this article, provided that:

1. The panels of such ceilings are of slow-burning plastic;

2. The panels are installed above or below sprinklers that are constructed in accordance with the provisions of subchapter seventeen of this chapter;

3. No individual plastic panel exceeds ten feet in maximum dimension. Where installed below sprinkler heads, the plastic shall be a material that will fall from its mounting at a temperature at least fifteen degrees lower than the temperature at which the sprinkler heads are designed to operate or are constructed of open material which will not impede the flow of water from the sprinkler heads. Luminous ceilings shall be installed so as to provide ready access to all heads and valves.

(b) Suspension of new ceilings below existing suspended ceilings. In construction group I a new ceiling may be suspended below not more than one existing suspended ceiling and shall be supported directly from the ceiling carrying channels adjacent to the hangers. In construction group II, an existing suspended ceiling shall be completely removed before a new ceiling may be suspended.

§ 27-351 Finish flooring and floor coverings.

Finish flooring and floor coverings shall comply with the following: (a) In buildings or spaces classified in occupancy group A and in all exits except those in buildings of construction group II-E, finish flooring shall be of noncombustible material and except as otherwise provided for stairs in subdivision (h) of section 27-375 of article five of subchapter six of this chapter.

(b) Flooring in buildings or spaces of construction group I. Except as provided in subdivision (a) of this section combustible finish flooring may be used in buildings or spaces of construction group I when cemented directly to the top surface of noncombustible floor construction, or attached to combustible or noncombustible sleepers. When attached to sleepers, the space between the noncombustible floor construction and the bottom of flooring shall be solidly filled with noncombustible material to within one-quarter inch of the flooring, or the space between the sleepers under the flooring shall be firestopped into areas of not more than twenty square feet, and provided further that no open spaces shall extend under or through fire divisions or through fire separations. Combustible insulating or sound absorbing boards not more than one-half inch thick and having a flame-spread rating not greater than class C may be used when attached directly to noncombustible floor construction and covered with finish flooring.

(c) Flooring in buildings or spaces of construction group II. Except as provided in subdivision (a) of this section, finish flooring in buildings or spaces of construction group II may be of combustible material.

(d) Floor coverings.

(1) Exits. Where exits are required under any provision of this code, carpets and carpet assemblies shall not be installed in such exits, except that wool carpeting may be installed in lobby areas, exit passageways and convenience stairs.

(2) Flammability requirements. The requirements of this subdivision shall apply to carpets and carpet assemblies only when used as a floor covering (for requirements pertaining to carpets and carpet assemblies used as interior finishes, see section 27-348 of this article). For purposes of this subdivision, carpeting assemblies shall include the carpet, its underlay, and adhesives which when tested as a composite shall be representative of the proposed installation.

a. Pill test. All carpets and underlayments shall pass a methanine pill test in accordance with the requirements of reference standard RS 5-20.

b. Critical radiant flux test. Carpets and carpet assemblies shall be tested by the method for critical radiant flux in accordance with the requirements of reference standard RS 5-20. The time frame for such test shall be at least a fifteen minute exposure.

1. Carpets and carpet assemblies representative of the actual installation on floors of corridors, shall have a minimum critical radiant flux of 0.5 watts per square centimeter (W/cm).

2. Carpets and carpet assemblies representative of the actual installation on floors of general areas shall have a minimum critical radiant flux of 0.4 W/cm.

c. Smoke developed ratings. Carpets and carpet assemblies representative of the actual installation on floors of corridors or general areas shall be tested for smoke developed ratings in accordance with the requirements of reference standard RS 5-20. The smoke developed ratings in either the flaming or no-flaming mode shall not exceed three hundred within the first four minutes of the test.

d. The manufacturer of the carpets and carpet assemblies shall submit a certificate from an independent laboratory acceptable to the commissioner pursuant to section 27-131, showing the complete test data results, prior to final acceptance. The certification shall state that the material is treated for fire resistance and shall indicate the service life of the treatment or that the material is inherently fire resistant by virtue of its construction, chemical properties and/or composition. Materials which are not inherently fire resistant may be used only when the certified fire resistant service life exceeds that of the planned service life of the carpets and carpet assemblies with consideration being given to cleaning, traffic, and other conditions of use which may affect the treatment.

Where the effective area of vents are glazed with plain glass or plastic not thicker than one-eighth inch, they need not be provided with automatic opening devices.

(b) Buildings classified in occupancy group E, one hundred feet or more in height, having air-conditioning and/or mechanical ventilation systems that serve more than the floor on which the equipment is located, shall be provided with at least one smoke shaft by means of which smoke and heat shall be mechanically vented to the outdoors as provided in reference standard RS 5-17.

Buildings that are sprinklered throughout shall be exempt from the smoke shaft requirements.

(c) Existing office buildings, one hundred feet or more in height, having air-conditioning and/or mechanical ventilation systems that serve more than the floor on which the equipment is located, shall be provided with at least one smoke shaft by means of which smoke and heat shall be mechanically vented to the outdoors as provided in reference standard RS 5-17, or in lieu of such smoke shaft or shafts, all interior enclosed stairs other than a fire tower or access stairs may be provided with a system of pressurization for fire emergency use.

Such pressurization shall be provided by means of a system or systems as provided in reference standard RS 5-18. Such buildings shall comply with the smoke and heat venting requirements herein on or before September thirteenth, nineteeen hundred eighty-two. Complete plans showing such compliance shall be filed with, and a permit secured from, the commissioner on or before September thirteenth, nineteen hundred eighty.

Existing buildings that are sprinklered throughout shall be exempt from the smoke shaft and stair pressurization requirements.

An existing building which is to be sprinklered throughout shall be exempt from the smoke shaft and stair pressurization requirements under the following conditions:

(1) the installation proceeds in conformance with a schedule acceptable to the commissioner, setting forth the sequence and corresponding time for installation in the various locations. On or before September thirteenth, nineteen hundred eighty such a schedule, as well as complete plans of the installation, shall be filed with, and a permit secured from, the commissioner for the phase of the work to be done as required by paragraph two of this subdivision.

(2) at least one-third of the total floor area of the building, including but not limited to the entrance lobby, corridors and elevator landing areas, is sprinklered on or before December thirteenth, nineteen hundred eighty-one.

(3) at least two-thirds of the total floor area of the building is sprinklered on or before December thirteenth, nineteen hundred eighty-two.

(4) the building is sprinklered throughout on or before December thirteenth, nineteen hundred eighty-three.

Where compliance with the time requirements of this subdivision would cause undue hardship, the commissioner, with the approval of the fire commissioner, may extend the time for compliance, in accordance with rules and regulations to be promulgated. Before such application for a time extension shall be considered all required applications and plans must be filed and approved, permits obtained and a good faith effort towards completion of the work shall have been made.

§ 27-353.2 Smoke protection for elevators in E occupancies.

For an elevator in a high rise building where such elevator serves four or more stories that contain space classified in occupancy Group E (office space), inclusive of any lobby or entry level, such elevator shall meet the following requirements at every level served by such elevator (i) for such buildings erected pursuant to new building applications filed on or after the effective date of this section, or (ii) where two or more new elevator shafts are installed in such buildings in existence on the effective date of this section:

(a) Elevator vestibule required. At every floor above the main entrance floor where the fire command station is located, all elevators shall open into an enclosed elevator vestibule. The elevator vestibule shall be separated from the building occupancy by smoke barriers extending from floor slab to floor slab.

(b) Permitted penetrations. Penetrations in addition to those permitted in section 27-353.3 (smoke barrier) shall be provided with smoke dampers as defined in reference standard RS 13-1, except that a package pass through or communication opening not exceeding one square foot in area need not be provided with smoke dampers.

(c) Access to exits. Access to an exit on any floor through the enclosed elevator vestibule shall be permitted if the occupied areas on that floor have access to at least one other required exit that does not require passing through the elevator vestibule.

(d) On floors with a floor area of less than twenty-five hundred square feet, the commissioner may accept an alternative design or construction method that accomplishes the purposes of this section, or, if the commissioner determines that compliance with this section is impracticable in whole or in part, the commissioner may authorize an exemption from the requirements of this section.

ARTICLE 2 DETERMINATION OF EXIT REQUIREMENTS

§ 27-357 Exit requirements.

The determination of exit requirements for a building shall be based upon the occupancy group classification of the building, the number of occupants, the floor area, the travel distance to an exit, and the capacity of the exits, as provided in table 6-1 and herein. Every floor of a building shall be provided with exit facilities for its occupant load. The occupant loads of floors shall not be cumulative for the purpose of designing vertical exits, except where one floor is used by another as a means of egress. Vertical exits provided from any floor above grade may serve simultaneously all floors above grade, and vertical exits provided from any floor below grade may serve simultaneously all floors below grade.

(a) Mixed occupancy. When a building is classified in more than one occupancy group in accordance with the provisions of section 27-239 of article two of subchapter three of this chapter, the exit requirements for the entire building shall be determined on the basis of the occupancy group having the strictest exit requirements, or the exit requirements for each building section shall be determined separately.

(b) Incidental occupancies. When a building contains incidental occupancies classified in occupancy groups other than that under which the building is classified, the exit requirements for the floor on which such occupancies occur shall be based upon those of the occupancy group under which the building is classified; but the access and exit requirements for the incidental occupancy shall be based upon the occupancy group classification of the incidental occupancy.

(c) Multiple occupancy or use. Where a building, floor, or space is used for multiple purposes involving different activities at different times, that occupancy involving the greatest number of occupants shall be used in determining the exit requirements.

(d) Building access.-All buildings classified in other than occupancy groups A, mechanical and electrical equipment rooms and boiler and furnace rooms of D-2 or J-3 shall have at least one primary entrance accessible to and usable by individuals who use wheelchairs. Such entrance shall provide access to a level that makes elevators available in buildings where elevators are provided. Where ramps are used to comply with this requirement, they shall have a slope not greater than one in twelve and shall otherwise conform to the provisions of section 27-377 and reference standard RS 4-6.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. The Deputy Commissioner of the Department of Housing and Buildings did not have the power to order the owner of a lodging house to erect fire-retarding stairways and ceilings and to put a stairway and bulkhead to the roof of the premises where the premises were erected prior to 1901 (the time of adoption of the old tenement house law) and a certificate of occupancy, issued in 1921, was never revoked. The work involved structural changes which an administrative officer may order only when authorized by a specific statute.-Matter of Lyons v. Prince, 257 App. Div. 202, 12 N.Y.S. 2d 466 [1939].

ARTICLE 2 DETERMINATION OF EXIT REQUIREMENTS

§ 27-358 Occupant load.

The number of occupants for whom exit facilities shall be provided shall be established either (1) by the actual number of occupants for whom each occupied space, floor, or building, as the case may be, is designed, or (2) by using the appropriate occupant-area ratios from table 6-2, whichever is larger. The occupant load of any space shall include the occupant load of all spaces that discharge through it in order to gain access to an exit.

[See tabular material in printed version]

Notes:

C-capacity of all passenger vehicles that can be unloaded simultaneously.

D-designed number of seats or occupants.

(a) Unlisted occupancies. Where data regarding the sq. ft. per person for an occupancy is not listed in table 6-2, the occupant load shall be established by an architect or engineer, subject to the approval of the commissioner.

(b) Modifications.

(1) When the actual occupant load of any space will be significantly lower than that listed in table 6-2, the commissioner may establish a lower basis for the determination of the occupant load.

(2) When a building existing on December sixth, nineteen hundred sixty-eight is altered or changed in occupancy or use so as to require enlarged exit facilities, the commissioner may authorize the alteration or change in occupancy or use without an enlargement of exit facilities, provided the occupant load is limited to that accommodated by the existing exit facilities as determined by the provisions of this code, and the building or space is posted accordingly with a sign. Such signs shall be at least twelve inches in width and sixteen inches in height. The lettering shall be red on a white background. The letters shall be not less than one inch high and the numerals not less than one and onequarter inches high.

(c) Nonsimultaneous occupancy. The occupant load of toilets, locker rooms, meeting rooms, storage rooms, employee cafeterias, and similar rooms or spaces that are not occupied at the same time as other rooms or spaces on the same floor of a building, may be omitted from the occupant load calculation of the floor on which they are located to the extent that such spaces serve occupied rooms on the same floor.

§ 27-359 Capacity of exits.

The capacity of exits and access facilities shall be measured in units of width of twenty-two inches, and the number of persons per unit of width shall be determined by the occupancy group classification and type of exit as listed in table 6-1. Fractions of a unit of width less than twelve inches shall not be credited. Where twelve inches or more are added to one or more full units of width, onehalf unit of width may be credited. Where computations of total required width give fractional results, the next larger integral number of exit units or integral number plus one-half, shall be used. A fraction less than one-half may be neglected in cases where such fraction constitutes less than ten per cent of the total required number of units. Notwithstanding any of the above computations, no exit or access facility shall be narrower than the minimum width requirements specified in table 6-1, or elsewhere in this code.

(b) Travel distance within dwelling units. In buildings classified in occupancy groups J-1 and J-2, the maximum travel distance from the centerline of a door from any habitable room within a dwelling unit either to the centerline of a door opening on a corridor or to the center of a door opening on an exit shall not be greater than forty feet, except that for buildings classified in occupancy group J-2 of construction class I-A, the distance may be increased to fifty feet. Such travel distances shall be included in the maximum travel distance established in subdivision (a) of this section.

(c) Measurement. Travel distance shall be measured along a natural and unobstructed path of travel. Where the path of travel is over an access stair, it shall be measured along an inclined straight line through the center of the outer edge of each tread.

(c) In buildings or spaces classified in occupancy group J-2 not more than three stories and forty feet in height, occupied by not more than four families on each story and of combustible construction group II there shall be at least two door openings from each J-2 dwelling unit which shall be remote from each other. One door opening shall lead to an exit and the other to a balcony complying with subdivision (g) of section 27-369 of article five of this subchapter.

(d) Buildings not exceeding three stories in height and occupied exclusively by not more than one family on each story without boarders, roomers or lodgers are exempt from the provisions of subdivisions (b) and (c) of this section.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. The provisions of this section and § C26-284.00 provide that every building with a ground floor area exceeding 2,500 square feet should at least have two means of egress, with doors opening outward projecting not more than 18 inches. Basically, these provisions are intended as a safeguard for occupants of the building in the event of fire. The owner of a building located on a land sought by the City for a public parking place was not entitled to damages for the cost of partial reconstruction of the building in order to comply with the above-quoted provisions, where the City proposed to provide for a public walk running along the side of the building and thence to the street.-Matter of the City of New York (Parking Fields), 16 Misc. 2d 915, 181 N.Y.S. 2d 446 [1958].

ARTICLE 4 NUMBER OF EXITS

§ 27-366 Exits from floors.

1. There shall be at least two independent exits, remote from each other, from every floor of a building, except that only one exit may be provided from floors in:

(a) One and two family dwellings.

(b) Buildings classified in occupancy group J-2 of noncombustible construction group I or occupancy group E that are not more than sixty feet in height, have a gross area of two thousand square feet or less per floor, and have a maximum travel distance of fifty feet on any floor.

(c) Buildings classified in occupancy group J-1 or J-2 that are not more than two stories and thirty feet in height and have a maximum travel distance of eighty feet and the corridors and stair enclosure are provided with automatic sprinkler protection complying with the construction provisions of subchapter seventeen of this chapter.

(d) Buildings classified in occupancy group J-2 occupied exclusively by not more than one family on each story without boarders, roomers or lodgers and not more than three stories and forty feet in height, and the stair enclosure is provided with automatic sprinkler protection complying with the construction provisions of subchapter seventeen of this chapter and without openings between any garage and the exit passageway.

(e) Buildings classified in occupancy group J-2 not more than three stories and forty feet in height occupied by not more than four families on each story.

2. Notwithstanding the exit requirements of this section, in buildings classified in occupancy group J-2 of construction class I-A, one level of an apartment occupying a part of not more than two floors need only be provided with a balcony that complies with subdivision (g) of section 27-369 of article five of this subchapter, provided that, in addition, the stair within such apartment shall be at least two feet six inches in width and terminates not more than twenty feet from a corridor door on the other level that shall provide the required access to at least two independent exits. The center line of such corridor door shall be not more than fifty feet from any room within such apartment.

3. Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, when, within a building, any place of assembly has an occupant load between five hundred and nine hundred ninety-nine persons, there shall be provided at least three independent exits, remote from each other, from each floor; any such place of assembly with an occupant load of one thousand or more persons shall be provided with at least four independent exits, remote from each other, from each floor.

SUBCHAPTER 6 MEANS OF EGRESS

ARTICLE 5 ACCESS REQUIREMENTS AND EXIT TYPES

§ 27-369 Corridors.

Corridors shall be kept readily accessible and unobstructed at all times. Corridors shall be kept free of combustible contents except that in buildings classified in occupancy groups G, H-1 and H-2, combustible contents may be stored in noncombustible lockers and combustible bulletin boards meeting the requirements of table 5-4 shall be permitted.

(a) Capacity. The capacity and minimum width of corridors shall be as listed in table 6-1. Width shall be measured in the clear between the narrowest points produced by any projections such as radiators, lockers, drinking fountains, or room or locker door swings, except that such width may be reduced by projections up to eighteen inches wide to the extent of two inches per unit of exit width if the total area of such projections does not exceed five per cent of the area of the wall on which they occur.

(b) Height. Corridors shall have a clear height of seven feet six inches for at least seventy-five per cent of the floor area, with no point less than seven feet in height. No projection below the ceiling shall be located so as to obstruct full view of exit signs.

(c) Length. Corridors shall be subdivided by smoke barriers, as defined in subchapter two, into the following lengths:

[See tabular material in printed version]

Where smoke barriers are penetrated by doors, such doors shall be smoke stop doors in conformance with subdivision (c) of section 27-371 of this article.

(d) Dead ends. Dead ends in corridors shall not exceed the length listed in table 6-1, except that in all occupancy groups except occupancy group H, when a corridor is completely enclosed in construction having a two hour fire-resistance rating, with all corridor doors being self-closing and having a fire protection rating of one and one-half hours, the permissible length of dead ends may be increased one hundred per cent above the length listed in table 6-1. Dead end distance shall be measured from the centerline of the door opening nearest to the closed end of the corridor to the center of an exit door opening, or the center of that point in the corridor where travel to two or more exits becomes available in two directions.

(e) Changes in level. Changes in level requiring less than two risers in a corridor shall be by a ramp complying with section 27-377 of this article. Risers and treads shall comply with the requirements of subdivision (e) of section 27-375 of this article.

(f) Exterior corridors. Exterior corridors shall be roofed, and shall have solid floors drained to prevent accumulations of standing water. Such floors may serve as fire canopies when so constructed. Exterior corridors shall be protected along their outer side by guards or parapets at least three feet six inches high. Openings in guards or parapets shall be of such dimensions as to prevent the passage of a five inch dia. ball. Where the outer side of an exterior corridor is more than fifty per cent enclosed with solid material, it shall be treated as an interior corridor.

(g) Balconies. Balconies may serve as a means of egress from dwelling units in buildings classified in occupancy group J-2 under the following conditions:

(1) They shall serve at least two dwelling units.

(2) They shall be constructed as required for exterior corridors, except that parapets or guards shall not be higher than four feet on the outer side of the balcony.

(3) The dwelling units served by balconies shall be separated from each other by construction having at least a two hour fire resistance rating. Such separation shall extend at least three feet beyond the outside face of the exterior wall of the building, although such projection may be reduced to two feet six inches provided that any window opening on each such balcony served by the fire separation shall be at least two inches from such fire separation for every one inch that such separation is less than thirty-six inches. An opening at least twenty inches wide shall be provided between the end of this separation and the balcony parapet or guard, and the opening shall be maintained free and unobstructed for the full height of the balcony, except that privacy screens openable from either side may be permitted in the opening.

(4) Access from dwelling units to the balconies shall be through doors having glass panels at least two feet wide and four feet high, without muntins, screens, or other obstructions to hinder entry by breaking the glass panels. The doors shall be lockable only from the inside by devices that can be easily released from the outside after breaking the glass. A combination lock or lock required to be opened by a key or removable device or tool shall not be used.

(h) Construction.

(1) Interior corridors. Interior corridors shall be completely enclosed within fire separations to provide a minimum fire-resistance rating of one hour except as otherwise provided in subparagraphs a through c of this paragraph:

a. For buildings or spaces classified in occupancy group J-1 or J-2 of combustible construction group II exceeding two stories in height, except for buildings not exceeding three stories in height and occupied exclusively by not more than one family on each story without boarders, roomers or lodgers, corridors shall be enclosed within fire separations providing a minimum fire-resistance rating of two hours.

b. Corridor partitions may be omitted or may be constructed of unrated noncombustible material in buildings in occupancy group H-2 in the following instances: nurses' stations not exceeding three hundred fifty square feet in area, waiting spaces, lounges and recreational spaces for patients and visitors which do not exceed five hundred square feet in area, spaces used solely for public telephones, and all other spaces which are completely protected by an automatic wet sprinkler system complying with the construction requirements of subchapter seventeen of this code.

c. Corridor partitions may be omitted in spaces of occupancy group H-1 used for detention of persons under legal restraint.

(2) Exterior corridors and balconies. Exterior corridors and balconies shall be constructed of noncombustible materials.

(i) Borrowed lights. No operable transoms shall be permitted in walls of corridors. In corridors required to have a one hour fire-resistance rating, fixed one-quarter inch wire glass panels may be installed in not more than twenty percent of the common wall between the corridor and any room or space, provided that no panel exceeds seven hundred twenty square inches in area; however, openings permitted in paragraph three of subdivision (h) of section 27-370 of this article may be permitted provided all of the limitations and requirements specified in that section are complied with, except that openings in corridor walls serving as fire divisions required to have a fire-resistance rating shall be limited to those specified in section 27-342 of article five of subchapter five of this chapter.

(j) Ventilation. Corridors shall be ventilated in accordance with the requirements of subchapter twelve of this chapter. Corridors shall not be used as open plenums or as ducts to exhaust air from rooms or spaces opening upon them, except as permitted in reference standard RS 13-1.

(k) Interior finish. The interior finish of corridors shall be in accordance with the requirements of table 5-4.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. Administrative Code §§ C26-300.0 and C26-568.0, subd. d, rendering it unlawful for owner of structure on which there is a party wall balcony serving as required means of egress from an adjoining structure, to remove such balcony or to prevent or obstruct egress therefrom to and from his own structure unless he has erected or obligated himself to erect thereon a fire escape or other means of egress, held a constitutional exercise of police powers. Hence, where adjoining owner boarded up his premises, thus preventing tenants residing in plaintiff's apartment from using defendant's premises as a means of egress to street by way of the party wall balcony, and plaintiff had thereupon been required to construct fire escapes, plaintiff held entitled to recover from defendant the cost of such construction. That defendant was required to board up the premises by provisions of the Multiple Dwelling Law did not relieve it of liability, since provisions of the Multiple Dwelling Law and the applicable provisions of the Administrative Code did not relate to the subject matter and were reconcilable.-Hafner v. Erdreich Realty Corp., 170 Misc. 846, 11 N.Y.S. 2d 142 [1939]; aff'd by App. Term, N.Y.L.J. (11-24-39) 1772, Col. 6 F.

¶ 2. Under Administrative Code § C26-300.0, requiring each owner of an adjoining building with party balconies to maintain that part of the balcony attached to his building and not obstruct egress through his building, such an owner boarding up his building is liable for the resulting damages.-348 St. Nick Corp. v. Northchester Corp., 53 N.Y.S. 2d 364 [1945].

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. A fireman was injured while attempting to rescue people in an apartment on an upper floor of a building. The fireman sued the building owner to recover for personal and alleged, in part, that the presence of combustible materials (i.e. paint supplies, lacquer and benzene) on a lower floor (which presence violates § 27-369) constituted negligence. The court held that the statutory violation was the proximate cause of the injury. The presence of paints and other combustible materials, which caused a smoke condtition, prevented the occupants of the upper floor apartment from escaping by way of the corridor into the street. If it hadn't been for that smoke (caused by the combusible materials), plaintiff would not have had to recue the occupants of the apartment and would not have been injured. O'Connell v. Kavanaugh, 1997 Westlaw 417217, (App.Div. 1st Dept).

CHAPTER 1 BUILDING CODE

SUBCHAPTER 6 MEANS OF EGRESS

ARTICLE 5 ACCESS REQUIREMENTS AND EXIT TYPES

§ 27-370 Exit passageways.

Exit passageways shall be maintained free of obstructions at all times. Not more than fifty percent of the total number of vertical exits provided for a building may be served by a single exit passageway, except as provided in subdivision (h) of section 27-370 of this article.

(a) Capacity. The capacity of exit passageways shall be as listed in table 6-1.

(b) Width. The width of an exit passageway serving one vertical exit shall be equal to the width of the vertical exit. The width of an exit passageway serving two or more vertical exits shall be equal to seventy-five percent of the width of all of the vertical exits that it serves. Width shall be measured in the clear between the narrowest points at any projections such as radiators, door swings, or pilasters.

(c) Height. Exit passageways shall have a clear height of seven feet six inches for at least seventy-five per cent of the floor area, with no point less than seven feet in height. No projection below the ceiling shall be located so as to obstruct full view of exit signs.

(d) Changes in level. Changes in level requiring less than two risers in an exit passageway shall be by a ramp complying with section 27-377 of this article. Risers and treads shall comply with the requirements of subdivision (e) of section 27-375 of this article.

(e) Construction. The construction of exit passageways shall be as required by table 3-4 for the applicable construction class of the building.

(f) Openings. No openings other than exit doors shall be permitted in exit passageways, except as provided in subdivision (h) of this section.

(g) Interior finish. The interior finish of exit passageways shall be in accordance with the requirements of table 5-4.

(h) Street floor lobbies. Street floor lobbies may be used as exit passageways when they comply with the requirements of subdivisions (a) through (g) of this section subject to the following modifications:

(1) VERTICAL EXITS SERVED. One hundred per cent of the total number of vertical exits provided for a building may be served by a street floor lobby, if egress is provided in two different directions from the discharge points of all vertical exits to open exterior spaces that are remote from each other.

(2) WIDTH. Street floor lobbies serving as exit passageways shall be increased in width to accommodate the occupant load of all communicating spaces on the lobby floor that exit through them. The capacity per unit of width shall be as listed in table 6-1.

(3) OPENINGS. Openings between street floor lobbies serving as exit passageways and elevators or communicating spaces shall comply with the following:

a. Doors. 1. Doors to stairways and elevators, and unsprinklered communicating spaces classified in occupancy group B-2, D-2, F-1 or F-2 shall be self-closing fire doors having a one and one-half hour fire protection rating.

2. Doors to unsprinklered communicating spaces classified in occupancy group G, H or J, or sprinklered communicating spaces classified in occupancy group B-2, D-2, F-1 or F-2 may be either:

(a) self-closing fire doors having a three-quarter hour fire protection rating, or

(b) glass or other noncombustible doors installed in conjunction with automatic fire doors having a one and one-half hour fire protection rating, with sprinkler heads installed over the doors on the room side.

3. No other door openings shall be authorized except as otherwise provided in this section.

b. Other openings. Other openings to spaces classified in occupancy group C, E, F, G, H or J shall be permitted, provided they have a maximum length of eight feet and a maximum height of eight feet, are glazed by one-quarter inch polished plate glass or equivalent and are protected by automatic fire doors having a one and one-half hour fire protection rating and by automatic sprinklers complying with the construction requirements of subchapter seventeen of this chapter over the openings on the room side.

c. Separations and limitations. Openings permitted by subparagraphs a and b of this paragraph shall not exceed in total length fifty per cent of the length of such enclosure wall except where the length of such wall is less than sixteen feet. Adjoining openings shall be separated from each other a minimum of three feet by construction having a two hour fire-resistance rating.

d. Notwithstanding the restrictions in subparagraphs a, b, and c of this paragraph, the following openings may be authorized:

1. A space classified in occupancy group C, E, F-3 or, F-4 within fire separations having a minimum fire-resistance rating of one hour, with an area not exceeding twenty-five hundred square feet, may have an unlimited length of show window under the following conditions:

(a) The maximum depth of show window shall be three feet.

(b) Automatic sprinklers complying with the construction requirements of subchapter seventeen of this chapter, shall be provided in the show window display area.

(c) The show window display area shall be protected on all sides, except for the glazed window, by construction having a two hour fire-resistance rating with access provided by means of a fireproof selfclosing door having a three-quarter hour fire protection rating.

(d) The show window shall be glazed by one-quarter inch polished plate glass or equivalent.

(e) Glass or other noncombustible doors may be used for entrance to or egress from the space within fire separations when installed in combination with automatic fire doors having a one and one-half hour fire protection rating. Such automatic fire doors shall be located on the room side and shall be held open by approved door-holding devices actuated to release automatically upon the activation of smoke detecting devices, whether of the photoelectric cell or other approved type. In addition, automatic sprinkler heads, complying with the construction requirements of subchapter seventeen of this chapter, shall be provided over the door openings on the room side.

2. A space classified in occupancy group C, E, F-3, or F-4 within fire separations having a minimum fire-resistance rating of one hour, with an area not exceeding three thousand square feet, may have a maximum total length of unprotected openings upon a corridor or exit passageway not exceeding fifty percent of the space frontage along such corridor or exit passageway under the following conditions:

(a) The entire space shall be provided with automatic sprinklers complying with the construction requirements of subchapter seventeen of this chapter.

(b) The show window shall be glazed by one-quarter inch polished plate glass or equivalent.

(c) All corridor or exit passageway doors shall be self-closing, noncombustible, and smokeproof.

3. Show windows or other openings of unlimited lengths and heights shall be permitted on any corridor or exit passageway without requirements for fire-resistance doors under the following conditions:

(a) The entire floor area, including the corridors or exit passageways, shall be provided with automatic sprinklers complying with the construction requirements of subchapter seventeen of this chapter.

(b) The occupancy of all spaces on the floor shall be limited to occupancy groups C, E, F-3 and F-4.

(c) The widths of the corridors or passageways shall exceed the requirements of table 6-1 or subdivision (b) of this section, whichever is applicable, by at least fifty percent.

(d) All doors opening on the corridors or exit passageways shall be smokeproof, noncombustible self-closing doors.

(e) Show windows or other openings shall be glazed by one-quarter inch polished plate glass or equivalent.

(f) Each corridor or exit passageway shall be provided with a fresh air intake, a positive smoke exhaust system and smoke detectors which, when activated, shall permit circulation only of fresh air.

(4) OCCUPANCY. Street floor lobbies serving as exit passageways may be occupied by newsstands, candy and tobacco stands, information booths or similar occupancies, if such stands or booths are constructed of noncombustible materials, or of materials which comply with the requirements of section 27-348 of article five of subchapter five of this chapter for interior finish for exit passageways, provided that such stands or booths:

a. do not occupy more than one hundred square feet or five percent of the net floor area of the lobby, whichever is greater; and

b. do not reduce the required clear width of the lobby at any point; and

c. if constructed of combustible materials are protected by no less than two automatic sprinkler heads. Water for such sprinkler heads may be supplied from the domestic water supply system.

SUBCHAPTER 6 MEANS OF EGRESS

ARTICLE 5 ACCESS REQUIREMENTS AND EXIT TYPES

§ 27-371 Doors.

Exit doors and doors providing access to exits shall comply with the following:

(a) Exit doors. Doors for required exits shall be self-closing swinging doors with a one and one-half hour fire protection rating, except in occupancy group J-3 buildings and except that:

(1) Exterior street floor exit doors having an exterior separation of more than fifteen feet need not have a fire-protection rating.

(2) Doors into stairs and exit passageways shall have at least a three-quarter hour fire protection rating.

(b) Corridor doors. Doors that provide access to interior corridors required to have a one hour fire-resistance rating shall be self-closing swinging fire doors with a three-quarter hour fire-protection rating, except that in buildings classified in occupancy group G, in which an acceptable interior fire alarm system is installed and in which regular supervised fire drills are held, the doors to rooms or spaces devoted exclusively to nonhazardous uses in occupancy group G need not be fire-rated, provided they are swinging, self-closing one and three-quarter inch solid core wood, and have a maximum area of seven hundred twenty square inches of one-quarter inch thick wired glass vision panels. Other corridor doors except those provided for in subdivision (d) of section 27-369 of this article, shall be self-closing, swinging, noncombustible or one and three-quarter inch solid core wood doors, except that in buildings classified in occupancy group H-2 the doors need not be self-closing. Noncombustible mail slots having an area not exceeding forty square inches may be provided in corridor doors when the opening is protected by a closure activated by gravity or a spring device so as to keep it closed when not in use. Noncombustible louvers may be installed in corridor doors opening into toilets, service sink closets, and electric closets. Notwithstanding the foregoing restrictions in this subdivision, doors not prohibited by subdivision (d) of this section may open from spaces into corridors when in compliance with all of the provisions of paragraph three of subdivision (h) of section 27-370 of this article.

(c) Smoke stop doors. Smoke stop doors shall be self-closing, swinging doors of metal, metal covered, or one and three-quarter inch solid core wood with clear wire glass panels having a minimum area of six hundred square inches per door and a maximum area of twelve hundred ninety-six square inches per door, except that in buildings not over two stories high, smoke stop doors may be of one and three-eighths inch solid core wood with clear wire glass panels, unless the doors are also used as horizontal exits in which case they shall comply with the provisions of subdivision (b) of section 27-373 of this article. In addition, smoke stop doors may be constructed of tempered glazing or the equivalent and be protected by sprinkler heads constructed in accordance with subchapter seventeen of this chapter and installed a maximum of six feet (6'-0") on centers on each side of the opening. Smoke stop doors may be double-acting but shall close the opening completely with only such clearance as is reasonably necessary for proper operation. Smoke stop doors shall normally be in the closed position, except that they may be left open if they are arranged to close automatically by an approved device which is actuated by an interior fire alarm system meeting the requirements of subchapter seventeen of this chapter or upon smoke detection. Tempered glass smoke stop doors shall be marked where required in accordance with the rules of the board of standards and appeals.

(d) Prohibited doors. Vertically sliding doors, rolling shutters, and folding doors shall not be used as exit doors or as corridor doors, except that overhead garage doors may serve as exits from buildings classified in occupancy group J-3, and except that sliding or rolling doors or gates may be used in F-2 places of assembly provided they are kept open when the place of assembly is occupied. Revolving doors may be used only to the extent permitted by subdivision (m) of section 27-371 of this article. Automatic horizontally sliding fire doors shall be permitted only in horizontal exits in fire divisions required to have a four hour fire-resistance rating as specified in table 5-3.

(e) Door opening widths. The capacity of exit and corridor door openings shall be as listed in table 6-1. Door jambs or stops and the door thickness when open shall not reduce the required width by more than three inches for each twenty-two inches of width. The maximum width of any swinging door leaf shall be forty-eight inches. The minimum nominal width of corridor and exit door openings shall be thirty-six inches, except that where a door opening is divided by mullions into two or more door openings, the minimum nominal width of each such opening shall be thirty-two inches. The minimum nominal width of other door openings shall be as follows:

(1) Door openings to all habitable and occupiable rooms-thirty-two inches.

(2) Door swinging in pairs (no mullion), opening-forty-eight inches.

(3) Door openings to rooms used by bedridden patients and all single door openings used by patients in buildings classified occupancy group H-2-forty-four inches.

(4) Door openings to toilet rooms in buildings to which the public has free access shall be thirty-two inches.

(5) Door openings giving access to at least one toilet, lavatory and bathtub or shower in each dwelling unit, in buildings or spaces classified in occupancy group J-1 or J-2, when such dwelling unit is accessible to individuals in wheel chairs-thirty-two inches.

(6) Door openings giving access to all toilets, lavatories and bathtubs or showers serving single room occupancies which are accessible to individuals in wheelchairs-thirty-two inches.

(7) Door openings for people having physical disabilities shall additionally comply with the requirements of reference standard RS 4-6.

(f) Door heights. The minimum nominal door opening height for exit and corridor doors shall be six feet eight inches. Door jambs, stops, sills, and closers shall not reduce the clear opening to less than six feet six inches.

(g) Door swing. Exit doors, corridor doors from rooms or spaces classified in high hazard occupancy group A, or from factories as defined in the labor law, and corridor doors from rooms required to have more than one door under the provisions of section 27-365 of article four of this subchapter, shall swing in the direction of exit travel, except:

(1) Doors from rooms of instruction in buildings classified in occupancy group G, having an occupant load of less than seventy-five persons.

(2) Exterior street floor exit doors from lobbies in buildings classified in occupancy groups J-2 and J-3.

(3) Exterior street floor exit doors from spaces in occupancy group C or E not exceeding two thousand square feet in area, and occupied by less than fifty persons, where the maximum travel distance to a door does not exceed fifty feet.

(h) Floor level. The floor on both sides of all exit and corridor doors shall be essentially level and at the same elevation for a distance, perpendicular to the door opening, at least equal to the width of the door leaf, except that where doors lead out of a building the floor level inside may be seven and one-half inches higher than the level outside.

(i) Closed doors. Exit doors and corridor doors shall normally be kept in the closed position, except that corridor doors in buildings classified in occupancy group H-2 shall be exempt from this requirement.

(j) Door and window hardware. Doors and windows shall be equipped with hardware as follows:

(1) Fire protection requirements.

a. Exit doors and corridors shall be readily openable at all times from the side from which egress is to be made and shall not require a key to operate from that side, except that:

1. Locks may be used in penal and mental institutions and areas, where required for security.

2. Locks may be used in banks, museums, jewelry stores and other places where extra safeguards are required, subject to the approval of the commissioner, and provided the locks are equipped with electrical release devices for remote control in case of emergency.

3. Stairways leading from the top floor to a roof may be provided with locked wire mesh gates openable by key in buildings classified in occupancy group G. The use of a hook and eye closing device on the inside of all doors to roofs shall be permitted.

b. Doors opening into interior stair enclosures shall not be locked from either side with the following exceptions:

1. Doors may be located to prevent access to the stair at the street floor.

2. In buildings classified in occupancy group E, less than one hundred feet in height, the doors may be locked on the stair side on each floor above the street floor.

3. In buildings classified in occupancy group E, one hundred feet or more in height, and existing office buildings one hundred feet or more in height, the doors may be locked on the stair side above the street floor except that at intervals of four stories or less, doors shall be openable from the stair side without the use of a key to permit reentry at such floors. In addition, the door on every floor where a keyed switch is required by the provisions of subchapter eighteen of this chapter shall be openable from the stair side without the use of a key to permit reentry at such floors.

4. When a locked door is provided with an automatic fail safe system for opening such door in the event of the activation of any automatic fire detecting device or when any elevator in readiness as provided in section 27-989 of subchapter eighteen of this chapter is activated, such door shall be deemed as openable from the stairside. The installation of such automatic fail safe system shall comply with the requirements of reference standards RS17-3A and RS17-3B, whichever is applicable. Stair reentry signs required under section 27-394 of article nine of this subchapter shall specify that reentry is provided only during fire emergencies.

c. Latch bolts shall be provided on all exit doors and corridor doors to hold them in a closed position against the pressure of expanding gases except that this requirement shall not apply to doors in stair enclosures in buildings classified in occupancy group G.

(2) Security requirements. The following provisions shall apply to all buildings erected or altered after December sixth, nineteen hundred sixty-eight that may be classified in residential occupancy group J-2. Existing buildings in such group shall comply with the requirements of article eleven of subchapter two.

a. Building entrance doors and other exterior exit doors shall be equipped with heavy duty lock sets with auxiliary latch bolts to prevent the latch from being manipulated by means other than a key. Latch sets shall have stopwork in the inside cylinder controlled by a master key only. Outside cylinders of main entrance door locks shall be operated by the tenants' key, which shall not be keyed to also open the tenant's apartment door. A light or lights shall be provided at or near the outside of the front entranceway of the building providing not less than five foot candles intensity measured at the floor level for the full width of the entranceway.

b. Doors to dwelling units shall be equipped with a heavy duty latch set and a heavy duty dead bolt operable by a key from the outside and a thumb-turn from the inside. Those doors shall also be equipped with a chain guard so as to permit partial opening of the door. Dwelling unit entrance doors shall also be equipped with a viewing device located so as to enable a person on the inside of the entrance door to view a person immediately outside.

c. All openable windows shall be equipped with sash locks designed to be openable from the inside only. Grilles lockable from the inside only may be placed on the inside or outside of windows that are accessible from grade but that do not serve to provide access to exits.

d. Buildings classified in occupancy group J-2 containing eight or more dwelling units shall be provided with an intercommunication system located at the door giving access to the main entrance hall or lobby, consisting of a device or devices for voice communication between the occupant of each dwelling unit and a person outside said door to the main entrance hall or lobby and permitting such dwelling unit occupant to release the locking mechanism of said door from the dwelling unit.

(k) Panic hardware.

(1) Exit doors shall be equipped with fire exit bolts when providing an exit from:

a. Buildings classified in occupancy group G, except exit doors opening directly outdoors at grade from rooms having an occupant load of less than seventy-five persons,

b. F-1 places of assembly,

c. F-2, F-3 and F-4 places of assembly having an occupant load exceeding three hundred persons, except places of assembly having doors that are not equipped with locks and are openable at all times.

(2) Fire exit bolts shall be of an approved type, and shall release when a pressure exceeding fifteen pounds is applied to the releasing device in the direction of exit travel. The bars or panels shall extend at least two-thirds of the width of the door and shall be placed at least thirty inches, but not more than forty-four inches above the floor.

(1) Power operated doors. Power operated doors or power assisted manually operated doors, may be used as exit or corridor doors provided they remain closed in case of power failure but shall be manually operable. No power operated door shall be credited as a required exit unless it swings in the direction of exit travel.

(m) Revolving doors. Revolving doors shall not be used as exits in buildings classified in occupancy group F-1 or F-2, G, or H; nor shall revolving doors be used in any occupancy as interior doors providing access to exits, at the foot of stairs, or at the head of basement stairs. Where revolving doors are used as exits, they shall comply with the following:

(1) They may provide not more than one unit or exit width for each revolving door and not more than fifty per cent of the required exit capacity at any location, provided that the revolving doors are located adjacent to, or within twenty feet, of swinging doors that provide the remaining required exit capacity at that location.

(2) They shall be collapsible, and designed and constructed so that: a. Each wing is independently supported by a hanger with a corrosion resistant safety release which, when pressure of between sixty to eighty pounds is exerted simultaneously on the wings on opposite sides of the door pivot, the door wings will fold back on themselves in the direction of egress.

b. Each wing is provided with at least one push bar and glazed with at least 7/1932 in. plate or tempered glass.

c. The inside diameter of the enclosure is at least six feet six inches.

d. The freely operable maximum rate of revolving speed is controlled so that it is not greater than fifteen rpm.

e. The upper surface of the floor finish within the door enclosure is flush with the adjacent floor area, and permanently secured in place.

(3) The owner shall be responsible at all times for the operation and maintenance of revolving doors, and shall have the doors inspected at intervals not to exceed six months. All parts of the doors, including the safety releases and speed control mechanism, shall be maintained in good working order. Inspection reports shall be made in writing and kept on file at the premises for at least two years.

(n) Turnstiles. No turnstile or other device designed to restrict travel shall be placed so as to obstruct any required exit, except that approved turnstiles that turn freely in the direction of exit travel may be used in any occupancy where revolving doors are permitted. Turnstiles shall be not more than thirty-six inches nor less than thirty inches high and shall be of such design as to provide twenty-two inches clear width as the turnstile rotates. Each turnstile may be credited with a capacity of one unit of exit width. Not more than fifty per cent of the required exit capacity may be provided by turnstiles at any location. The balance of the required exit capacity shall be provided by swinging doors located within twenty feet of the turnstiles. Turnstiles over thirty-six inches high shall meet the applicable requirements of this code for revolving doors.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. The mere claim, on the part of the tenant, that she told the superintendent that there had been drug dealing and loitering around the building, was insufficient evidence of prior criminal activity so as to put defendant landlord on notice and require it to take minimal security measures. However, in a case alleging that the landlord negligently permitted an intruder to gain access to the premises and assault the plaintiff, the fact that the inner door did not have a properly working lock was some evidence of negligence (Admin. Code Sec. 27-371(2)). Thus, the court denied the landlord's motion for summary judgment dismissing the complaint. Ragona v. Areas of refuge shall comply with the following:

(a) Separation. Areas of refuge shall be separated from the area which they serve by construction having at least a two hour fire-resistance rating.

(b) Floor area. Areas of refuge shall provide clear public space or space occupied by the same tenant or owner, adequate in size to hold the occupant load it receives from the floor area it serves as computed by the provision of section 27-367 of article four of this subchapter, in addition to its own occupant load, allowing at least three square feet per person, except that in buildings classified in occupancy group H-2 for patient areas only, the allowance shall be at least thirty square feet per person.

(c) Required exits. Areas of refuge shall be provided with at least one vertical exit. When an area of refuge is located higher than the eleventh floor of a building, the vertical exit shall be supplemented by at least one elevator.

(d) Locking. Doors providing access to areas of refuge shall be kept unlocked at all times when any floor area

§ 27-373 Horizontal exits.

A horizontal exit to an area of refuge may consist of doors through walls or partitions having at least a two hour fire-resistance rating; of a balcony or exterior vestibule leading around the end of a fire division to another fire area or building; or it may be a bridge or tunnel between two buildings. Horizontal exits shall comply with the following:

(a) Capacity. The capacity of horizontal exits shall be as listed in table 6-1. Only the widths of doors swinging in the direction of exit travel to the area of refuge shall be counted.

(b) Door requirements. Doors shall be swinging, self-closing doors having a fire protection rating of one and one-half hours, except that door in fire divisions having a three hour or four hour fire-resistance rating shall have opening protective as required by table 5-3. Each swinging door shall swing in the direction of exit travel, and when travel is in both directions, as when two areas of refuge serve as areas of refuge for each other, at least two door openings shall be provided, the doors of which shall swing in opposite directions. Signs shall be placed over each door on the side from which egress is made, indicating the exit door.

(c) Balconies, bridges and tunnels. When serving as horizontal exits, balconies, bridges, and tunnels shall comply with the following:

(1) Their width shall be equal to at least the width of the doors opening on them, but in no case less than three feet eight inches.

(2) They shall be enclosed at each end by doors complying with subdivision (b) of this section.

(3) The floor level at doors shall be the same as that of the building except that the floor level of open balconies or open bridges shall be approximately seven and one-half inches lower.

(4) Where there is a difference in level between the areas connected, the floors of the horizontal exit shall be ramped not more than one inch in ten inches.

(5) Exterior wall openings within thirty feet horizontally of any open bridge or balcony or below any open bridge or balcony shall be provided with opening protectives having a three-quarter hour fire protection rating.

(6) Balconies shall not face or open on yards or courts less than twelve feet wide, and shall be constructed as required for exterior corridors.

(7) Exterior bridges shall be constructed of noncombustible materials. Interior bridges or tunnels shall be constructed of materials providing a two hour fire-resistance rating.

CHAPTER 1 BUILDING CODE

SUBCHAPTER 6 MEANS OF EGRESS

ARTICLE 5 ACCESS REQUIREMENTS AND EXIT TYPES

§ 27-375 Interior stairs.

Interior stairs shall comply with the following requirements:

(a) Capacity. The capacity of interior stairs shall be as listed in table 6-1.

(b) Width. The width of interior stairs shall be the clear width between walls, grilles, guards, or newel posts. Stair stringers may project into the required width not more than two inches on each side of the stair. No interior stair shall be reduced in width in the direction of exit travel. Interior stairs shall be at least forty-four inches wide except as follows:

(1) Interior stairs may be not less than thirty-six inches wide when serving not more than thirty occupants per stair on any floor in buildings classified in occupancy groups J-1 and J-2 or when serving buildings classified in occupancy group J-3 and exceeding four stories in height, or when serving not more than sixty occupants per stair on any floor in buildings classified in occupancy groups E, B, and D.

(2) Interior stairs may be not less than thirty inches wide when serving mezzanines having an occupant load not exceeding twenty-five persons or when located in buildings classified in occupancy group J-3 not more than three stories in height. Interior stairs in four story buildings classified in occupancy group J-3 shall be a minimum of thirty-three inches in width.

(c) Headroom. The clear headroom shall be at least seven feet, except that in buildings classified in occupancy groups J-2 and J-3, the minimum clear headroom may be six feet eight inches. Headroom in a flight of stairs shall be measured vertically between two parallel inclined planes, one of which contains the line of the nosing or upper front edge of each tread and extends to its intersection with a landing and the other of which is through any point directly above the first plane that limits the headroom of the stair.

(d) Landings and platforms. Landings and platforms shall be provided at the head and foot of each flight of stairs, except at the head of basement stairs in oneand two-family dwellings, and shall comply with the following:

(1) The minimum width of landings and platforms perpendicular to the direction of travel shall be equal to at least the width of the stairs except that on a straight-run stair, the distance between risers of upper and lower flights at intermediate landings or platforms need not be more than forty-four inches.

(2) The maximum vertical rise of a single flight of stairs between floors, between landings or platforms, or between a floor and a landing or platform shall not exceed eight feet in buildings classified in occupancy groups F and H, and twelve feet in all other occupancy groups. No flight of stairs shall have less than two risers.

(3) Landings and platforms shall be enclosed on sides by walls, grilles or guards at least three feet high.

(e) Risers and treads. Risers and treads shall comply with table 6-4 and with the following:

(1) The sum of two risers plus one tread exclusive of nosing shall be not less than twenty-four nor more than twenty-five and one-half inches.

(2) Riser height and tread width shall be constant in any flight of stairs from story to story.

(3) Winders shall not be permitted in required exit stairs except in one- and two-family dwellings and except as permitted in subdivision l of this section. The width of winder treads when measured eighteen inches from the narrower end shall be at least equal to the width of treads above or below the winding section.

(4) Curving or skewed stairs may be used as exits when the tread and riser relationship is in accordance with table 6-4 when measured at a point eighteen inches in from the narrow end of the tread; and no tread shall be more than three inches narrower or three inches wider at any point than the width established eighteen inches in from the narrow end.

(f) Guards and handrails. Stairs shall have walls, grilles, or guards at the sides and shall have handrails on both sides, except that stairs less than forty-four inches wide may have a handrail on one side only. Handrails shall provide a finger clearance of one and one-half inches, and shall project not more than three and one-half inches into the required stair width.

(1) Stairs more than eighty-eight inches wide shall have intermediate handrails dividing the stairway into widths that maintain the nominal multiples of twenty-two inches, but the widths shall not be greater than eighty-eight inches nor less than forty-four inches.

(2) The height of handrails above the nosing of treads shall be not more than thirty-four inches nor less than thirty inches.

(3) Handrails shall be returned to walls and posts when terminated, except in one- and two-family dwellings.

(4) Handrails shall be designed to support loads in compliance with the requirements of subchapter nine of this chapter.

(5) Handrails in all stairs shall be of materials having a flamespread rating not exceeding one hundred fifty.

(g) Stair doors. Doors providing access to stairs shall comply with the requirements of subdivision (a) of section 27-342 of article five of subchapter five of this chapter and subdivision (e) of section 27-371 of this article. The swing of stair doors shall not block stairs or stair landings, nor shall any door at any point of its swing reduce the effective width of the landing or stair to less than seventy-five percent of the required width of the landing or stair, or to less than the width of the door opening on them. The width of doors from a stair shall not be less than the number of units of exit width required for the capacity of the stair, but in no case shall the door width be less than required by subdivision (e) of section 27-371 of this article.

(h) Stair construction. Risers, treads, stringers, landings, platforms, and guards, exclusive of handrails, shall be built of noncombustible materials except that interior stairs in buildings of construction group II may be built of combustible materials in buildings classified in occupancy group B-2, C, D or E when the buildings are two stories in height or less, and in buildings classified in occupancy group J-2 or J-3 when the buildings are not more than three stories in height, and in the case of J-2 occupancy group, when occupied by not more than three families. Interior stairs shall have solid treads. All risers shall be closed except as otherwise provided in subdivision (i) of this section. When of combustible construction, the soffit of interior stairs shall be fire protected by material having a minimum fire resistive rating of one hour or five-eighths inches gypsum wall board or equivalent, or the space beneath shall be enclosed without openings by material having a one hour fire resistance rating unless permitted to have open risers by subdivision (i) of this section. Where two separate interior stairs are contained within the same enclosure (so called "scissor stairs"), each stair shall be separated from the other by noncombustible construction having a fire resistance rating equal to that required for the stair enclosure. Stairs, platforms, and landings shall be designed to support all loads in compliance with the requirements of subchapter nine of this chapter. Treads and landings shall be built of or surfaced with nonskid materials.

(i) Stair enclosures.

(1) Interior stairs shall be enclosed with construction complying with the requirements of table 3-4 except that:

(a) In buildings three stories or less in height excluding those classified in occupancy group J-1 or J-2 combustible construction group II, the enclosing construction may have a one hour fire resistant rating.

(b) Stairs in buildings or spaces classified in occupancy group J-3 and not more than three stories in height, need not be enclosed except as otherwise required in subdivision (a) of section 27-341 of article five of subchapter five of this chapter. Stairs may have open risers in one family dwellings and group homes.

(c) Unenclosed stairs in buildings classified in assembly occupancy group F may be permitted as provided in subchapter eight of this chapter.

(d) Stairs from floors or mezzanines may be unenclosed, with open or closed risers.

(e) In buildings classified in occupancy group J-2 occupied exclusively by not more than one family on each story without boarders, roomers or lodgers and not more than three stories in height, the enclosing construction may have a one hour fire-resistance rating which may be constructed of combustible material provided that the stair enclosure is protected with an automatic sprinkler system complying with the construction provisions of subchapter seventeen of this chapter.

(f) In buildings classified in occupancy group J-1 or J-2 not more than two stories in height of combustible construction group II, the enclosing construction may have a one hour fire-resistance rating which may be constructed of combustible material; however, where only one vertical exit is provided the stair enclosure shall be protected throughout with an automatic sprinkler system constructed in accordance with the provisions of subchapter seventeen of this chapter.

(g) Except as provided in subparagraphs (a), (e) and (f) of this paragraph, in all buildings or spaces classified in occupancy group J-1 or J-2, the enclosing construction shall be of masonry or an approved equivalent material having at least a two hour fire-resistant rating.

(2) Access stairs connecting not more than two stories which do not serve as a required exit may be constructed without an enclosure in buildings classified in other than occupancy group H-2. Such stairs shall be additional to and shall not obstruct or interfere with required exit facilities. When the first story below grade is served by an interior, unenclosed access stair, it shall be sprinklered in accordance with the construction provisions of subchapter seventeen of this chapter.

(3) The interior finish of interior stair enclosures shall be in accordance with the requirements of table 5-4.

(4) Stair enclosures shall be vented in accordance with the requirements for shafts in subdivision (d) of section 27-344 of article five of subchapter five of this chapter except that stair enclosures for buildings or spaces classified in occupancy group J-1 or J-2 shall be vented as follows:

a. In occupancy group J-2 buildings three stories in height and with not more than one dwelling unit per story or two stories in height with not more than two dwelling units per story, shall be provided with a skylight at least nine square feet in area, glazed with plain glass with a wire screen over and under and provided with fixed or movable ventilators having a minimum open area of forty square inches.

b. In occupancy group J-1 or J-2 buildings two stories in height with more than two dwelling units per story shall be provided with a skylight of at least twenty square feet in area, glazed with plain glass, with a wire screen over and under and provided with fixed or movable ventilators having a minimum open area of forty square inches.

c. In occupancy group J-1 buildings exceeding two stories in height and in occupancy group J-2 buildings three stories in height with more than one dwelling unit per story or exceeding three stories in height shall be provided with a skylight at least twenty square feet in area, glazed with plain glass with a wire screen over and under and provided with fixed or movable ventilators having a minimum open area of one hundred forty-four square inches. In lieu of the skylight and ventilators a window of equal area may be provided with fixed louvres having a minimum open area of one hundred forty-four square inches installed in or immediately adjacent to the window.

(5) When dwelling units are located over a space classified in occupancy group C or E on the street floor, they shall be provided with a separate enclosed interior stair, or with an exterior stair.

(6) Impact resistance. Stair enclosures serving occupancy group E spaces (office spaces) in high rise buildings constructed pursuant to applications filed on or after July 1, 2006 shall comply with rules to be promulgated by the commissioner establishing minimum impact resistance standards. Such rules shall permit compliance with assemblies comprising approved reinforced construction boards affixed onto stud framing. The commissioner shall promulgate such rules on or before January 1, 2006.

(j) Openings and obstructions to stair enclosures. No piping of any kind, with the exception of piping required or permitted in subchapter seventeen of this code, shall be permitted within a stair enclosure. No openings of any kind, other than windows, fire department access panels, exit doors and openings specifically authorized in reference standard RS 5-18 shall be permitted within a stair enclosure. Pipes required or permitted by such subchapter seventeen and protected in accordance therewith which do not reduce the required clearances of the enclosure may be permitted. Ducts protected in accordance with the requirements of subchapter thirteen of this chapter, which do not reduce the required clearances of the enclosure, may be permitted. In addition, in buildings in occupancy group J-2, which are three stories or less in height and occupied by not more than two families on each story, a door from an apartment may open directly into a stair, and the door may swing into the apartment.

(k) Roof access. (1) Except as otherwise provided for in paragraphs two and three of this subdivision, in buildings or in building sections more than three stories or forty feet high with roofs having a slope of less than twenty degrees, access to the roof shall be provided by at least one interior stair, except that access to setback roof areas may be through a door or window opening to the roof. Interior stairs extending to roofs shall be enclosed in bulkheads of fire-resistant construction meeting the requirements of subchapter five of this chapter.

(2) In buildings or in building sections classified in occupancy group J-1 or J-2 more than two stories in height, except as otherwise provided for in paragraph three of this subdivision, with roofs having a slope of fifteen degrees or less all interior stairs, except those terminating at a level of a setback roof, shall extend to the roof and shall be enclosed in bulkheads of fire-resistive construction meeting the requirements of subchapter five of this chapter. Stairs terminating at the level of a setback shall provide access to the setback roof areas through a door except where the setback is less than four feet in width, measured from the inside of the parapet wall, and less than ten feet in length.

(3) In buildings or in building sections classified in occupancy group J-1 or J-2 two stories in height and in occupancy group J-2 three stories in height with not more than one dwelling unit per story with roofs having a slope of fifteen degrees or less, access to the roof shall be provided through a scuttle at least twenty-one inches in width and twenty-eight inches in length and shall comply with subdivision (c) of section 27-338 of article four of subchapter five of this chapter. Scuttles shall be located within each stair enclosure with a stationary iron ladder leading thereto.

(l) Spiral stairs. Spiral stairs may serve as access stairs between two floors or levels in accordance with the provisions of paragraph two of subdivision (i) of this section. Such stairs may not serve as required exits, except that unenclosed spiral stairs when built of noncombustible materials and having a tread length of at least thirty inches may serve as exits from mezzanines or balconies having an occupant load not exceeding twenty-five persons.

[See tabular material in printed version]

Notes for Table 6-4:

1 Treads may be undercut a distance equal to the nosing. A nosing shall not be required when tread width is eleven inches or wider.

2 The proportions and dimensions of treads and risers may be adjusted in buildings classified in occupancy group G to suit the age of occupants, subject to the approval of the commissioner.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. A two-story building, erected in 1921, with stores on the first floor and a hall on the second floor which was leased as a meeting and club room and for conducting social activities was a public building within the meaning of Code § C26-235.0 and hand rails were required on both sides of the exit stairs under Code § C26-292.0. Thus, where there was a hand rail on only one side of the stairs, the building owner was liable for the death of plaintiff's intestate who fell while going down the stairs as a result of the absent railing.-Courtney v. Abro Hardware Corp., 1 N.Y. 2d 717, 134 N.E. 2d 680 [1956], aff'g without opinion 286 App. Div. 261, 142 N.Y.S. 2d 790 [1955].

¶ 2. Five carpeted steps leading from the main salon in defendant's store to a fitting room were not "required exit stairs" within the meaning of this section. Hence, even though there were no hand railings along side the steps, inasmuch as the steps were not defective, the store owner was not liable for injuries received by a fall on the steps.-Union Bank and Trust Co. of Los Angeles v. Hattie Carnegie, Inc., 1 App. Div. 2d 199, 149 N.Y.S. 2d 122 [1956].

¶ 3. An employee of the lessee of premises (not constituting a tenant-factory as defined in the Labor Law), where the lessee had undertaken to keep the building in good repair, may not recover from the landlord, out of possession and control of the premises, for injuries sustained in a fall on an allegedly defective stairway.-Carlson v. Costan Corp., 6 A.D. 2d 870, 177 N.Y.S. 2d 585 [1958], aff'd 9 N.Y. 2d 705, 213 N.Y.S. 2d 86, 173 N.E. 2d 806 [1961].

¶ 4. Where a contractor, in building a church, installed a handrail on the exterior stairs which terminated at the bottom step, this rail was not "continuous between landings", and the contractor was liable to a person who sustained a fall on the bottom step.-Crowley v. Veit & Co., 141 (113) N.Y.L.J. (6-11-59) 14, Col. 1 T.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. This section imposes specific obligations on owners of buildings as to minimum handrail clearance, which could result in liability to third parties whether or not the owner had actual notice of an alleged defect and even if the premises are leased to another who has the responsibility to maintain the premises pursuant to the lease. Guzman v. Haven Plaza Hous., 69 NY2d 559, [1987].

¶ 2. Exterior stairs used as exits in lieu of interior stairs pursuant to Ad Cd §§ 27-366, 27-376 need not meet the handrail requirements for interior stairs of Ad Cd § 27-375(f) unless it is established such exterior stairs and not other exterior stairs are being used to satisfy the requirements. Taylor v. City of New York, 150 Misc. 2d 528 [1991] reversing 144 Misc. 2d 1029.

¶ 3. Plaintiff sought recovery for injuries allegedly sustained when she tripped and fell on cement stairs leading from the defendants' one family home. In the absence of proof that the defendant homeowner had any notice of a defective condition, the owner, who engaged an independent contractor to do work, was not liable for the contractor's allegedly negligent performance, even though the stairway in question was not constructed in accordance with code requirements regardng handrails. Bula v. Scalero, 196 A.D.2d 521 , 601 N.Y.S.2d 171 (2nd Dept. 1993).

¶ 4. Where an injured plaintiff alleges that a fall occurred because of a crack in the steps, and does not show that the lack of a handrail was the cause of the accident, plaintiff cannot use Section 27-375 to establish a case against an out-of-possession landlord. Deebs v. Rich-Mar Realty Assocs., 248 A.D.2d 185, 670 N.Y.S.2d 16 (App.Div. 1st Dept. 1998).

¶ 5.The statute (with certain exceptions) requires that interior stairs have a handrail. In one case, a vestibule area was indoors but led to a door which in turn provided an exit to the outdoors. The vestibule was covered by a roof and was enclosed by walls and was protected from the elements. The court held that a stairway located in the vestibule was an interior stairway for purposes of the statute. Eisenpresser v. Staples, Inc., N.Y.L.J., Apr. 14, 1999, page 27, col. 2 (Sup.Ct. New York Co.).

¶ 6. Where a lease gives the landlord the right to enter the demised premises for the purpose of conducting an inspection and making repairs, and the absence of a handrail on a stairway constitutes a statutory violation, that violation may give rise to liability on the part of the landlord to a person injured by reason of the defect. Nameny v. East New York Savings Bank, 267 A.D.2d 108, 699 N.Y.S.2d 412 (1st Dept. 1999).

¶ 7. In one case, a lease called for the landlord to perform "structural repairs and replacements." Although the lease did not specifically mention handrails on stairs, the court held that the landlord was required to install handrails. Thus, a plaintiff who fell allegedly because of the lack of handrails could maintain a cause of action against the landlord, based on the lease provision and based upon Admin. Code Sec. 27-375, which imposed the handrails requirement. Cortes v. 1515 Williamsbridge Assocs., 295 A.D.2d 188, 743 N.Y.S.2d 476 (1st Dept. 2002).

¶ 8. In one case, the City leased space to the Port Authority, which subleased it to Halmar Equities, which in turn sub-sub-leased it to DJ Air Services. An employee of DJ was directed to take boxes down from a high shelf in a warehouse. To do so, he stood on a metal crate that was then raised by a forklift to the shelf, about 10 feet off the ground. While standing in the crate on the forklift, the employee began removing boxes from the shelf and loading them onto the crate. To retrieve boxes, he put his foot on the shelf and leaned forward. While doing so, plaintiff's foot fell through the open space between the metal bars on the shelving unit, causing him to fall to the ground. According to plaintiff, the boxes should have been on a wooden pallet, and, since the warehouse was dark, he did not see that the pallets were missing. The court held that the lessor was not responsible in negligence for conditions upon land after the transfer of possession and control. Even though the lease contained the right of re-entry for the purpose of inspecting the premises, such right of re-entry was not alone a basis for liability, and liability had to be based on a significant structural or design defect that was contrary to a specific safety provision. Section 27-375 states that adequate means for producing artificial light by electricity must be provided in every room or floor space in every building. Where there is no evidence that the lessor failed to provide adequate means of lighting, and the accident allegedly was due to light bulbs being out, this was a question of routine maintenance, which was the responsibility of the lessee, not the lessor. Thus, the statute did not form a basis for plaintiff to recovery against the lessor. Erkocaj v. Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, 2 Misc.2d 1001(A), 2004 WL 354213 (Sup.Ct. Queens Co.).

¶ 9. The statute imposes a nondelegatable duty upon building owners to maintain their premises in a safe condition, but did not to a subcontractor/site manager. Weiss v. City of New York, 16 A.D.3d 680, 792 N.Y.S.2d 530 (2d Dept. 2005).

¶ 10. A ladder which provided access between the first floor of the building and the basement did not qualify as "interior stairs," because it did not serve as a required exit from the building. Weiss v. City of New York, 16 A.D.3d 680, 792 N.Y.S.2d 530 (2d Dept. 2005).

¶ 11. See Mansfield v. Dolcemascolo, 34 A.D.3d 763, 826 N.Y.S.2d 115 (2d Dept. 2006), note 4 under Admin. Code § 27-232.

¶ 12. Stairs do not qualify as "interior stairs" within the meaning of the statute, where they do not serve as a required exit from the building. Schwartz v. Hersh, 50 AD3d 1011, 856 NYS2d 640 (App. Div. 2nd Dept. 2008.).

§ 27-376 Exterior stairs.

Exterior stairs may be used as exits in lieu of interior stairs provided they comply with all of the requirements for interior stairs, except enclosure, and except as modified below:

(a) Capacity. The capacity of exterior stairs shall be as listed in table 6-1.

(b) Height limitation. No exterior stair shall exceed seventy-five feet or six stories in height.

(c) Construction. Exterior stairs shall be constructed entirely of noncombustible materials, except that in buildings classified in occupancy groups other than G, F, or H, of construction group II, located outside the fire districts, exterior stairs may be built of combustible materials when the buildings are two stories or thirty feet in height or less and have an occupant load not exceeding forty persons per floor above the street below. Exterior stairs shall be roofed, and shall be protected along their outer sides as required for exterior corridors in subdivision (f) of section 27-369 of this article. Treads, landings, and platforms shall be solid and unperforated. Risers may be partially open to permit water and snow to drain.

(d) Opening protective. In buildings four stories or fifty feet in height or more, there shall be no openings in the building walls adjoining exterior stairs other than one-quarter hour self-closing swinging fire doors, and no openings nearer than ten feet to the stair (measured horizontally) that are not provided with three-quarter hour opening protectives.

(e) Location. No exterior stair shall be located nearer than ten feet to an interior lot line.

(f) Discharge. Exterior stairs shall extend continuously to grade.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. Exterior stairs used as exits in lieu of interior stairs pursuant to Ad Cd §§ 27-366, 27-376 need not meet the handrail requirements for interior stairs of Ad Cd § 27-375(f) unless it is established such exterior stairs and not other exterior stairs are being used to satisfy the requirements. Taylor v. City of New York, 150 Misc. 2d 528 [1991] reversing 144 Misc. 2d 1029.

¶ 2. In one case, the plaintiff fell on ice while ascending an outside staircase, which staircase consisted of three steps leading from a path to a platform. The platform began as the fourth step of the staircase and ended at the door which led to the interior of the building. At one end of the staircase was a handrail, and the other side of the staircase was framed by a fence. Section 27-376 states that an "exterior" staircase may be used as an exit in lieu of "interior" stairs, provided that the staircase meets the same requirements as those applicable for interior stairs. Section 27-375, which covers interior stairs, requires that if the stairway is more than 88 inches wide, it must have an intermediate handrail dividing the stairway. The plaintiff argued that this was an "exterior" stairway within the meaning of the statute and that the failure to have the intermediate handrail constituted negligence. The court, however, held that this was not an exterior stairway within the meaning of the law. The law covers a stairway which constitutes a means of egress from the interior to the exterior, while the instant stairway was simply a means of egress from an area outside the building to the street. In other words, if the stairs do not constitute an "exit," they will not come under the law, the court said. Gaston v. New York City Housing Auth., 258 A.D.2d 220, 695 N.Y.S.2d 83 (1st Dept. 1999).

§ 27-376.1 Fire tower.

Fire towers may be used as exits in lieu of interior stairs provided they comply with all of the requirements for interior stairs, except as modified below.

(a) The enclosing walls of fire towers shall be of incombustible materials or assemblies having a fire-resistance rating of at least four hours. Such walls shall be without openings, except for doors serving as means of egress.

(b) At each story served by a fire tower, access to the stairways of such fire tower shall be provided through outside balconies or fireproof vestibules. Such balconies or vestibules shall be at least three feet eight inches in width and shall have unpierced floors of incombustible materials and shall be provided with substantial guard railings at least four feet high, without any openings greater than five inches in width.

(c) Such balconies or vestibules of fire towers shall be level with the floors of the structure and the platforms of the stairs connected by such balconies. Such balconies or vestibules shall be separated from the structure and the stairs by self-closing swinging doors with a one and one-half hour fire protection rating, capable of being opened from both sides without the use of a key or other unlocking device.

(d) Balconies or vestibules of fire towers shall open on a street or yard, or on a court open vertically to the sky for its full height, having a minimum net area of one hundred five square feet and a minimum dimension of seven feet. The opening from the vestibule to the street, yard or court shall have a minimum area of eighteen square feet and a minimum dimension of two feet six inches. It shall be unlawful to leave openings in the court walls surrounding an interior fire tower, other than the openings from the vestibules, within fifteen feet of the balcony, except that self-closing windows with a three-quarter hour fire protection rating may be used if such windows are at least ten feet from the balcony, provided that the area of the court is at least twelve feet by twenty-four feet.

(e) Fire towers shall terminate at grade level and shall exit directly to the street independently of corridors serving other stairways, except when the fire tower terminates in the ground floor corridor outside of the inner vestibule and within ten feet of the building line.

(f) Fire tower stairs shall comply in all other respects with the applicable requirements of section 27-375 of this code.

Interior or exterior ramps may be used as exits in lieu of interior or exterior stairs provided they comply with the applicable requirements for interior stairs in section 27-375 of this article or exterior stairs in section, 27-376 of this article respectively, and with the following:

(a) Capacity. The capacity of ramps shall be as listed in table 6-1.

(b) Maximum grade. Ramps shall not have a slope steeper than 1 in 8, except that in buildings classified in occupancy group H the slope shall not exceed 1 in 12, and except as provided in subchapter eight of this chapter for places of assembly.

(c) Design.

(1) CHANGES IN DIRECTION. Ramps shall be straight, with changes in direction being made at level platforms or landings, except that ramps having a slope not greater than one in twelve at any place, may be curved.

(2) LENGTH. The sloping portion of ramps shall be at least three feet but not more than thirty feet long between level platforms or landings.

(3) PLATFORMS. Level platforms or landings, at least as wide as the ramp, shall be provided at the bottom, at intermediate levels where required, and at the top of all ramps. Level platforms shall be provided on each side of door openings into or from ramps having a minimum length in the direction of exit travel of three feet, and when a door swings on the platform or landing a minimum length of five feet.

(4) DOORS. Door openings into or from ramps shall comply with the requirements for stairs in subdivision (g) of section 27-375 of this article. No door shall swing over the sloping portion of a ramp.

(5) GUARDS AND RAILINGS. Guards and railings of ramps shall comply with the applicable requirements of subdivision (f) of section 27-375 of this article except that only ramps having a slope steeper than one in twelve need comply with the requirements for handrails and intermediate handrails shall not be required.

(6) SURFACE. Interior ramps exceeding a slope of one in ten and all exterior ramps shall be provided with nonslip surfaces.

(7) Ramps for people having physical disabilities shall additionally comply with the requirements of reference standard RS 4-6.

§ 27-378 Escalators.

Escalators may be used as exits in lieu of interior stairs provided they comply with all of the requirements of subchapter eighteen of this chapter and with the applicable requirements for enclosed interior stairs, except as modified below:

(a) Capacity. The capacity of escalators as listed in table 6-1 shall be based on the following:

Minimum Width (in.) At:
Step	Balustrade1	Enclosure2	Units of Exit Width
24	32	52	11/2
40	48	68	21/2

Notes for Table:

[1] Measured twenty-seven inches above front edge of tread.

[2] Clear width above handrails.

(b) Acceptable exits. Only escalators moving in the direction of exit travel may be credited as exits, except that any escalator may be credited when it is connected to an automatic fire detection system that will cause it to stop simultaneously with the detection of fire. The detection system shall comply with the construction provisions of subchapter seventeen of this chapter. Where an escalator provides exit facilities from only one floor of a building, the automatic detection system shall be located on that floor. Where escalators provide exit facilities from more than one floor, the detection system shall be located on all floors so served, and shall cause escalators on all floors of the section of the building that they serve to stop operating. The stopping mechanism shall operate to bring the escalator to a gradual, rather than an abrupt stop.

(c) Escalators not used as exits. Escalators that do not serve as exits, and that connect more than two stories of a building, shall be completely enclosed with noncombustible construction having a three-quarter hour fire-resistance rating, except that in buildings completely protected by an automatic sprinkler system complying with the construction requirements of subchapter seventeen of this chapter, such escalators may, alternatively, be protected by one of the methods specified in subchapter eighteen of this chapter.

CASE NOTES FROM FORMER SECTION

¶ 1. Section C26-280.0, which requires lighting of means of egress, did not apply per se to a building owned by an educational institution which was erected in 1929 (§ C26-272.0). However, since the building was used for instruction and was not occupied by the defendant for such purpose until after January 1, 1938, it must be maintained in compliance with Article 13 (§ C26-715.0). The structure was not exempt where defendant's occupancy was not exclusive; at the time of the accident the building was also occupied by Brooklyn Paramount Theater. Pursuant to § C26-719.0 and § C26-743.0 defendant was required to provide artificial light for the stairs upon which plaintiff fell. In any event, lighting was required by § 159 of the New York City Code of Ordinances which was still applicable to buildings erected prior to 1938 (Administrative Code § 982-1.0).-Abrash v. Long Island University, 22 App. Div. 2d 940, 255 N.Y.S. 2d 930 [1964].

¶ 2. Where plaintiff tripped when going toward her seat and was injured as she walked down a step located near a door, the jury in considering the common law elements of liability was bound to consider whether defendant has breached its duty under this section to equip the area where plaintiff fell "with artificial lighting facilities".-Schneider v. Carnegie Hall Corp., 54 A.D. 2d 898, 387 N.Y.S. 2d 994 [1976].

§ 27-383 Requirements.

(a) Exit signs. Except in occupancy groups J-2 and J-3, the location of every exit on every floor and every opening from a room classified in occupancy group J-1 and containing cubicles shall be clearly indicated by exit signs. Such signs shall be placed at an angle with the exit opening if such placement is required for the signs to serve their purpose. In long corridors, in open floor areas, and in all other situations where the location of the exit may not be readily visible or understood, directional signs shall be provided to serve as guides from all portions of the corridor or floor.

(b) Exit path markings in high rise office buildings and in occupancy group E high rise buildings. On and after July 1, 2006 all high rise office buildings and all high rise buildings classified in occupancy group E shall have exit path markings conforming to this subdivision. This provision shall be retroactive and shall apply to buildings constructed on and after such date and to buildings in existence on such date. All exit path markings required herein shall be of an approved photoluminescent material. The markings shall be washable, non-toxic, non-radioactive, and if subjected to fire must be self extinguishing when the flame is removed.

(1) All doors opening to corridors, to an exit, or to an exit passageway, shall be marked with the word "exit".

(2) Within exit stairs, horizontal extensions in exit stairs, horizontal exits, supplemental vertical exits and exit passageways, except within street level lobbies, there shall be directional markings.

(3) Required markings for exit paths shall comply with the technical standards for installation and placement to be set forth in a reference standard. Such reference standard shall be designated RS 6-1 and shall be adopted on or before January 1, 2006.

ARTICLE 7 EXIT SIGNS AND OTHER MARKINGS*32

§ 27-383.1 Additional requirements for high rise office buildings and occupancy group E high rise buildings.

In high rise office buildings and in occupancy group E high rise buildings:

(a) Illuminated exit signs complying with section 27-386 of this subchapter shall be placed in stairwells with horizontal extensions to indicate the transition from vertical to horizontal direction and at turns along the horizontal path.

(b) A supplementary sign complying with sections 27-394 and 27-395 of this subchapter, except that the lettering and numerals shall be at least one inch high, indicating the location of a recessed re-entry door, shall be securely attached on the wall of the landing that faces the evacuee on the stairs.

(c) In stairs where there is no entry or exiting from such stair for more than four floors, a sign complying with sections 27-394 and 27-395, except that the lettering and numerals shall be at least one inch high, shall be securely attached at the beginning of the descent into such portion of the stair on the wall of the landing that faces the evacuee on the stairs stating the location of the next re-entry or exiting floor. On each floor within such portion of the stair a sign complying with sections 27-392 and 27-395 shall be securely attached to the wall of the landing that faces the evacuee on the stairs approximately five feet above the floor indicating the floor number.

(d) Signs shall be readily visible from the egress direction.

(e) High rise office buildings and high rise buildings classified in occupancy group E in existence on the effective date of this section shall comply with this section on or before July 1, 2007. For the purpose of this section, a high rise building shall be deemed to be in existence on the effective date of this section if on such effective date it is complete or under construction or where an application for approval of plans was filed with the department prior to such effective date and construction commenced within two years after such effective date.

§ 27-385 Exit sign design.

Exit signs shall read only "exit" and shall be of the externally lighted, internally lighted, or electroluminescent type, except that they may be nonilluminated in buildings not provided with artificial lighting.

(a) The artificial light source on externally lighted signs shall provide a red light, either by the use of an incandescent colored bulb or other visible red light source, so as to provide at least twenty-five foot candles on the exposed face of the sign. Visibility of the sign shall not be obscured by the location of the light source.

(b) For internally lighted signs, the average initial brightness of the letters shall be at least twenty-five ft. lamberts, and where an illuminated background is used, its average initial brightness shall be at least two hundred fifty ft. lamberts. The light source shall not be modified or changed nor shall lamp life multipliers be used so as to reduce these brightness levels.

(c) The letters of exit signs shall be red. The background of externally lighted signs shall be white. The background of internally lighted signs shall be either stenciled metal with a light gray or white color, or translucent frosted, opal glass, slow-burning plastic, or the plastic edge-glow type with white plastic separators. The letters for internally lighted signs shall be translucent red.

(d) The letters shall be block lettering at least four and one-half inches high with nine-sixteenths inch strokes, except in buildings and spaces classified in occupancy group F and J-1, where they shall be at least eight inches high with the strokes at least three-quarters of an inch wide.

(e) In locations where breakage may occur, exit signs shall be of shock resistant materials, or shall otherwise be protected against breakage.

(f) Except for buildings not provided with artificial lighting and buildings which maintain one or more auxiliary systems for emergency exit lighting in the event of a public utility failure, there shall be either (1) an illuminated exit sign with the background thereon made of an approved phosphorescent material or (2) a supplemental exit sign made of an approved phosphorescent material with an opaque text and placed adjacent to or as close as possible to such illuminated sign. The phosphorescent material after exposure to normal lighting conditions shall be capable of remaining visible in total darkness for a period of at least eight hours. The signs shall be washable, non-toxic, nonradioactive and if subjected to fire must be self-extinguishing when the flame is removed.

ARTICLE 8 EXIT SIGNS FOR EXISTING BUILDINGS

§ 27-389 Designation of required means of egress.

(a) Except for spaces classified in occupancy J-2 and J-3, the location of each required means of egress on every floor of every structure shall be clearly indicated by exit signs. Such signs shall be placed at an angle with the exit doorway if such placement shall be required for such signs to serve their purpose adequately. These signs shall be of an approved phosphorescent material, which after exposure to normal lighting conditions shall be capable of remaining visible in total darkness for a period of at least eight hours. They shall also be washable, non-toxic, non-radioactive, and if subjected to fire must be self-extinguishing when the flame is removed. Except for illuminated signs, these signs shall have a phosphorescent background and opaque text. Where means of egress were required to be indicated by an illuminated sign, there shall be either (1) an illuminated exit sign with the lettering thereon made of the approved phosphorescent material, or (2) a supplemental exit sign made of the approved phosphorescent material with an opaque text, and placed adjacent to or as close as possible to such illuminated sign.

(b) Except for spaces classified in occupancy groups J-2 and J-3, in long corridors, in open floor areas and in all other situations where the location of the means of egress may not be readily discernible or understood by the occupants, directional signs shall be provided and maintained to serve as guides from all portions of the floor or corridor. These signs shall be of an approved phosphorescent material which after exposure to normal lighting conditions shall be capable of remaining visible in total darkness for a period of at least eight hours. They shall also be washable, non-toxic, non-radioactive, and if subjected to fire must be self-extinguishing when the flame is removed. Except for illuminated signs these signs shall have a phosphorescent background and opaque text. Where a directional sign was required to be illuminated there shall be either (1) an illuminated directional sign with the lettering, indicator, symbol or other device thereon made of the aforesaid phosphorescent material, or (2) a supplemental directional sign with the same lettering, indicator, symbol or device as appears on the illuminated sign, but opaque, on a background made of the aforesaid phosphorescent material and placed adjacent to or as close as possible to such illuminated sign.

(c) Except where otherwise permitted by the provisions of any law, the lettering of exit signs shall be of letters of at least eight inches high.

(d) In those buildings not provided with artificial lighting, in those buildings which maintain one or more auxiliary systems for emergency exit lighting in the event of a public utility failure, and in those buildings for which the installation of one or more such auxiliary systems is commenced on or before August sixth, nineteen hundred sixty-nine, the signs need not be phosphorescent but shall otherwise conform to this section.

SUBCHAPTER 6 MEANS OF EGRESS

ARTICLE 11 EMERGENCY POWER

§ 27-396.6 Applicability.

Emergency power systems meeting the requirements of this article shall be provided in the following buildings and building sections:

(a) High rise buildings and building sections classified in occupancy group C, E, G or H.

(b) Buildings and building sections classified in occupancy group E or G which do not exceed seventy-five feet in height but have a gross area of over fifteen thousand square feet per floor or a total gross area of one hundred thousand square feet or more.

(c) Spaces classified in occupancy group F-4 having an occupant load of three hundred or more persons.

(d) Buildings and building sections classified in occupancy group J-1.

(e) Buildings and building sections containing an atrium.

Panels of polished wired glass at least one-quarter inch thick, not exceeding seven hundred twenty square inches in area and not more than forty-eight inches in any linear dimension, may be used in the sides of spray booths.

(1) Spray booths shall be provided with a mechanical ventilating system meeting the requirements of section 27-410 of this article.

(2) Each spray booth having a frontal area larger than nine square feet shall have a noncombustible deflector or curtain at least six inches deep installed along the upper outer edge of the booth, over the opening, and shall be protected with an automatic sprinkler system. The interior of ducts shall be protected with sprinklers complying with the construction requirements of subchapter seventeen of this chapter, installed not more than twelve feet apart in horizontal ducts, and the sprinklers shall be accessible through duct access doors.

(b) Dip tanks. Dip tanks, including their supports and drainboards when provided, shall be of an approved type.

§ 27-410 Ventilation.

Spraying or dipping spaces shall be mechanically ventilated during spraying or dipping operations so that the velocity of air is at least one hundred linear feet per minute in the breathing zone of the operator, conveying air toward the exhaust hood. The ventilating system shall be of sufficient capacity to prevent the accumulation of mist or vapors. Air shall be admitted to the spraying or dipping spaces in an amount equal to the capacity of the fan or fans and in a manner that prevents short-circuiting the path of air in the working zone of such spaces. The exhaust fan control shall be interconnected with spray guns so that they cannot be operated without the ventilation system being in operation. Exhaust fans shall, in addition, be arranged to operate independently of spray guns. Ventilation equipment shall be kept in operation for sufficient length of time after spraying or dipping operations to exhaust all vapors, fumes, or residues of spraying materials from the spray, space dip space, or drying room.

(a) Ventilating ducts shall run directly to the outer air and be protected with a hood against the weather. Ventilating ducts shall be installed in accordance with the requirements of subchapter thirteen of this chapter, but shall not terminate within ten feet horizontally of any chimney outlet, or within twenty feet of any exit or any opening in an adjoining wall.

(b) Make-up air shall be supplied from a point outside the spraying or dipping space.

(c) The exhaust system from any spraying, dipping or drying space shall not be connected to any other ventilating system or be discharged into a chimney or flue used for the purpose of conveying gases of combustion.

(d) Exhaust fan blades shall be constructed of nonferrous material. Fan blades not coming in direct contact with spraying fumes need not comply with this requirement.

(e) Adequate access doors or panels, tightly fitted, shall be provided to permit inspection and cleaning of ducts.

§ 27-415 Laboratories.

All laboratories required to register under the requirements of the New York city health code shall comply with the following:

(a) Construction. All buildings in which such laboratories occur shall be of noncombustible group I construction.

(b) Floors. All floors shall comply with the fire-resistance requirements for the class of construction, and provide the degree of radioactive resistance required by applicable city, state, and federal regulations. A finished material shall be applied to provide a continuous nonporous surface which may be readily removed.

(c) Interior finish. All insulation of acoustical treatments and interior partitions shall be of noncombustible material. Walls and ceilings shall have nonporous finishes of class A rating.

(d) Sprinkler protection. Automatic sprinkler protection complying with the construction provisions of subchapter seventeen of this chapter shall be provided, and such protection shall be designed for the type of combustible materials wherever such material is used, and for the radioactive material that may be expected to melt, vaporize, or oxidize under fire conditions. Laboratory equipment susceptible to damage from water or other materials used in the sprinkler system may be shielded by hoods except when the equipment provides a source of combustion. Where sprinkler protection uses water, or small water-spray installations are used to fight small isolated fires, floors shall be provided with drainage so that water may be carried to retention tanks for later disposal as required by the New York city health code when contamination of the water is to be anticipated.

(e) Electrical controls. Electrical controls and equipment shall be installed in accordance with the requirements of the electrical code of the city of New York.

(f) Ventilation. Exhaust air from areas in which radioactive materials are used or stored shall be exhausted to the outdoors in such manner as not to create a health hazard, and shall not be recirculated to other areas of the building. Air pressure in rooms in which radioactive materials are used or stored shall be maintained below the the air pressure of adjoining rooms, so that there is no flow of radioactive gases or dusts into adjoining rooms.

(1) Ducts shall be of sheet steel of not less than No. 16 manufacturers' standard gauge or of other equivalent noncombustible material having a melting point above eighteen hundred degrees Fahrenheit. Exhaust ducts within the building, on the discharge side of the fan, shall be welded airtight. Exhaust ducts within the building, on the suction side of the fan shall have laps in the direction of air flow with smoke-tight joints, and shall be subjected to a smoke test in accordance with the requirements for chimneys in subchapter fifteen of this chapter. Access hatches with tight-closing covers shall be provided for cleaning and for fire-fighting in the exhaust system ducts.

(2) Fume hoods shall be exhausted to the outdoors. Controls for hood fans shall be interlocked so that contaminated air cannot be drawn into any space from a hood where the exhaust fan is not in operation.

(3) Fan equipment other than the impeller and impeller housing shall be located outside the exhaust stream.

(4) When the degree of contamination of the exhaust stream exceeds the concentration limits permitted by the health code, the duct system shall be equipped with devices to decontaminate the air to a safe level before discharging to the outdoor air.

(g) Plumbing. Drainage lines from sinks used for radioactive wastes shall be without traps, and shall lead to retention tanks when required by the provisions of the New York city health code.

When any materials are subject to melting, vaporization, or oxidation under fire conditions, the storage vaults shall be constructed of walls having a fire-resistance rating of at least four hours, and the vaults shall be equipped with automatic sprinklers complying with the construction requirements of subchapter seventeen of this chapter and shall be vented through devices to decontaminate the air to a safe level. Doors opening into storage vaults shall meet shielding requirements and have a fire-protection rating of not less than three hours. All bins, shelving, partitions, and pallets in storage vaults shall be of noncombustible materials. Low hazard dry cleaning establishments shall be provided with mechanical ventilation adequate to effect four complete air changes per hour. Ventilating systems shall be arranged in such manner as to prevent solvent vapors from being admitted to the combustion area of any device requiring an open flame. Sufficient make-up air shall be introduced into all parts of the establishment to equal the air exhausted by the dry cleaning units, dryers, and exhaust ventilating system. Such air shall not contain any flammable vapors. Openings or stacks discharging solvent vapor-air mixtures to the outdoors shall be located in accordance with the provisions of subchapter thirteen of this chapter.

Coin-operated units shall be located within a diked area, all parts of which are impervious to the solvent used in such units. The diked section shall be a four inch curb above the floor. Provisions shall be made for the collection of solvent spillage into tanks of capacity sufficient to contain all of the solvent in the dry cleaning units served, and for return of the solvent to the cleaning units through a closed pipe system. Access doors to the space in back of the units shall be kept closed and locked. Solvent storage tanks and other sources of danger shall be so situated as to be inaccessible to the general public. In addition to the mechanical ventilation required for low hazard dry cleaning establishments, the following mechanical ventilation shall be provided:

(a) All dry cleaning units shall have facilities that create an inward flow of one hundred cubic feet of air per minute into the unit when the loading door is opened.

(b) Emergency ventilation of the space in back of the dry cleaning units shall be provided so that in emergencies a minimum of one air change per minute in the enclosed space will be provided. Emergency ventilation equipment shall be on a circuit that is separate from the general lighting and power circuits, and shall be taken off ahead of the main switchboard, or shall be connected to the emergency lighting power source when such source is provided.

(c) A scavenger duct system shall be provided in the space in back of the units at each unit, and shall be designed to pick up vapor surrounding the equipment near the floor and exhaust it at the rate of one hundred cubic feet per minute. Scavenger ducts shall not be less than five square inches in area.

Except as otherwise provided for in chapter four of this title or the rules of the fire commissioner, underground tank installations shall comply with the following:

(a) The tops of the tanks shall be at least two feet below finished grade and at least two feet below the level of any cellar or basement floor within ten feet of the tanks.

(b) Tanks shall be supported on foundations complying with subchapter eleven of this chapter.

(c) Tanks shall be located so that the forces from any building foundation and support loads are not transmitted to the tanks. The distance from any part of a tank to the nearest wall of any basement, pit or cellar, or from any property line that may be built upon, shall not be less than three feet.

(d) Tanks shall be covered with a structurally supported reinforced concrete slab at least eight inches thick extending at least twelve inches beyond the horizontal outlines of the tanks and placed over a coverage of suitable clean backfill material.

(e) All concrete shall have a minimum compressive strength of twenty-five hundred pounds per square inch at twenty-eight days.

ARTICLE 10 PUBLIC GARAGES

§ 27-455 Sprinklers.

(a) Automatic sprinkler protection complying with the construction provisions of article four of subchapter seventeen shall be provided as required for occupancy group B-1 or B-2 respectively, except that in existing buildings lawfully occupied as garages prior to December sixth, nineteen hundred sixty-eight, storage of forty-five thousand gallons or less of product having a flash point over one hundred degrees° F (tag open cup) in the cargo space of tank truck or other vehicles approved for such storage by the fire commissioner, pending delivery, shall not be deemed to require sprinkler protection.

(b) Smoke detection or thermostatic alarm with central office connection. A thermostatic alarm system or smoke detection system equipped with a central office connection complying with subchapter seventeen of this code, and reference standard RS-17-3 of the appendix to this code may be provided in lieu of the sprinkler system required under the preceding subdivision in existing buildings lawfully occupied as garages prior to December sixth, nineteen hundred sixty-eight, when the storage of fuel oils or other products having a flash point over one hundred degrees F (tag open cup) is twenty-two thousand five hundred gallons or more but not exceeding forty-five thousand gallons in the cargo space of tank trucks or other vehicles approved for such storage by the fire commissioner, pending delivery.

(c) Portable fire fighting appliances, as the fire commissioner may direct, shall be provided in existing buildings lawfully occupied as garages prior to December sixth, nineteen hundred sixty-eight, when the storage of fuel oils or other products, having a flash point over one hundred degrees F (tag open cup), in the cargo space of tank trucks or other vehicles approved for such storage by the fire commissioner, pending delivery, is less than twenty-two thousand five hundred gallons.

ARTICLE 10 PUBLIC GARAGES

§ 27-456 Ventilation.

Public garages shall be ventilated in accordance with provisions of section 27-766 of article eight of subchapter twelve of this chapter and the following:

(a) Garage spaces above or below grade except as provided in subdivision (e) of this section shall be provided with mechanical ventilation according to one of or a combination of the following methods:

(1) Air exhaust at the rate of not less than one cfm per square foot of total floor area with properly designed means for air inflow.

(2) Air supply at the rate of not less than one cfm per square foot of total floor area with properly designed means for air outflow.

(3) Air exhaust or air supply at a rate sufficient to maintain an average concentration of carbon monoxide not to exceed one hundred parts per one million parts of air for periods longer than one hour and with a maximum concentration at any time not to exceed four hundred parts of carbon monoxide per one million parts of air. The concentration of carbon monoxide shall be determined by periodic tests taken between three and four feet from the floor by means of approved carbon monoxide detector tubes or other equivalent means. This method of mechanical ventilation may be used only if the overall design includes automatic ventilating fan control by means of approved carbon monoxide monitoring devices or by other approved means located so as to provide full protection for the occupancy.

(b) The provisions of section 27-766 of article eight of subchapter twelve of this chapter shall apply.

(c) Air supply shall be taken from an uncontaminated source. Exhaust outlets shall be located in accordance with the requirements of subchapter thirteen with one-half of them located six inches above floor level. In public garages where motor vehicles are parked by mechanical means, the ventilation requirements shall be one-half of those required above.

(d) No automotive service pits shall be installed in floors below the street floor. Pits shall have mechanical exhaust ventilation taken from near the bottom.

(e) Garage spaces above grade provided with natural ventilation having a free openable area of at least five per cent of the total floor area of the space and having adjustable openings measuring at least six inches by four inches located within six inches of the floor and at most sixteen feet apart on all outside and court walls need not be provided with mechanical ventilation.

§ 27-488 Application.

This section shall apply to the construction, alteration and use of all indoor and outdoor pools intended for swimming or bathing purposes, except for pools that have less than eighteen inches in depth of water at every point. Pools above grade having a maximum water depth of forty-eight inches above grade and an area not exceeding five hundred square feet that are accessory to J-3 occupancies and that are privately used for noncommercial purposes shall be exempt from the provisions of this subchapter except that such pools shall comply with the requirements of section 27-493 of this article. All pools not exempt from the provisions of this subchapter shall comply with the applicable provisions of subchapter sixteen of this chapter. No building permit shall be required for pools exempted by this section.

Regardless of any contrary provision, any pool existing on January first, nineteen hundred sixty-nine, which is accessory to J-3 occupancies, and that is privately used for noncommercial purposes shall be exempt from the provisions of this subchapter except that such pools shall comply with the requirements of section 27-493 of this article.

§ 27-489 Construction.

Pools shall be constructed so as to be water tight and easily cleaned. They shall be built of nonabsorbent materials with smooth surfaces and shall be free of open cracks and open joints.

(a) Walls. The walls of pools shall be vertical for at least the top two feet six inches below the normal water level. The junctions between the side walls and the bottom shall be coved. A pool overflow shall be provided meeting the requirements of reference standard RS-16.

(b) Bottom slopes. The bottom of any portion of a pool where the water is less than five feet six inches deep shall have a maximum slope of one foot vertically for every fifteen feet horizontally.

(c) Ladders. There shall be a ladder or steps with handrails at the deep end and at the shallow end of every pool. Ladders and steps shall have nonslip treads.

(d) Walkways. Every pool shall have a walkway at least five feet wide around its entire perimeter. The walkway shall have a nonslip surface and be so constructed that it does not drain into the pool.

(e) Hand-holds. Every pool shall be constructed so that either the overflow gutter, if provided, or the top of the side walls afford a continuous hand-hold for bathers.

(f) Markings. Permanent markings showing the depth of the shallow end, break points, diving depth, and deep end shall be provided so as to be visible from both inside and outside the pool.

(g) Spectator area. Areas exclusively intended for spectators shall meet the applicable requirements of subchapter eight of this chapter for places of assembly.

(h) Diving boards and towers. Diving towers shall be rigidly constructed and permanently anchored. The depth of the water below a diving board shall be at least eight feet six inches for boards one meter (3.28 ft.) or less above the water. For diving boards more than one meter and not more than three meters (9 ft. 10 in.) above the water, the depth below the board shall be at least twelve feet. For diving boards or platforms more than three meters above the water, the depth below the board shall be at least sixteen feet. Indoor pools shall provide at least twelve feet overhead clearance above all diving boards.

(b) Materials. Inside the fire districts, ground signs shall be constructed entirely of noncombustible materials, except as permitted in sections 27-506 and 27-507 of this article. Outside the fire districts, the structure of ground signs exceeding twenty-five hundred square feet in facing or display area shall be constructed of noncombustible materials, and the facing of such signs shall be noncombustible, except as permitted in sections 27-506 and 27-507 of this article. The bottom of the facing of all ground signs shall be at least thirty inches above the ground, which space may be filled with open lattice work or decorative trim.

(c) Supports. Ground signs shall be constructed and anchored to resist loads acting in any direction on the sign, in accordance with the provisions of subchapter nine of this chapter.

(1) Anchors and supports shall be designed for safe bearing loads on the soil and for an effective resistance to pullout amounting to a force twenty-five per cent greater than the required resistance to overturning. Anchors and supports shall penetrate to a depth of at least four feet.

(2) Whenever anchors or supports consist of wood embedded in the soil, the wood shall be treated under pressure as specified in subchapter eleven of this chapter before erection. This requirement shall not apply to signs which are not to remain in place for more than six months.

(3) Members furnishing structural support for signs shall be designed in accordance with the requirements of subchapter ten of this chapter, and shall be of adequate thickness to meet the corrosion conditions.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. A court has held that this section was not pre-empted by the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act (FCLAA), 15 U.S.C. Sec. 1334(b). The section states that no requirement or prohibition based on smoking and health shall be imposed under state law with respect to the advertising or promotion of any cigarettes the packages of which are labeled in conformity with the provisions of this federal law. The court invalidated the "tombstone" provision of the city law, which limited advertising information in the restricted areas to black-and-white signs stating "tobacco products sold here." The law prohibited colors, non-textual images and non-conforming images, as being pre-empted by the FCLAA. However, the court upheld provisions of the city law which prohibited most outdoor advertising, and some indoor advertising, within 1000 feet of certain facilities such as schools and youth centers. The federal law did not pre-empt the city from enacting the 1000-feet rule, which does not impose format and content restrictions and does not require warning labels, but merely restricts the locations in which cigarette advertising signs can be placed. The 1000-rule, according to the court, is just a variation on a "run of the mill zoning regulation." Greater New York Metropolitan Food Council, Inc. v. Giuliani, 195 F.3d 100 (2d Cir. 1999).

Section 1. Declaration of legislative findings and intent. The Council of the City of New York hereby finds that certain tobacco product manufacturers have admitted engaging in strategies designed to advertise and promote tobacco products to minors and that such strategies undermine state and local laws prohibiting the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors. The Council further finds that the exposure of minors to such tobacco product advertising and promotion may be constitutionally restricted through reasonable targeted limitations on the advertising of such products near schools and other locations where children tend to congregate, and through a prohibition on the offering of promotions to persons under the age of eighteen. Thereby, the Council intends to strengthen compliance with and enforcement of laws prohibiting the sale or distribution of tobacco products to children and to protect children against such illegal sales.

Although the rate of smoking among adults nationwide decreased by 50% between 1971 and 1993, the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have reported that the rate of smoking among all high school students during the years 1991 through 1996 increased by over 26% and now stands at its highest rate since 1981. This dramatic increase in teenage smoking has occurred while all fifty states and the District of Columbia have had prohibitions in effect on the sale or distribution of cigarettes and other tobacco products to minors and while all tobacco product manufacturers were pledged to adhere to a voluntary industry code prohibiting advertisement of tobacco products that appeal to or influence minors. In New York City, under section 17-620 of the Administrative Code of the City of New York, section 1399-cc of the State Public Health Law and section 260.20 of the State Penal Law, it is illegal to sell tobacco products to a minor.

It has also been reported that nearly 90% of all smokers begin to smoke prior to the age of 18 and that the average child smoker starts daily smoking by the age of 14. Between 1991 and 1996 the rate of smoking among Hispanic high school students nationwide reportedly increased by over 34% while, during the same period, the rate of smoking among African-American high school students nationwide increased by over 48%; these rates of increased smoking are the highest in a decade. In New York City, as reported by the Department of Consumer Affairs, 200 children begin to smoke every day.

Similarly, a 1994 report by the United States Surgeon General containing data on the use of smokeless tobacco by minors reported that the market for smokeless tobacco had shifted dramatically toward young people since 1970. That report cited school-based surveys conducted in 1991 which estimated that 19.2% of ninth to twelfth grade boys use smokeless tobacco. Among high school seniors who had ever tried smokeless tobacco, the report said that 73% did so by the ninth grade.

A December 1995 investigative report, prepared for the Speaker of the Council and the Council's Youth Services Committee concerning the availability of beer and cigarettes to New York City minors and entitled Easy Access, found, inter alia, that "cigarettes are widely accessible to minors throughout New York City;" that minors participating in the investigation "successfully purchased cigarettes in 79 percent of all attempted cases;" and that "less than one out of five stores asked minors who purchased cigarettes for proof of age." The Easy Access report cited a 1992 Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) article entitled "Brand Logo Recognition by Children Aged 3 to 6 Years" which demonstrated that 30 percent of the three year olds and 91 percent of the six year olds surveyed could correctly match the Joe Camel cartoon trademark with Camel cigarettes. The Easy Access Report also referred to a 1991 JAMA report entitled "RJR Nabisco's Cartoon Camel Promotes Camel Cigarettes to Children" which estimated that illegal sales of Camel cigarettes to minors rose from $6 million per year before the advent of Joe Camel in 1988, to $476 million by the end of 1991. The 1991 JAMA report concluded that one-quarter of all Camel sales in 1991 were to minors.

In May 1996, the City Department of Consumer Affairs, joined by the Chair of the Council's Youth Services Committee, announced the results of a citywide enforcement program against tobacco product retailers who violated the law by selling tobacco products to minors. This citywide enforcement program, denoted Three Puffs and You're Out, was, at least in part, motivated by the Council's Easy Access investigative report discussed above. Two hundred tobacco retailers were targeted by this enforcement program. One-year suspensions of their tobacco retailer licenses were imposed on seventeen retailers who illegally sold tobacco products to minors three times during the preceding two years. Ninety-three of the retailers targeted for enforcement were found to be illegally selling cigarettes to minors, thirty-one of the retailers targeted for enforcement were illegally selling loose cigarettes to minors and thirty-six of the retailers targeted for enforcement had failed to post the required sign indicating that tobacco sales to minors are prohibited by local law.

A 1991 JAMA study concluded that "cigarette advertising encourages youth to smoke and should be banned." In a 1994 report, the National Institute of Medicine stated that "the substantial convergent evidence that advertising and promotion increase tobacco use by youths is impressive and, in the Committee's view, provides a strong basis for legal regulation." Similarly, a 1995 report by the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found that "cigarette marketing practices appeared to be the most likely to account for [the] increase in teen smoking initiation rates."

The federal Department of Health and Human Services' Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recently reported that "[i]n 1993, the tobacco industry spent a total of $6.2 billion on the advertising, promotion and marketing of cigarettes and smokeless tobacco. Of that number, 31 percent ($1.9 billion) was spent on advertising and promotional activities, 26 percent ($1.6 billion) was given to retailers in the form of cash allowances or retailer items to facilitate and enhance the sale of tobacco products, and, finally, 43 percent ($2.6 billion) was in the form of financial incentives (e.g. coupons, cents off, buy one/get one free, free samples) to consumers."

In announcing its final rules on the advertising and promotion of tobacco products, published in the Federal Register on August 28, 1996, the FDA commented upon the nexus between advertising and promotion and smoking among minors. The FDA observed that "the images typically associated with advertising and promotion convey the message that tobacco use is a desirable, socially approved, safe and healthful, and widely practiced behavior among young adults, whom children and youths want to emulate. As a result, tobacco advertising and promotion undoubtedly contribute to the multiple and convergent psychosocial influences that lead children and youths to begin using these products and become addicted to them." In that same announcement on its final rules on advertising and promotion of tobacco products, the FDA discussed the issue of federal preemption of state and local restrictions. The FDA specifically stated that it "believes the requirements it is establishing in this final rule set an appropriate floor for regulation of youth access to tobacco products but do not, as a policy matter, reflect a judgment that more stringent State or local requirements are inappropriate."

On March 20, 1997, as part of a settlement agreement signed by the Attorneys General of 17 states, including New York State, and Liggett & Myers Inc. and the Brooke Group, Ltd., cigarette manufacturers, the following statement was among those made by and on behalf of Liggett & Myers: "Liggett acknowledges that the tobacco industry markets to `youth', which means those under 18 years of age. . . ."

In light of the foregoing evidence that cigarettes are advertised and promoted to minors and that smoking by minors continues to dramatically increase despite laws banning the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors, the Council of the City of New York finds and declares that affirmative, reasonable and constitutionally permissible restrictions on tobacco product advertising and promotion may and must be enacted.

The purpose of this legislation is to promote enforcement of the aforementioned laws banning the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors and to thereby protect young people. The Council is cognizant of the necessity of acting within the protections afforded by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution and has, therefore, narrowly tailored the scope and effect of this legislation to impose reasonable time, place and manner restrictions on tobacco advertising aimed at or regularly seen by youth while not directly affecting advertising and promotions directed at adults. Indeed, the extensive testimony taken at various Committee hearings prompted the Council to narrow the scope of the prohibition on tobacco product advertisements to ensure that such advertisements are restricted only in those locations closest to where children congregate, and that tobacco product promotions are not given to children but are otherwise freely available to the adult population.

It is well settled law that the First Amendment protects commercial speech but to a lesser degree than the protection afforded other, "fully protected speech." In analyzing the constitutionality of commercial speech regulation, the United States Supreme Court prescribed a four-prong test in Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation v. Public Service Commission of New York, 447 U.S. 557 (1980). The Central Hudson test, which subsequent decisions have ratified and clarified, provides that government restrictions on commercial speech are lawful where: (1) the commercial speech at issue concerns a lawful activity and is not misleading; (2) the asserted governmental interest in restricting the commercial speech is substantial; (3) the restriction directly advances the governmental interest asserted; and (4) the restrictions are not more extensive than necessary to serve that governmental interest. The latter two requirements involve a determination that there is a reasonable "fit" between the government's ends and the means chosen to accomplish these ends. Board of Trustees of State Univ. of New York v. Fox, 492 U.S. 469, 480 (1989); see also, United States v. Edge Broadcasting Co., 509 U.S. 418 (1993).

The restrictions on commercial speech contained in this Council legislation are permissible under the Central Hudson four-prong test. The commercial speech at issue concerns a lawful activity and is not misleading, at least as it applies to consenting adults. The governmental interest in restricting the commercial speech at issue is one grounded in the pre-existing prohibition on the sale and distribution of tobacco products to minors and is geared directly towards countering the adverse impacts of an industry strategy admittedly directed at younger prospective smokers. By restricting the locations for advertisements that are more likely to be addressed to and most likely to be seen by minors, specifically to 1,000 feet from schools, child day care centers and the like, while still permitting tobacco product sellers to notify their customers that such products are available for purchase with a single tombstone advertisement which may be written in any language, this Council legislation directly advances the governmental interest in enforcing the ban on the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors. Similarly, by permitting tobacco product promotions to be offered and/or given to anyone of lawful age to purchase cigarettes, this Council legislation restricts only promotions designed to induce children to purchase cigarettes. Finally, as the restrictions in this Council legislation focus on modes and locations of communication that are most likely to have a direct impact upon minors, the restrictions contained in this Council legislation strike a balance between the commercial interest in selling tobacco products to persons of lawful age and the need to limit inducements to children who cannot lawfully purchase such products but are nonetheless doing so. Thus, the Council legislation is not more extensive than necessary to serve the governmental interests asserted herein. Other forms of advertising including newspapers, magazines, audio and video media, that are less likely to have a direct impact on minors, and all promotions directed to adults are not affected by this Council legislation. Moreover, street advertisements not within 1,000 feet of a school, child day care center, youth center, amusement arcade or playground, which can readily reach an adult population, are not affected by this Council legislation.

In Penn Advertising of Baltimore v. Baltimore, 101 F.3d 325 (4th Cir. 1995), the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit upheld a Baltimore city ordinance which prohibited advertising cigarettes in a publicly visible location against challenges grounded in the First Amendment to the United States Constitution and federal preemption. The court held that the Baltimore city ordinance is not preempted by the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act, which prohibits local enactments based on smoking and health with respect to cigarette advertising and promotion. The court reasoned that the ordinance "limits only the location of signs that advertise cigarettes, but it does not address the content of such advertisements. The ordinance neither imposes a duty nor relieves a burden on cigarette advertisers based on smoking and health. Moreover, the ordinance does not limit the ability of cigarette manufacturers to advertise generally in the media." The court also decided that the Baltimore ordinance is a permissible regulation under the Central Hudson four-prong test. Noting that "the governmental interest asserted in this case is to promote compliance with the state prohibition of the sale of cigarettes to minors," the court concluded that "the City's objective in reducing cigarette consumption by minors constitutes a substantial public interest." The court further concluded that "while the fit between the City's objective and the means selected to achieve them may not be perfect, it nevertheless falls well within the range tolerated by the First Amendment for the regulation of commercial speech."

The Council's legislation likewise only limits the locations where tobacco product advertisements may be placed. It addresses neither the location of advertising directed at adults nor the content thereof. As with the Baltimore cigarette ordinance, the Council's legislation neither imposes a duty on tobacco product manufacturers nor relieves a burden otherwise placed upon them related to smoking and health.

Ruling on another city ordinance that closely parallels this Council's legislation, on November 13, 1996, the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit upheld against First Amendment attack legislation enacted in the City of Baltimore prohibiting placement of stationary outdoor advertising of alcoholic beverages in areas where it was likely to be encountered by minors traveling to school or play. The Baltimore ordinance targeted individuals who could not legally purchase alcoholic beverages. This Council's legislation similarly targets minors who may not legally purchase cigarettes. Neither this legislation nor the Baltimore ordinance were directed toward or intended to affect adults who may legally purchase cigarettes and alcoholic beverages respectively. Neither this legislation nor the Baltimore ordinance bans all outdoor advertising of cigarettes and alcoholic beverages respectively. Instead, as did the Baltimore ordinance, this legislation merely restricts the time, place and manner of such advertisements.

Administrative Code of the City of New York

Title 27 Construction and Maintenance

CHAPTER 1 BUILDING CODE

SUBCHAPTER 7 SPECIAL USES AND OCCUPANCIES

ARTICLE 17-A YOUTH PROTECTION AGAINST TOBACCO ADVERTISING AND PROMOTION ACT*18

§ 27-508.2 Definitions.

For the purposes of this article, the following terms shall be defined as follows:

a. "Amusement arcade" means any enclosed business establishment, open to the public, whose primary purpose is the operation of coin-operated amusement devices within the meaning of subchapter three of chapter two of title 20 of this code.

b. "Child day care center" means (i) any child care arrangement, public, private or parochial child care center, school-age child care program, day nursery school, kindergarten, play school or other similar school or service operating pursuant to authorization, license or permit of the city or state, (ii) any facility that provides child care services as defined in section four hundred ten-p of the New York state social services law, or (iii) any child day care center as defined in section three hundred ninety of the New York state social services law. The definition of "child day care center" applies whether or not care is given for compensation but does not include child day care centers located in private dwellings and multiple dwelling units.

c. "Cigarette" means any product which consists of (i) any roll of tobacco wrapped in paper or in any substance not containing tobacco or (ii) any roll of tobacco wrapped in any substance containing tobacco which, because of its appearance, the type of tobacco used in the filler, or its packaging and labeling is offered for use or purchase by consumers as a cigarette described in (i) of this subdivision.

d. "Cigarette tobacco" means any product that consists of loose tobacco and is intended for use by consumers in a cigarette.

e. "Multiple dwelling" means any building or structure that may lawfully be occupied as the residence or home of three or more families living independently of each other.

f. "Multiple dwelling unit" means any unit of residential accommodation in a multiple dwelling.

g. "Person" means any natural person, partnership, co-partnership, firm, company, corporation, limited liability corporation, agency as defined in section eleven-hundred fifty of the New York city charter, association, joint stock association or other legal entity.

h. "Playground" means any outdoor premises or grounds owned or lawfully operated by or on behalf of, the board of education, the department of parks and recreation, or any public, private or parochial school, any child day care center or any youth center, which contains any device, structure or implement, fixed or portable, used or intended to be used by persons under the age of eighteen for recreational or athletic purposes including, but not limited to, play equipment such as a sliding board, swing, jungle gym, sandbox, climbing bar, wading pool, obstacle course, swimming pool, seesaw, baseball diamond, athletic field, or basketball court.

i. "Private dwelling" means any building or structure or portion thereof that may lawfully be occupied for residential purposes by not more than two families, including the grounds of such building or structure.

j. "School building" means any building or structure or any portion thereof, owned, occupied by, or under the custody or control of any public, private or parochial institution and lawfully used for the primary purpose of providing educational instruction to students at or below the twelfth grade level.

k. "Smokeless tobacco" means any product that consists of cut, ground, powdered, or leaf tobacco that is intended to be placed by the consumer in an oral cavity.

l. "Tobacco product" means a cigarette, smokeless tobacco or cigarette tobacco.

m. "Tobacco product advertisement" means any written word, picture, logo, symbol, motto, selling message, poster, placard, sign, photograph, device, graphic display or visual image of any kind, recognizable color or pattern of colors, or any other indicia of product identification identical or similar to, or identifiable with, those used for any brand of tobacco product, or any combination thereof, the purpose or effect of which is to promote the use or sale of a tobacco product through such means as, but not limited to, the identification of a brand of a tobacco product, a trademark of a tobacco product or a trade name associated exclusively with a tobacco product.

n. "Tobacco product promotion" means (i) any item or service marketed, licensed, sold or distributed, whether indoors or outdoors, which is not a tobacco product but which bears the brand of a tobacco product, a trademark of a tobacco product or a trade name associated exclusively with a tobacco product, alone or in conjunction with any written word, picture, logo, symbol, motto, selling message, poster, placard, sign, photograph, device, graphic display or visual image of any kind, recognizable color or pattern of colors, or any other indicia of product identification identical or similar to, or identifiable with those used for any brand of a tobacco product, or (ii) any gift or item other than a tobacco product offered or caused to be offered to any person purchasing a tobacco product in consideration of the purchase thereof, or to any person in consideration of furnishing evidence, such as credits, proofs-of-purchase, or coupons, of such purchase; provided, however, that a tobacco product promotion shall not include any gift or item provided through the exchange or redemption through the mail of any such credits, proofs-of-purchase, coupons or other evidence of the

o. "Youth center" means any building or structure or portion thereof, lawfully occupied by any person for the primary purpose of operating a trade school (including those conducting after-school, vocational, remedial, tutorial, educational assistance programs) or an indoor recreational center (including recreational, cultural, physical fitness, or sports programs) for persons under the age of eighteen years, and which has been certified as such to the department in accordance with the procedure to be set by the department. Such certification shall be accepted by the department but nothing in this subdivision shall prevent the commissioner from removing a certified youth center from consideration as a youth center if she or he determines it does not meet the criteria of a youth center.

Section 1. Declaration of legislative findings and intent. The Council of the City of New York hereby finds that certain tobacco product manufacturers have admitted engaging in strategies designed to advertise and promote tobacco products to minors and that such strategies undermine state and local laws prohibiting the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors. The Council further finds that the exposure of minors to such tobacco product advertising and promotion may be constitutionally restricted through reasonable targeted limitations on the advertising of such products near schools and other locations where children tend to congregate, and through a prohibition on the offering of promotions to persons under the age of eighteen. Thereby, the Council intends to strengthen compliance with and enforcement of laws prohibiting the sale or distribution of tobacco products to children and to protect children against such illegal sales.

Although the rate of smoking among adults nationwide decreased by 50% between 1971 and 1993, the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have reported that the rate of smoking among all high school students during the years 1991 through 1996 increased by over 26% and now stands at its highest rate since 1981. This dramatic increase in teenage smoking has occurred while all fifty states and the District of Columbia have had prohibitions in effect on the sale or distribution of cigarettes and other tobacco products to minors and while all tobacco product manufacturers were pledged to adhere to a voluntary industry code prohibiting advertisement of tobacco products that appeal to or influence minors. In New York City, under section 17-620 of the Administrative Code of the City of New York, section 1399-cc of the State Public Health Law and section 260.20 of the State Penal Law, it is illegal to sell tobacco products to a minor.

It has also been reported that nearly 90% of all smokers begin to smoke prior to the age of 18 and that the average child smoker starts daily smoking by the age of 14. Between 1991 and 1996 the rate of smoking among Hispanic high school students nationwide reportedly increased by over 34% while, during the same period, the rate of smoking among African-American high school students nationwide increased by over 48%; these rates of increased smoking are the highest in a decade. In New York City, as reported by the Department of Consumer Affairs, 200 children begin to smoke every day.

Similarly, a 1994 report by the United States Surgeon General containing data on the use of smokeless tobacco by minors reported that the market for smokeless tobacco had shifted dramatically toward young people since 1970. That report cited school-based surveys conducted in 1991 which estimated that 19.2% of ninth to twelfth grade boys use smokeless tobacco. Among high school seniors who had ever tried smokeless tobacco, the report said that 73% did so by the ninth grade.

A December 1995 investigative report, prepared for the Speaker of the Council and the Council's Youth Services Committee concerning the availability of beer and cigarettes to New York City minors and entitled Easy Access, found, inter alia, that "cigarettes are widely accessible to minors throughout New York City;" that minors participating in the investigation "successfully purchased cigarettes in 79 percent of all attempted cases;" and that "less than one out of five stores asked minors who purchased cigarettes for proof of age." The Easy Access report cited a 1992 Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) article entitled "Brand Logo Recognition by Children Aged 3 to 6 Years" which demonstrated that 30 percent of the three year olds and 91 percent of the six year olds surveyed could correctly match the Joe Camel cartoon trademark with Camel cigarettes. The Easy Access Report also referred to a 1991 JAMA report entitled "RJR Nabisco's Cartoon Camel Promotes Camel Cigarettes to Children" which estimated that illegal sales of Camel cigarettes to minors rose from $6 million per year before the advent of Joe Camel in 1988, to $476 million by the end of 1991. The 1991 JAMA report concluded that one-quarter of all Camel sales in 1991 were to minors.

In May 1996, the City Department of Consumer Affairs, joined by the Chair of the Council's Youth Services Committee, announced the results of a citywide enforcement program against tobacco product retailers who violated the law by selling tobacco products to minors. This citywide enforcement program, denoted Three Puffs and You're Out, was, at least in part, motivated by the Council's Easy Access investigative report discussed above. Two hundred tobacco retailers were targeted by this enforcement program. One-year suspensions of their tobacco retailer licenses were imposed on seventeen retailers who illegally sold tobacco products to minors three times during the preceding two years. Ninety-three of the retailers targeted for enforcement were found to be illegally selling cigarettes to minors, thirty-one of the retailers targeted for enforcement were illegally selling loose cigarettes to minors and thirty-six of the retailers targeted for enforcement had failed to post the required sign indicating that tobacco sales to minors are prohibited by local law.

A 1991 JAMA study concluded that "cigarette advertising encourages youth to smoke and should be banned." In a 1994 report, the National Institute of Medicine stated that "the substantial convergent evidence that advertising and promotion increase tobacco use by youths is impressive and, in the Committee's view, provides a strong basis for legal regulation." Similarly, a 1995 report by the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found that "cigarette marketing practices appeared to be the most likely to account for [the] increase in teen smoking initiation rates."

The federal Department of Health and Human Services' Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recently reported that "[i]n 1993, the tobacco industry spent a total of $6.2 billion on the advertising, promotion and marketing of cigarettes and smokeless tobacco. Of that number, 31 percent ($1.9 billion) was spent on advertising and promotional activities, 26 percent ($1.6 billion) was given to retailers in the form of cash allowances or retailer items to facilitate and enhance the sale of tobacco products, and, finally, 43 percent ($2.6 billion) was in the form of financial incentives (e.g. coupons, cents off, buy one/get one free, free samples) to consumers."

In announcing its final rules on the advertising and promotion of tobacco products, published in the Federal Register on August 28, 1996, the FDA commented upon the nexus between advertising and promotion and smoking among minors. The FDA observed that "the images typically associated with advertising and promotion convey the message that tobacco use is a desirable, socially approved, safe and healthful, and widely practiced behavior among young adults, whom children and youths want to emulate. As a result, tobacco advertising and promotion undoubtedly contribute to the multiple and convergent psychosocial influences that lead children and youths to begin using these products and become addicted to them." In that same announcement on its final rules on advertising and promotion of tobacco products, the FDA discussed the issue of federal preemption of state and local restrictions. The FDA specifically stated that it "believes the requirements it is establishing in this final rule set an appropriate floor for regulation of youth access to tobacco products but do not, as a policy matter, reflect a judgment that more stringent State or local requirements are inappropriate."

On March 20, 1997, as part of a settlement agreement signed by the Attorneys General of 17 states, including New York State, and Liggett & Myers Inc. and the Brooke Group, Ltd., cigarette manufacturers, the following statement was among those made by and on behalf of Liggett & Myers: "Liggett acknowledges that the tobacco industry markets to `youth', which means those under 18 years of age. . . ."

In light of the foregoing evidence that cigarettes are advertised and promoted to minors and that smoking by minors continues to dramatically increase despite laws banning the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors, the Council of the City of New York finds and declares that affirmative, reasonable and constitutionally permissible restrictions on tobacco product advertising and promotion may and must be enacted.

The purpose of this legislation is to promote enforcement of the aforementioned laws banning the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors and to thereby protect young people. The Council is cognizant of the necessity of acting within the protections afforded by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution and has, therefore, narrowly tailored the scope and effect of this legislation to impose reasonable time, place and manner restrictions on tobacco advertising aimed at or regularly seen by youth while not directly affecting advertising and promotions directed at adults. Indeed, the extensive testimony taken at various Committee hearings prompted the Council to narrow the scope of the prohibition on tobacco product advertisements to ensure that such advertisements are restricted only in those locations closest to where children congregate, and that tobacco product promotions are not given to children but are otherwise freely available to the adult population.

It is well settled law that the First Amendment protects commercial speech but to a lesser degree than the protection afforded other, "fully protected speech." In analyzing the constitutionality of commercial speech regulation, the United States Supreme Court prescribed a four-prong test in Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation v. Public Service Commission of New York, 447 U.S. 557 (1980). The Central Hudson test, which subsequent decisions have ratified and clarified, provides that government restrictions on commercial speech are lawful where: (1) the commercial speech at issue concerns a lawful activity and is not misleading; (2) the asserted governmental interest in restricting the commercial speech is substantial; (3) the restriction directly advances the governmental interest asserted; and (4) the restrictions are not more extensive than necessary to serve that governmental interest. The latter two requirements involve a determination that there is a reasonable "fit" between the government's ends and the means chosen to accomplish these ends. Board of Trustees of State Univ. of New York v. Fox, 492 U.S. 469, 480 (1989); see also, United States v. Edge Broadcasting Co., 509 U.S. 418 (1993).

The restrictions on commercial speech contained in this Council legislation are permissible under the Central Hudson four-prong test. The commercial speech at issue concerns a lawful activity and is not misleading, at least as it applies to consenting adults. The governmental interest in restricting the commercial speech at issue is one grounded in the pre-existing prohibition on the sale and distribution of tobacco products to minors and is geared directly towards countering the adverse impacts of an industry strategy admittedly directed at younger prospective smokers. By restricting the locations for advertisements that are more likely to be addressed to and most likely to be seen by minors, specifically to 1,000 feet from schools, child day care centers and the like, while still permitting tobacco product sellers to notify their customers that such products are available for purchase with a single tombstone advertisement which may be written in any language, this Council legislation directly advances the governmental interest in enforcing the ban on the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors. Similarly, by permitting tobacco product promotions to be offered and/or given to anyone of lawful age to purchase cigarettes, this Council legislation restricts only promotions designed to induce children to purchase cigarettes. Finally, as the restrictions in this Council legislation focus on modes and locations of communication that are most likely to have a direct impact upon minors, the restrictions contained in this Council legislation strike a balance between the commercial interest in selling tobacco products to persons of lawful age and the need to limit inducements to children who cannot lawfully purchase such products but are nonetheless doing so. Thus, the Council legislation is not more extensive than necessary to serve the governmental interests asserted herein. Other forms of advertising including newspapers, magazines, audio and video media, that are less likely to have a direct impact on minors, and all promotions directed to adults are not affected by this Council legislation. Moreover, street advertisements not within 1,000 feet of a school, child day care center, youth center, amusement arcade or playground, which can readily reach an adult population, are not affected by this Council legislation.

In Penn Advertising of Baltimore v. Baltimore, 101 F.3d 325 (4th Cir. 1995), the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit upheld a Baltimore city ordinance which prohibited advertising cigarettes in a publicly visible location against challenges grounded in the First Amendment to the United States Constitution and federal preemption. The court held that the Baltimore city ordinance is not preempted by the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act, which prohibits local enactments based on smoking and health with respect to cigarette advertising and promotion. The court reasoned that the ordinance "limits only the location of signs that advertise cigarettes, but it does not address the content of such advertisements. The ordinance neither imposes a duty nor relieves a burden on cigarette advertisers based on smoking and health. Moreover, the ordinance does not limit the ability of cigarette manufacturers to advertise generally in the media." The court also decided that the Baltimore ordinance is a permissible regulation under the Central Hudson four-prong test. Noting that "the governmental interest asserted in this case is to promote compliance with the state prohibition of the sale of cigarettes to minors," the court concluded that "the City's objective in reducing cigarette consumption by minors constitutes a substantial public interest." The court further concluded that "while the fit between the City's objective and the means selected to achieve them may not be perfect, it nevertheless falls well within the range tolerated by the First Amendment for the regulation of commercial speech."

The Council's legislation likewise only limits the locations where tobacco product advertisements may be placed. It addresses neither the location of advertising directed at adults nor the content thereof. As with the Baltimore cigarette ordinance, the Council's legislation neither imposes a duty on tobacco product manufacturers nor relieves a burden otherwise placed upon them related to smoking and health.

Ruling on another city ordinance that closely parallels this Council's legislation, on November 13, 1996, the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit upheld against First Amendment attack legislation enacted in the City of Baltimore prohibiting placement of stationary outdoor advertising of alcoholic beverages in areas where it was likely to be encountered by minors traveling to school or play. The Baltimore ordinance targeted individuals who could not legally purchase alcoholic beverages. This Council's legislation similarly targets minors who may not legally purchase cigarettes. Neither this legislation nor the Baltimore ordinance were directed toward or intended to affect adults who may legally purchase cigarettes and alcoholic beverages respectively. Neither this legislation nor the Baltimore ordinance bans all outdoor advertising of cigarettes and alcoholic beverages respectively. Instead, as did the Baltimore ordinance, this legislation merely restricts the time, place and manner of such advertisements.

ARTICLE 17-A YOUTH PROTECTION AGAINST TOBACCO ADVERTISING AND PROMOTION ACT*18

a. It shall be unlawful for any person to place, cause to be placed, to maintain or to cause to be maintained, a tobacco product advertisement within one thousand feet, in any direction, of any school building, playground, child day care center, amusement arcade or youth center, in any outdoor area including, but not limited to, billboards, roofs and sides of buildings, rolling shutters or gates, any enclosures into which rolling shutters or gates retract, water tanks and towers and free-standing signboards; provided, however, that any tobacco product advertisement on an awning projecting from the outside of a premises as of July 1, 1997 where tobacco products are sold or offered for sale may be retained until two years from the effective date of this law.

b. It shall be unlawful for any person to place, cause to be placed, to maintain, or cause to be maintained, a tobacco product advertisement in the interior of a building or structure which is within one thousand feet, in any direction, of any school building, playground, child day care center, amusement arcade or youth center, when such advertisement is within five feet of any exterior window or any door which is used for entry or egress by the public to the building or structure; provided, however, that tobacco product advertisements may be placed or maintained in the interior of any such premises where such advertisements are (i) parallel to the street and face inward, or (ii) affixed to a wall panel or similar fixture that is perpendicular to the street regardless of whether such advertisements are illuminated

c. Nothing in this section shall prevent a person from placing, causing to be placed, maintaining, or causing to be maintained, a single sign, poster, placard or label no larger than six square feet and containing only black text, in any language, not exceeding eight inches in height on a white background stating "TOBACCO PRODUCTS SOLD HERE" or such words translated into any language, within ten feet of an entrance to the premises where tobacco products are sold or offered for sale.

d. Nothing in this section shall prevent a tobacco product manufacturer, distributor or retailer from placing, causing to be placed, maintaining or causing to be maintained, its corporate or other business name on a building or structure, in any location, where such building or structure or a portion thereof is owned, operated or leased by such manufacturer, distributor or retailer and that building or structure is the principal place of business of such manufacturer, distributor or retailer in the city of New York; provided, however, that the corporate or other business name of such manufacturer, distributor or retailer is registered or filed in the United States or such manufacturer, distributor or retailer is authorized to do business in any state, and the corporate or business name of such manufacturer, distributor or retailer does not include any brand name or trademark of a tobacco product, alone or in conjunction with any written word, picture, logo, symbol, motto, selling message, poster, placard, sign, photograph, device, graphic display or visual image of any kind, recognizable color or pattern of colors, or any other indicia of product identification identical or similar to, or identifiable with, those used for any brand of a tobacco product.

e. This section shall not apply to any tobacco product advertisement on a motor vehicle. Nothing in this subdivision shall be construed to authorize the placement of a tobacco product advertisement in a location where such placement is otherwise prohibited by the rules of the department of transportation or other applicable law.

CASE NOTES

¶ 1. A court has held that this section was not pre-empted*33 by the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act (FCLAA). Greater New York Metropolitan Food Council, Inc. v. Giuliani, 195 F.3d 100 (2d Cir. 1999).

¶ 2. In 1998, New York City enacted Local Law No. 3, entitled the "Youth Protection Against Tobacco Advertising and Promotion Act, which was codified as Article 17-A to Title 27, Chapter 7, subchapter 7, of the Administrative Code, Secs. 27-508.1 to 27-508.6. The law prohibits most outdoor advertising of tobacco products within 1,000 feet of any school building, playground, child care day center, amusement arcade or youth center. It also prohibits most indoor advertising in the same areas if the advertisements can be seen from the street. There is one exception to the ban-a single, black-and-white, text-only "tombstone" sign stating "TOBACCO PRODUCTS SOLD HERE," may be placed within ten feet of an entrance to a store where tobacco products are sold. A group of supermarkets and advertising associations brought suit, alleging that Article 17-A was pre-empted by the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act (FCLAA), 15 U.S.C. 1331 et seq., and therefore violated the Supremacy Clause of the U.S. Constitution. The District Court found that Article 17-A was pre-empted by the FCLAA's pre-emption provision, which stated that "No requirement or prohibition based on smoking and health shall be imposed under state law with respect to the advertising or promotion of any cigarettes the packages of which are labeled in conformity with the provisions of this chapter" (15 U.S.C. Sec. 1334(b)). In effect, the District Court held that the federal statute on its face called for pre-emption, and that there was no need to look into the intent of Congress in enacting the provision. However, the Second Circuit (hereinafter called "court") took a different approach, and looked into the intent of Congress. The court said that the pre-emption provision had to be analyzed in the context of the rest of the statute. 15 USC Sec. 1331 explained the intent of the federal law as follows:

"It is the policy of Congress, and the purpose of this chapter, to establish a comprehensive Federal program to deal with cigarette labeling and advertising with respect to the relationship between smoking and healt, whereby: (1) the public may be adequately informed about any adverse health effects of cigarette smoking by inclusion of warning notices on each package of cigarettes and in each advertisement of cigarettes; and (2) commerce and the national economy may be (A) protected to the maximum extent consistent with this declared policy and (B) not impeded by diverse, non-uniform, and confusing cigarette labeling and advertising regulations with respect to any relationship between smoking and health."

Looking at the above language, the court said that the intent of Congress was to inform the public about the health dangers of smoking by regulating advertising and labeling information. Second, expressing the concern about non-uniform and confusing advertising standards, Congress reserved for itself the power to regulate cigarette advertising information.

The court next looked at the tombstone provision. The City argued that it was not-preempted because the tombstone provision was "permissive" in the sense that it allowed certain types of advertising, but the court rejected that contention. The City argued that the purpose of its law was to promote law enforcement in general, not to regulate cigarette advertising, so that the City law did not run afoul of the federal statute. The court, however, said that where there is federal pre-emption, municipalities cannot frustrate the purpose of the federal law merely by making up some pretext legislative purpose. No matter what purpose the City declared, the actual intent of the City law was to regulate smoking and health. Since the tombstone provision regulated the content of cigarette advertising, it was pre-empted by federal law.

However, the court found that the rest of the law was not pre-empted by the federal law, because it regulated only the location and not the content of cigarette advertising. The 1000-foot provision is more like a real estate zoning law than an advertising regulation.

Since Article 17-A expressly provides that if any portion of the law is held to be invalid, the rest of it survives, the court struck the tombstone provision from the law and left the rest of it intact. Section 1. Declaration of legislative findings and intent. The Council of the City of New York hereby finds that certain tobacco product manufacturers have admitted engaging in strategies designed to advertise and promote tobacco products to minors and that such strategies undermine state and local laws prohibiting the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors. The Council further finds that the exposure of minors to such tobacco product advertising and promotion may be constitutionally restricted through reasonable targeted limitations on the advertising of such products near schools and other locations where children tend to congregate, and through a prohibition on the offering of promotions to persons under the age of eighteen. Thereby, the Council intends to strengthen compliance with and enforcement of laws prohibiting the sale or distribution of tobacco products to children and to protect children against such illegal sales.

Although the rate of smoking among adults nationwide decreased by 50% between 1971 and 1993, the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have reported that the rate of smoking among all high school students during the years 1991 through 1996 increased by over 26% and now stands at its highest rate since 1981. This dramatic increase in teenage smoking has occurred while all fifty states and the District of Columbia have had prohibitions in effect on the sale or distribution of cigarettes and other tobacco products to minors and while all tobacco product manufacturers were pledged to adhere to a voluntary industry code prohibiting advertisement of tobacco products that appeal to or influence minors. In New York City, under section 17-620 of the Administrative Code of the City of New York, section 1399-cc of the State Public Health Law and section 260.20 of the State Penal Law, it is illegal to sell tobacco products to a minor.

It has also been reported that nearly 90% of all smokers begin to smoke prior to the age of 18 and that the average child smoker starts daily smoking by the age of 14. Between 1991 and 1996 the rate of smoking among Hispanic high school students nationwide reportedly increased by over 34% while, during the same period, the rate of smoking among African-American high school students nationwide increased by over 48%; these rates of increased smoking are the highest in a decade. In New York City, as reported by the Department of Consumer Affairs, 200 children begin to smoke every day.

Similarly, a 1994 report by the United States Surgeon General containing data on the use of smokeless tobacco by minors reported that the market for smokeless tobacco had shifted dramatically toward young people since 1970. That report cited school-based surveys conducted in 1991 which estimated that 19.2% of ninth to twelfth grade boys use smokeless tobacco. Among high school seniors who had ever tried smokeless tobacco, the report said that 73% did so by the ninth grade.

A December 1995 investigative report, prepared for the Speaker of the Council and the Council's Youth Services Committee concerning the availability of beer and cigarettes to New York City minors and entitled Easy Access, found, inter alia, that "cigarettes are widely accessible to minors throughout New York City;" that minors participating in the investigation "successfully purchased cigarettes in 79 percent of all attempted cases;" and that "less than one out of five stores asked minors who purchased cigarettes for proof of age." The Easy Access report cited a 1992 Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) article entitled "Brand Logo Recognition by Children Aged 3 to 6 Years" which demonstrated that 30 percent of the three year olds and 91 percent of the six year olds surveyed could correctly match the Joe Camel cartoon trademark with Camel cigarettes. The Easy Access Report also referred to a 1991 JAMA report entitled "RJR Nabisco's Cartoon Camel Promotes Camel Cigarettes to Children" which estimated that illegal sales of Camel cigarettes to minors rose from $6 million per year before the advent of Joe Camel in 1988, to $476 million by the end of 1991. The 1991 JAMA report concluded that one-quarter of all Camel sales in 1991 were to minors.

In May 1996, the City Department of Consumer Affairs, joined by the Chair of the Council's Youth Services Committee, announced the results of a citywide enforcement program against tobacco product retailers who violated the law by selling tobacco products to minors. This citywide enforcement program, denoted Three Puffs and You're Out, was, at least in part, motivated by the Council's Easy Access investigative report discussed above. Two hundred tobacco retailers were targeted by this enforcement program. One-year suspensions of their tobacco retailer licenses were imposed on seventeen retailers who illegally sold tobacco products to minors three times during the preceding two years. Ninety-three of the retailers targeted for enforcement were found to be illegally selling cigarettes to minors, thirty-one of the retailers targeted for enforcement were illegally selling loose cigarettes to minors and thirty-six of the retailers targeted for enforcement had failed to post the required sign indicating that tobacco sales to minors are prohibited by local law.

A 1991 JAMA study concluded that "cigarette advertising encourages youth to smoke and should be banned." In a 1994 report, the National Institute of Medicine stated that "the substantial convergent evidence that advertising and promotion increase tobacco use by youths is impressive and, in the Committee's view, provides a strong basis for legal regulation." Similarly, a 1995 report by the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found that "cigarette marketing practices appeared to be the most likely to account for [the] increase in teen smoking initiation rates."

The federal Department of Health and Human Services' Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recently reported that "[i]n 1993, the tobacco industry spent a total of $6.2 billion on the advertising, promotion and marketing of cigarettes and smokeless tobacco. Of that number, 31 percent ($1.9 billion) was spent on advertising and promotional activities, 26 percent ($1.6 billion) was given to retailers in the form of cash allowances or retailer items to facilitate and enhance the sale of tobacco products, and, finally, 43 percent ($2.6 billion) was in the form of financial incentives (e.g. coupons, cents off, buy one/get one free, free samples) to consumers."

In announcing its final rules on the advertising and promotion of tobacco products, published in the Federal Register on August 28, 1996, the FDA commented upon the nexus between advertising and promotion and smoking among minors. The FDA observed that "the images typically associated with advertising and promotion convey the message that tobacco use is a desirable, socially approved, safe and healthful, and widely practiced behavior among young adults, whom children and youths want to emulate. As a result, tobacco advertising and promotion undoubtedly contribute to the multiple and convergent psychosocial influences that lead children and youths to begin using these products and become addicted to them." In that same announcement on its final rules on advertising and promotion of tobacco products, the FDA discussed the issue of federal preemption of state and local restrictions. The FDA specifically stated that it "believes the requirements it is establishing in this final rule set an appropriate floor for regulation of youth access to tobacco products but do not, as a policy matter, reflect a judgment that more stringent State or local requirements are inappropriate."

On March 20, 1997, as part of a settlement agreement signed by the Attorneys General of 17 states, including New York State, and Liggett & Myers Inc. and the Brooke Group, Ltd., cigarette manufacturers, the following statement was among those made by and on behalf of Liggett & Myers: "Liggett acknowledges that the tobacco industry markets to `youth', which means those under 18 years of age. . . ."

In light of the foregoing evidence that cigarettes are advertised and promoted to minors and that smoking by minors continues to dramatically increase despite laws banning the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors, the Council of the City of New York finds and declares that affirmative, reasonable and constitutionally permissible restrictions on tobacco product advertising and promotion may and must be enacted.

The purpose of this legislation is to promote enforcement of the aforementioned laws banning the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors and to thereby protect young people. The Council is cognizant of the necessity of acting within the protections afforded by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution and has, therefore, narrowly tailored the scope and effect of this legislation to impose reasonable time, place and manner restrictions on tobacco advertising aimed at or regularly seen by youth while not directly affecting advertising and promotions directed at adults. Indeed, the extensive testimony taken at various Committee hearings prompted the Council to narrow the scope of the prohibition on tobacco product advertisements to ensure that such advertisements are restricted only in those locations closest to where children congregate, and that tobacco product promotions are not given to children but are otherwise freely available to the adult population.

It is well settled law that the First Amendment protects commercial speech but to a lesser degree than the protection afforded other, "fully protected speech." In analyzing the constitutionality of commercial speech regulation, the United States Supreme Court prescribed a four-prong test in Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation v. Public Service Commission of New York, 447 U.S. 557 (1980). The Central Hudson test, which subsequent decisions have ratified and clarified, provides that government restrictions on commercial speech are lawful where: (1) the commercial speech at issue concerns a lawful activity and is not misleading; (2) the asserted governmental interest in restricting the commercial speech is substantial; (3) the restriction directly advances the governmental interest asserted; and (4) the restrictions are not more extensive than necessary to serve that governmental interest. The latter two requirements involve a determination that there is a reasonable "fit" between the government's ends and the means chosen to accomplish these ends. Board of Trustees of State Univ. of New York v. Fox, 492 U.S. 469, 480 (1989); see also, United States v. Edge Broadcasting Co., 509 U.S. 418 (1993).

The restrictions on commercial speech contained in this Council legislation are permissible under the Central Hudson four-prong test. The commercial speech at issue concerns a lawful activity and is not misleading, at least as it applies to consenting adults. The governmental interest in restricting the commercial speech at issue is one grounded in the pre-existing prohibition on the sale and distribution of tobacco products to minors and is geared directly towards countering the adverse impacts of an industry strategy admittedly directed at younger prospective smokers. By restricting the locations for advertisements that are more likely to be addressed to and most likely to be seen by minors, specifically to 1,000 feet from schools, child day care centers and the like, while still permitting tobacco product sellers to notify their customers that such products are available for purchase with a single tombstone advertisement which may be written in any language, this Council legislation directly advances the governmental interest in enforcing the ban on the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors. Similarly, by permitting tobacco product promotions to be offered and/or given to anyone of lawful age to purchase cigarettes, this Council legislation restricts only promotions designed to induce children to purchase cigarettes. Finally, as the restrictions in this Council legislation focus on modes and locations of communication that are most likely to have a direct impact upon minors, the restrictions contained in this Council legislation strike a balance between the commercial interest in selling tobacco products to persons of lawful age and the need to limit inducements to children who cannot lawfully purchase such products but are nonetheless doing so. Thus, the Council legislation is not more extensive than necessary to serve the governmental interests asserted herein. Other forms of advertising including newspapers, magazines, audio and video media, that are less likely to have a direct impact on minors, and all promotions directed to adults are not affected by this Council legislation. Moreover, street advertisements not within 1,000 feet of a school, child day care center, youth center, amusement arcade or playground, which can readily reach an adult population, are not affected by this Council legislation.

In Penn Advertising of Baltimore v. Baltimore, 101 F.3d 325 (4th Cir. 1995), the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit upheld a Baltimore city ordinance which prohibited advertising cigarettes in a publicly visible location against challenges grounded in the First Amendment to the United States Constitution and federal preemption. The court held that the Baltimore city ordinance is not preempted by the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act, which prohibits local enactments based on smoking and health with respect to cigarette advertising and promotion. The court reasoned that the ordinance "limits only the location of signs that advertise cigarettes, but it does not address the content of such advertisements. The ordinance neither imposes a duty nor relieves a burden on cigarette advertisers based on smoking and health. Moreover, the ordinance does not limit the ability of cigarette manufacturers to advertise generally in the media." The court also decided that the Baltimore ordinance is a permissible regulation under the Central Hudson four-prong test. Noting that "the governmental interest asserted in this case is to promote compliance with the state prohibition of the sale of cigarettes to minors," the court concluded that "the City's objective in reducing cigarette consumption by minors constitutes a substantial public interest." The court further concluded that "while the fit between the City's objective and the means selected to achieve them may not be perfect, it nevertheless falls well within the range tolerated by the First Amendment for the regulation of commercial speech."

The Council's legislation likewise only limits the locations where tobacco product advertisements may be placed. It addresses neither the location of advertising directed at adults nor the content thereof. As with the Baltimore cigarette ordinance, the Council's legislation neither imposes a duty on tobacco product manufacturers nor relieves a burden otherwise placed upon them related to smoking and health.

Ruling on another city ordinance that closely parallels this Council's legislation, on November 13, 1996, the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit upheld against First Amendment attack legislation enacted in the City of Baltimore prohibiting placement of stationary outdoor advertising of alcoholic beverages in areas where it was likely to be encountered by minors traveling to school or play. The Baltimore ordinance targeted individuals who could not legally purchase alcoholic beverages. This Council's legislation similarly targets minors who may not legally purchase cigarettes. Neither this legislation nor the Baltimore ordinance were directed toward or intended to affect adults who may legally purchase cigarettes and alcoholic beverages respectively. Neither this legislation nor the Baltimore ordinance bans all outdoor advertising of cigarettes and alcoholic beverages respectively. Instead, as did the Baltimore ordinance, this legislation merely restricts the time, place and manner of such advertisements.

Similarly, by permitting tobacco product promotions to be offered and/or given to anyone of lawful age to purchase cigarettes, this Council legislation restricts only promotions designed to induce children to purchase cigarettes. Finally, as the restrictions in this Council legislation focus on modes and locations of communication that are most likely to have a direct impact upon minors, the restrictions contained in this Council legislation strike a balance between the commercial interest in selling tobacco products to persons of lawful age and the need to limit inducements to children who cannot lawfully purchase such products but are nonetheless doing so. Thus, the Council legislation is not more extensive than necessary to serve the governmental interests asserted herein. Other forms of advertising including newspapers, magazines, audio and video media, that are less likely to have a direct impact on minors, and all promotions directed to adults are not affected by this Council legislation. Moreover, street advertisements not within 1,000 feet of a school, child day care center, youth center, amusement arcade or playground, which can readily reach an adult population, are not affected by this Council legislation.

In Penn Advertising of Baltimore v. Baltimore, 101 F.3d 325 (4th Cir. 1995), the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit upheld a Baltimore city ordinance which prohibited advertising cigarettes in a publicly visible location against challenges grounded in the First Amendment to the United States Constitution and federal preemption. The court held that the Baltimore city ordinance is not preempted by the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act, which prohibits local enactments based on smoking and health with respect to cigarette advertising and promotion. The court reasoned that the ordinance "limits only the location of signs that advertise cigarettes, but it does not address the content of such advertisements. The ordinance neither imposes a duty nor relieves a burden on cigarette advertisers based on smoking and health. Moreover, the ordinance does not limit the ability of cigarette manufacturers to advertise generally in the media." The court also decided that the Baltimore ordinance is a permissible regulation under the Central Hudson four-prong test. Noting that "the governmental interest asserted in this case is to promote compliance with the state prohibition of the sale of cigarettes to minors," the court concluded that "the City's objective in reducing cigarette consumption by minors constitutes a substantial public interest." The court further concluded that "while the fit between the City's objective and the means selected to achieve them may not be perfect, it nevertheless falls well within the range tolerated by the First Amendment for the regulation of commercial speech."

The Council's legislation likewise only limits the locations where tobacco product advertisements may be placed. It addresses neither the location of advertising directed at adults nor the content thereof. As with the Baltimore cigarette ordinance, the Council's legislation neither imposes a duty on tobacco product manufacturers nor relieves a burden otherwise placed upon them related to smoking and health.

Ruling on another city ordinance that closely parallels this Council's legislation, on November 13, 1996, the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit upheld against First Amendment attack legislation enacted in the City of Baltimore prohibiting placement of stationary outdoor advertising of alcoholic beverages in areas where it was likely to be encountered by minors traveling to school or play. The Baltimore ordinance targeted individuals who could not legally purchase alcoholic beverages. This Council's legislation similarly targets minors who may not legally purchase cigarettes. Neither this legislation nor the Baltimore ordinance were directed toward or intended to affect adults who may legally purchase cigarettes and alcoholic beverages respectively. Neither this legislation nor the Baltimore ordinance bans all outdoor advertising of cigarettes and alcoholic beverages respectively. Instead, as did the Baltimore ordinance, this legislation merely restricts the time, place and manner of such advertisements.

Section 1. Declaration of legislative findings and intent. The Council of the City of New York hereby finds that certain tobacco product manufacturers have admitted engaging in strategies designed to advertise and promote tobacco products to minors and that such strategies undermine state and local laws prohibiting the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors. The Council further finds that the exposure of minors to such tobacco product advertising and promotion may be constitutionally restricted through reasonable targeted limitations on the advertising of such products near schools and other locations where children tend to congregate, and through a prohibition on the offering of promotions to persons under the age of eighteen. Thereby, the Council intends to strengthen compliance with and enforcement of laws prohibiting the sale or distribution of tobacco products to children and to protect children against such illegal sales.

Although the rate of smoking among adults nationwide decreased by 50% between 1971 and 1993, the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have reported that the rate of smoking among all high school students during the years 1991 through 1996 increased by over 26% and now stands at its highest rate since 1981. This dramatic increase in teenage smoking has occurred while all fifty states and the District of Columbia have had prohibitions in effect on the sale or distribution of cigarettes and other tobacco products to minors and while all tobacco product manufacturers were pledged to adhere to a voluntary industry code prohibiting advertisement of tobacco products that appeal to or influence minors. In New York City, under section 17-620 of the Administrative Code of the City of New York, section 1399-cc of the State Public Health Law and section 260.20 of the State Penal Law, it is illegal to sell tobacco products to a minor.

It has also been reported that nearly 90% of all smokers begin to smoke prior to the age of 18 and that the average child smoker starts daily smoking by the age of 14. Between 1991 and 1996 the rate of smoking among Hispanic high school students nationwide reportedly increased by over 34% while, during the same period, the rate of smoking among African-American high school students nationwide increased by over 48%; these rates of increased smoking are the highest in a decade. In New York City, as reported by the Department of Consumer Affairs, 200 children begin to smoke every day.

Similarly, a 1994 report by the United States Surgeon General containing data on the use of smokeless tobacco by minors reported that the market for smokeless tobacco had shifted dramatically toward young people since 1970. That report cited school-based surveys conducted in 1991 which estimated that 19.2% of ninth to twelfth grade boys use smokeless tobacco. Among high school seniors who had ever tried smokeless tobacco, the report said that 73% did so by the ninth grade.

A December 1995 investigative report, prepared for the Speaker of the Council and the Council's Youth Services Committee concerning the availability of beer and cigarettes to New York City minors and entitled Easy Access, found, inter alia, that "cigarettes are widely accessible to minors throughout New York City;" that minors participating in the investigation "successfully purchased cigarettes in 79 percent of all attempted cases;" and that "less than one out of five stores asked minors who purchased cigarettes for proof of age." The Easy Access report cited a 1992 Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) article entitled "Brand Logo Recognition by Children Aged 3 to 6 Years" which demonstrated that 30 percent of the three year olds and 91 percent of the six year olds surveyed could correctly match the Joe Camel cartoon trademark with Camel cigarettes. The Easy Access Report also referred to a 1991 JAMA report entitled "RJR Nabisco's Cartoon Camel Promotes Camel Cigarettes to Children" which estimated that illegal sales of Camel cigarettes to minors rose from $6 million per year before the advent of Joe Camel in 1988, to $476 million by the end of 1991. The 1991 JAMA report concluded that one-quarter of all Camel sales in 1991 were to minors.

In May 1996, the City Department of Consumer Affairs, joined by the Chair of the Council's Youth Services Committee, announced the results of a citywide enforcement program against tobacco product retailers who violated the law by selling tobacco products to minors. This citywide enforcement program, denoted Three Puffs and You're Out, was, at least in part, motivated by the Council's Easy Access investigative report discussed above. Two hundred tobacco retailers were targeted by this enforcement program. One-year suspensions of their tobacco retailer licenses were imposed on seventeen retailers who illegally sold tobacco products to minors three times during the preceding two years. Ninety-three of the retailers targeted for enforcement were found to be illegally selling cigarettes to minors, thirty-one of the retailers targeted for enforcement were illegally selling loose cigarettes to minors and thirty-six of the retailers targeted for enforcement had failed to post the required sign indicating that tobacco sales to minors are prohibited by local law.

A 1991 JAMA study concluded that "cigarette advertising encourages youth to smoke and should be banned." In a 1994 report, the National Institute of Medicine stated that "the substantial convergent evidence that advertising and promotion increase tobacco use by youths is impressive and, in the Committee's view, provides a strong basis for legal regulation." Similarly, a 1995 report by the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found that "cigarette marketing practices appeared to be the most likely to account for [the] increase in teen smoking initiation rates."

The federal Department of Health and Human Services' Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recently reported that "[i]n 1993, the tobacco industry spent a total of $6.2 billion on the advertising, promotion and marketing of cigarettes and smokeless tobacco. Of that number, 31 percent ($1.9 billion) was spent on advertising and promotional activities, 26 percent ($1.6 billion) was given to retailers in the form of cash allowances or retailer items to facilitate and enhance the sale of tobacco products, and, finally, 43 percent ($2.6 billion) was in the form of financial incentives (e.g. coupons, cents off, buy one/get one free, free samples) to consumers."

In announcing its final rules on the advertising and promotion of tobacco products, published in the Federal Register on August 28, 1996, the FDA commented upon the nexus between advertising and promotion and smoking among minors. The FDA observed that "the images typically associated with advertising and promotion convey the message that tobacco use is a desirable, socially approved, safe and healthful, and widely practiced behavior among young adults, whom children and youths want to emulate. As a result, tobacco advertising and promotion undoubtedly contribute to the multiple and convergent psychosocial influences that lead children and youths to begin using these products and become addicted to them." In that same announcement on its final rules on advertising and promotion of tobacco products, the FDA discussed the issue of federal preemption of state and local restrictions. The FDA specifically stated that it "believes the requirements it is establishing in this final rule set an appropriate floor for regulation of youth access to tobacco products but do not, as a policy matter, reflect a judgment that more stringent State or local requirements are inappropriate."

On March 20, 1997, as part of a settlement agreement signed by the Attorneys General of 17 states, including New York State, and Liggett & Myers Inc. and the Brooke Group, Ltd., cigarette manufacturers, the following statement was among those made by and on behalf of Liggett & Myers: "Liggett acknowledges that the tobacco industry markets to `youth', which means those under 18 years of age. . . ."

In light of the foregoing evidence that cigarettes are advertised and promoted to minors and that smoking by minors continues to dramatically increase despite laws banning the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors, the Council of the City of New York finds and declares that affirmative, reasonable and constitutionally permissible restrictions on tobacco product advertising and promotion may and must be enacted.

The purpose of this legislation is to promote enforcement of the aforementioned laws banning the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors and to thereby protect young people. The Council is cognizant of the necessity of acting within the protections afforded by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution and has, therefore, narrowly tailored the scope and effect of this legislation to impose reasonable time, place and manner restrictions on tobacco advertising aimed at or regularly seen by youth while not directly affecting advertising and promotions directed at adults. Indeed, the extensive testimony taken at various Committee hearings prompted the Council to narrow the scope of the prohibition on tobacco product advertisements to ensure that such advertisements are restricted only in those locations closest to where children congregate, and that tobacco product promotions are not given to children but are otherwise freely available to the adult population.

It is well settled law that the First Amendment protects commercial speech but to a lesser degree than the protection afforded other, "fully protected speech." In analyzing the constitutionality of commercial speech regulation, the United States Supreme Court prescribed a four-prong test in Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation v. Public Service Commission of New York, 447 U.S. 557 (1980). The Central Hudson test, which subsequent decisions have ratified and clarified, provides that government restrictions on commercial speech are lawful where: (1) the commercial speech at issue concerns a lawful activity and is not misleading; (2) the asserted governmental interest in restricting the commercial speech is substantial; (3) the restriction directly advances the governmental interest asserted; and (4) the restrictions are not more extensive than necessary to serve that governmental interest. The latter two requirements involve a determination that there is a reasonable "fit" between the government's ends and the means chosen to accomplish these ends. Board of Trustees of State Univ. of New York v. Fox, 492 U.S. 469, 480 (1989); see also, United States v. Edge Broadcasting Co., 509 U.S. 418 (1993).

The restrictions on commercial speech contained in this Council legislation are permissible under the Central Hudson four-prong test. The commercial speech at issue concerns a lawful activity and is not misleading, at least as it applies to consenting adults. The governmental interest in restricting the commercial speech at issue is one grounded in the pre-existing prohibition on the sale and distribution of tobacco products to minors and is geared directly towards countering the adverse impacts of an industry strategy admittedly directed at younger prospective smokers. By restricting the locations for advertisements that are more likely to be addressed to and most likely to be seen by minors, specifically to 1,000 feet from schools, child day care centers and the like, while still permitting tobacco product sellers to notify their customers that such products are available for purchase with a single tombstone advertisement which may be written in any language, this Council legislation directly advances the governmental interest in enforcing the ban on the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors. Similarly, by permitting tobacco product promotions to be offered and/or given to anyone of lawful age to purchase cigarettes, this Council legislation restricts only promotions designed to induce children to purchase cigarettes. Finally, as the restrictions in this Council legislation focus on modes and locations of communication that are most likely to have a direct impact upon minors, the restrictions contained in this Council legislation strike a balance between the commercial interest in selling tobacco products to persons of lawful age and the need to limit inducements to children who cannot lawfully purchase such products but are nonetheless doing so. Thus, the Council legislation is not more extensive than necessary to serve the governmental interests asserted herein. Other forms of advertising including newspapers, magazines, audio and video media, that are less likely to have a direct impact on minors, and all promotions directed to adults are not affected by this Council legislation. Moreover, street advertisements not within 1,000 feet of a school, child day care center, youth center, amusement arcade or playground, which can readily reach an adult population, are not affected by this Council legislation.

In Penn Advertising of Baltimore v. Baltimore, 101 F.3d 325 (4th Cir. 1995), the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit upheld a Baltimore city ordinance which prohibited advertising cigarettes in a publicly visible location against challenges grounded in the First Amendment to the United States Constitution and federal preemption. The court reasoned that the ordinance "limits only the location of signs that advertise cigarettes, but it does not address the content of such advertisements. The ordinance neither imposes a duty nor relieves a burden on cigarette advertisers based on smoking and health. Moreover, the ordinance does not limit the ability of cigarette manufacturers to advertise generally in the media." The court also decided that the Baltimore ordinance is a permissible regulation under the Central Hudson four-prong test. The court further concluded that "while the fit between the City's objective and the means selected to achieve them may not be perfect, it nevertheless falls well within the range tolerated by the First Amendment for the regulation of commercial speech."

The Council's legislation likewise only limits the locations where tobacco product advertisements may be placed. It addresses neither the location of advertising directed at adults nor the content thereof. As with the Baltimore cigarette ordinance, the Council's legislation neither imposes a duty on tobacco product manufacturers nor relieves a burden otherwise placed upon them related to smoking and health.

The restrictions on commercial speech contained in this Council legislation are permissible under the Central Hudson four-prong test. The commercial speech at issue concerns a lawful activity and is not misleading, at least as it applies to consenting adults. The governmental interest in restricting the commercial speech at issue is one grounded in the pre-existing prohibition on the sale and distribution of tobacco products to minors and is geared directly towards countering the adverse impacts of an industry strategy admittedly directed at younger prospective smokers. Finally, as the restrictions in this Council legislation focus on modes and locations of communication that are most likely to have a direct impact upon minors, the restrictions contained in this Council legislation strike a balance between the commercial interest in selling tobacco products to persons of lawful age and the need to limit inducements to children who cannot lawfully purchase such products but are nonetheless doing so. Thus, the Council legislation is not more extensive than necessary to serve the governmental interests asserted herein. Other forms of advertising including newspapers, magazines, audio and video media, that are less likely to have a direct impact on minors, and all promotions directed to adults are not affected by this Council legislation. Moreover, street advertisements not within 1,000 feet of a school, child day care center, youth center, amusement arcade or playground, which can readily reach an adult population, are not affected by this Council legislation.

In Penn Advertising of Baltimore v. Baltimore, 101 F.3d 325 (4th Cir. 1995), the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit upheld a Baltimore city ordinance which prohibited advertising cigarettes in a publicly visible location against challenges grounded in the First Amendment to the United States Constitution and federal preemption. The court held that the Baltimore city ordinance is not preempted by the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act, which prohibits local enactments based on smoking and health with respect to cigarette advertising and promotion. The court reasoned that the ordinance "limits only the location of signs that advertise cigarettes, but it does not address the content of such advertisements. The ordinance neither imposes a duty nor relieves a burden on cigarette advertisers based on smoking and health. Moreover, the ordinance does not limit the ability of cigarette manufacturers to advertise generally in the media." The court also decided that the Baltimore ordinance is a permissible regulation under the Central Hudson four-prong test. Noting that "the governmental interest asserted in this case is to promote compliance with the state prohibition of the sale of cigarettes to minors," the court concluded that "the City's objective in reducing cigarette consumption by minors constitutes a substantial public interest." The court further concluded that "while the fit between the City's objective and the means selected to achieve them may not be perfect, it nevertheless falls well within the range tolerated by the First Amendment for the regulation of commercial speech."

The Council's legislation likewise only limits the locations where tobacco product advertisements may be placed. It addresses neither the location of advertising directed at adults nor the content thereof. As with the Baltimore cigarette ordinance, the Council's legislation neither imposes a duty on tobacco product manufacturers nor relieves a burden otherwise placed upon them related to smoking and health.

Ruling on another city ordinance that closely parallels this Council's legislation, on November 13, 1996, the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit upheld against First Amendment attack legislation enacted in the City of Baltimore prohibiting placement of stationary outdoor advertising of alcoholic beverages in areas where it was likely to be encountered by minors traveling to school or play. The Baltimore ordinance targeted individuals who could not legally purchase alcoholic beverages. This Council's legislation similarly targets minors who may not legally purchase cigarettes. Neither this legislation nor the Baltimore ordinance were directed toward or intended to affect adults who may legally purchase cigarettes and alcoholic beverages respectively. Neither this legislation nor the Baltimore ordinance bans all outdoor advertising of cigarettes and alcoholic beverages respectively. Instead, as did the Baltimore ordinance, this legislation merely restricts the time, place and manner of such advertisements.

Section 1. Declaration of legislative findings and intent. The Council of the City of New York hereby finds that certain tobacco product manufacturers have admitted engaging in strategies designed to advertise and promote tobacco products to minors and that such strategies undermine state and local laws prohibiting the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors. The Council further finds that the exposure of minors to such tobacco product advertising and promotion may be constitutionally restricted through reasonable targeted limitations on the advertising of such products near schools and other locations where children tend to congregate, and through a prohibition on the offering of promotions to persons under the age of eighteen. Thereby, the Council intends to strengthen compliance with and enforcement of laws prohibiting the sale or distribution of tobacco products to children and to protect children against such illegal sales.

Although the rate of smoking among adults nationwide decreased by 50% between 1971 and 1993, the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have reported that the rate of smoking among all high school students during the years 1991 through 1996 increased by over 26% and now stands at its highest rate since 1981. This dramatic increase in teenage smoking has occurred while all fifty states and the District of Columbia have had prohibitions in effect on the sale or distribution of cigarettes and other tobacco products to minors and while all tobacco product manufacturers were pledged to adhere to a voluntary industry code prohibiting advertisement of tobacco products that appeal to or influence minors. In New York City, under section 17-620 of the Administrative Code of the City of New York, section 1399-cc of the State Public Health Law and section 260.20 of the State Penal Law, it is illegal to sell tobacco products to a minor.

It has also been reported that nearly 90% of all smokers begin to smoke prior to the age of 18 and that the average child smoker starts daily smoking by the age of 14. Between 1991 and 1996 the rate of smoking among Hispanic high school students nationwide reportedly increased by over 34% while, during the same period, the rate of smoking among African-American high school students nationwide increased by over 48%; these rates of increased smoking are the highest in a decade. In New York City, as reported by the Department of Consumer Affairs, 200 children begin to smoke every day.

Similarly, a 1994 report by the United States Surgeon General containing data on the use of smokeless tobacco by minors reported that the market for smokeless tobacco had shifted dramatically toward young people since 1970. That report cited school-based surveys conducted in 1991 which estimated that 19.2% of ninth to twelfth grade boys use smokeless tobacco. Among high school seniors who had ever tried smokeless tobacco, the report said that 73% did so by the ninth grade.

A December 1995 investigative report, prepared for the Speaker of the Council and the Council's Youth Services Committee concerning the availability of beer and cigarettes to New York City minors and entitled Easy Access, found, inter alia, that "cigarettes are widely accessible to minors throughout New York City;" that minors participating in the investigation "successfully purchased cigarettes in 79 percent of all attempted cases;" and that "less than one out of five stores asked minors who purchased cigarettes for proof of age." The Easy Access report cited a 1992 Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) article entitled "Brand Logo Recognition by Children Aged 3 to 6 Years" which demonstrated that 30 percent of the three year olds and 91 percent of the six year olds surveyed could correctly match the Joe Camel cartoon trademark with Camel cigarettes. The Easy Access Report also referred to a 1991 JAMA report entitled "RJR Nabisco's Cartoon Camel Promotes Camel Cigarettes to Children" which estimated that illegal sales of Camel cigarettes to minors rose from $6 million per year before the advent of Joe Camel in 1988, to $476 million by the end of 1991. The 1991 JAMA report concluded that one-quarter of all Camel sales in 1991 were to minors.

In May 1996, the City Department of Consumer Affairs, joined by the Chair of the Council's Youth Services Committee, announced the results of a citywide enforcement program against tobacco product retailers who violated the law by selling tobacco products to minors. This citywide enforcement program, denoted Three Puffs and You're Out, was, at least in part, motivated by the Council's Easy Access investigative report discussed above. Two hundred tobacco retailers were targeted by this enforcement program. One-year suspensions of their tobacco retailer licenses were imposed on seventeen retailers who illegally sold tobacco products to minors three times during the preceding two years. Ninety-three of the retailers targeted for enforcement were found to be illegally selling cigarettes to minors, thirty-one of the retailers targeted for enforcement were illegally selling loose cigarettes to minors and thirty-six of the retailers targeted for enforcement had failed to post the required sign indicating that tobacco sales to minors are prohibited by local law.

A 1991 JAMA study concluded that "cigarette advertising encourages youth to smoke and should be banned." In a 1994 report, the National Institute of Medicine stated that "the substantial convergent evidence that advertising and promotion increase tobacco use by youths is impressive and, in the Committee's view, provides a strong basis for legal regulation." Similarly, a 1995 report by the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found that "cigarette marketing practices appeared to be the most likely to account for [the] increase in teen smoking initiation rates."

The federal Department of Health and Human Services' Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recently reported that "[i]n 1993, the tobacco industry spent a total of $6.2 billion on the advertising, promotion and marketing of cigarettes and smokeless tobacco. Of that number, 31 percent ($1.9 billion) was spent on advertising and promotional activities, 26 percent ($1.6 billion) was given to retailers in the form of cash allowances or retailer items to facilitate and enhance the sale of tobacco products, and, finally, 43 percent ($2.6 billion) was in the form of financial incentives (e.g. coupons, cents off, buy one/get one free, free samples) to consumers."

In announcing its final rules on the advertising and promotion of tobacco products, published in the Federal Register on August 28, 1996, the FDA commented upon the nexus between advertising and promotion and smoking among minors. The FDA observed that "the images typically associated with advertising and promotion convey the message that tobacco use is a desirable, socially approved, safe and healthful, and widely practiced behavior among young adults, whom children and youths want to emulate. As a result, tobacco advertising and promotion undoubtedly contribute to the multiple and convergent psychosocial influences that lead children and youths to begin using these products and become addicted to them." In that same announcement on its final rules on advertising and promotion of tobacco products, the FDA discussed the issue of federal preemption of state and local restrictions. The FDA specifically stated that it "believes the requirements it is establishing in this final rule set an appropriate floor for regulation of youth access to tobacco products but do not, as a policy matter, reflect a judgment that more stringent State or local requirements are inappropriate."

On March 20, 1997, as part of a settlement agreement signed by the Attorneys General of 17 states, including New York State, and Liggett & Myers Inc. and the Brooke Group, Ltd., cigarette manufacturers, the following statement was among those made by and on behalf of Liggett & Myers: "Liggett acknowledges that the tobacco industry markets to `youth', which means those under 18 years of age. . . ."

In light of the foregoing evidence that cigarettes are advertised and promoted to minors and that smoking by minors continues to dramatically increase despite laws banning the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors, the Council of the City of New York finds and declares that affirmative, reasonable and constitutionally permissible restrictions on tobacco product advertising and promotion may and must be enacted.

The purpose of this legislation is to promote enforcement of the aforementioned laws banning the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors and to thereby protect young people. The Council is cognizant of the necessity of acting within the protections afforded by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution and has, therefore, narrowly tailored the scope and effect of this legislation to impose reasonable time, place and manner restrictions on tobacco advertising aimed at or regularly seen by youth while not directly affecting advertising and promotions directed at adults. Indeed, the extensive testimony taken at various Committee hearings prompted the Council to narrow the scope of the prohibition on tobacco product advertisements to ensure that such advertisements are restricted only in those locations closest to where children congregate, and that tobacco product promotions are not given to children but are otherwise freely available to the adult population.

It is well settled law that the First Amendment protects commercial speech but to a lesser degree than the protection afforded other, "fully protected speech." In analyzing the constitutionality of commercial speech regulation, the United States Supreme Court prescribed a four-prong test in Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation v. Public Service Commission of New York, 447 U.S. 557 (1980). The Central Hudson test, which subsequent decisions have ratified and clarified, provides that government restrictions on commercial speech are lawful where: (1) the commercial speech at issue concerns a lawful activity and is not misleading; (2) the asserted governmental interest in restricting the commercial speech is substantial; (3) the restriction directly advances the governmental interest asserted; and (4) the restrictions are not more extensive than necessary to serve that governmental interest. The latter two requirements involve a determination that there is a reasonable "fit" between the government's ends and the means chosen to accomplish these ends. Board of Trustees of State Univ. of New York v. Fox, 492 U.S. 469, 480 (1989); see also, United States v. Edge Broadcasting Co., 509 U.S. 418 (1993).

The restrictions on commercial speech contained in this Council legislation are permissible under the Central Hudson four-prong test. The commercial speech at issue concerns a lawful activity and is not misleading, at least as it applies to consenting adults. The governmental interest in restricting the commercial speech at issue is one grounded in the pre-existing prohibition on the sale and distribution of tobacco products to minors and is geared directly towards countering the adverse impacts of an industry strategy admittedly directed at younger prospective smokers. By restricting the locations for advertisements that are more likely to be addressed to and most likely to be seen by minors, specifically to 1,000 feet from schools, child day care centers and the like, while still permitting tobacco product sellers to notify their customers that such products are available for purchase with a single tombstone advertisement which may be written in any language, this Council legislation directly advances the governmental interest in enforcing the ban on the sale or distribution of tobacco products to minors. Similarly, by permitting tobacco product promotions to be offered and/or given to anyone of lawful age to purchase cigarettes, this Council legislation restricts only promotions designed to induce children to purchase cigarettes. Finally, as the restrictions in this Council legislation focus on modes and locations of communication that are most likely to have a direct impact upon minors, the restrictions contained in this Council legislation strike a balance between the commercial interest in selling tobacco products to persons of lawful age and the need to limit inducements to children who cannot lawfully purchase such products but are nonetheless doing so. Thus, the Council legislation is not more extensive than necessary to serve the governmental interests asserted herein. Other forms of advertising including newspapers, magazines, audio and video media, that are less likely to have a direct impact on minors, and all promotions directed to adults are not affected by this Council legislation. Moreover, street advertisements not within 1,000 feet of a school, child day care center, youth center, amusement arcade or playground, which can readily reach an adult population, are not affected by this Council legislation.

In Penn Advertising of Baltimore v. Baltimore, 101 F.3d 325 (4th Cir. 1995), the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit upheld a Baltimore city ordinance which prohibited advertising cigarettes in a publicly visible location against challenges grounded in the First Amendment to the United States Constitution and federal preemption. The court held that the Baltimore city ordinance is not preempted by the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act, which prohibits local enactments based on smoking and health with respect to cigarette advertising and promotion. The court reasoned that the ordinance "limits only the location of signs that advertise cigarettes, but it does not address the content of such advertisements. The ordinance neither imposes a duty nor relieves a burden on cigarette advertisers based on smoking and health. Moreover, the ordinance does not limit the ability of cigarette manufacturers to advertise generally in the media." The court also decided that the Baltimore ordinance is a permissible regulation under the Central Hudson four-prong test.

Noting that "the governmental interest asserted in this case is to promote compliance with the state prohibition of the sale of cigarettes to minors," the court concluded that "the City's objective in reducing cigarette consumption by minors constitutes a substantial public interest." The court further concluded that "while the fit between the City's objective and the means selected to achieve them may not be perfect, it nevertheless falls well within the range tolerated by the First Amendment for the regulation of commercial speech."

The Council's legislation likewise only limits the locations where tobacco product advertisements may be placed. It addresses neither the location of advertising directed at adults nor the content thereof. As with the Baltimore cigarette ordinance, the Council's legislation neither imposes a duty on tobacco product manufacturers nor relieves a burden otherwise placed upon them related to smoking and health.

Ruling on another city ordinance that closely parallels this Council's legislation, on November 13, 1996, the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit upheld against First Amendment attack legislation enacted in the City of Baltimore prohibiting placement of stationary outdoor advertising of alcoholic beverages in areas where it was likely to be encountered by minors traveling to school or play. The Baltimore ordinance targeted individuals who could not legally purchase alcoholic beverages. This Council's legislation similarly targets minors who may not legally purchase cigarettes. Neither this legislation nor the Baltimore ordinance were directed toward or intended to affect adults who may legally purchase cigarettes and alcoholic beverages respectively. Neither this legislation nor the Baltimore ordinance bans all outdoor advertising of cigarettes and alcoholic beverages respectively. Instead, as did the Baltimore ordinance, this legislation merely restricts the time, place and manner of such advertisements.

(a) Tents. Tents shall be guyed, supported, and braced to withstand a wind pressure of ten pounds per square foot of projected area of the tent. The poles and their supporting guys, stays, stakes, fastenings, etc. shall be of sufficient strength and attached so as to resist wind pressure of twenty psf of projected area of the tent.

(b) Air-supported structures.

(1) Air-supported structures shall be anchored to the ground or supporting structure by either ballast or positive anchorage, sufficiently and evenly distributed, and adequate to resist the inflation lift load, the aerodynamic lift load, and the drag (shear) load due to wind impact. The latter factors shall be based on a wind velocity of at least seventy miles per hour, and an estimated stagnation of not less than 0.5q for structures on grade whose height is equal to, or less than, the width of the structure. For greater heights, or for elevated structures, increased anchorage shall be provided, justified by analytical and/or experimental data.

(2) The skin of the structure shall be of such strength, and the joints so constructed, as to provide a minimum dead load strip tensile strength at seventy degrees F of four times the seventy mph design load (inflation and aerodynamic loading). The joints shall provide a dead load strip tensile strength of one hundred sixty degrees F of twice the seventy mph design load (i.e., a factor of safety of four and two respectively). In addition, the material shall provide a trapezoidal tear strength of at least fifteen per cent of the maximum design tensile load. Material and joint strengths shall be so certified by the manufacturer, justified by analytical and/or experimental data.

Ventilation flow per occupant, either through vents or anticipated leakage, shall comply with the requirements of subchapter twelve of this chapter.

Occupied spaces. Where the net floor area per occupant is one hundred fifty square feet or less, the structure shall be provided with at least two blowers, each of which shall have adequate capacity to maintain the required inflation pressure. Also, an auxiliary engine-generator set capable of powering one blower, or a supplementary blower powered by an internal combustion engine, either of which shall have the capacity to run continuously for four hours, shall be located outside the structure, shall be weather protected, and shall be arranged to automatically operate the blower within twenty seconds upon failure of the normal source. Heat shall be provided from a source outside the structure so arranged as to prevent the spread of fire to the structure. The temperature within the air-supported structure shall be maintained at the temperature required by subchapter twelve of this chapter, but not less than fifty degrees Fahrenheit during periods of snowfall.

(c) Sprinklers. (1) Every story or mezzanine within an atrium that overhangs another story or mezzanine within fifty feet shall have the overhang sprinklered in accordance with section 27-956 of article four of subchapter seventeen of this chapter, except that atrium ceilings less than fifty feet above the atrium floor but more than thirty feet above the floor may alternatively be provided with smoke detectors, which shall be of the central supervisory type connected to an approved central station. Every room or space opening onto the atrium shall be sprinklered, no matter where located.

(2) Except as otherwise permitted by subdivision (c) of section 27-521.3 of this article, at glass panels permitted by subdivision (d) of such section, sprinklers on the occupied side at all levels shall be spaced six feet apart parallel to the glass and that distance away from the glass panels so as to insure complete glass wetting upon activation. No obstructions to such wetting capability shall be permitted.

(3) Every sprinkler system for an atrium shall be provided with sources of water supply in accordance with article four of subchapter seventeen of this chapter.

ARTICLE 2 BASIC REQUIREMENTS

§ 27-525.1 Place of assembly permit.

a. It shall be unlawful to use or occupy any building or premises or part thereof as a place of assembly unless and until a permit therefor shall have been issued by the department. The permit shall be for a term of one year.

b. The application for such permit and such permit shall be in a form prescribed by the commissioner.

c. The annual fee for a permit issued pursuant to this section shall be the amount provided for in paragraph seven of subdivision a of section 26-214 of the code. An application for such permit or renewal thereof shall be accompanied by the annual fee, except as otherwise provided in section 26-210 of the code.

d. The permit issued pursuant to this section shall be posted in a conspicuous place in the place of assembly which is covered by such permit.

e. In the case of a permittee that is an establishment that offers for sale food and/or beverages for on-premises consumption, but not including establishments operated by a not-for-profit corporation, and employs or uses the services of a security guard, as that term is defined in subdivision six of section eighty nine-f of the general business law, such permittee shall comply with the provisions of article 7-A of the general business law, shall obtain proof that such security guard is registered pursuant to article 7-A of the general business law, shall maintain such proof in a readily available location, in accordance with rules promulgated by the commissioner during all hours in which such place of assembly is open to the public, shall maintain a roster of all security guards working at any given time when such place of assembly is open to the public, and shall require each security guard to maintain on his or her person proof of registration at all times when on the premises.

f. For purposes of this section, there shall be a rebuttable presumption that a person employed or whose services are retained at a place of assembly whose job functions include (1) the monitoring or guarding of the entrance or exit of such place of assembly to manage ingress and egress to such place of assembly for security purposes during the hours of operation of such establishment and/or (2) protection of such place of assembly from disorderly or other unlawful conduct by such patrons is a security guard provided, however, that such rebuttable presumption shall not apply to the owner of such establishment as described in subdivision e of this section that has received a place of assembly permit.

g. Notwithstanding any provision of this chapter, only the permittee shall be liable for violations of this section that relate to a permittee's obligations regarding security guards.

h. In addition to employees of the department, employees of the police department and the department of consumer affairs shall have the authority to enforce the provisions of this section regarding security guards.

i. The enforcement agency shall report any violation of the provisions of this section relating to security guards to the state liquor authority if the permittee holds a license pursuant to the alcoholic beverage control law.

ARTICLE 2 BASIC REQUIREMENTS

§ 27-528 Approved seating plans.

In every place of assembly providing seating, copies of approved seating plans and approved alternate seating plans shall be kept on the premises. The plans shall be readily available for inspection, and shall provide the following information:

(a) For assembly spaces:

(1) The location of each seat of each tier of seating, along with the number of occupants of each seating section.

(2) The location and number of standees for each standee area.

(3) The total number of occupants of each tier and of the assembly space.

(4) The location and classification of all exits.

(b) For safe areas:

(1) The furniture and equipment arrangement and location.

(2) The number of occupants to be accommodated.

(c) For stage areas:

(1) The maximum number of occupants, including audience seating on the stage.

(2) Any conditions limiting the use of the stage area.

(3) The location of all exits.

These plans shall not be smaller in size than required for one-eighth inch scale plans.
